

French

English

Full text of " The Roman Catholic Church Facing the Revolution "

See other formats

;

I

u

son

fcaCS*

Bm

>*&

J-* V

x&?&b mfa

s«§*

3*^

«fc^g^ ?/;-> •■^'•;^

■&<

tv '

• ,w^r

*&.

, i% ■

»V*

ab

ff

• V,

^5

9k

ti^P

Wt-

V\ }JY

-«■ if

1

THE ROMAN CHURCH

IN FRONT

OF THE REVOLUTION

VOLUME ONE.

The author and publisher of this work reserve the right to translate it or to have it translated into all languages. They will continue, by virtue of laws, decrees and international treaties, all counterfeits or all translations made in disregard of their rights.

PARIS. — HENRI PLON'S TYPEWORKS,

PRINTER TO THE EMPEROR,

8, Rl'E GARANCIERE.

Typ Henri Pion.

POPE PIUS VI

THE ROMAN CHURCH

IN FRONT

OF THE REVOLUTION

BY J. CRÉTINEAU-JOLY

WORK BASED ON UNPUBLISHED DOCUMENTS

AND ADORNED WITH PORTRAITS DRAWN BY STAAL.

Merses profundo, pulchrior evenlt
Horatii Carminum lib. IV, od. iv.

VOLUME ONE.

PARIS

HENRI PLON, BOOKSELLER-PUBLISHER,

8 RUE GARANCIÈRE.

1859

Translation and reproduction rights restricted.

THE ROMAN CHURCH

FACING THE REVOLUTION,

The French Revolution began in opposition to Catholicism. and for Democracy; the result will be for Catholicism and against Democracy.

Joseph de Maistre.

BOOK ONE.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Europe in 1775. – A portrait of that era. – Anarchy in people's minds. before getting to the facts. – Voltaire and his century. – The Church and the Philosophy. – Means employed to overthrow the Roman Siege. – The Jansenism and its doctrines. – Its secret alliance with the Philosophers and The unbelievers. – The Jansenists, revolutionaries by instinct. – Their struggle against the Church and against thrones. – Impossible morality they preach to combat the common precepts of Religion. – Jesuits and Jansos- nists. – Ecclesiastical Gallicanism and Secular Gallicanism. – • Difference which exists between the Gallican clergy and the bar. – Origin of Gallicanism.

– Cardinal du Perron and Bossuet. – Louis XIV and Pope Alexander VIII.

– The parliaments make the maxims of the Gallican Church into a code of insurrection- Rection. – Jansenism in Holland creates Josephism in Austria. Emperor Joseph II and his ecclesiastical reforms. – Portrait of this prince. – His tendencies and his goal. – Upheavals brought about in Germany Magne by the laws enacted against the freedom of the Church. – Election of Pius VI. – His portrait. – Situation of the Roman clergy. – Jubilee of 1775.

– The Pope's Journey to Vienna. – The Prince of Eaunitz. – The Revolutions of Brabant. – The Emperor begs the Pope to intervene with the Catholics. Belgians. – The Pope yields to his prayer. – Death of Joseph II. – Scipio Ricci, Bishop of Pistoia. – Synod of Pistoia and Italian lawyers. – Conference of Ems. – Pacca, nuncio to Cologne. – Pius VI and Louis XVI. – Causes of the French Revolution. – The National Assembly and the major Principles of 1789. – The Church facing the Revolution. – Mirabeau and his contemporaries. – The God of peace and social progress. – In what way They are deceiving the people in a revolutionary way! – Thiers, Louis Blanc and Mi- Chelet. – Pitt and Burke. – Spoliation of the clergy. – The Jansenists and the Lawyers draft the Civil Constitution of the Clergy. – Examination of this document

ï. !

2 BOOK ONE.

institution. – Camus and Abbé Grégoire. – Parallel between the cruelties of The Inquisition and revolutionary tolerance. – Pius VI supporting Louis XVI and the French episcopate in their struggles. – Persecutions against the Church. – A tableau of the Terror. – The kings of Europe and the Pope in the presence of Scaffold of January 21st. – Apathy of some, courage of others. – Pitt does to propose to the Pope that he lead a crusade against the Revolution. – The Directory and the Roman Catholic Church. – Bonaparte's first campaigns In Italy. – The victorious general refuses to march against Rome. – Death by Duphot. – The Roman Republic is resurrected by the French Directory, French. – The former Oratorian Daunou and the Calvinist Haller. – Pius VI, prisoner of the Revolution. – Triumphant journey of the captive through Italy and the France. – His death. – Situation in Rome under the Republic. – Pius VI will be the last pope.

At the moment when the Sacred College, gathered in Conclave, on February 15, 1775, he was seated on the Apostolic Chair Cardinal Jean-Ange Braschi, who took the name of Pius VI, the Roman Catholic Church finds itself exposed to immense dangers. By opening with adorned and mas- debauchery quarries of the Regency to go and plunge into religious orgy religious, moral and political life of the Directory, the eighteenth century has carved out a unique place for itself in the history of the mind human. Through its philosophers, who were thinkers of- deplorably free, by its poets, who had only the in- the inspiration of evil, by its writers of every sect as from every country, which the genius of destruction intoxicated, by its princes and by its statesmen, who, seized by a culpable failure or cowardly complicity further- Still unable to cope, they isolated themselves and thought only of their steps. whether or their interests, this century was ripe for the Revolution. It took place in ideas, in customs, in the laws, in the government of peoples, before to be embodied in facts.

Impiety, which until then had been an exception, This translated into a rule and a fashion. Impiety became a amusement that vice and sarcasm popularized. Of Little by little it spread. The authority of the sacred traditions forming the bond of souls, we acclimatized Indifference and doubt pervade every family. The basics historical accounts of Christianity were no longer accepted except like a fabric of fables; its dogmas passed into the state of absurdities. Debauchery and the crime. After having breathed the spirit into every heart independence, insubordination, and error were brought about. this century, laughing as it bites into the bread of all infamies. He had drunk from the Lord's hand the cup of his wrath; he had drunk from that cup of drowsiness, and he had taken from it down to the dregs.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 3

Through the mouths of its false prophets and princes, through the writings of its doctors and through the joyful debauchery- the ages of his courtesans, by the apathetic sleep of his pastors of souls, as if through the ceaseless activity of his apostles of unreason, this century, which was inundated with pleasures Sirs, before steeping him in villainy, seemed to say to God, as well as to the book of Job: "Depart from us, "We do not wish to know your ways." A contem- to understand what was happening in the courts and what was being accomplished wrinkled in the full sunlight of all literary works, one would have been tempted to believe that God, docile for the first once this sacrilegious command was abandoned, the men my to a fatal intoxication. Depravity had just begun.

High up, imperceptibly it spread over the cities and over the countryside.

At that time, the Nations, according to the word of the Psalm—"mist, were filled with turmoil, and the Kingdoms lowered—They were gradually losing the good of intelligence. Sophists, armed with their humanitarian books, exercised The authority of a despot with the baseness of a slave. They they flattered the pride and weakness of kings; they adulated the whims of their mistresses or their ministers, in order to to arrogate to themselves the right to corrupt the multitudes. They mar-cherish, in prose and verse, the conquest of tolerance rancidity and virtue; then they cast upon the world this seeds of moral disorder and sensual perversions suelles which has not yet borne all its fruit. They proclaimed the emancipators of nations, the arbiters supreme arbiters of justice and injustice, the avengers of all rights and of all the oppressed, and, through an inconsistency which they did not hesitate to make a rule, they proved—irresistibly highlighted the vanity of pr—human decency as well as the perfidy of hearts without remorse. By attacking the Rome of the Pontiffs, to whom, According to Bossuet, Europe owes its civilization, they do not pro—They posed only a universal doubt as to how to replace it. Us worked to demolish Christianity, as stu—Cunning maneuvers demolish a palace whose plan, the beautiful proportions and the whole thing, are totally theirs unknown.

1.

4 BOOK ONE.

Pulled from an attic more by fortune than by Talent, luxury, and pleasure were for them a novelty. They couldn't get enough of it. Their pen, which was a dagger or a whip; their works, which one transformed into a cutthroat place, aroused in people's souls a a host of passions that had not yet been given to The world of knowledge. Enemy science imposed itself. Its mission is to spread disbelief. It is riddled with sophisms. epigrammatic, she set to work questioning nature and make it fall into falsehood with the mo-uments. After having tried to exhaust the various sources of speculative and traditional knowledge, she tried not to leave a single point of the

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Christian faith. It dogmatized negation and professed the materialism.

The Lutherans and Calvinists had retained the belief and respect for the main facts that relate to the very foundations of Religion. The philosophy of the eighteenth century did not believe itself condemned to this remnant of e-guards. She had worshipped evil and undertaken, as well as the said Tacitus, to abolish human conscience; his cory-The pheasants did not hesitate, in order to better absolve their clients in the past, to pervert the souls of their contemporaries porains.

In this century, which reflected on nothing, but which He joked about everything, yet he still met some men my provident ones in all conditions of existence. They each had, from their own point of view, sinister prognostics to be heard. The voice of the Bishops, that of the Common father, were stifled under the cautious protests of conditional disobedience, or under the sarcasms of the impious, not even acknowledging their impiety seriously. Metastasio, that poet whom the Italians have so-named their Racine, he is not intimidated by the me-neither by flattery nor by words, and he describes the sentence in these terms. of its time:

"I see with extreme sorrow," he wrote to his brother in 1761, spreading throughout Europe a A spirit of cabal and rebellion. False philosophers. want to free men from the yoke of Religion and of all dependence on authority. They strive to de- to construct the principles that are the indispensable basis of the society. If Providence allowed, in order to punish us, the I would like to see the triumph of their anarchic systems. how they will find themselves in the midst of the upheaval that they fervently desire. What they give us- Moreover, for new discoveries, it is very-outdated. But in the past, these pernicious doctrines did not could only harm a few depraved writers; at- Today, thanks to a host of licentious pamphlets, they have become standard practice, fashionable science, and the moral code of elegant young men and women wits.

6 BOOK ONE.

"Oh, poor humanity!"

This school of demoralization, which Metastasio indicates the march and progress, wanted to have once and for all rai-

The sound of all principles and all memories.
The time had not yet come to take on a physical form in close collaboration with civil society. We needed the concourse of its leaders in order to achieve the proposed goal. We were-They placed sentinels and flatterers around them, then directed all the vital forces against Christianity of a century so rich in intellectual upheaval.

For over seventeen hundred years, the Christian idea was represented, led and governed by the success-Pierre's sister. To sow the seeds of anarchy in the hearts and sow discord in the faith of peoples, he
It was necessary to break the bonds of spiritual power, to isolate little by little Rome, and separate it through hypocrisy or violence
The cessation of all contact with nations. His new en-enemies hoped that by forcing the sovereigns and their ministers to enter into the plot, of which they constituted themselves they killed the moderators, out of respect, they said, for the thrones and out of tenderness for enslaved humanity, he gave them it would be much easier to triumph over the pastor su-first and to shake the Roman Catholic Church. They had read it well and carefully consider this passage from Fénelon; they did not ask

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 7

Nothing better than applying it! : "Everything that degrades in the imagination of the multitude, the authority of the Holy See, through an appearance of weakness, imperceptibly leads the peoples in schism; it is through this that zealous people become discouraged, and the party grows more reckless. The more one
The more he suffers, the more he tries.

Armed with a recipe that they did not have firsthand, but that it was important for them to exploit it on the largest scale
On a scale, the sophists began their work of construction by France, where irony permeates all the thoughts.

The Roman Church had undoubtedly defied enemies more powerful, she never met any more in-Solitarily clever. No one tried to attack him.
on a specific plan. For example, Protestantism and of all sects separated from the Roman Communion Maine, they were careful not to confine the war to one or more misleading maxims. The circle of hatred to the point of mockery universal. To summarize in a single wish all the Having made their wishes, they borrowed from Voltaire the instruction which had to
to serve as a starting and rallying point for maneuvers of thought or speech. Let us crush the infamous! was the A watchword given and received. Voltaire invented it. His disciples, from all countries and all hierarchies, They imposed upon themselves the duty to accomplish it. They hid beneath golden words, the dryness of their souls—like the master, they made sentimentality a means, of human-nity an ambush and pity a fury.

This man, who without question was the least on earth

1 Letter from Fénelon to Father Daubenton dated April 1, 1714. Correspondence dance, t. IV, p. 462 (Paris, 1827).

S BOOK ONE.

imperfect incarnation of the devil, pushed shame to the point of a prodigy. With that inextinguishable laughter, the prerogative of his marvelous talent, he sacrificed a long life to demon-to know that all cowardice dishonors, according to the sublime word of Tacitus. He scorned all the glories of France, he made a litter of all ideas of patriotism. After having es-Voltaire, it's time to slap God in the face!
he began to shatter with his own hands the cult of the past, this piety subsidiary of nations.

An exceptionally looming figure looms over history radiant, half angel and half hero, whom others little-France envied him. Voltaire felt his powerlessness to stifle the memory of God in people's hearts; he sought to... cha, through all sorts of lewd images and slander-depraved obscenities, enough to tarnish Joan of Arc, the immortal and popular Maid. The English had only dared to do her to burn alive at the stake in Rouen, he persevered, in a nameless poem, to defile her dead and dethrone her virginity. France, which no longer had time to indulge ingner, and who perhaps would no longer have found the strength,
She bowed her head before this apotheosis of vice. She did not back down.
no point before this expiation of unparalleled glory.

Voltaire had given the signal for an implacable war.
to all honest feelings. By glittering the men-dream, by flattering perverse instincts, by putting a masking his true opinions, and by casting a man-
This writer, the commander-in-chief, is steeped in his beliefs.
of the great army that was being recruited against Rome, had
He never imagined that by playing with the winds he would unleash a torrent of energy.
the storms. Whatever a man's pride, it does not...
It is not permissible to aspire to so many disasters; but in re-Evolution, what a man of genius began, is completed.

often by workers who arrive at the eleventh hour. This man a genius would have disdained their mercenary services and their compromising assistance; a day comes when he is condemned to suffer them. Voltaire had paved the way. One a multitude of writers, whose names no longer even survive on the bottomless abysses of history, plunged into them after him. Then The Church found itself condemned for all these immoralities. hungry, who were going to load the truth with handcuffs and to put the human spirit, weary of itself, in chains.

The Holy See, that is to say the center of the Christian faith yours and the bond of Catholic unity, was therefore at risk to enemies who, in order to overthrow him, used all kinds of weapons. He was attacked with sarcasm; one He was undermined by reasoning; efforts were made to make him odious, by presenting it from the point of view of history and of human reason as the born enemy of progress social and universal happiness. Facing these men of the eighteenth century, which began by being fati- fords of everything and which ended up being unable to do without You're welcome, the most misguided idea, wrapped in a good word or offered under an affectation of sentimentality philanthropic, was assured of making its way. The courtly elegance and backstreet gallantries made up her inevitable entourage. She advanced into the world, carried on the arms of grand ladies or comedians diennes. After visiting all the salons, she was going to lose in the provinces. It's barely a small number elite hearts manage to throw away a shred of purple on the rags of so much mindless misery.

These hardships had something so candid about them audacious, that Jean-Jacques Rousseau himself con- buttocks as the most habitual act of life, that, by

40 BOOK ONE.

for example, to instill in mothers the duty to breastfeed their children, while exposing their own suitable for public charity. Tertullian and Saint Jerome the philosophers of their time called "animals" of glory; » Jean-Jacques will prove that those of all The eras, especially his own, deserve this blemish. "Everyone knows," wrote the Genevan sophist, that his system is no better founded than the others; But he supports it because it belongs to him. There isn't one only one who, coming to know truth and falsehood, would not prefer the lie he found in the truth discovered by a other. Where is the philosopher who, for his own glory, does not deceive- Wouldn't he willingly perish all of humankind? Where is he? who, in the secret of his heart, proposes another object

What about distinguishing oneself? Provided that it rises above the vulgar, provided it eclipses the brilliance of its competitors, What more could he ask for?...

In this era so rich in contrasts, and where, between the most incomprehensible, but the most spiritual fo-
In the latrines, the Revolution was carried out from above before... to descend to the lowest point, the ingenious frivolity of some serves scarcely any excuse for the blind negligence of others. The unbelie-Durability is the only, the true faith of this century. And when She sees all these sad heirs of the strong races passing by, striving to dishonor their families' reputations, History is always tempted to throw it in their faces
old and prophetic curse: Filii heroum noxæ.
Amidst the refinements of prodigious luxury, one
He liked to let everything be questioned. We were beating in breaches notions of good and the principles that underlie States, under the pretext of achieving an imaginary improvement. They were turning all the constituent elements of social order, in the foolish hope of arriving more safely to the destruction of the Church.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. M

This plan had already been conceived a hundred times; it did not never encountered characters more suited to execute it. There were, in the palaces as well as in the judiciary, in the clergy as in the nobility, in the bourgeoisie geoisie and among writers, a new class which reveals, in its raw state, such a need for innovation, that only one thing surprised us anymore. Finding A few more virtues amidst the dung heap of so many vices seemed so monstrous to some and so intolerable to others, that never was a more relentless war undertaken against the few defenders of social principles. They were handed over their names and their works subjected to public ridicule, they covered with an indelible stigma of ridicule.

Those who, like Cicero writing to Atticus, had the courage to murmur in the bitterness of their pres- feelings: "See what ignoble death we perish by- sounds! » these, prophets of imminent ruin, succeed were instantly engulfed in thunderous mockery. Their cry of alarm was met with songs... popular queues or new bridges. We were inoculating a hot fever of rebellion, and the wise and prudent who, seeing the fire, wanted to sound the alarm, did not were more accepted in the world than as ener- gumènes, whose dementia offered a new pastime. The Revolution was advancing, carried in triumph by the powerful

Earth's forces; and like all revolutions,
It would be composed and strengthened by accomplished follies.
by clever people, extravagances uttered by people of mind, and of crimes invented or approved by hon-clear people.

1 BOOK ONE.

Voltaire had shaped the eighteenth century in his own image.
He enlivened it with his thunderous, mocking laughter; he had instilled his aversions and inspired his morals. Voltaire had created a personal enemy whom he would destroy at all costs.
It was necessary to destroy. The work that Julian the Apostate did not could only sketch out in its imperial omnipotence sub-laughed at this imagination at work in a world. Christ had been defeated for too long by the Church; Voltaire began campaigning to erase the Gospel from the memory of men. He had the reign of his pride to offer to humankind and the empire of universal decadence to substitute for the reign of the Cross. With him and through him the corruption was presented as something original, and cynicism
It took on the air of a witty remark. All his genius consisted of living as long as possible in stupidity human. He possessed the malice of the snake and the venom of the viper. His pen instilled in the masses a these hatreds which, like the dagger of the savage, con-
They serve eternally, like poison. He didn't want to leave any God to no one, in order to be the idol of everyone.

In all ranks of society, he mentioned auxi-ilearies. He recruited them from the throne as well as from the lower classes.
literary foundation. The Kings and their ministers carried at the forefront, like a precious jewel of popularity, the stig-mate of his self-serving praise. When he had surrounded himself of these auxiliaries of disorder, as pointed out by the holy Apostle Paul, "of these self-loving, miserly men, glorious, proud, slanderous, disobedient to their ungrateful, impious, unnatural, envious fathers and their mothers peacemakers, slanderers, intemperate, inhumane, more lovers of pleasure than of God, and trailing after

1 II Epistle of Saint Paul to Timothy, ch. 9.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 13

them as captives of women burdened with sins and possessed by a thousand passions," he believed himself certain of success.

But Voltaire had no vocation for martyrdom. He aspired to kill the soul while respecting the body, his envelope; and, at the end of 1768, in a letter to the mar-

From Villevieille, he was drawing up the plan of conduct which he never wavered: "No, my dear Marquis," he wrote-
"No, modern-day Socrates will not drink hemlock."
"The Socrates of Athens was, between us, a man
* very imprudent, a ruthless quibbler, who had » made a thousand enemies, and who defied his judges very badly » remarks.

"Our philosophers today are more skillful; they "do not have the foolish and dangerous vanity to put their names to their works; these are invisible hands that "Fanaticism is spreading from one end of Europe to the other,"
"With the arrows of truth. Damil, debased, has just mo-» laugh; he was the author of Christianity Unveiled and of beautiful-
"A blow to other writings. We never knew; his friends told him"
They kept the secret, as long as he lived, with unwavering loyalty.
"Worthy of philosophy. No one yet knows what " is the author of the book published under the name Fréret. We have Printed in Holland, for two years, more than sixty "Volumes against superstition. The authors are absolutely..."
"unknown elements, although they may boldly uncover themselves"
"Vrir. The Italian who made the Riforma d'Italia had no warning
"to go and present his work to the Pope; but his book has
"has a prodigious effect. A thousand pens write, and a hundred
A thousand voices are raised against the abuses and in favor of the "Tolerance. Be very sure that the revolution that has..."
"This has been in people's minds for about twelve years, but..."
"not little used to expel the Jesuits from so many states, and has

Book One.

"He encouraged the princes to strike the idol of Rome,"
"which used to make them all tremble. The people are well
"Foolish, and yet the light penetrates to him. Be
"Of course, for example, there aren't twenty people"
"in Geneva, who do not abjure Calvin as much as the Pope,"
"And that there are philosophers even in shops"
» from Paris.

"I will die comforted by seeing the true religion,"
"That is to say, that of the heart, established on the ruin of the "Pretenses. I have never preached anything but the worship of a "God, benevolence, and indulgence. With these sentiments-"
"mentions, I defy the devil, who does not exist, and the "True fanatical devils, who exist all too often."

A few years later, the doctors who had tasked with killing the sick man, they observe among themselves the pro-sandstone of philosophy. On August 13, 1775, Frederick II of Prussia wrote to Voltaire:

"Everything you say about our Teutonic bishops is not <
"That's all too true; they fatten themselves on the tithes of Zion. But "You also know that in the Holy Roman Empire the year-
"ancient usage, the golden bulla, and such other ancient foolish-

"Tises, enforce established abuses if one wants"

"To reduce fanaticism, we must not touch the bishops"
"questions; but if we manage to reduce the number of monks,
"Especially the mendicant orders, the people will grow cold,"
"And, being less superstitious, it will allow the powers to » to dispose the bishops in what is suitable for the good of "States. That's the only way forward. Undermining silently"
"And silently, the edifice of unreason is to force it to
"to collapse on its own. The Pope, given the situation in which he

1 Posthumous works of Frederick II, King of Prussia (Berlin, 1788), vol. IX,
p. 286.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 15

"is found, is obliged to give briefs and bubbles"
"as his dear sons demand of him; this power, » founded on the ideal of faith, loses as
"That one diminishes. If he is still at the head of the na-
"a few ministers above vulgar prejudices"
"If things go wrong, the Holy Father will go bankrupt... No doubt." that posterity will enjoy the advantage of being able to think "Freely."

This King of Prussia, who was at once a great warrior rier, a great politician and a great despot, is busy with Voltaire, from the depths of his palace in Potsdam, to pre-to compare among other peoples the advent of free thought Sisters. Protestant by birth, but an unbeliever by default.
and mocking by temperament, he congratulates the patriarch of Ferne of his victories over the Church and the Pontificate.
"It is to Bayle, your predecessor," he wrote to him on September 8th.
September 1775, and to you no doubt, that the glory is due of this revolution taking place in people's minds; but, di-According to the truth, it is not complete. The devout have their party, and it will never be crushed except by a force major. It is from the government that the sentence... No doubt it will happen with time; neither you nor
I will not be a spectator at this long-awaited event.

Frederick II did not stop there. He
He knew the princes and ministers of his time; he pres-
He senses their financial needs, he anticipates their desires secret. By putting their finger on the wound of their greed,

He writes: "I have noticed, and others like me have, that the "Places with the highest concentration of convents and monks are"
"those where the people are most blindly delivered to the "Superstition. There is no doubt that if one succeeds
"To destroy these havens of fanaticism, the people will not become 4G BOOK ONE,

"in a somewhat indifferent and lukewarm way about these objects that make
"Currently those of his veneration. It would therefore be "to destroy the cloisters, or at least to begin to dimi» reduce their number. That moment has come, because the
The French and Austrian governments are in-
"debts, which have exhausted the resources of industry"
"to pay off their debts, without success. The bait" )> wealthy abbeys and well-funded convents are se-
"Duisant. By representing to them the evil that the cenobites" » do to the population of their states as well as the abuse of the
» a large number of cucullati who fulfill their pro» vices, along with the ease of paying in part-
"tie their debts, by applying the treasures of these co-
"Communities that have no successors, I believe that we would determine them to begin this reform; and it is
"to presume that after having enjoyed the secularization of "Some benefits, their greed will successively engulf"
"The rest is lying. Any government that decides
"This operation will be a friend of philosophers and a supporter"
"of all the books that will attack the superstitions po-"Pular and the false zeal of hypocrites who would like to be there" » oppose. Here is a small project that I am submitting to the examination-
"men of the patriarch of Ferney. It is to him, as to the "Father of the faithful, to rectify it and to execute it." The
"The patriarch may ask me what will be done with the..."
"Bishops!" I replied that it was not the time to...
"Moreover, we must begin by destroying those "which inflame the hearts of the people with fanaticism. As soon as "The people will become disillusioned, the bishops will become..."
"little boys whom the sovereigns will dispose of by the "Time will continue as they see fit."

Such confessions, escaping from a conspiratorial royal mouth

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 47

opposing the principle of authority, they were causing to germinate in the hearts of kings and subjects a vague desire for spo-connection. Through his voracious activity, Voltaire took pleasure to set off all these powder kegs. He granted amnesty, he con-
He condoned all depravities; he covered up all crimes of the aegis of his name. So as not to be left behind by any to excess, he openly sponsored lying, like,

In the seventeenth century, other writers of a firmer talent and a higher conscience proclaimed the truth. "Lying," he wrote to Thiriot*, "is a vice when he does harm; it is a very great virtue when he
It does good. So be more virtuous than ever; it is necessary.
to lie like the devil, not timidly, not
"For a time, but boldly and always."

This council, which forms the basis of the entire historical system, Voltaire's philosophical and religious views were followed to the letter.
both by him and by his disciples. None of them he confessed, in the secret of his heart, that there was a
A weapon even more terrible than slander. This weapon, which is the truth, was bound to turn against them; but then the time was not yet right. All that the so-
The phists were doing it, they seemed to be ordering the others around.
and the others obeyed with the fiercest contempt for them-same. It is therefore not without dread that one enters in this labyrinth of errors that a skilled hand in impostures were raised around the Holy See. The war, of which,
For more than sixty years, Voltaire was the promoter-author, and to which, with tireless perseverance, he dedicated the most brilliant faculties, is declared and ou-green. He called upon everything in the universe for help

1 Works of Voltaire, (.LU, p. 326.

i. a

18 BOOK ONE.

whole, feels the need to breathe the air deeply of spiritual revolt and Christian insubordination yours. It excites, it stimulates, it rewards, and yet he would inevitably have succumbed in the struggle en-pledged, if, deep in the sanctuary as at the foot of the thrones, he would not have encountered less impatient auxiliaries than him.

They are not, in fact, the apostles of unbelief.
advances that deal the most dangerous blows to the Church
reux. By providential permission, he may well their being granted the power to corrupt a generation and to try to build during an earthquake; but their ten-Even the best-designed strategies always fail, because the passions they develop have no roots in the faith of the people.

They did not hide behind a hypocrisy full of discretion. Like a parasitic plant, they had insinuated themselves-

They were trapped in the wall, and they had nurtured the hope of the overthrow. Through a pride born of ignorance that afflicts them all the unbelievers of the pen or of thought, they had not wanted to know that in religion as in politics— In reality, what is praised is not what is desired. They out— They forgot that what we want is the only thing we don't They didn't speak. They became too quickly intoxicated by their hypo— successes. thetics, and they would have ended up like so many others in a failure, if, in the same century, Jansenism, making tacit or explicit alliance with secular Gallicanism would not have lent philosophy its formidable lever of subversion.

Sometimes a small cloud forms in the sky, not larger than a man's footprint. This cloud, almost imperceptible at first, it gradually spreads,

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 19

It develops, then suddenly it bursts and falls on the head. improvident people. Jansenism was to the Church what This little cloud will always be for man.

Jansenism embodied all the infirmities of the sectarian. He elevated falsehood to the highest power. of duplicity. He had made deceit his goal, of Hypocrisy a means, perfidy a science, of betrayal, a kind of grandeur; he was imbued with it, he He infected others. He only knew how to lie and be cunning. deceiving, promising, buying consciences at the highest level price, and sell it at the lowest price. Born a traitor with all Despite the appearance of honesty, he displayed a weakness truly paternal to all those who, near or far far away, they could one day become a stone in the Church of scandal or a spark of discord. His smile res— it seemed like a wound; that's why he was always seen to love, like the desert tiger, licking the wound after having done.

Cut off from Universal Communion by the judge supreme in faith and works, to which they appealed Sometimes as an abuse, sometimes as better informed, the The Jansenists had been careful not to accept the sentence focused on their doctrines. They reserved for themselves the explanation— quer, while claiming that she was not hitting their Neither their writings nor their intentions. Caught in perpetual, flagrant the crime of disobedience; they never ceased to protest. their enlightened devotion to the Roman Catholic Church and to the Vicar of Jesus Christ. They proclaimed themselves to the four corners of the world the most submissive children, but, by a fatal blindness, the most persecuted* These children, whom a implacable pride bequeathed to the Revolution, were found to share the fate of Diomedes, who, at the siege of Troy, in while pursuing an enemy, had the misfortune to wound a divinity.

20 BOOK ONE.

This situation of victims in a state of waiting, to be awarded creating each day, and with their own hands, a halo of martyrdom, had already captivated more than one generation. indeed comes from times when pity for Terror changes in a kind of moral complicity, sanctifying heresy and legitimizing the revolt. But then it was no longer appropriate Jansenism waged this war at the Roman Court. ambush and skirmishing, small, repressive subtleties understandable and culpable deceptions that he had supported naked for over a century and a half. The Church was attacked taken by enemies who rushed from both Israel and Samaria. They were born to her in every corner of the globe; she discovering the very place where she should never have looked. Jansenism imagined that the moment was opportune for to make everyone understand that the judgment passed on his doctrines was truly a just judgment.

Like those criminals hoping to escape prosecution because they killed the magistrate, the Jansenists, who believed always without proof and who always hated without provocation, threw themselves into the fray with the qualities and the inherent flaws in their sect. They had gone through the a double phase of enthusiasm and ridicule; they had exhausted the source of their beautiful genius and their miracles of the cemetery. Life and brilliance had withdrawn; he did not survive—was more than an expansion of immoral pride, debar—rid of all its ties, an expansion that merged with a feeling of hateful revenge against Rome. The Jansenists engendered the most detestable of all disbelief, that of hypocrisy. Facing this people French, so communicative and so cheerful, they were sad as a friend's laugh at a success. This strange contrast was one of the most decisive causes of their proselytizingism. In their speech, always imperious and sarcastic—They were liquid, they had something icy and sharp about them which, unintentionally, brought to mind the sword in the executioner's hand.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. I 21

Separated from the common center, and persisting in saying so to each other the strongest supporters, the Jansenists were committed to the Church with all the more obstinacy because the Church to them demonstrated greater distance and distrust. They pro-yielded in the manner of the Italian bravo, which, fearing to attack a robust and well-armed man head-on, of approaching with all sorts of courtesies, he throws himself at him Suddenly, she closes his mouth and kills him from behind. They aspired to destroy the Apostolic See with its their own weapons. They wanted to bury it under its ruins, and, by some magical enchantment, reveal these ruins like a restored building worthy of the early centuries of Christendom.

"What good are our lights if we keep "Our abuses?" exclaimed Voltaire; and Voltaire started from this A philosophical exclamation to translate into court kings the papal primacy. The Jansenists, alongside the even in the same rut and never falling into it, exhausted all theological deductions and all the teachings of ecclesiastical scholarship. They claimed to beat in breaches Roman authority, ideally so formidable, of- during the eighteenth century, to temporal power and to the happiness of nations. The false maxims developed- They drew false conclusions. These sectarians knew, through long experience, which man does not like to to obey. Man experiences a secret, an instinctive pleasure, in n BOOK ONE.

to revolt against a powerless authority. It's always with a proud joy he said in his heart the no serviam of the Holy Scriptures. So they began to run- to promote and exalt episcopal dignity, held in tutelage by the despotism of Rome. Then, moving on to another in order of ideas, without ever abandoning their plan of attack, They managed to reveal that the lower clergy, degraded of its ancient divine institution, was now nothing more than an order debased by the episcopate.

The core idea of Jansenism boils down to confusing, in the first man, nature and grace, reason and the revelation. So that, in the first man, there was no had no truly supernatural end called the glory, nor of any truly supernatural means called thanks, but an end and means that are purely natural to primitive man. Thus, in fallen and redeemed man, Grace was merely the restoration of nature, and the revelation, the very restoration of natural reason.

Based on the principle that when we go back to the source the waters are found to be clearer, the Jansenists are distressed

They took on the mission of reviving the customs within the Church of venerable antiquity. Jeremiah weeping over the desolde-pace, corruption, and ingrained abuses. In order to puri-
They defied the faith, suppressed the works. They mocked the indulgences, they reformed suffrage and beliefs on Purgatory. Irreconcilable enemies of morality Released, they covered themselves in ashes like the Pro-
They were seen shedding tears, trained to feign on the new doctrines born in the Vatican, and adopted by thoughtless or presumptuous priests.

Saint Vincent of Leirins had observed in his time,

Pius VI and the French Revolution. 23

and his remark has never ceased to be true: "That one had always seen in the Church that the more attached one is to Religion, the quicker one is to oppose opinions news. » The Jansenists should therefore not have ethundering opponents that the novelty of their casuistir that aroused them from all sides. They posed themselves in re- those who perpetuate wrongs, always armed with opposing views dilemmas, ambiguous sentences, and retractions even more ambiguous.

And the contradiction exasperated them, and it allowed them- it was a daily ritual to crown oneself with the palms of a merchant. tire to which no one thought of dedicating them.

However, this sect, which had begun by being a dogmatic school, had gradually transformed into a center of opposition. She was mentally rebelling. both against the Church and against the State. Under the outwardly religious, beneath an appearance of Christian rigidity enough to make the Supreme Pontiff and his defenders blush Sisters, she marched resolutely towards the Pulpit apostolic. The innovators had maneuvered with a such wonderful understanding, they had so admirably ex- exploited all the lethargies and all the abasements, that the dogma of the religious question became nothing more than a veil good at most to hide the spirit of trouble and domination nation which they possessed. By making everyone repeat the echoes of the Catholic world, the words of faith, of piety, of harmony and a return to wholesome traditions, they were having managed to infiltrate deep into people's souls an indifference absolute. From this point of view, they appeared as the more valuable auxiliaries than unbelief could register- to lie.

' ■ S. Vincenti. Lirin.; In commonit.

Also, in the disarray of his hopes and his confessions, when Diderot recounts what happens to the sous-pers of Baron d'Holbach, where every evening God is put to the votes, discussed, rejected and denied as a malevolent being healthy and useless, did the author of The Indiscreet Jewels really He was careful to add: "We are here in a very philosophical, very Jansenist-Native, and not at all Christian."

Jansenism did not come to deserve it in a day this singular panegyric. It still counted a certain number of well-intentioned followers, of these sincere faithful-firmly attached to the party doctrine, and that Voltaire flouted, after Jean-Jacques Rousseau had ex-to bear long inconsistencies. These faithful, a kind of visionaries that the miracles of Deacon Paris could not never to be cured of a leprosy of inveterate obstinacy, for-they led a small circle, harmless perhaps, but at once They were certainly very prone to disobedience. Their speeches were softer than oil, but at the same time they were like barbed arrows.

Wandering without a shepherd through the meager pastures of a controversy that endlessly revolved around the same issue. circle, this flock felt itself, it admitted itself lost in the middle of-The place of new aspirations. They had changed his enemy and his fighting style; he did not lend himself that with repugnance to the sacrifices that were demanded of him. The religious disputes, the personal issues that he They liked to stir things up and dwell on things, but their time had passed. herd of immobile people, both in their sin and in his aversions, did not want to understand that the The century followed even more culpable errors. They stopped at the edge of the path that separated them from the a-bimo, and not daring to take the final step, they remained in-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 25

m

decided, while the bulk of the Jansenist army surged forward with a resolve towards even more disastrous conquests.

From the early years of the eighteenth century, in In effect, Jansenism, as a sect, was no longer anything more than an assembly-a group of men in open rebellion against both powers. For the purposes of his cause, he created a A church within a church, an independent state at its very heart of the State. In order to properly appreciate this organization of the gone, transforming into a civilian body, when it cannot to form a religious body, it suffices to study the Causa (juesnelliana; it is only necessary to examine the history of This controversy, which dragged on for over a century, and which, ultimately, results in a pre-planned perjury.

It is of little need to posterity to follow the Jan-senility in the labyrinth of his sacred grudges and his political dreams. What is important to clarify is its theory concerning spiritual power and power temporal, a theory that must be expounded and established by evidence.

With the exception of the famous Abbot of Saint-Cyran, who more once let himself be seduced by vague desires to renovate In terms of social development, the first sectarians proved to be quite circumspect in elucidating their plans. Concealed- Did they share their thoughts? Were they more reserved? Or all they simply yielded, without realizing it, to the action for so to speak instinctive principles that had formed the the basis of their education? In any case, there is a notable difference between the great Arnauld, this tireless seventeenth-century warrior, and his disciple the orator- Nothing, Quesnel.

The Solitaires of Port-Royal, who poured the oil of the patience, good taste and erudition in the lamp of their vigils and their persevering labors, cannot be imagined- never found anything but opinions adopted by them, one could- could one day have fatal consequences. He had It is difficult to believe that a path is no less beautiful, because that he might encounter some thorns in the hedges which border. Hardly this learned generation of polemicists And of writers, has she descended into the grave that he... raises another, substituting for genius with audacity, and replacing the cautious timidity of his masters with a fervor of dialectics which reveals the party's secret to all.

26 BOOK ONE.

In most of his writings, and primarily in the ninetieth of the 101 condemned propositions born from the Catholic Church, Quesnel did not back down from- before its principle. The consequences were just and necessary, once the principle was accepted; he derived them from it. with a logic that was more rigid than clever. Of these consequences... quences, it has since then and definitively formed the sap and the core of his doctrine on dual power.

The innovator discusses the power to bind and loose atta-

he went to the Roman See, and he expressed himself thus: "It is the Church who has the right to excommunicate, to exercise it through the pre-first pastors, with the at least presumed consent of the whole body.

Thus, he is no longer the successor of Saint Peter and the Prince of Shepherds, it is no longer even the Pontiffs who, in the Church, receive as a right, a consecration creation and an inalienable deposit, the power of excommunication To deny it is the entire Church. The Church, thus defined and presented, consists of the assembly of all the faithful; and the first pastors, instruments or ministers of The Church, in exercising this right, cannot use it that of the at least presumed consent of the entire body.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 27

Which is to say that not only simple lenders very, but the lay people, men, women, old people and children must be consulted and given the opportunity to pronouncements on matters of faith, discipline, or moral questions, difficult or tricky ones, always at- above vulgar intelligences.

The following proposition is even more explicit. It is revolt and the spirit of insubordination framed within a Theological aphorism: "The fear of excommunication- An unjust accusation should never prevent us from doing our duty. "

Doing one's duty in this case means persevering in the mistake; it is obviously raising the flag against the Supreme Pontificate.

The audacity of such proposals could not- quit the old age of Louis XIV than from the point of view of re-religious. In all the halo of his glory, as at amidst the disasters that signaled the end of his reign At seventy-two years old, the Great King had never deigned to dwell on the thought that an unknown priest, an obscure Oratorian, would come at the same time to strike with a sharpened iron on the Church's shield and on the fleur-de-lis escutcheon. This The blow, a precursor to the duel, resounded approximately uselessly to his ears; but at the Vatican he was planning a worrying light on the moral situation of Europe aunt.

Rome spoke; nevertheless the case was not heard. She had as her support an imperceptible legion of es- I took the quibblers and cantankerous types, who would have found a way, through a series of loopholes and subtle distinctions, do splitting hairs. The Jansenists were condemned; all that remained for them was to do their duty. They

28 BOOK ONE.

They accomplished it to the extent of their obstinacy: they revolted.

Quesnel explained himself. One of his disciples and colleagues-workers, Abbot Legros, in a work entitled: Ren-payment of Gallican liberties, he commented and elaborated the master's aphorism. He brought out its consequences quences, both in the spiritual and ecclesiastical order than in the temporal or civil order. "The bishops, he said, upon receiving from Jesus Christ the power to govern ner, receive them as ministers of the Church to exercise- cer in his name this power, the ownership of which resides in the entire body of the Church.

The matter is clear and proven. The entire body of the E-Church, Pope, Cardinals, Bishops, Priests and Peoples, Peoples, above all, possess the primary and indisputable right-table of governance. They can therefore preach, command, To excommunicate and dogmatize. Above, or rather beside. from the simplest or most vulgar Christian, the Pope and Bishops only have the exercise of ministry.

According to this theory, the application of which, even in excess, sive, will come at the good time of the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, the government of the Church would be overstepping the mark parliamentary. He would go straight to the republic- than the most advanced. The dogmatic sect of 1715 did not He makes no secret of it. "In this respect," he adds, "it is a matter of the au-spiritual authority as well as temporal jurisdiction which is in a republic.

Perhaps without knowing it, and certainly without wanting to. then, ostensibly at least, the Jansenists pla- They were on the same level as the Protestants. The doctrine Some people rubbed shoulders with the errors of others, and Luther did not

1 T. V% p. 343.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 21)

Don't speak any more clearly than Legros. Luther said: "Bishops and other pastors do not have above all the other Christians than the only ministry that has been entrusted to them put with the consent of the people. Let them therefore know that they have no right to give us commandments, if it is only insofar as we are willing to consent to it

"of our own free will."

To better convey his thinking, development
the most succinct and logical expression of Jansenist thought, Luther adds: "The pastors derive this authority from those of which they are the ministers, that is to say of the multistudy that chose them to act on its behalf.

The Jansenists agree with Luther; here they are who agree with the most fervent followers of Calvin. "I I believe, wrote Anne du Bourg, advisor to the parliament of Paris, the power to bind and loose, and to excommunicate and to absolve, to be given by God, not to a man or two, and thus to the whole Church, that is to say to all the faithful and believers in Jesus Christ.

In his Defense of Reformation > the famous minister Claude, Bossuet's opponent, uses the same language.²

By one of these predictions, the eternal prerogative of all the sects and all the nascent parties, Jansenism, isolated in the world, felt that soon he would miss the earth Under his feet. He needed support that was always available.
to support its progress and guide it if necessary. This support was not found in Rome, the center of unity, nor in Versailles, where the State was still the King, according to patriotic tradition Louis XIV's formula. He was sought, he was evoked in the Parliaments.

1 De captivitate Babylonis, t. II, p. 282.

2 Defense of Reformation, p. 353 (4b73).

30 BOOK ONE.

These bodies of magistrates had, in the long run, become tired-guaranteed to render justice to the people only. The Brevi-
The Great King's imperial power silenced them; his Death emancipated them. It restored to them this role of rebels.
with the law in hand, they had been so happy to play in the turmoil of the Fronde. There was no longer a prince de Condé, no more Duchess of Longueville, no more cardinal de Retz; Parliament was always in funds to procure mannequins the size of old Broussel or of Abbot Pucelle. Its members included Restless men, eager for novelty. To give to its systems a more energetic impulse, the Jansé-nism seized this point of support.

In order to reach the heart of power safely, it was necessary flattering the custodians; Jansenism improvised itself the courtier of the judicial prerogative. He elevated this pre-a prerogative above royal authority. The Parliaments suddenly found themselves invested with a kind of sovereignty neté. The origin of this sovereignty became intertwined with the very rights that the nation was taught to invoke or to reconquer. "And the public magistracy," he professed one of the sect's leading figures!, was herself in some way sort of a summary of the nation, that is to say, an abridged version of the power-see and the authority of the entire nation* »

Abbot Legros, who is the doctor and spokesperson for the party, one of these workers of destruction, not having even by name in history, thus completes this the- the power of parliament in opposition tacit with the authority of the keys and the scepter; "It is God, he proclaims % who granted, either by natural law b

1 Testimony of the truth, p. 147.

2. Reversal of Gallican liberties, vol. I, pp. 344, 345.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 31

either by a free concession, to the States and to those who govern, the necessary authority to repress injustices tics and violence. But this authority is more essential more attached to the company than to the leader who governs it Verne The Roman nation, for example, possessed always the property of power, whether under kings, "Either under the consuls or under the emperors!"

And to make his thought more tangible, the publicist of Jansenism adds: "In monarchies, even hereditary- In silence, kings are always ministers of God and of the republic.

A contemporary of Abbé Legros, a Jansenist like He, Bourgoïn de Villefore, was not afraid to extend further far removed from the attributes of judicial courts.² According to him, "the Magistrates in France are the judges, the senators, the assessors of the throne, who work in a way on equal footing with the sovereign, so that no one "No judge is above their rulings."

Those for whom the lessons of history are not not a dead letter will quickly understand that, in this leonine share, so liberally given to the magistracy and to the nation, Jansenism, dispenser of all these rights new, will not have condemned himself to oblivion"

Like all parties, whose strength lies in a dis-perpetual bliss, Jansenism, which began with, wanting to be the Church, is by turns and often entirely at the

1 It is easy to see that this is not a matter of divine right, but of the current property of authority or power. Theologians Those most opposed to the divine right of princes admit that as soon as, by a free concession of the peoples, a prince received the authority to govern
In fact, the people have by that very act relinquished it and no longer possess it.
Furthermore, the doctrine opposed to this is called Richerism.

2 Secret anecdotes on the constitution Unigenitus, t. III, p. 21B.

32 BOOK ONE.

both the People and the State. It confiscates, it summarizes within itself-even the ownership of sovereign power is also radical-in the spiritual order than in the temporal order.
It is through this usurpation, calculated to deceive Jansenism encouraged the simple and encouraged the wicked.
achieved his goal.

Political questions had initially only been... secondary. In principle, they were supposed to be awarded prizes.
and absorbed by the religious question, especially in a time and with men of a lively and sincere faith. But little by little these men, at the heart of whom a permanent state of The spark of intellectual sedition had ignited the love of
In power, the spring of piety weakened. At these haughty or hateful souls, exalted by pride, a doa more active mination than that of consciences becomes ne-necessary. We have grown tired and disillusioned with the religious struggle.
A religious one that presupposes convictions opens up another a more resounding arena. We walk tentatively towards the unknown; but the hope of achieving it was a fixed idea.
Does it not, in fact, rest on the last, on the most in-Veterinary of all the passions in the heart of man, the
A passion for command?

Always ready to absolve themselves of a crime or to forgive themselves-to find fault, the Jansenists, in the making of their dogmas about God and grace seemed to have taken hold pleasure in driving human conscience to despair. Their mind had such inexhaustible resources of malice that they-would have invented a way to make a dove furious, and that it wouldn't have cost them too much to teach to a lamb the art of biting. We saw them pass by their life to poison the holy water.

They had arranged for themselves a cruel, demanding, impious God

toyable, absolute, impossible, which, by prior decree, condemned for eternity almost all beings to whom He had given life and reason. He is the God of Calvin's form is mixed, but he remains the same at heart. fundamentally, a God who, through the doctors of his law, cannot to create only fanatics or unbelievers, deists or atheists. Fanatics who believe themselves predestined or chosen, unbelievers recoiling in terror at the sight of this divinity Jansenist, who sacrifices the salvation of humanity to a whim of his blind anger.

This dividing wall, erected by guilty priests between the Creator and the creature, was one of the causes less known, and yet the most decisive of this unbridled and unregulated sensuality that is a stain on the annals of the world. Fénelon already pointed this out in his time to the severity of the laws. "I see," he wrote*, "a great a number of impious people, who, despising all religion, pass- They nevertheless swore in favor of Jansenism. It is not necessary This should come as no surprise. The fundamental principle of Jansenism is that it is necessary for every man to constantly follow his greatest pleasure, which inevitably precedes him, and which irresistibly determines him towards good or evil. Libertines are flattered by a principle so flattering to the the most shameful passions. We feel it, they say- they, that the pleasure of what is called evil is without com- comparison stronger in us than the languishing pleasure of a a sad and mortifying virtue. We will therefore follow the principle of Saint Augustine and his most learned disciples, in surrendering ourselves without shame or remorse to sensual pleasures. Can one avoid an inevitable attraction?... All these godless ones They favor Jansenism out of animosity towards religion.

1 Féru-Ion, Letter 2(53, f. III (1835).

I. 3

34 BOOK ONE.

With this depth of judgment and this exquisite delicacy which makes the Archbishop of Cambrai a na- In an almost exceptional fashion, Fénelon raises and decides at the same time the difficulty. The difficulty, although trans- Morally tainted, it nonetheless persisted. The Jan- senators exerted an influence on the Revolution questionable. To exercise it, they had to take on a part of Christian society a strange ascendancy; it It's good to go back to its source.

Barely formed for this life of controversies, struggles and Through systematic denigration, Jansenism became a... court of two kinds of people. They devoted this to him.
a kind of cult that is pushed to its absolute limits of servitude. A great number of good people, of pious men, going into evil without having foreknowledge of it, were easily seduced by these unctuous geniuses—dogmatic and full of courtesy, especially when They spread turmoil among people's souls. These geniuses they placed their smiles at attention. From the austerity of their ver-and the eminence of their talents, they were composed an indefinable halo. Their diplomacy, always re-Signed in form, still rebellious at heart, was a spirit of maneuvering used to penetrate others and to resimpenetrable self. He allowed them to raise the water on the oil, according to the words of Saint Augustine, to put the light under the darkness, and to place the earth above-above the sky. We fell asleep inwardly, then, in the anxieties of dashed human hopes, we allowed himself to be lulled by the dream of piously raf- innovations refined. The first Solitaires of Port-Royal, who par-
They were thus formed, not very humbly, from humility.
a procession of illustrious names and shining virtues.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 35

By a contrast which then escaped the unforeseen
From the Court and the City, this procession grew larger with all the nascent unbelievers and all the sensualists in bloom-reason. They denied God and felt enamored of a devotion particular attention to the persecuted doctrine.
encouraged their passions and sympathized with their weaknesses, while the common precepts of the Catholic Church
They constantly erected a barrier against it. The Jansenist system
It smiled on jaded hearts and voluptuous souls. By Its rigidity made even the simplest things practically impassable.
The burden of duties. The yoke of laws was already being shaken off in thought.
We mentally rebelled against all authority.
Wounds of the heart exacerbated the wounds of pride.
It was deemed convenient to reject virtue, because innovators, more ingenious than their predecessors, liked to portray her as surrounded by difficulties insurmountable.

Obviously, God's law was not that strict; but the Once the prejudice was accepted, it was easy to deduce from it correct conclusions, and Madame de Choisy was able to write to Madame de Sablé (December 1655):

"Following the example of Admiral de Châtillon, I will not

Don't be discouraged in misfortune; I felt with pain, the lightness of Madame la Marquise, which, The Jansenists deprived me of the friendship that the Carmelites had given me. had procured it for me from her. I beg you, ma-lady, to tell him on my behalf that I advise him, in friend, not to commit to saying that she no longer loves me, because I am certain that in ten days, that I am Forced to stay in Luxembourg, I would make her turn The colors are in my favor. Let's get down to business.

1 Library of the Arsenal. Manuscripts.

3.

30 BOOK ONE.

"So she thinks it's wrong that I uttered a A harsh sentence against Mr. Arnauld? Let her leave her passion as I make mine, and let's see if it's right that a private individual, without an order from the King, without a writ from the The Pope, lacking the character of a bishop or a priest, meddles in... write incessantly to reform religion and excite, by this process, in people's minds, difficulties arise that do not They have a different effect than creating libertines and impious people. I... speaks like a scholar, seeing how the courtiers and The socialites have been thrown off balance since these proposals Grace: they say at all times: Hey! What does it matter? as we do, since if we have grace we will be We will be saved, if we do not have it we are lost. due! And then they conclude by saying: All of this is nonsense.

"Before all these questions, when Easter arrived" saw them, they were astonished like clo- founders ches, not knowing where to hide and having great scruples- They are currently robust and no longer think about to confess; they excuse themselves by saying: What is Written is written. That's what the Jansenists did to with regard to worldly people. For true Christians, it there was no need to write so much to instruct them; Everyone knows perfectly well what needs to be done to live according to the law. That gentlemen Jansenists, instead of stirring delicate questions that should not be shared I would have asked the people, preaching by their example. They have extraordinary respect, considering them like good people whose lives are admirable, who have the wit of angels, and whom I would honor by- perfectly if they did not have the vanity to want to introduce to introduce new things into the Church.

» I firmly believe that if Mr. d'Andilly knew that If I had the audacity to approve only of the Jansenists, it would have been... would give a good slap, instead of so many hugs that he gave me before.

"I am not writing to you with my own hand, because I take the waters of Sainte-Reine, which give me a It's so dreadfully cold that I can't even stick my nose outside.
from the bed. But, madam, the anger of the marquise
Is she going so far as to refuse to give me the salad recipe? If so
If she doesn't do it, it will be a great act of inhumanity.
will be punished in this world and the next.

"I hope I can go to Luxembourg ahead of Christmas; and look what an inclination I have for you, I I clearly feel that I would be very happy to be more early your neighbor. The news from Poland is always bad. I sent you the letter that Desnoyers wrote to me.
I don't know if they want us to know the details of their matters. That is why you do not name me; send back-
"Take the letter and believe me, etc., etc."

The impossible morality of the hardline Jansenists dispensed therefore freed from all duty; she was acclaimed as a blessing.
She granted ample satisfaction to the voluptuary,
It served as both an argument and an excuse for them. It became in at the same time the focal point of these curious minds, in-quiet, lovers of new things, and always willing to keep the cloaks of those who stone the righteous.

Saint Francis de Sales wrote: "We are having fun sometimes so much for being good angels, that we do not tra-
"Let's not strive to be good men." This kind of indefinite perfection, so naively characterized in these
A few lines, that was the scourge of the time. The Jesuits they had quickly understood this; at the height of their

38 BOOK ONE.

With their power, they were immediately able to unmask
the mistake. v They believed that the right to say anything entailed necessarily the duty to hear everything. With saint Jerome writing to Pamaca, they repeated everywhere: "The Pure faith brooks no delay, and as soon as the scorpion
Apparently, it must be crushed.

The scorpion raised its head. Even before the Church
Had he taken the time to notice him, his audacity would have been noted.

by the Society of Jesus.

Like the night watchmen in Holland, who they shout: "Sleep in peace, the dikes are safe," the Jesuits were, since the founding of their Institute, the advanced sentinels of Catholicism. They kept watch, they fought with words, with advice, with the pen. They had the confidence of the Popes and the ear of the Kings. The austerity of their lives was the most eloquent reward. The mandate of their charity. Their unwavering devotion to the Apostolic See became a guarantee for the truth of their apprehensions. In them, the dominant consciousness—the heart is born; the cry of alarm, uttered by the disciples of Saint Ignatius, therefore, soon resounded in the Vatican and in the course.

But the Jesuits, like any corporation having in the entrails an active principle of life and influence, not they weren't afraid to go straight to the enemy. They were said to omnipotent, they were thought to be rich, we took everything for granted. naturally leading to hatred or fear. Prejudices widespread anti-Order sentiment was a source of attraction in favor of the Jansenists. They claimed to be persecuted and little known. The followers they had gathered in the world and among the secular and regular clergy are grouped they gathered around these martyrs, whose very voice was stifled. No one asked if faith was involved and if Religion felt no offense. They refused to see, they saw only the Jesuits, relentlessly pursuing an adversary and bathing in their rage, because, repeatedly were they constantly silent, Pascal, in his Provincial Letters > their had made two hundred years of glory pay dearly Christian and immense apostolic works and lit-land.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 39

In agreement with the Church on this, as on everything else, the Jesuits had judged that the world resembled these Christians hold of Corinth, to whom the great Apostle does not dare to offer solid food. These Christians were weak; they did not could only tolerate infant milk; Saint Paul He administered it to them. The Jesuits followed his example. This was a direct confrontation with Jansenism; Hence this relentless and merciless war that fills almost a century of the noise of its discussions. Hence this accusation of lax morals attached to the flanks of the Company of all the debauchees of the world, and paraded throughout the entire universe, by all the indifferent armchair critics, of the antechamber or of the bar.

At this date of 1775, the starting point where we Let us place ourselves in order to appreciate the causes and effects, the Jansénism had undergone all the phases of its apotheoses and of its decadence. Leaving aside the quibbles of seminaire, he had positioned himself on the terrain of politico-innovations ticks. At a time when, as Montesquieu says, "the discomfort of command was as tiring as that of obedience," Jansenism created a sect of democrates by libertinism; then, in concert with the Philo- against the philosophers and the Protestants, he launched himself full steam ahead into the era of social reforms and civil progress.

40 BOOK ONE.

But the more skillful a man is, the more he rules his progress based on the means that chance offers him, and which, very often, are not the ones he had planned or Having been prepared, the Jansenists thus prepared to take up arms. of everything. They had many points of contact with the Calvinists and the Philosophers; they distanced themselves from them in proclaiming everywhere their instinctive and reasoned aversion for heresy and sophistry. They followed their trail and They anathematized them. Defectors from the Church, they conserved in the priestly uniform. In order to better deceive the Like all the faithful, they stubbornly remained united. when their secret wishes only aimed to destroy it.

A Protestant, but impartial, writer, Leopold Ranke, conceived and developed the same idea, because, in the eyes of History, truth is one; it needs neither subter- neither refuge nor reticence. Ranke therefore says¹: "In France, The persecuted Jansenists only made further progress; In the end, however, they discredited themselves through their extra-superstitious holidays. We find their traces in Vienna and Brussels, Spain, Portugal and Italy. Their doctrines spread throughout Christendom. Catholic community, sometimes publicly, the most sustained wind secretly.

"Among many other causes, it was undoubtedly also this religious schism which fostered the birth of a an even more dangerous opinion.

"Year after year, it grew stronger and spread to both inside and out. The kingdoms of Europe... ridionale were based on the most intimate union of Church and State; a party was formed in these countries who formulated his hatred of all religion into a system that

¹ History of the Papacy, vol. IV, p. 484.

PIUS VI KT THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. he

destroyed all idea of God, all essential principles of power and society. A literature emerges, in hostility towards the Church and governments, attracting She possesses their spirits and binds them with indissoluble bonds. lubles. It is evident that the various trends of this of the time, they agreed very little with each other; the tendency of The Reformation was monarchical in its nature, which is something that I can't say about the philosophical tendency that began very quickly in opposition to the State; the tendency Jansenist remained attached to opinions that were indifferent, if not hateful, to both sides. Despite the difference in their ideas and feelings, All these parties combined their movements. They children- this spirit of innovation, which is spreading all the more that his goal is less determined, that he raises his pretensions tions on a more or less vast future, and which draws all the days of new forces within existing abuses. relied, whether he knew it or not, on what has been said Pelé, the philosophy of the eighteenth century; the theories Jansenists gave it a religious form and more consistency. In all countries, in all the During the course, two parties formed, one of which was waging war to the Papacy, to the Church, to the State, and whose other sought to maintain things as they were, and to preserve towards the prerogatives of the universal Church.

Leopold Ranke is not the only Protestant historian whose good faith is not easily deceived by the es- taken from a sect. Schœll expresses the same thought and gives himself up to similar developments. He therefore confesses!: "A A conspiracy had formed between the former Jansenists and the party of philosophers; or rather, like these two factheir efforts tended towards the same goal; they worked towards it in such harmony, one might have thought they were con- They were confident in their means. The Jansenists, under the guise of religious zeal, and the philosophers, by displaying feelings of philanthropy, they both worked to the overthrow of papal authority. Such was the admission- the rule of many well-meaning men, that they made common cause with a sect they would have They would have been horrified if they had known their intentions. These kinds "Errors are not uncommon; each century has its own..."

1 Course in the History of European States, vol. XLIV, p. 74.

12 BOOK ONE.

History will probably only accept it under benefit the banal excuse of the writer-diplomat; but at the same time she will take into account his vigorous franchise. Ranke and he come, each in the to the extent of its enlightenment, to clarify the action of the Jansenism; it is now necessary to show what part of Gallican party in this plot against the universal Church.

Rome, which knows admirably that perseverance in everything is an indescribable force, has constantly proceeded like the Ocean. After a storm, it resumes its nautical. She obeys the eternal maxim of hoping against All hope and to resist always. Rome has abandoned to fret for a long time beside her the question of Gallicanism. Without ever having authorized or condemned it, She handed it over to the disputes of men, fully convinced that a day would come when faith would dispel this darkness complacent. The need for unity, so powerful and so enduring. in the heart of France, was bound to change this sooner or later doctrine, which has lost its raison d'être. The French Nation—Indeed, the French cannot fail to become this again. that, according to Yillehardouin's testimony, she will be in all the time, "the chief baron of Christendom." Let's see what that this doctrine was in reality, and in the eyes of the Church Gallican, who accepted the burden, and according to the jurisconsults, who proved to be its most ardent instigators.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 43

Gallicanism, stripped of all subtleties and of all the paradoxes which, depending on the circumstances and the men, they tried to form a procession for him, is the doctrine and the policy professing and containing the freedoms of the Church Gallican. This definition, which is quite easy to improvise—This, of course, raises more than one difficulty. as soon as we want to determine what these freedoms. In 1605, during the reign of good King Henry, the bishops of France were just as perplexed as ourselves on this question so often stirred up and so poorly resolute. They begged the King to settle what was was to call the liberties of the Gallican Church. In 1614, The Estates General addressed the same wish to Louis XIII. The Episcopate and the Nation therefore did not know exactly what what were these particular rights then, and that since then we proclaimed inherent to the crown of France.

In principle, there seemed to be agreement to make them consistent and to summarize them in the exact observation of the an-ancient canons; but this observation of the ancient canons, mentioned for the sake of the cause, was she a privileged person? the church attached to the only Church in France? the other churches Worse still, did they not have the right to enjoy it, or was it theirs? forbidden to claim them? Moreover, in the constitution- tion of the old French monarchy, this definition she herself could not subsist, especially when she was rap- close to the usual and general practice. Is this correct? Indeed, the canons of the old councils which ordain or allow designations such as abuse, knowledge- the possessory right to benefices exercised by secular judges, the regalia, the tithes, the rarity of councils, the judgment clerics in secular court and the succession of parents to Church property?

\\ BOOK ONE.

Gallicanism was invented solely to stir up the rest, and to demonstrate the truth of the beautiful maxim of Cardinal de Retz: "The rights of the prince and the rights of the nation never agree better than in the si- "Lence." Gallicanism fulfilled its mission by sowing the trouble in the Church before introducing it into the State. To the objections raised against him, he was heard to eva- A reasonable response: "The liberties of the Gallican Church" consist of observing the old canons, against, or rather, despite the new constitutions of the Popes which have changed them or dispense with them too easily.

This answer is stereotypical everywhere. It has been for- transformed into an axiom and a principle. In this demonstration- eternally peremptory tion, the Gallicans have not forgotten that it was a mere detail. It never occurred to them to- rather than produce or cite these ancient canons, new papal constitutions abrogated, or whose They allowed themselves to dispense so easily.

They also failed to demonstrate that, despite the example of Saint Ambrose, separating the emperor Theo- dose of the Roman Communion, the princes and their officers cers can never be severed from the body of the Church; again, forgetting to prove that the secular judges had the privilege of ordering absolutions with caution, to provide for the benefits upon the refusal of the Pope or the Ordinary, and to establish the right of regalian levy, the amortization- ment and a few other equally debatable points; More than ever, it's been forgotten to make us feel that these new maxims are of the old discipline, and that

These customs are so uniquely French, that they never acclimatized, in one form or another another, in foreign kingdoms.

Gallicanism took on the mission of defending and to avenge the old canons and the ancient discipline.
Nevertheless, he was careful, in more than one circumstance, to display such severity, when the interests of prince or the ambitions of the magistracy were at stake.
Were they, for example, commands, residences?
generations in favor of pensions on profits or of their multiplicity, as well as of the regalia or the deci-
My, we saw the Parliaments and the legal experts bowing down the majesty of the law in the face of the whims of greed.
Their stops never failed, when they lasted to enshrine new abuses. So respect for the anti-Quiet was now nothing but nonsense; he was not resuming his vi-pride and its splendor, which the Popes dared to challenge the holy ark of new maxims.

From this situation, taken in the heat of history, we can therefore infer that there were, almost from the very beginning of these kinds of freedoms, two distinct Gallicanisms: a Gal-Secular licanism and an episcopal or eccle- Gallicanism Siastic.

Secular Gallicanism undoubtedly owed its birth to sance to episcopal Gallicanism. But this unnatural son has so frequently, and in so many ways, compromises and/or-Tragé took his father's name, which today all ties of
The family ties between them have been broken for a very long time.
They each walk their own path. One clings on More than ever, through faith and martyrdom, to Unity
Catholic one; the other allies himself with all the agents of discord

1 The opinion of the French clergy on these freedoms imposed by the magi-

46 BOOK ONE.

religious or political. He dreams on the ruins of the Church Roman, and often he advises in a low voice sometimes a civil pontificate, sometimes one of those phantom patriarchs, a beggar at the door of some temporary institution authority even more precarious than itself.

It was during the time of the Great Western Schism that the
The name and practice of certain freedoms took place in France. At that time, the Church was divided into rival camps. Each of these camps had its own leader. Pontiffs enthroned in the capital of the Christian world, pontiffs proclaimed in France, and treated in Rome as antipopes, all needed, to support their dignity or their queue, to accumulate large incomes and to create for oneself powerful friendships. The only way to achieve this double translation and by the bar, was so well pronounced that Monsignor Du-Iau, the illustrious archbishop of Arles and the great martyr of September 2nd 1792, did not hesitate, even eleven years earlier, to repudiate them solemnly. In a remarkable little book entitled Dissertation his- In a toric on the four articles, Abbot Lepointe, a former Jesuit, reports This fact, proving quite clearly what the spirit of the Episcopate was at that time and the clergy. Father Lepointe recounts:

"Around 1781, Messrs. Gaude, printers from Nîmes, wrote me two times to commit myself to continuing Y History of V Gallican Church. They had intending to create a new edition and continue the story. I confess that I didn't feel capable of playing a role in the literary career at on the Longueval, Brumoi and Bertliier side, and which I feared with The reason is the narrowing of distances. However, a half-hearted desire to Taking up this work made me take a step that was likely to promote it success. As the eighteen printed volumes had been dedicated to French prelates, I also tried to gain the support of the clergy for the future. of France. Monsignor the Bishop of Carcassonne presented me with: a memorandum to Cardinal President of the Assembly, and I was informed that this Eminence would communicate in the next session. Knowing full well that His Grace The Archbishop of Arles would have more influence than anyone else on the decision, I was I went to his house early in the morning to warn him; I had barely begun to articulate the who was bringing me, that he told me he would never consent to it. I reminded him-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 47

the goal was to impose and collect numerous contributions actions on ecclesiastical domains, and to attribute them to to drink the snack under one title or another, annates or reserves.

The clergy frowned upon it; they endured it with impatience with the heavy burdens imposed upon him. The University of Paris, which at the time enjoyed immense credit in the Church and in the State, he complained of the parsimony with which favors and benefits were distributed to him fices. She meets with the clergy to implore their intervention of the King, the Parliament of Paris, and the nobles of the kingdom. It was under Charles VI, amidst the upheavals of the France, where this system of muted hostility was introduced, and an evocation of ancient canons and customs. Hardly Starting from this point, the theologians and jurists

I felt that, regardless of the proposals that the printers from Nîmes, a powerful minister urged me to continue this history. Let him show himself, the prelate resumed briskly, I will speak. As I expressed some surprise, he was kind enough to enter into explanation, and, in a conversation lasting over an hour, he painted a picture a quick overview of the whole history since roughly the time of Father Berthur had remained until recently, taking care to mark in passing with a note of disapproval the events that seemed to shock his delicatessen. I couldn't report his words exactly, but he said — It was said that it was while speaking of the share that the bishops had pike to Louis XIV's quarrels with Innocent XI, he told me — You see. that the clergy cannot attach its support to a history of this nature. "If you wish," he added, "write memoirs to serve as historical records." History of the Gallican Church, at your own peril and fortune; but, for the sake of history. Indeed, it will surely not appear, as long as I live, with a dedication — effective to the clergy. 11 It is needless to say that I left this conference pe- born of the feelings that this great prelate inspired in all those who had the advantage of knowing him, and that I am quite ashamed today to be so little able to report on it. I communicated the result to printers of Nîmes, and since then I have heard no further talk of continuing Y His- the history of the Gallican Church.

48 BOOK ONE.

mainly, they quickly came up with the idea of opposing this which was called a counterweight to papal authority. he first used it in mixed or pure materials discipline. Little by little, after having done the pro- ces at the Holy See, to call into question the authority of the Con- ecumenical councils. The last one, that of Trent, was not Not received regarding discipline.

The first attempt at open resistance took place in 1438 in the assembly of the Gallican Church in Bourges. There, one examined, moderated, accepted, or reduced to one the sole body containing the principal decrees of the Council of Baiae, considered ecumenical against the reservations of profits. Under Charles VII, the following was formulated, affirmed, and published: pragmatic sanction, which was hailed as the charter Gallican liberties. Adherence to them was required under penalty of... to incur the wrath of the king or the indignation of the parliaments.

Later, Louis XI and Francis I repealed this pragmatic; but as it has been received for a long time than to bow one's head before the immorality of the acts committed— folding constitutes an act of great political prudence, the es— Its influence from this century has permeated all future centuries. sometimes hovers over the future like a pang of remorse, more often as a testament to patriotism and of independence.

In order to avoid certain temporary abuses,
The Church in France invoked the support of the secular arm.
She prostrated herself beneath the sword; she remained there, even when that sword was transformed into a bailiff's rod.
When the crown of Saint Louis was replaced by a lawyer's cap, the Gallican Church saw itself condemned to the harder, to the most shameful of servitudes.

The origin of these freedoms therefore dates back to the schism;

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 49

would believe that they originate from it or that they return to it always, as if by an imperceptible slope.

Nevertheless, during the Wars of Religion, when Calvinism and the League divided the kingdom in two Rival and enemy camps, the Clergy and the Sorbonne itself-even became more closely attached to the Royal See-hand. The imminence of danger preserved them from an apo-legal stasis. This separation had been avoided in the great crisis of Protestantism; at the Estates-General of 1614, Cardinal du Perron, acting as interpreter of the Catholic France, established, in a harangue which is yet another model of eloquence and a rule of conduct, the only true principles to follow, according to him*. In

1 Cardinal du Perron was a friend and advisor to Henry IV. He is known for the breadth of his talents. On January 2, 1615, after having refuted an article proposed by the Third Estate on the independence of the cou-
With regard to any foreign power, the cardinal expressed himself thus:

"The third point remains, which is whether the princes having done, or they or their predecessors, swore to God and their people to live and to die in the Christian and Catholic religion, come to violate their oath and to rebel against Jesus Christ, and to declare war on him open, that is to say, they not only fall into a pro- manifesto confession of heresy or apostasy from the Christian religion, but even go so far as to force their subjects into their consciences, and undertake to plant Arianism or Mahometanism, or any similar infidelity in their states, and there destroy and exterminate Christianity, their subjects may be mutually declared absolved of the oath of loyalty that they have done it to them, and when this happens, it is up to whom it is appropriate to declare under. Now, it is this point that we say is contentious and disputed, because our article contains the negative; namely, that there is no case in which the subjects may be absolved of the oath of loyalty they swore to their princes.

"And, on the contrary, all other parts of the Catholic Church, even even the entire Gallican Church since the theological schools there were those established up until Calvin's arrival hold the affirmative; namely, that when a prince violates the oath he has sworn to God and his subjects jets of living and dying in the Catholic religion, and not only

I. 4

50 BOOK ONE.

At the same time, Pierre Pithou was trying to promote it.
dormouse of others.

Lawyer, writer and magistrate, Pithou, although Catholic-lique, had Calvinist blood in his veins. He was opposition, progress and liberalism of the seventeenth century. An honest man in thought as well as in heart, he allowed himself to be blinded by the desire to limit and define the rights of the priesthood contrasted with those of the Empire. His work entitled: Liberties of the Gallican Church came > was only published long after his death; en-
Was the first edition suppressed in 1639?
by Cardinal Richelieu. But this work, persecuted at its origin, this very persecution gave it a flavor of forbidden fruit which immortalized its success, and by conthey follow his theories.

makes Arian or Muslim, but goes so far as to declare war on Jesus the Lord of Christ, that is to say, even to the point of compelling his subjects in their forcing them to embrace Arianism or Islam, or something else
For such infidelity, that prince can be declared deprived of his rights.
as guilty of felony against the one to whom he swore his oath of kingdom, that is to say, towards Jesus Christ, and his subjects to be absolved in conscience and to the spiritual and ecclesiastical tribunal of the oath of loyalty that they lent him, and that in this case, it falls under the authority of the Church resident or in its head, which is the Pope, or in its body, which is the council, to make this declaration. And not only all the others parts of the Catholic Church, but even all the doctors who have been in France since theology schools were established there, have held The affirmative; namely, that in the case of heretical or infidel princes, and persecuting Christianity or the Catholic religion, the subjects could to be absolved of the oath of allegiance. By means of what, when the doc-
The opposite trilogy would be the truest in the world, which all the others
If parts of the Church are arguing with you, you could not hold it at most until for problematic matters of faith. I call problematic doctrine In matters of faith, any doctrine that is not necessary is of faith, and of which contradiction does not oblige those who believe it to anathema and loss of communion.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 5*

Pithou clearly and unequivocally professed the gallicasecularism. He was the creator and regulator of this doctrine, he met panegyrist and students in all ranks of society.

The clergy themselves were seduced by these maxims, who, by skillfully flattering vain onlookers national authorities were preparing, willingly or unwillingly, for a separation next between Rome and France. This separation will not— It was neither in the wishes nor the desires of the people. the people were bound to the Catholic Church by all ties of ties of Respect and faith. The Clergy, in its general assemblies, noted in magnificent terms of devotion "his unwavering obedience and filial submission to visible head of the universal Church, vicar of God on the earth, bishop of bishops and patriarchs." These assemblies The wheat-clad Roman Pontiff hailed "the infallibility of faith, which, they said, had been seen to last unchanging in his successors to this day." Nevertheless, these pro-testimonies, whose sincerity never wavered, did not only very secondarily modified the given situation. It was bound to lead to the memorable declaration from 1682.

Abbot Le Dieu writes in his Journal¹ that he holds from the Bossuet himself said that it was Colbert who inspired the purpose of the four articles. According to this same confidant Bossuet, Colbert alone, would have determined the King to accept them, and, as the abbot said, God has the right to be believed

1 In the Journal of Abbot Le Dieu, vol. II, p. 8, we read: "In the During the trip, we talked about the assembly of 1682. I asked Mr. de Meaux which had inspired the clergy's proposals on the power of the Church. He told me that Mr. Colbert, then Minister and Secretary of State, The comptroller general of finance was truly its author, and that He alone had persuaded the King.

4.

52 BOOK ONE.

In such matters, it follows from his admission that the act more authorized, and the keystone of Gallicanism, is the work of a secularist. The lawyer Pithou condenses it into a form of doctrine, Minister Colbert lends him the official stamp of approval. government. It is under these auspices that Gallicanism is subject to the sanction of the Clergy.

Eight years later, in 1690, the elderly Ottoboni, Pope under the name of Alexander VIII, gathered around his A congregation of twelve cardinals on their deathbeds. With the majesty of a great pope, the firmness of a young man and with the eloquent skill of a Venetian, he told them: De-ficiunt vires j, sed non deficit animus. Then, as for to prove that his courage had not abandoned him at the same time While the forces, Alexander VI^{II} read to the Cardinals

the constitution, multiplied by death, which death did not leave him Not enough time to publish in the required format. Before And after Alexander VIII, other Pontiffs spoke as him; none of them noted heresy in the four propositions-tions. They always remained subject to distrust ca-
Catholic, always accepted and sponsored by the advers-Church officials and by the architects of the revolution.

In a time when obedience to a king such as Louis XIV spread a certain veneer of grandeur over acts
Even tainted by servility, it is evident that the Episcopate
French, of which Bossuet became the mouthpiece, had neither the intention nor the desire to infringe upon the rights of the Roman Court.
Louis XIV, although bearing dignity to an excessive degree sovereign, her pride in royal patriotism, would never have-but agreed to no longer see a father figure in the Pontiffs, object of his filial veneration.

Heresy was abhorrent to that soul so profoundly Catholic. As a Christian and as a monarch, he

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. IF

judged with a severity that biased historians have could not blame; but this severity, to which the Revolution French came so explicitly to agree, pre-it originated in an admirable sense of conservation-national tion. The Parliaments, not having and obstinately not having the same monarchical and religious instincts, were careful not to keep the question within the circle that Louis XIV and the general assembly of the clergy would treat him-They were.

Dazzled by the prestige of omnipotence of the Hughnots, united with the philosophers and the Jansenists, surrounded each judicial court, the Parliaments had allowed to resume at the outset of Gallican liberties. The right to re-For them, showing respect was a need that tired the royalty.
by humiliating him. As soon as they realized that the struggle against spiritual power would offer them the same advantages, without compromising them in the eyes of the Nation, They eagerly seized this new lever. Apart from a few old and respectable names, isolated in their virtues, like a Stoic at an orgy, and Protestant
By their silence, the majority of judicial courts began in flagrant hostility towards the Apostolic See.

Saint-Simon, who shared these feverish impatiences of the Roman yoke, and who nevertheless lived very healthily things when he didn't look at them through the drapes—the details of his ducal and peer's mantle, announces the coming—the beginning of the reign of lawyers. We therefore read in her Memoirs¹: "The dress dares everything, usurps everything and dominates everything." This prophetic word, uttered like a cry of alarm in the middle of Louis XIV's century, found only unbelievers, because the invasions full of turbulence—religious fervor within the bar, already dragging down the judiciary on a leash, they were not to pass, in the eyes of the authorities, but rather, than for the frolicking of the legal profession in gaiety. Using the weapons of reasoning or satire, one would attack—It was the Roman Curia. It was shown, always and everywhere. everything, greedy and deceitful, invasive and corrupt. Under the pretext of saving Gallican liberties, each daily jeopardized by encroachments or by the mis— I will want the Pontificate, one trained in pride, or rather— Early on, the weakness of kings was a pedestal of infallibility. The quarrels between the Priesthood and the Empire were rekindled in complete peace. Only the word was still on the accuser. sation. The roles were reversed; the lawyers did not defend— They no longer did, they demanded. They no longer gave themselves Their clients chose Rome as their enemy. Out of loyalty. At the throne, they tried to shake the Holy See, and one would have said that, to compensate them for their hatred without For reasons, Providence granted them blindness as mitigating circumstance.

¹ Memoirs of the duo of Saint-Simon, vol. XI, p. 135 (edition of 1829).

M BOOK ONE.

The power of the monarch. Efforts were being made to detach the King from the Pulpit. apostolic, and to isolate him in his precarious authority. His virtues were praised, his vices were addressed. If necessary even, we would always have been, following the example of the lawyer Pierre Dupuy, willing to forgive, that is to say to encourage To rage against a crime or an injustice. Pierre Dupuy had said: Princes sometimes do shameful things. which cannot be blamed when they are useful to their States, because shame being covered by profit, one "We call it wisdom." Pierre Dupuy held this singular language in 1651. Throughout the reign of Louis XIV, the bar,

¹ Apology for the publication of the evidence of the Gallican Church.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 55

who was not yet thinking of making the opposition monarch—

chicique, contented himself with professing such accommodations—matters of conscience. He placed his hatred or his prejudices under the safeguard of a devotion that transcends the limits of servility. Dupuy, one of the pillars of the E—The Gallican church had established this principle of subjection, avowed gle; his successors turned it into an instrument of flattery for kings and of incessant war waged against all that came from Rome. In this complete blossoming of anar—religious dog, the role of courtier was used as of a veil that hides evil deeds.

Jansenism, as well as Gallicanism, was a a simmering hostility threatening all established powers. The a—The lawyer was either a Jansenist or a Gallican. Depending on the circumstances, he made of deism, unbelief, sentimentality or of intolerance. He displayed the fiercest independence or He allowed himself the most illegal pranks, to make He called Catholic doctrine odious. Ultramontaniam.

To make a niche for the sacred, following Rabelais's words, became the constant preoccupation of the jurist and the ma—Gistrat. The liberties of the Gallican Church, misunderstood and, when misinterpreted, provided ample material and always plausible pretexts for discussion, at least—to rule on or reject decrees issued from Rome. The teaching—The amendment of the four articles was declared mandatory. It was It is permissible to ignore God's commandments. Under penalty of pious treachery or lèse-majesté, it was necessary to profess in the pulpit, in schools, and even in the confessional sionnal, these four articles, palladium of national immunities—national and flag of future emancipation. In France, where men always had more power than the laws, and where no one knows how to live freely and no one can be a slave. This troublesome and honeyed opposition was necessary—It was a way of appealing to popular sentiment. It was, in a way, a first edition of the great principles of 1789, pu—suppressed against spiritual authority. They taught subservience there. conditional mission, or rather, the revolt was stammering there. Those who loved change embraced this doctrine, which seemed to descend from the throne to limit the principle of obedience.

56 BOOK ONE.

The healthy part of the Clergy, therefore the immense The majority, it was not long before, as early as the seventeenth century, realizing that the country was being led into a false way. Cardinal du Perron had uncovered this project to Estates General; Abbot Fleury, the judicious historian of

The Church leaves no doubt about these impatiences of the pastoral yoke. "If," he said, "some foreigner, zealous for the rights of the Church and little inclination to flatter the powers that be temporal, wanted to make a treatise on the servitudes of The Gallican Church, there would be no shortage of material... If we examine the authors of the palace, and particularly Dumoulin, we will see a lot of passion and injustice, Even less charity and humility.

And in one of his wisest and most profound discourses— In this course, the same ecclesiastical historian summarizes his entire work. thought: "We must," he exclaimed, "tell the truth. These are not not only foreigners and supporters of the Court of Rome, which weakened the vigor of the ancient discipline and diminished our freedoms; the French, the King's people, those very people who made that name resound the loudest

* Fieury, Liberties of the Gallican Church, rpuscule, p. 108 and 412.
2 Discourse on the freedmen of the Gallican Church, p. 79.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 57

freedom, they dealt it harsh blows by pushing the "The King's rights taken to excess."

To de-Catholicize France, and, on the ruins of its Church, to make the four articles triumph, of which he does not—it would not be more difficult to extract a civil constitution that a federal or unitary republic had not been a A plan neither conceived nor premeditated in advance. We were no longer in the dreams of Admiral de Coligny or the Grand Duke of Rohan. Like all human events, this idea develops She was immersed in the world of passions. Everything was an ally. After annihilating the Holy See, the leaders Parliament hoped to be able to enslave without hindrance The Church in France. The Church hampered and discredited, we was now only located opposite the throne. The throne had to inevitably sink where the Church had failed.

With the war of ambushes and underhanded tactics... declared to the Roman See by secular Gallicanism, it Bishops and councils were no longer needed. The magistra— It compensated for everything; it distorted or confiscated everything to further his ambitions. Bossuet had already pointed this out. a tendency towards Cardinal d'Estrées. He wrote to him!: "In my sermon on the unity of the Church, delivered at the opening of the Assembly of 1682, I was indispensably obliged to speak of the liberties of the Gallican Church, and I I proposed two things: one, to do it without any diminishment of the true greatness of the Holy See; the other, to explain them in the way that they understand them our bishops, and not in the way that they understand them our magistrates.

In 1804, in a report addressed to Emperor Napoleon-Leon by Abbot Bernier, Bishop of Orléans, and one of the

1 Works of Bossutt, vol. IX, p. 275 (4778).

58 BOOK ONE.

negotiators of the Concordat, the prelate expresses himself in these terms:

"Besides (I say this frankly), we mix with our freedoms far too many maxims of the ancients by-elements. They are given as the palladium of the Gallic Churchlicane, while they are merely the pretensions of some Jansenist presidents and lawyers, or rather independents, who wanted to defy the authority of the Church and of the monarch by new maxims. It is to these outrageous maxims that we must and the murmurs of Rome and internal discontent regarding clergyman.

This distinction, so persistently established, of a part between the Clergy, which accepts no solidarity with the nascent heterodoxy of the judicial courts, and on the other between the bar fighting for the defense of Gallic liberties-canes, despite the Gallican Church itself; this distinctiontion¹ exists more than ever. Frayssinous, Bishop of Her-Mopolis, consecrates it with these words: "Let us draw from here the Sound doctrine from pure sources. I will say it without mincing words.
that we should not seek our freedoms in legal documents of lawyers, more jurists than theologians; nor in maxims without solid foundation, which can be denied with the same ease with which they are asserted; nor in a jurispru-dency which formerly tended to invade everything, and which did not "To put chains on the ecclesiastical ministry."

These chains must have been quite heavy indeed.
conscience and to the dignity of the Pontiffs. The magistrates, protectors born of the liberties of the Gallican Church, had,
as much as they could, they attracted all the causes to themselves

1 The true principles of the Gallican Church, p. 43 (1818).

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 59

clerical. Sensing that it would no longer be possible for them to
They fought against the Papacy through the Bishops

the Bishops through the lower clergy. They multiplied the appeals as abuses; they arrogated to themselves the judgment of the purely spiritual matters; they decided on the admission administration of the sacraments; they decreed accusation the priests who did not obey their orders; they did to burn by the executioner's hand the decrees of the pas-diocesan authorities. After having thus moved the boundary markers which separating the Priesthood and the Empire, they took on the task to sow the most learned confusion in the Church and in the State. They wanted to break the tiara of the Supreme Pontiff, in order to later force the King of France to lay down his crown ronne at the registry.

The usurpation of all power was so blatant that, in 1738, when the Pope, happily yielding to the wish of the whole world, placed Saint Vincent de Paul on the altars, and bestowed the honors of canonization upon this hero Christians of humanity, Jansenist priests of Paris joined forces with Gallican lawyers to have it suppressed these tributes of respectful admiration. The bubble does not was neither directly nor remotely within the jurisdiction of the par-elements; but there was incidental mention of the nova* popularizing the miracles of Deacon Paris. He did not no further action was needed from the two allied parties to formulate—to hold a consultation with the lawyers of Paris at subject of a bull entitled: Canonisatio Beati Vincentii to Paulo. With a gravity that perhaps had well its ridiculous aspect, the lawyers asserted "that the de— The flaws in this judgment authorized the priests to form opposition regarding the registration of all letters patent that one might be surprised to see in favor of this bubble, this which would not prevent, at a more opportune time They did not pass the roll call as an abuse.

GO BOOK ONE.

The King scorned this marvelous audacity; France also. But when, in turn, God was decreed to accusation, and categorized as one of the disadvantages of sociaux, the lawyers of 1793 completed the work begun by their predecessors. Vincent de Paul, first of all, was no longer that a great citizen, he was subsequently raised to the dignity of humanitarian sans-culottes.

The magistrates were paving the way for political independence. by freeing itself from all religious subordination.

At that time, there was on the siege of Paris an illustrious and saintly archbishop. In concert with several other prelates as virtuous and as far-sighted as he, he did not tremble—de Beaumont, whose charity is one of the glories of eighteenth century¹, was not intimidated by the threats nor mockery. He knew that boldness never lost anyone, and, like Saint Ambrose, he cried out with a faith that overcame all insults: Ubi Petrus ibi Ecclesia... He was persecuted, he was exiled, he was made from him a type of ignorance and fanaticism.

Christophe

Those who, in the name of a God of peace, called the peoples to justice and liberty, began by to outlaw. The Church in France refused to imitate them in their system of usurpation. After intentionally- Having been separated from the Chair of Peter, they detached themselves from the obedience owed to the bishops. They marched to the conquest for a kind of civil cult, to which the four ar-

1 On the day of Archbishop Christophe de Beaumont's funeral, the The women of the people said to one another, "This worthy lord! If a "If the poor man asked him for a gold louis, it would be enough to bring him back."

1>IE VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 61

t

Articles, commented on by the bar, had to serve as a basis.

And this was so well understood that, in the very middle of the Revolution, in 1795, a work appeared in Frankfurt... titled: The Gallican system reached and convinced of having been the first and main cause of the coming revolution to de-Catholicize and dissolve the most Christian monarchy yours, and to be today the greatest obstacle to the counter-revolution in favor of this monarchy.

This book, which does not bear an author's name, accuses a vigorous talent for dialectic. Without pushing the consequences to the extreme, he deduces them from principles, he explains with a rare knowledge of the subject. Under the blow of events, and faced with disasters, he ac- He criticizes Gallicanism, and, on page 59, he asks:

"How will the Gallicans ever be able to compensate for this?" Excuse such attacks? But how will they especially to justify the accusation of having contributed, cooperated primarily and directly, as much through their for example, that by their system, to this revolution unbelievable, of which we are the victims, and which is not in by its very nature and audacious rebellion, that a direct and pronounced revolt against the priestly authority dowry and the royal authority of Jesus Christ himself? For it is

Jesus Christ is the one whom the impious revolutionaries desire. above all things, and if it is in their principles monstrous and in their detestable views of working with all their might to the overthrow of the Holy See and of all the thrones of Christendom, it is only in order to a- to nullify, if they can, the dual authority of Jesus- Christ, of whom the Sovereign Pontiff and the Christian kings are respectively custodians, and that they exercise in his name and as holding its place. Now, the Gallicans can-

62 BOOK ONE.

They flatter themselves that they have nothing to reproach themselves for in this regard, to have in no way contributed to this mystery of iniquity? Dare- Would they really claim it, would they really dare to say it? after all the attacks they have made on this double authority ?

"Indeed, have they not, while confessing, while exalting- both the priestly authority of Jesus Christ in itself, Have they not shaken this supreme authority? Have they not shaken it? Didn't they cause the most violent shock, by dis- ultimately placing sovereignty in the hands of the Sovereign Pontiff to whom Jesus Christ entrusted its fullness and principality, by tearing it away from it, by taking it from it with obstinacy, to make it pass, to make it reside in the the body of bishops, who, according to them, represent the Church, and on which they make the Sovereign Pontiff dependent, even as Sovereign Pontiff, who, no doubt, is not not fit, or not worthy to represent the Church of which he is the supreme leader, although he represents as like Jesus Christ himself? And as for the degree, the me- confident in the authority they were willing to recognize in this visible head of the Church, have they not restricted it, weakened it? blie, hindered, to the point of rendering it null in practice that, by claiming, by demanding that the exercise be regulated according to the old canons, that is to say according to ca- largely abrogated in the Church, and which has not- wielded more authority than these messages pleased. gentlemen, to attribute it to him? Now, by stopping, by chaining thus arbitrarily exercising this remaining authority, Haven't they, in turn, made things problematic, arbi- milking, and thereby nullifying, the essential duties of the subordination that is due to him? That is to say, in short, that, while recognizing the priestly authority of Jesus-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 63

Christ in herself and in speculation, they have ab- sworn and truly annihilated in practice and for practice: Confitentur se nosse Deum, factis auem ne-glove (Title I). And it was at this price that they established and maintained held their criminal liberties; it is thus that they raised the first ones, the banner of revolt and rebellion against the priestly authority of Jesus Christ, and that they prepared and fostered its complete ruin and annihilation. total dismantling in France. Because the authority of the Sovereign Pontiff once weakened, depressed, made hateful and almost nowhere by the Gallican system, it followed that the authority episcopal must have felt imperceptibly, to the greatest extent The same reason: the same waste, the same losses, the same declines, and that in the end all ecclesiastical authority- that was to pass into the hands of the civil power; And that is indeed what began in the very time of our parliaments, and what was to be consumed in one "A more expressive manner during a time of revolution."

On page 68, the anonymous author gives his thesis of larger proportions, and he shows how one isolates the kings on their thrones, so as not to leave the Church to them anymore for support.

"According to the Gallicans, the throne of the Most Christian Kings" It was therefore no longer founded, supported on the throne of Jesus-Christ, identified with the throne of Jesus Christ. He had no no other foundation than natural religion, than the deism, with no other support than enthusiasm, than opinion national, and the French people were no longer to see and not lives more in his king, the successor of Clovis, of Charles-Magne, of Saint Louis, and the representative of Jesus Christ, but the successor of the Pharamonds, of the Clodions, and the representative- "feeling from the God of nature" Thus, the most Christian kings were excused from paying homage to Jesus Christ of their scepter, their crown, all their rights; their coronation it was nothing more than a pointless ceremony that no longer meant anything nothing, and the oaths they swore there as subjects of Jesus Christ, as the custodians of his royal authority, that a vain formula which no longer obliged anyone to do anything*, and not- only they no longer belonged in any way to Jesus Christ, like Roissy, not only do they no longer last, like kingSj, neither to his Church nor to religion, but they were not no longer bound, even as individuals, nor to recognize neither to profess the other.

6i LIV11E PREMIER.

In this confusion of all wishes, and in this prostration of all powers which has just been indicated Broadly speaking, the Priesthood and the Empire were undermined by a relentless conspiracy. The secular Gallicans believed in it-they held their hands; they managed to make common cause with The philosophers and the Jansenists. It's this mixture mocking skepticism on one side, and calculated hatred on the other on the other hand, which gave birth to Josephism, the first application—the cation of all these systems combined to overturn the the stone upon which God builds his Church.

“However diverse the herbs may be, everything is covered in “Loppe under the name of salad,” said Montaigne in

1 “Also, when Louis XVI ascended the throne, it was questioned—regarding the ceremony of his coronation, his council deliberated on whether this the ceremony would take place, as it was generally regarded as inutile and superfluous according to the Gallicans. However, it was decided to affirm—m*ative, and Louis XVI was crowned, but the preacher took care during the ceremony to prevent the striking consequences that could be drawn from it in favor of the temporal kingship of Jesus Christ, and of dependence of our kings with regard to this royalty, by announcing loudly in pre—the astonished public, and in accordance with Gallican doctrine, that This ceremony was neither obligatory for the king nor essential to his charge. » [Note by Anonymous Author.]

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 65

his sparkling style of judicious crudités. By his assimilations, by its tendencies, and by its need for innovation in order to destroy more surely, Josephism took to professing the purest arbitrariness. This arbitrariness was to realize his dream of religious independence and political renewal. Josephism participated in all the With systems in turmoil, he seized upon all the theories, and, possessed by prodigious pride, he tried to drown The lamb in its mother's milk. Josephism proceeds Therefore, it relates to Jansenism and the philosophical school. It is a intrusion of the secular element into the government of the Church, and a reaction from the civil public against the priesthood. On It differs from Protestantism on only one point.

In countries where it is the law, Protestantism absorbs the religious idea within the civil idea. The sovereign is entirely at He is both monarch and pope; he holds dual authority. Among Lutherans and Calvinists, as well as in An—England, the struggle between the two powers does not exist No. In Catholic states, on the contrary, it is found two completely distinct authorities, one supernatural and spiritual, the other natural and temporal. In the Middle Ages At that time, religious authority enjoyed all its rights, at the less so in principle. In Germany, it was only at the time of the House of Swabia, and in France under Philip the Bel, that the antagonism between the temporary power began Porel and the papal power. This antagonism again.

does it only appear in the acts of the judiciary?
because the long struggles between the Priesthood and the Empire, pres-that are embodied in the names of Guelphs and Ghibellines, never aimed to weaken or attenuateto change the exercise of pastoral ministry. In the midst of these such complicated wars and this labyrinth of rights so
I. 5

66 BOOK ONE.

controversial, the principle of the Church's authority super-
He always had faith. He was alive in the heart of the people.
He was respected and revered among sovereigns. He still reigned.
in the minds of Kings, who, carried away by whim or by driven by passion, they indulged in thoughtless injustices, then sooner or later, as if by instinct, they returned to obedience subsidiary.

With the rise of Protestantism, and the bloody ex-those who signaled the new sect, the states that remained faithful to the Chair of Saint Peter attached themselves more more closely than ever at the center of unity. In Germany, as in France, it was no longer a question of arguing about the nature of such and such an act, on the character of a fact more or less legal. Faith was endangered by heresy.
triumphant; in the common peril, the Catholic princes-
The empires turned their eyes towards Rome. The Revolution, Whatever its flag, it was always for them that wind which breaks the dead branch and hardens the living branch.
They became Romans out of the need to safeguard their beliefs threatened and their states deeply troubled.
The accession of Henry IV to the throne of France brought about a a kind of reaction against the League, whose spirit had was eminently ultramontane; but the genius so perspi-
The Béarnais's cace did not leave Gallicanism for long.
Secularism grants the right to compromise with error.

The disputes were concentrated in certain schools of theology; they took refuge in some parliaments, who believed they were entitled to grant them asylum hardly silent. They barely deemed it appropriate.
to raise his head, when, in his troubles with the Pope Innocent XI, Louis XIV went further than anyone else from his predecessors the claims to his crown.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 67

Matured by experience and adversity, the King did not delay point to returning to more equitable sentiments. He would have even erased all trace of its divisions with the Headquarters apostolic, if seeds of revolt had not been placed in hearts.

Jansenism had developed; unbelief propagated quietly. The alliance of the Huguenots, of the Jansenists and philosophers who took refuge in Holland, was beginning to bear fruit. After creating printing presses in several cities of the United Provinces, they flooded Europe with obscene books and pamphlets irrereligious or based on cleverly falsified stories. They called themselves Catholics, by creating dynasties of usurper bishops and a line of priests always prohibited, but still able to explain their rebellion. In her entrenched camp in Utrecht, this insensitive minority, which still skimps on its obedience, does not He never measured the opprobrium at the Roman Siege and the revolt to the people. Insubordination had its price; it found its place, as did the corrupt doctrines and their breakers.

All weapons directed against the Church and against the Thrones were forged in this arsenal. To render the wound insurable incurable, Jansenists and Philosophers used poisoned arrows. The doctrine of some substituted the sectarian to the Pontiff; the philosophy of others elevated man above God, and put the State in place of the Church. They had started from opposite points; they did not delay to merge in a common interest. They felt that the link of papal authority was weakening under their ceaseless efforts. They applied themselves to spreading the relaxation the change in morals as a consequence of their actions.

5.

68 BOOK ONE.

From Holland and France, their conspiracy spread to beyond the Pyrenees and in part of the Italian peninsula link. Its promoters were the ministers of the Kings and the opponents of the Society of Jesus, working offensively to its ruin, so that everything would be corrupted at once, From middle age to the youngest generations. Gift Manuel de Roda in Spain; Pombal, the Grand Marquis, in Portugal; Tanucci in Naples, Cardinal André Corsini in Rome, became the most active emissaries of the complot. The fall of the Jesuits inevitably left education youth in the hands of universities. The element secularism was going to dominate, at the same time, from Amsterdam to Lisbon; it was introduced into Austria under the guise of the medical school.

Like all political or religious opposition,
The Jansenists of Holland had created a school of men-
my handymen, who would have dug themselves a hole-min, right where there would have been no land. At this At school, talent was much less valued than the plot, but it served as his passport to the outside world.
This was how Jansenism penetrated Vienna, and how it introduced himself at the court of Empress Maria Theresa to give rise to Josephism.

Anatomical studies are still in their infancy.
in his Empire. Boerhaave, the famous professor of Leiden has just died, leaving his disciples a part of her renown and medical science. Marie-Thé-
This testifies to the desire to have two practitioners with her.
graduates trained by Boerhaave's lessons; she puts for
The only condition is that they be Catholic. The doctors Girard van Swieten and Antoine de Haen were among them.
herd, so small and so restless, that they grazed in the schism of the bishops of Utrecht, rebels from the foundation.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 69

Van Swieten and de Haen are appointed; they have barely entered in the Empress's confidence they begin their a process of purification on one side and proselytizing on the other.
This task is very simple: it consists of disregarding little to gradually eliminate the Jesuits as a teaching body, to eliminate them gradually, and then, by sponsoring re- projects university form, we must manage to substitute for the Epi-Scopat and the Company, the still unpublished perpetrators of Van Swieten is the driving force behind all these projects. He has found in the capital of the Empire a few isolated Jansenists;
after having gathered them in a cenacle and strengthened them in their reinstinctively, he shares with them the dignities of teaching gnement. Abbot de Stoch is president of the faculty of Theology, Riegger professes canon law and Martini the Natural law. The Jansenists had a foothold in Vienna;
They will soon dominate there through Josephism, at-which they grant in advance letters of great naturelisation.

Empress Maria Theresa, this great statesman which, according to Frederick II of Prussia, was his most constant opponent, did honor to his sex and to the throne, was in all the splendor of her glory. She reigned by her virtues in-core more than by her rights as heir to the house of Habsburg, whose name she confused with that of The House of Lorraine and the House of Guise. This princess, who,
in this century saturated with sensualism, reproached himself time she devoted to sleep, because, she said, it was hours wasted for her people, this princess watched over their well- with a mother's eyes more than on that of her family. She put her power in the service of the Church, and, to safeguard ca-

70 BOOK ONE.

Catholic in her vast possessions, she was ready to all the sacrifices. It was nevertheless during his reign that strange doctrines infiltrated the Episcopate and into Universities.

In Germany, the revolt of minds was not to pro-yield, as in France, through wordplay or by sarcasm. This light machine-gun fire, striking down the Saint-Seat and falling upon the Priesthood in sparks of fire of artifice, would have had only weak appeals for these Germanic heads, so square and so fond of the syllogism or of the quarrel. They needed the dialectic of the school, the seriousness of the demonstration and the minor points of The table with which Luther adorned his theology. The Protestants continued their war against the Papacy; in order to confuse public opinion, it was judged opportune to join this war, while separating the new cause of the Lutheran cause.

The Jansenist idea had penetrated to the heart of Germany Magne; Gallican principles had spread there. In-driven by vague desires for separation or dreaming to weaken the Chair of Peter through hostilities that do not-were going to go to the very edge of heresy, some bishops ambitious individuals paved the way for innovations. This path was opened by Jean-Nicolas de Hontheim, Sufi bishop fragrant from Trier. Under the pseudonym of Justinus Fe-Bronius, this prelate raises the flag against the Roman See; then, in a book where the least elegant of Latinities! Febronius, who, rises to the level of the strangest theories,

1 This book is thus entitled: Justini Febronii, jurisconsulte de statut presenti Ecclesiæ et legitima potestate romani pontificis, liber singularis, ad reuniendos dissidentes in religione christianos compositus. (1763, Broth.)

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 7)

aims to restore unity in the Church, throws itself into full hands of confusion and discord.

Febronius had compiled rather than invented. In this work, nothing belonged to him personally. The good and the true ones were detached from Bossuet's works; the bad ones or the forgery came from Protestant and Jansenist circles. It was the contradiction juxtaposed, and, with an unsettled confidence, professing doctrines that are- They were destroying each other. Febronius had collected a host of ambiguous materials to reconcile all the systems; but his supposed reconciliation did not go to nothing less than the schism of which, in several passages of In his book, he teaches the recipe with indulgence. highly unorthodox. This episcopal document was indigestible. in substance and incomprehensible in form; nevertheless He arrived so promptly that he was greeted with shouts of joy. of enthusiasm and transports of grateful joy.

The error was displayed in such a convenient way; she accumulates milk on the Roman Pontificate, so many paradoxes, born of so many impostures, that this borrowed name of Febronius still survives in history, when, for very long- For many years, the work itself fell into the deeper darkness. This work suffered the fate of certain flowers that wither after producing their first fruit, and which remain after the thin, dry bark, to which However, a trace of perfume remains.

"Men," said Machiavelli, "are slower to to take what they can easily have, rather than desiring. what they cannot obtain. - The German Bishops' Conference read the sad experience of this maxim. He needed of a wise reform; he could ask it of the Saint-

1 Machiavelli, Stor. di Firenz., t. I, p. 175.

72 BOOK ONE.

The seat, which certainly would not have adjourned it; but, instead To perform an act of submission, it pleased some prelates to commit an act of rebellion. Canonists such as Oberhau- ser, Sonnenfeld, Zallwein, Barthel, Born, Eybel and Van Espen encouraged them. These canon lawyers and legal experts, sympathetic to ambitious greed, they wanted their to soften the harshness of this path to Heaven which one must climb barefoot and empty-handed; they pushed them to the abyss. Febronius, who would later repent, had agitated by questions fraught with storms; the storms erupted as soon as Emperor Joseph II saw himself, by the death of Marie-Thérèse, in a position to implement her plans of ecclesiastical reform.

The very night the great Empress expired (November 29)

November 1781), the new Emperor wrote to the Prince of Kaunitz: "Until now, I have only known how to be an obedient son—"Health, and that's about all I knew." For for his happiness and for his glory, Joseph II would never have I must have forgotten it.

This prince, who held to the very heart of the Church Roman by virtue of his dual family, he tried to detach himself from it. by all the sophisms of pride mixed with a real passion for the public good. He was loath to believe in the part the role of the Apostle, saying: "Let what appears in God A folly is wiser than the wisdom of all. men. His intelligence, which, like the sea, is in The calm, even in the midst of the storm, was a rare production of nature, had elevation and grandeur. Its His intentions always seemed upright, and his character always full of energy. He wanted his children to be happy. peoples; but in his own way, without consulting the genius of 1 Epist. B. Pauli, prima ad Corinth., I, 25.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 73

different races, the spirit of the times and the repulsions of nature factors that his need to improve anyway would to move. Joseph had such a propensity for everything or—ter, that noble and proverbial simplicity of his ancestors this soon degenerated in him into a mania for to single out.

In the solitude he had created for himself at the foot of the throne of his mother, the Emperor had absorbed all the philosophical mothers; he had superficially approached grounded in jurisprudence and social economics. Delivered near—that, unbeknownst to him, he was following the treacherous advice of the Jansenists, of whom Yan Swieten formed a small circle of ardent admirers for him. His admirers, Joseph II, indulged all their whims. of an adventurous imagination. In the grip of fever reforms, he forgot that it is important not to approach them too closely. Dear as fire: not too far, for fear of having cold; not too close, for fear of getting burned. To establish the freedom of conscience, civil and political liberty, the Emperor knew no other instrument than arbitrary—Pure milking. The Emperor would tolerate no more resistance from the Church, which he was stripping, than from the loyal populations, whose vows he did not heed and whose systems offended all Catholic instincts liques.

The philosophers had sought, in the eighteenth century, a sovereign after their own hearts. Frederick of Prussia He used them and only used them when he saw fit. The pre—

Joseph's supplication led him astray to the point of presenting the despotism of its benefits as a new era for humanity. Jansenism and Philosophy have not—had been able to tear the principles of Religion from his soul Christian; they tried to undermine all her beautiful qualities. Of this spirit, shining in the darkness like a phosphorus that shone without illuminating, an activity was carried out intellectual and physical vigor that allowed itself to be intoxicated by its His omniscience, even more so than his omnipotence. When this leaven of revolt against the Church had indeed fermented in his heart, Joseph II was urged to associate to all easement plans prepared by its masters very or by his flatterers. With the sceptre of the Caesars for lever of destruction, they hoped to degrade the Roman Catholic Church Maine, both in his doctrine and in his works. Jansenism sought to isolate it from all contact with Christianity. to hold and make of the holy city, the sorrowful city, an es—a kind of modern leper colony, where the memory of the Papacy would struggle, in this valley of death, with the shadow of his vanished power. Without calculating that he was still It is no longer possible to realize the dream of all the apostates than to build the dome of Saint-Pierre with the dust of the Along the way, they sought to elevate the naive—clothed in imperial pride.

74 BOOK ONE.

The Revolution is not yet ready for France and for Italy. The Civil Constitution of the Clergy does not exist Not even in embryo. Suddenly it reveals itself deep inside. of Germany; the hasty reforms of Joseph II in offer Europe a first edition. Joseph II pro—claims that the Catholic religion is the dominant religion in his states; but, to demonstrate this, he awakens all the passions buried under the ashes of the Guelphs and the Ghibellines. The Empire declares war on the Priesthood, during—that the Holy See is being challenged by all the no—vators.

In France, the clergy was made unpopular by unbelief. lity, born of universal mockery; in Germany, Jo~

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 75

Sephardi II attacks the authority of the Church through the science of Administrative oppression. It's the law in hand, the law. which has just been improvised for the needs of the cause, which serves as a rule for all these measures taken suddenly blow and piled one on top of the other by hatred or by the violence. Joseph II had canon lawyers disguised as fanatics. and jurists who had become philosophers, who formalize in public acts the dissolution of the hierarchy ecclesiastical. It has prelates, such as Archduke Maximilian, his brother, like the Archbishop-electors of Mainz, Cologne, Salzburg and Trier, as d'Herbestein, Bishop of Laybach, who encourage these acts; it has magistrates who sanction them and mid-nistres who are responsible for their execution. Therefore, nothing remains more to the Emperor than to command his people to be happy, according to the order, and to accept improvements thoughtless rations with enthusiastic submission. The Emperor does not speak, he does not argue, he does not accuse. No, he acts. Let's see him in action.

His firm intention is never to break with the Roman Church, and, in less than a year, this prince has so widely used his right as legislator and his profession of reformer, which he does not leave standing a cornerstone of the edifice built by his ancestors. Everything has been undermined by laws; everything is shaken by countless decrees. But, in this universal upheaval, the infatigable utopian is alone in applauding himself, as if he had just to renew the face of the earth.

As in all human affairs, he had without a doubt more than one abuse slipped in amidst so much of opposing interests and among such disparate elements. The Holy See had reported them to the authorities more than once.

76 BOOK ONE.

spear of the Germanic Caesars, as to the wisdom of Empress Maria Theresa. These abuses were more than of a kind; but was it really necessary to uproot the tree in order to prune it? Was it necessary, especially at a certain time? also troubled, to proceed by spoliation in order to arrive to a supposed distributive justice?

Joseph II did not take the time to make such reflexions. His bishops, court prelates or favorites of the Janisia, did not see in their outcry against Rome, that a future liberation from all obedience-discipline and complete regularity. None of them understood that this war was inevitably going to turn into their harm. They were rebelling against the Church, their mother church. in order to give their prince a token of loyalty. The prince accepted these obsequious devotions and he... served as an endorsement which he would have very well could have happened.

An edict of general tolerance, a tolerance that must be allowed to infiltrate customs and never dedicate by law, was the revelation of Josephism. This edict, dated of October 4, 1781, is worded as follows:

Convinced of the pernicious effects of all violence exerted on consciences, and essential advantages of a truly Christian tolerance, His Majesty Imperial and Royal Apostolic decrees that the exercise deprived of their religion will be permitted to all its subjects testators of the Helvetic confession, of that of Augsburg, as well as to all its subjects of the Greek religion, in all parts of the Austrian monarchy where they are present in sufficient numbers.

Those who do not profess the Catholic religion will not will not be required to take an oath using specific formulas.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 77

contrary to the principles of their sect, nor to attend the processions and ceremonies of the dominant religion.

"By conferring offices, the sovereign will have no with regard to the difference between religions, but only to the capacity and aptitude.

"Mixed marriages will be permitted."

"No one shall be punished because of their religion." unless he violated civil law.

It was equality descending from the throne to confound all sects and all dissidents in the same A feeling of fraternal governance. This innocent dream Joseph II's reign was, in the eyes of his advisors, a dawn of anti-Roman happiness. The Emperor tolerated everything; he was persuaded that in order to be consistent, it was important to put the Catholic Church, apart from this very generous principle—ment posed. And Joseph II suffered this affront! And in his moment—his mania for legislating, he delivered the Holy See to d'auda—Holy hostilities!

In the space of a few months, this great demolition man Abuse has reduced the Church to nothing more than a corpse. Here he has He was upset there and eliminated it; everywhere he leveled it. He is a precursor of indefinite freedom, but a precursor who delights in being overtaken by the slavery of the Sacerdoce. His bishops or his subjects may correspond with whomever they please, except with the Vicar of Jesus Christ. He regulates the oath of some, he combines the obedience of others. He emancipated the religious from all kinds of Institutes; soon he will no longer want either couvents, nor novices. The Church's possessions tempt his greed governmental; it confiscates them in the name of its tolerance. Joseph II is a legal article that extends indefinitely. and which strikes everything indiscriminately.

78 BOOK ONE.

His iron hand unfastens the doors of the monasteries poorer; she forces her way into the rich abbeys. He has already secularized two thousand twenty-four religious houses—his. The Capuchins, the Premonstratensians, the Carthusians, the Dominicans, Carmelites, Trinitarians, Franciscans, Cistercians, Servites, Camaldolese, Clearings and the Benedictines no longer exist throughout the Empire except as isolated individuals. The state took charge of administering their goods; he appropriates them. The temporal power of the Church makes part of the public fortune; and what will be renewed in the same circumstances in France, Spain and in Piedmont presents itself in Austria. The needs of the State are larger, his poverty is more clearly seen, his debt increases in proportion to the assets he confiscates. On one hand, he wastes it on the other, or sells it at a low price. in order to create new interests and a new class of unlicensed owners.

There are bubbles which, like that In cœna Bomini[^] do not not suitable for Joseph and his love of the domination, others which, like the Unigenitûs[^]ne bull, will He pointed to his prejudices. These bubbles are decreed by him. so to speak, of taking possession of the body. The priests who in accept the indisputable validity and are judged in court of the Emperor and by the Emperor himself, pronouncing thus his judgment, on April 25, 1781: "The two members of the commission of inquiry, who have dared to support the bulls In cœna and Unigenitus, and to make Their resistance was a crime against their superiors at the seminary. will be severely reprimanded, and one of them—who occupies the position of chancellor of the University of Olmutz, will be... "Title."

The lender, who should only have concerned himself with business

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 79

He liked to descend to the lowest places, the highest ones. Joseph II decided definitively, but without reflection, the the clearest or most delicate questions of the conscience and the law. He studied, according to his biases, the cause of the Church and that of the Supreme Pontificate. He renders a judgment on all these points of history, the consequences of which astounding examples are drawn from Vol-'s Essay on Customs Be quiet. Now you will see him distract himself from these treatments. so serious, by abolishing the processions, by reconnecting the number of feasts, by prescribing the order of services, in regulating religious ceremonies, masses, and pomp funeral rites, the manner in which salutations should be said, and by informing the sacristans of the quantity of candles he

It must be turned on during services.

This meticulous persecution would not have found Ju-
The link to the indifferent Apostate; she appeared to Joseph as something perfectly natural. He was only surprised to encounter opposition where he had hoped to give rise only to a pro-
He founded recognition. He confined the Church within the circle of Popilius; at every moment he tightened this circle; and his most persistent idea was to cry out about ingratitude of the clergy. The clergy did not lend themselves to change as abrupt as they were radical; he recoiled from laws which completely altered the economy of the Church.
facing this plunder, rather poorly disguised under the name of individual liberty and human progress, the Clergy was frightened by Josephist tendencies and this need to perpetual of contemptuous confusion that reigns in the con-the Emperor's entourage. There weren't only courtiers without in the priesthood. In Austria, in Hungary and in the Netherlands, Cardinals Migazzi, Bathiany and de Fran-Kenberg resisted at the head of the Priesthood. They resisted

80 LIVRJE PREMIER.

with prayer, with complaint, and with reason; but their moderation did not conceal either the apprehensions or the dangers.

The Emperor could not escape these remonstrances; to avoid those of the Apostolic Nuncio in Vienna, he
He forbade entry to the palace. In the name of the Father, he...
Garampi addressed a letter to Joseph II; the prince Kaunitz responds, on December 9, 1781, with a de-fishing where, with each syllable, the insult in the thought pe-
It is excessive and overflowing under a veneer of ironic politeness.
in the words: "The Emperor was not mediocre surprised, wrote his chancellor, to find in the note Monsignor Garampi, the Pope's nuncio, a rebuke cast upon His last decrees. His Imperial Majesty read them, in his own words, that no prince ever remained in The Roman Catholic communion had not considered extending so far removed from the exercise of his authority. Monsignor the Nuncio, unintentionally, no doubt, allows one to draw from one's expressions

let us acknowledge the odious consequence that by extending its power Until then, a prince ceased to be Catholic; it seems even wanting to indicate the possibility of circumstances strong enough to release the subjects from their oath of Loyalty. The Emperor is only willing to attribute it to excessive zeal.
His Excellency the Nuncio ardently supports such a step, and believes it was done without the Holy Father's knowledge. He would even have kept silent, if it had not come to his attention that His Grace the nuncio had communicated his note to some bishops of hereditary states, and even foreigners.
Consequently, His Majesty orders the Chancellor to Replying to Bishop Garampi:

"That the abolition of notorious abuses serves religion;

"That if such abuses had been inherent to religion,

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 81

It would have completely lost its venerable character, and that far from being received with the pious eagerness that deserve the moderation of its principles and the excellence of His morals, the interests of humankind, would not have allowed it to adopt it;

"That the abolition of any institutions that do not re-not only guard the conduct of souls belongs to the temporal sovereign. From this number is the discipline external to the Church, and above all that of the regular clergy-to link: an establishment of human invention, since it is proven that, ignored by the early centuries of the Church, the monasteries owe their creation to the munificence of princes.

"As a consequence of these certain rules, His Majesty Imperial was not only permitted, but compelled by his duties, to take the direction of everything that does not Don't look specifically at the dogma and the inner workings of consciences.

"Therefore, this is not an alteration of religion."
What Monsignor the nuncio seems to fear for the faith exists only in his imagination too vividly struck.

"It is the specific order of His Imperial Majesty that the chancellor of the court and state has just executed by the present, in order to put Monsignor Garampi in a state to conform his future conduct to it and to give a witness-earning the personal consideration of Her Majesty for "His Excellency the Nuncio."

At the time when a prince of the House of Habsburg had just come, with a light heart, to throw this disturbance into the Catholic universe, and alter, on its own authority, the constitution, essence and liturgy of the Church, Rome
I. 6

82 BOOK ONE.

He was seen as a target of all kinds of enemies. He was had imposed immense sacrifices; she had accomplished them folds in the hope of a peace that had been promised to him always, but it was constantly refused him. Of all the sovereigns of Europe, from the Most Christian King to the Catholic or Most Faithful Kings, His Apostolic Majesty only one had not yet continued the Pontificate of her exi-agencies or his threats. Suddenly it's the emperor of Germany itself, which, breaking with the past and the avenir of his family, brings to the Roman See the harshest attacks. You can feel that the Revolution against the Church is coming at measured paces, almost step by step, or rather by book obscene or philosophical; and this Revolution, to which The Kings and the People seem to be mentally applauding,
It is the son of the great Marie-Thérèse who takes pleasure to unleash her.

He unleashes it, annihilating all ecclesiastical powers.
Siastics, the only safeguard of religious conscience.
If this revolution doesn't break out immediately, he's preparing for it.
at least in a foolproof way, by stifling the vopriestly cations, by dismantling the religious orders and by turning the priest into a kind of administrative machine preaching, at the time fixed by the regulations of police, a kind of morality of which the Gospel will be estam-looted from the offices of the Court Chancellery and state.

Captivated by his dream, Joseph II became intoxicated of an ideologue's ambition; he delivers to himself a A man of action. He reforms, reforms, reforms always; then, in his moments of rest, he awards himself the halo of empire restorers. In his actions the more tainted by illegality, arbitrariness or recklessness,

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 83

Jansenism, Philosophy, and Secular Gallicanism

they only saw measures dictated by the healthiest reason. They admired the Emperor; they praised the free a thinker who, no longer being Catholic, had not en- However, this core principle was not pronounced in favor of either Luther or Calvin. But while these cruel praises were about to tickle the proud weaknesses of Joseph II's heart, a so- Verain, who was his master in the art of war as In the art of ruling, Frederick the Great wrote, regarding edicts that stripped the Church and the monasteries of their power: "The Emperor continues his secularizations without interruption. In our family, everyone stays as they are, and I respect that. the right of possession on which the company is founded.

Joseph II seemed to be hurrying to live in order to hurry to legislate. At the instigation of a sect, he was subjected to the moral violence, this prince gave his name to a per- systematically organized security. This persecution, transferred from Port-Royal in Holland, she took shelter under the imperial scepter, as if to humiliate all kings. The sect, which unexpectedly rose to omnipotence through Joseph II, had brought about strange upheavals in the ecclesiastical or civil hierarchy. It destroyed the self- the order of the supreme Pontificate for the benefit of the Bishops; it tends to isolate the Bishops, and to sow discord between them and the Secondary clergy of the seeds of discord. The administration The Josephite tradition will always know how to maintain them; for, to these terminals which, in the offices, will cough their im- Paperwork-based piety will be an eternal source of bliss. philosophical. But that's still not enough.

The disorder, which an emperor improvised in a few

1 Works of Frederick III, King of Prussia, letter 226th, to d'Alembert.

6.

8* BOOK ONE.

pen strokes, can be repaired with another souvenir rain. The Church is accustomed to miracles; it is a matter of the prevent or at least surround them with difficulties almost invincible equipment. The breach is open. to calamities: it is important to make the wound always gaping, so that it may not be permitted to any human hand to cure her. The Austrian, Belgian and Lombard clergy He stood up to the storm; we let him resist and fight. Then Joseph II was condemned to sign edicts which ren- compulsory religious education. These edicts prepared- will thus give to the Empire a generation which, in its priests very and in his family fathers, will know how to force reason natural to triumph over the Christian symbol.

It was on this crucial point that the struggle began fiercely. and ardent. Tertullian said long ago: "The more odious a truth is, the more he who does not disobey it" A mule makes itself hated; but a sure way to please Those who persecute her do so by disguising and altering her. rer. » The Bishops and Clergy of the Empire did not believe not bound by such considerations. They had seen the administration or the armed forces place the sequestration on the convents, and expel from these retreats those who are there were confined to devote themselves to endless studies or to the contemplative life. The religious orders of women had been no more respected than the monasteries of men. The sanctuary was subjected to pillaging. legal, and he had only protested with an excessive resignation often silent. When the Priesthood felt itself affected in faith, in hope and in charity of the ave- At first, he understood that a great duty lay incumbent upon his cousin rage. We wanted to make him a mute spectator of the perversion of souls, then eternalize this perversion in instilling it in the hearts of young people. "God, as well as 'speaks the Apostle', had not convicted wisdom of folly of this world; he had not destroyed the wisdom of the wise. and demonstrated the uselessness of scholarly science." The Clergy prepared for battle; he fought with the weapons of the prayer and reason.

1 Apologetics, p. 52.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 85

The new education plan that Joseph II is outlining for the Levites, as for the young men destined for world, it is the absorption of all religious ideas and the victory of indifferentism, proclaimed from the pulpits academics by materialists. Without consulting the Apostolic See, the Emperor modifies or changes at his according to the boundaries of the dioceses. Its system applies- that according to the needs or rather according to the whims of the mo- He appoints to bishoprics or he dismisses them; everything seems to him- The arrangement is made as soon as he adopts or discards a man. resistance was not serious; this prince imagines that it never will be. His edict of March 30, 1783 on The general seminars², finally opened his eyes.

At that time, there was in Germany, as well as in In France and throughout all Catholic countries, a system- an educational approach that met all needs It favored all wishes and developed all talents. "A little-known fact," writes Mr. Michel Chevalier, "is that, since the Revolution of 1789 and the suppression of the religious orders, we have regressed considerably

1 Epist. B. Pauli prima ad Corinth., I, 49.

2 These general seminaries were established, the first in Vienna, for the Upper and Lower Austria; the second in Prague, for Bohemia; the third—the sixth at Olmutz, for Moravia; the fourth at Inspruck, for Tyrol; the fifth at Pavia, for Austrian Lombardy; the sixth at Louvain, for the Netherlands, and the seventh in Pest, for Hungary.

86 BOOK ONE.

in terms of secondary education. Before 1989, the number of islands students attending schools was three or four times higher than which is what it is today. So there was a greater number of scholarships in a single province, in the Franche-Comté, for example, which there are none of today throughout France.

"Without wishing to slander our century, and without returning—suspected of bias in favor of the old regime, he I may be permitted to say that today it is more difficult than formerly to a capable but poor young man, to emerge intellectually. Every child who announced of a happy disposition was easily distinguished by the Clergy, and obtained not only easy admission but also... tuition in one of the many colleges run by the or—religious teachers.

"Thus, the most liberal creations have been immo—fought, in the name of freedom, in the war of extermination that our fathers declared in the past tense.

This war, of which the former disciple of Saint-Simon Joseph II, despite himself, regretted the effects, declaring it to his people; he did it to the clergy of his empire. The fall of the Society of Jesus had deprived public education of masters and doctors, also deeply versed in ecclesiastical sciences as well as in the study of Belles-Lettres. To this first disaster, which the Revolution nascent solicited as a benefit and imposed as a sacrifice she could be content with, Joseph II added a series of incalculable misfortunes. These semi—seven general offices were established in each major center of the Empire; there, and only there, of—the theological manna was to be distributed. It was forbidden to the Bishops to confer holy orders on postu—other than those who would have spent five years in these clerical training barracks.

The infringement on the freedom of the Bishops was direct; the blow to vocations inevitably resonated in all dioceses; the choice of professors no longer allowed even doubt about the consequences of such a plan. It was met with indifference, and even more often with immorality. that Josephism granted the right to educate the youth to the virtues of the priesthood. The Jansenists finally elevated their normal schools. To fill them with di- teachers From them, they traded in apostate monks; they organized They mocked the press of men of bad morals and of worse doctrines. These adventurers of theology, of which Rome said with the apostle Saint John 1: "They are sor- They were from our midst, but they were not of us. because if they had been on our side, they would certainly have "Those who stayed with us" set to work. They simplified the dogmas of Christianity so well and the the moral of the Gospel, that, in order to rise to the occasion From such a teaching, all that remained was to abolish the family through divorce legislation.

Until that day, education had been free; it was priced like a common commodity. It was imposed on everyone students, whether clergy or lay, a costume of A philosophical-military fantasy. It was on this occasion that Mirabeau exclaimed in his Prussian Monarchy²: "Good heavens! So we also want to dress souls in uniforms?" Form! That is the height of despotism, its refinement. the biggest.

Of all religious and social institutions, there is no

1 Epist. Beati Joannis apostoli prima, II, 19.

2'On the Prussian Monarchy, by the Count of Mirabeau, vol. II, p. 96.

88 BOOK ONE.

Only the family remained standing. Joseph II raised a hand always unhappy about marriage. He stripped him of his holy character; he changed this union of souls into a kind of temporary civil contract, authorizing the divorce and rendering illegitimate children eligible to succeed- This regulation of adultery was the ruin of Christian society. Suddenly thrown out of its her ways, she felt shaken to her core and mutilated in paternal power. The father was deprived of the usu- fruit of his sons' estates; and as the Emperor had

He developed his own theory of equality, decreeing that a The same shroud, that is to say a bag, was sufficient to contain the mortal remains of all citizens, rich or poor— People, nobles or serfs. He had set prices for education; he taxed the absence. Travel outside the Empire was only possible in paying a tax. If the absence continues, the confiscation— tion struck at the stay abroad; the law punished as well the emigrant whom the magistrates who will not have prevented him— It was necessary to cross the border.

The example of Joseph II was contagious; in the pro— In the Rhineland, it was endured reluctantly, and the people said with Isaiah I: In silentio et in spe erit fortitudo vestra. This silence and this hope, invoked as a force, they must not betray it. In Bavaria, The Elector, Maximilian Joseph, was not expecting this Courage from on high. The Emperor was making himself into a miracle worker. In revolt, Maximilian imitated him with demonstrations. with wild enthusiasm. The Revolution, which was not coming quite quickly by the sophists, was precipitated into its It is sometimes governed by kings, sometimes by their ministers.

1 Prophet Isaiah, 30:15.

PIUS VI KT THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 89

v had Pombals at every court: one finds a dimi— Kaunitz's nativity scene near each throne. Naples had its Tanucci, Parma its Félini, Madrid its Campomagnano— Munich had its Montgelas. These statesmen have thirst for innovation; they highly aspire to overturn the Roman Church in order to proclaim upon its ruins the advent The emergence of a new spirit. A deep-seated evil reveals them— They experienced it; but they did not know it. It is at most that these blind courtiers of an ephemer— Mother Popularity believed in God, their faith reserving for all the dreams of the Enlightenment. The Count of Montgelas was one of the most fervent followers of this school. was waging war on the monks; but he covered with his pro— Detection of any secret society.

The Secret Society does not lay its traps against the thrones. She leaves to the kings' ministers the power to to kill Religion, because the Illuminati of Germany like The philosophers of France are quite convinced that, Once the Roman Catholic Church is debased, there will be nothing left. easier for them than undermining thrones. The spirit of revolt, with the pride that engenders it, was embodied in It was a matter of the heart. This social attack was therefore premeditated. for a long time; it was carried out openly; one could grasped the framework in this unspeakable need for expansion an innovative idea that all the princes were obsessed with. According to the Job's words: "They go along convoluted paths; They are walking on air, and they will perish.

Cardinal Caprara was then fulfilling the functions of Apostolic nuncio in Vienna. He was a clear-sighted diplomat—Seeming, but flexible. Evil frightened him. In the es—

1 Job, c. vi, 18.

90 BOOK ONE.

To remedy this, he rather liked to employ useless or dangerous palliatives. Nevertheless, in October 1787, Caprara himself is frightened by the excess of perversions teachers of whom he is an unavoidable witness; and in a secret note, addressed to Cardinal Nephew, Braschi-Onesti, He expressed himself in these terms: "My dispatches to the secretariat—State assets can fall into unreliable hands; this which has already happened. A person's trip to Rome which inspires my complete confidence enables me to clarify for the Holy Father several obscure passages of the above—tell me, "dispatches?"

"Here we continue to wander, without a compass and without..." rudder, on a sea bristling with reefs; and the pilot no longer notices the dangers to which he exposes us. poses only those he himself runs. The Emperor has He played his part; he had his last word. He has no more bou—uprisings to be carried out; restless minds grow weary of this stagnation. We want something new; we are looking for it. everywhere; and as Joseph II himself is powerless to To satisfy this passion that he has aroused, he is accused of dragging progress into the rut of routine. This prince, who has destroyed so much, is unpopular with those who want to establish destruction as a system; one activates Therefore, disorder is used in order to reach a goal more quickly. still unknown.

"It is no longer in the mysterious conferences of the chancellery that this goal can be achieved; the administration is overwhelmed, the government itself feels swept away by a secret force. The first generation he had fashioned now enters the world, and (I shudder) (by dwelling on this hateful thought) this generation has More vices than education. It is an evil of which the effects had been anticipated and which can be repaired by changing giant of direction; but, what seems irreparable to me,

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 91

And what will inevitably happen is morbid action.
spread throughout Germany by various sects of Illuminati, of Perfectibilisles, of Freemasons, of Seers, Spirits of the third heaven and Swedenborgiens that multiply.

"As it was my duty, I, in addition to an occasion-Sion, tried to point out to the Emperor the danger that threatens monarchies, if one day unexpected events or a social crisis gave a body and a flag to all these shadowy affiliations. His Imperial Majesty has rewritten in a discouraged tone and full of fears that she
He also clearly saw the danger, but it seemed impossible-
It was impossible for the State Chancellor to avert it. Thus, after Having fallen into the hands of the impious, the imperial throne can to be swallowed up by fanatics whose capital crime is the Contempt for God and the folly of a new Jerusalem. The Prince of Kaunitz (I must give him this credit here) in no way do I share these strange doctrines, but They nonetheless make many proselytes in the high nobility, in the magistracy and in the various branches of public administration. We are talking about horror bles initiations, and a certain Adam Weishaupt, cano™ Bavarian jurist and legal scholar, quite renowned in the New universities, enjoys, among young people and even in the world, of a celebrity that terrifies view of the future. This Weishaupt was, it is said, the master and the initiator of Mr. de Montgelas and Baron de Knigge in the mysteries of the Great Work. They announce a
The Human Trinity, an Earthly Exegesis, and Miracles without end, of which they alone are the authors or witnesses.

92 BOOK ONE.

"This love of the marvelous, or rather the miraculous" would find me rather indifferent, because we live in a a time when apostolic recommendations are hardly more listened to than the divine precepts of Jesus Christ;
but, under the cover of all these imposture-laden wonders, he hidden within are pernicious doctrines and maneuvers guilty. At the heart of these groups or sects,
There are, as far as I know, nothing but daydreamers or Enlightened ones. A more practical, more... school is forming.
consumed by activity, and which will not stop in this Eden of hyperbolically sensual pleasures and Disappointments that were all too real. This school had taken our sacred place.
Mother Church as her focal point; from the Church, she passes to the thrones, and (if I am well informed, as I have some(what reasons to believe it) she doesn't presume too much of her forces by daring to prepare his people of followers for a re-political evolution. The Emperor, who consoles himself by saying that his famous system was not understood, is evident I am not very reassured about the tendencies of these new enemies. thrones; however, he has, at least he claims, certain-certain reasons to remain convinced that these clouds amount These men will not attack Austria. He believes that this is not not from the heart of Germany that the lightning will spring; but it do not consider it impossible that it will erupt. At Amidst his moral anxieties, we see him gradually reve-to dwell on the past and give unjust measures a direction-a fairer tion.

"The provocatively hostile attitude adopted by certain discontented individuals and some minds whose independence increases in proportion to the fact that governments feel weaker or disorganized, is a perpetual subject of a-tears for the good Catholics, whose numbers are increasing lies through persecution itself; but one must not to be astonished by their powerlessness. Today we cannot- It would neither unite them nor derive material strength from them. Without In doubt, their courage will be revived later; nevertheless the danger approaches; for,* of all these senseless dreams of 1*11-Luminism, Swedenborgianism, or Freemasonry nism, he must bring out a frightening reality. The vision-The old guard have their time, the Revolution they foreshadow will his own. When the day of darkness comes, I am well convinced in advance that the mystical boat will withstand the the storm's efforts and that it will survive; notwithstanding This, the Holy Father, whose word is so persuasive, does not Will he not feel he owes it to his pastoral and royal ministry to to protect the monarchs and keep them alert against calamities that were, so to speak, foreseen? I have nothing to con-seiller, nothing especially to teach the representative of Celui which is salvation and life; I am content (as it is my duty) to expose the truth of the facts and the pain of my premonitions.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 93

The fears expressed by Caprara had long been time shared in France and Germany. The Josephism had stirred up all the simmering anger. against the social order, than idleness, ambition or ignorance, which deep within certain souls, perpetuates doomed in perpetuity to the abject worship of violence and success. The mysteries and conspiracies of Weishaupt and Knigge were partially revealed, and people were astonished by the protection which the religious and political Illuminati cover themselves with They were right. The princes, who dared only very rarely It is possible to be forgiven for the happiness of their birth through great qualities, and the prestige of power through major services, exhausted their prerogatives to

94 BOOK ONE.

to place under the orders of these charlatans of darkness. Dukes sovereigns or electors, Catholics or Protestants, they accepted only lies as the truth of the times future. The earth trembled beneath their feet; and, in a voluptuous drowsiness, which was a complicity, they did not bother to inquire about the causes of these comments underground movements.

Their courtly intelligence did not rise above this level. The German Union, of which the theologian Bahrddt was the inventor, pursued his goals, relying on a One side focused on crime, and the other on vice. This Union, which stemmed from all the secret societies and which absorbed into its mysterious ramifications, had given to all his agents and his dupes the most singular of words of order. The Society of Jesus was abolished by Clement XIV, and for fifteen years it has only existed in history. But with the approach of the perils of which the Siege Roman Catholic Church is threatened; the Fathers, proscribed as a body, do not don't bother to make their personal cause a source of ecclesiastical discord. Instead of crying out at Heaven: Vindica sanguinem nostrum, avenge our blood, they tireless athletes only think about joining the service of the Church to avenge justice and reason.

Three men, Fathers Feller, Jacques Zallinger and Zaccaria had descended into this burning arena; then, with their former brothers from the Institute, Pierre de Doyar, Navez, Ghesquier, de Saive and Corneille de Smet, They defended Rome in this War of Unity. taken with innovations*. This dedication, therefore

1 0a reads in the Historical Memoirs of Cardinal Pacca, vol. I, p. 103: "In the disputes that arose between the nuncios in Germany, of From 1786 to 1792, it was again the former Jesuits who presented themselves to speak from beyond the grave, had, in the eyes of all these mission-characteristics of selfishness, something so prodigiously inconceivable that, in order to neutralize its effects, the Union German and the Illuminati found only one way.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 95

Josephism provided them with teaching and mono-advertising hub. Through their university chairs or by

They control the press, they monopolize public opinion. Academies, seminaries, law schools, of medicine and science, printing presses, chapters, learned societies, everything falls under their purview, everything is within their jurisdiction within their remit. It's a shadow government. which operates amidst the worn-out gears of an administration a self-destructive force, weaving itself together. But the progress of this multiple sects are not as fast as its spec- Frances. Joseph II is worried about the unrest; his brother and his heir, Archduke Leopold of Tuscany, proclaims that the goal has been missed. A pause is manifested. celebration both in the clergy and at court.

This hour must be decisive; the Secret Societies will ward it off by imposing a password that reponders on everything. In one of his works on good pe- Riode, the Oratorian Theiner introduces us to this conspiracy, which Later he himself will take up the underlying theme: "Who- conch, he recounts*, allowed itself to fight the least of world against this torrent, was treated as a hidden Jesuit or confessed. The name Jesuit henceforth took on the most odious. It was synonymous with scoundrel, murderer, and in- He is an enemy of religion and a disturber of the public peace. traversed Germany from one end to the other, and became in the lists against the enemies of the Holy See. They came to enlighten. and for- to convince the faithful through sound and victorious writings. 1 Hist. des inst. d'éd., by Theiner, t. II, p. 31.

96 BOOK ONE.

the general watchword every time we wanted to do noise or getting rid of dangerous men. That one that the propaganda of the Illuminati and the partisans of the light had only once dealt with Jesuit was irrevo- lost cable; nothing could erase it at his place anymore this task, and to restore his honor and credit. That of terrible troubles, of blatant injustices committed at that time using that name! If one wants- milk to take away the love of a Protestant prince's subjects, we were content to spread the rumor that he had near He was a Jesuit, and he wanted to become a Catholic. If they wanted to overthrow honorable ministers or high-ranking officials incorruptible officials in Protestant states or even Catholics, all we had to do was say that they were Hidden Jesuits. The scholar who was thought to be a Jesuit, However pure her conduct, however profound her science, could not obtain a professorship anywhere; he was forced to return to the darkness and pay homage to the illusion of the century.

These Illuminati, whose Josephism exalted the feverish impatience, no longer even deigned to hide their projects. The world seemed ripe for a revolution to them. In the presence of kings and peoples, they call themselves in their writings "a legion spread throughout the entire universe, a legion that swears hatred to all cults, death to all "Priests and all tyrants."

Faced with this distressing spectacle, the people invoked a Supernatural help. Kings surrendered; peoples, so as not to fail in their own defense, they submitted their cause in the hands of God; then, in his mute despair, Catholic Germany, eyes turned towards Rome seemed to say to him: Salva nos, perimus.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 1.7

The new Pontiff granted to Christendom was, by the splendor of his virtues and the gentleness of his character, worthy of standing up to the storms that threatened the Pierre's boat. Born in Cesena on December 11, 1717, he was raised in the love of God; he grew up in the service of the Church. Benedict XIV had shown him a particular affection. eternal; Clement XIII honored him with his confidence, Clé-XIV of his suspicions. This triple consecration, a solemn guarantee of talent, probity and justice, was the determining factor in his election.

Barely acclaimed in the Conclave, Pius VI erupted among the Romans, enthusiasm and demonstrations of respectful tenderness that should never be exhausted. Ser. He was handsome, rich in the gifts of God and extravagant in his tastes. He spread it quite naturally. Around him were kindness and pomp. He was admired, at the- such as the Basilica of St. Peter, dominating from its majolly stature, an entire people gathered and praying at her feet. We loved him lavishing gifts in the Vatican galleries. the graces of his mind and the charms of his erudition artistic. It was Leo X resurrected, but without Raphael and without Michelangelo, Leo X who, to accomplish the The great things he dreamed of had to be limited to em- to beautify monuments and to bring life back to ruins.

In those days marble and stone were less difficult to shape or implement than the genius of the man. Pius VI found in Winkelmann an archaeologist who understood and interpreted his thoughts. The Pio-Clé- Museum Mentino opened. Immense works of art began. took. The sacristy of Saint-Pierre was finished, and the assai- The problem of the Pontine Marshes was resolved.

We had studied to tear from the hearts of Christians the

I. 7

98 BOOK ONE.

prestige and even the memory of pontifical magnificence cales. We were trying to stop believing in spiritual supremacy.
ritualistic, its political influence was openly denied.
The generation of that time had not seen the first years of the reign of Benedict XIV. Of his two successors immediately, she knew only a relentless struggle, and concessions without glory and without profit.

For this generation threatened by so many calamities,
Rome was to exist only in history. Rome was dead, as much from philosophical sarcasm as from from a Jansenist deduction than from universal indifference saddle. And suddenly, when the governments of Catholic sovereigns allow themselves to be congratulated on their victory guided by triumphant philosophy, a new Pope
It attracts all eyes, it commands all respect.

The Catholic princes, ill-advised, or rather ill-advised advisors, never ceased to wage a silent or passive war.
attempt at the papal throne. Failing that, the monarchs separated from the unit, they traverse prodigious distances.
As in the third book of Kings, there came people from all countries to hear the wisdom of Solomon and Gustav III of Sweden, and Paul of Russia, and the princes of the House of England, leave their palaces, in order to sa-read in Peter's successor the happiest image gentleness within strength.

But amidst these religious celebrations of the soul and of these elegant pleasures of the mind, of which he was the dispenser-
The orator and the ornament, Pie Yi was like a victim who has
She had already been sprinkled with water to be sacrificed. The tributes not all of the letters addressed to him dated back to the Holy-Seat. They couldn't possibly redeem themselves in his eyes.
the contemptuous abandonment that the upper classes displayed to

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 99

with regard to the Apostolic Chair. Pius VI, in order to be accepted-able to follow the Romans' inspiration, he readily agreed to follow their teachings.
expressions of his love of the arts, but he was the Pope.
the outpourings of his faith,' he was therefore saddened to see the Church widowed by her pastors and orphaned by her children.

According to the words of the Psalmist, the nations rose up and the peoples conspired in their folly, because the Kings and the great men of the earth had themselves revolted and united against the Lord and against his Christ. But, in the bitterness of papal thought, there was even deeper despair. Under the impact of this demoralization that was eating away at hearts, the Clergy had He could only partially resist the social solvent. His courage he had weakened, his faith was growing weary of the struggle; he succumbed to hardship or temptation. The futility of his efforts... Once this was demonstrated, it could be seen collapsing in on itself. refused to be outraged by the scandals, some of which His superiors portrayed him as both victim and witness. This prostration of all moral energy, one of the most obvious symptoms—characteristics of the time, had not escaped the vi—the Roman Court's keen perspicacity. While deploring this strange weariness of the mind, she felt it herself—even the effects.

Under the audacious pressure of the combined sects, the The clergy had gradually become disillusioned with heavenly matters. immense disgust for priestly duty was seeping into the Church; he took possession of it in the name of progress and the lights of modern civilization. Prayer becomes—Hypocrisy is born, and zeal becomes a crime. In a century which, from its beginning to its end, produced so much fanatics of disbelief, we blushed at the fanaticism of The Apostolate. From Rome itself, where so many heroic Pontiffs voices had spoken, commanded, and conquered. to advise silence and to permit cowardice. The The secular clergy had allowed an open war to be waged against Regular, and he didn't yet realize that he was re—used to pay the costs. He resembled those shepherds which the Prophet speaks of, who sleep when the flock is in danger, and to those sentinels who are dozing off felt while the enemy launched a final assault on the citadel.

7.

100 BOOK ONE.

Faith in the perpetuity of the Church was neither altered nor obscured. The triumph of error had not been pushed as far; but, by abusing this temperamental character—ment and conciliation, the eternal prerogative of Rome, on had reached the point of making the doctor doubt the efficacy of effectiveness of its remedies. The torrent was too widespread and Too impetuous to resist. It was whispered. to flee the fertile valleys, and, after arranging a shelter on the mountain, to silently contemplate the flood devastation. The Vatican, even in the days of his toughest battles in honor of principles, not He had never considered haste a factor in his success. Gregory VII, Innocent III and Sixtus V knew, in a perfect measure, procrastinating with the difficulties. They do not They didn't break the obstacle; they liked to turn it around. But at Rome, where they always seem to want to persuade us that we proceeds from the reed rather than the oak, these condescents traditional dances, these slower rhythms so conducive to the The maturity of the decisions was then invoked by the some see it as a sign of weakness, and others as evidence of apparent complicity.

We had not entirely protected ourselves from all contact with innovators. More than once the atmosphere of the

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 101

Sacred College was furtively and unwittingly imbued with the Jansenist contagion. Cardinal Passionei had it there brought under Benedict XIV; Cardinal Marefoschi in development The germ was planted under Clement XIV and Pius VI. The concessions wrested from the Church, public iniquities or secret sacrifices imposed upon him, the painful sacrifices to the- which she believed she had to condemn herself to in order to achieve this peace receding as one hoped to grasp it, all present- The sophists had incalculable chances. They had around the Vatican a more powerful party through its activity than by numbers; this party took it upon itself to demoralize- to bolster courage, by feigning fear at the excesses of fanaticism.

#

The ancient Romans, that royal nation, populum laie, recjem, were indeed indignant, in the secrecy of their de- measures, of this drowsiness maintained by cuta- poor maneuvers or a need for rest related to the betrayal. Except for a few providentially exceptional cases- In their traditional matters, the Popes have always seemed to ignore that the te- Deserved was the genius of extreme circumstances. their eternal procrastination, moderating and tiring all They managed to overcome their impetuousness and to to often use them to serve the triumph of justice and of truth. But the Apostolic See found itself facing so many of enemies, that his unwavering forbearance would become one more danger. It was being abandoned in France, in Germany Magne, in Spain, in Portugal and in Italy, with fury of impiety. No one dared to stand up in her defense,

And around the Vatican, there was no shortage of advisors. cowards whispering in the ear of the Sacred College, and recommending patience, the most common virtue of Romans.

402 BOOK ONE.

Pius VI did not believe he should subject himself to so many men- gestures. Hardly had he ascended the throne when he opened, with a Jubilee solemn, the treasure of his indulgences. Nevertheless, in announcing the good news to the bishops of Christendom, He did not hide the sorrows of his soul from them. "After he said, having spread darkness everywhere their impiety, and as if torn religion from the hearts of These corrupting philosophers, these men, also try to to break all the bonds that unite men together, and with those who govern them. Raising their voices, they loudly proclaim that man is born free, and constantly repeat that he is not subject to the empire of whom that is; that society is but a multitude of men- my ignorant people, whose stupidity prostrates itself before Priests who deceive them, before Kings who oppress them ment, so that the union between the priesthood and the em- According to them, the worst is nothing more than a barbaric conspiracy against This so-called freedom that is natural to man. Who doesn't see that such monstrous extravagances and so much other similar delusions, covered up with such artistry, which further threaten public peace and tranquility, that there is a delay in suppressing the impiety of their authors, and that they are all the more pernicious for the souls of the wretched their doctrine, which was obtained at the price of the blood of Jesus Christ, Like gangrene, it increasingly spoils what is healthy. and slips into the hearts of Kings, and (which makes us (horror to say) insinuates itself even into the sanctuary?

The blow was direct; it only grazed the skin, because the words of the Vicar of Jesus Christ were covered by senseless clamor. But as there is in man, even the most perverted, a certain degree where the conscience, this Jubilee, witness and precursor of so many social crises did not leave the Church without consolation. Faith seemed to awaken in their souls; it was as if she marked the final stage of carelessness to proscription tion or to the scaffold.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 103

As if Pope Pius VI had a premonition of evils- hours with which his reign will be crowned, here he is, for

to ward off the ill will of Joseph II in Germany,
He decides to become an apostolic pilgrim himself. It is said that the populations are already indifferent or gangrenous of philosophism, and that the Emperor does not precede public opinion, but that he follows its impulse. Since
For a long time, the Popes only saw the world between the Who-Rinal and the Vatican. Events separated them from the rest of the earth, and they lived in isolation, in dignity that was respected by tacit agreement. To the ill Pius VI wants to provide a remedy for the extremes he foresees.
equally extreme. He is advancing towards Vienna.

In the state of mind, this journey can exert a considerable influence on the affairs of the Church and of Germany. The Catholic princes and the Sacred Heart, the law itself tries to oppose it through respect-killer rebukes. That was the inspiration and the wish of Pius VI. He overcame the difficulties, he had an answer for everything.
the objections; then, from the capital of the Christian world to the capital of the Germanic empire, it was, so to speak Carried on the arms of the people. The bishops and the great
They formed an official procession for him, the people composed of them for him-were another who must have singularly altered the ideas innovators. The people, who had flocked from the depths of the provinces, knelt in the path of the one who mar-

i

1 Essays of Montaigne, vol. I, p. 263.

101 BOOK ONE.

He cried out in supplication. They burst forth in testimony of faith and in transports of joy. It was something better than a triumphal march. In this filial eagerness multitudes, whose history, even the most biased, has devoted to naive outpourings, there was such a profound awakening.
statement of Catholic beliefs, which, whether willingly or unwillingly, Joseph II was obliged to join in. His mind, was not up to the task of the soul.

To be a reformer in his own way and to give himself
With the airs of a philosopher-prince, this sovereign had taken pleasure in fron-
of what were then called the prejudices of fanaticism outdated. The Empire had waged a sneaky war in Sa-Cerdoce, and the instigator of this war found himself forced to disarm in the presence of the Pontiff. We had promised to to welcome the Pope only with one of those studied courtesies said, which are often a lack of deference; it was necessary change tactics, under penalty of incurring animadver-public sion.

A writer hardly suspected of excessive affectionate veneration towards the Roman See, Count Alexis of Saint-Priest himself testifies to this moral violence perpetrated through universal piety in the face of the Emperor's anticipated disdain.

"The good Viennese," the historian recounts*, "did not take It was hardly worth inquiring whether the Pope was picturesque or worldly; but, filled with a naive faith, absorbed In a pious ecstasy, they didn't know how to... They were captivated by this holy sight; they thronged to the churches, in the streets, in the squares where Pius VI was to pass. The Despite police intervention, the accidents caused by the con- the refocusing of a huge crowd on a single point

1 History of the fall of the Jesuits, by Count Alexis de Saint Pris', par r de France, p. 238 and 239 (Paris, 1844).

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 405

They were making new announcements daily without slowing down their zeal. Twenty or Thirty thousand men followed the Pope's carriage or... placed them under the windows of his palace, asking him With loud cries, he blessed it. The Danube was populated of boats laden with pious souls. Finally, the con- The course of the most distant provinces was so great in the capital, where a temporary famine was feared.

"This joy, this enthusiasm, displeased Joseph II; He felt resentment, perhaps even fear. sensed that he was not dealing with a philo- Sophe; and, while pursuing his plans, he believed he should to provide convincing evidence of his Catholicism. One He had been plagued by persistent eye pain for a long time. Muffled murmurs attributed it to his disbelief, and Some voices even asserted that if he did not reconcile With the Holy Father, God would strike him blind. Terrified From these rumors, he sent, as a votive offering, golden eyes to convent of Maria Zell, and charged the nuns to pray for his eyesight. That's not all, he felt obliged to take communion solemnly from the Pope's hand, and served it at the Last Supper. He did even more: Pius VI, in an address in Consis- the toire, had forgotten to celebrate the Emperor's piety, a very simple and natural oversight, which Joseph II demanded the repair. He wanted a sentence favorable to this problematic piety was inserted into the discourse im- prime. "

The people, who know very little about petty squabbles, Reau and changes in the law, had remained uninvolved in upheavals that occurred in ecclesiastical discipline.

He did not grasp its significance, and the innovators delighted in it. were hiding it under the cloak of sweet words— reuses, and behind the label of economic progress and social. But the people would have instinctively understood it as an outrage done to the common Father. It was therefore necessary for Joseph II to re-found himself, that is to say, a true Habsburg— Lorraine, in order to position itself publicly at the level of the universal veneration. The Prince of Kaunitz, his chancellor, took it upon himself to offer the Emperor all the revenge— secret things which his philosophical pride believed he had need. The one whom King Frederick II of Prussia nicknamed Ironically: my brother, the sacristan, had convinced himself that this trip by the Pope would be the final blow to the Roman Church. Confused in his hopes, he had to to form a procession for this moral authority which advanced through— towards the imperial states, having as their only army two or three Italian prelates and a blessing for a golden word— Dr. Joseph II graciously accepted his unexpected defeat. due; Kaunitz never consented to submit to it. This minister of Maria Theresa, omnipotent under the Emperor his son had made a point of his hostilities against the Church. instrument of rule.

106 BOOK ONE.

A great lord of the eighteenth century, a diplomat who skillful or fortunate wind, but character distorted by adulthood lation and captivated by vanity, Kaunitz would have disdained to reckon with God. And, in Paris, we had seen it flatterer of the Marquise de Pompadour and vassal of Voltaire. He had held power for so long that he looked at him dait as one of his individual attributes. Embodied in He considered himself indispensable to the cult of his own person. and taking pity on the other men, he had come to... to create a world apart, of which he improvised the Atlas. This old man, who was trying to couple the German morgue and French conceit, did not believe in the Gospel, but he tried to deny death. That word resonated poorly with him.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. *1

ears; therefore, it was forbidden to pronounce it in his presence. To avoid this, the courtiers and secretaries of the chan— Court and state officials were ingenious in inventing peri— phrases. It was in these terms that the death was announced to him. From Baron Binder, his oldest friend: "We can no longer find Baron Binder.

The baron could no longer be found; from that day forward, Kau—

Nitz forgot to ask. This whimsical mind put a kind of ridiculous pride in defying the Pope. Piety the people forced Joseph II to bow before the pilgrim apostolic, Kaunitz plotted to rise again more rogue and more impertinent than ever. The respects which Pius VI was surrounded by cheers that followed him in Vienna and everywhere, became a torment for this man so famous for his arrogance. He took his revenge by pursuing—before, even under the eyes of Pius VI, the course of his re-anti-Catholic forms.

Josephism, brought into the world by a few Jansenists of Holland, was defeated by popular demonstrations; Kaunitz did not deign to let them have the last word. An imperial edict of May 30, 1782, made known the uselessness of prayers of Pius VI, and the contempt shown for the will of the masses. The tolerance of Joseph II and his minister translated himself, organized himself into persecution. The sect disguised itself under a heavy irony; it imprudent has the characteristics of an epigram and a rhyming couplet. The princes of Europe, inattentive to the revolutionary movement, sharpened, from the depths of their palaces, innocent-centers of mockery against the Chair of Peter. As in Horace's time, the source of all plagues came to...

1 In volume XI of Grimm's Correspondence, p. 61, we read these s:x

108 BOOK ONE.

core from above; the princes amused themselves by making it overflow—Last on the homeland and on the people!

Hoc fonte dericala clades

In patriam populumque fluxit.

Pius VI had obtained only empty concessions, pres—that were withdrawn as soon as they were granted. In his interviews with the Emperor, conversations which the Pontiff speaks of in these terms at the secret Consistory of September 23, 1782: "Every day we had conferences, and things they dealt with each other there, on both sides, familiarly and at the-amiably, but with great warmth; there is nothing that we* did not explain freely, openly, not having in view of what our apostolic office required of us lic and the interest of Religion, and there is nothing but the Emperor—"If reur did not listen attentively and calmly;" in these During these interviews, the Pope expressed his concern on more than one occasion. of the state of Europe. He was frightened by the trends that the es—He took to mockery and spread error; and Joseph II... would be sure of the Pontiff, and, through sophistry or games of words, he tried to persuade her that the monarchs of-were going to march with their century.

A few years later, the century had moved so far.
quickly, even Joseph II himself, exhausted from the race,
he appealed to the Pope to stop the Revolution.

rhymed verses, poems, proposed by the Count of Provence, who was later King Louis XVIII, and filled by the Marquis de Montesquiou:

It is in vain that from Rome to the banks of the Danube
Our ancient mufti is coming at a little gallop.
Today pumice stone, formerly cube stone.
He used to distill absinthe, now he distills syrup.
From his old barometer, observing the tube, 11 must see that we lose everything when we demand too much.

* Odes, 3, VI.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 109

Belgium was then an integral part of the States hereditary titles of the House of Habsburg. Joseph II had imagined imposing on these provinces, Catholic before everything, the yoke of its tolerance and its innovations. Without consult the moral needs or the character of the di-among the various nations, Emperor Joseph had believed that he could-would also do so with impunity, in the Netherlands as in Austria, to modify or alter at will the customs, the affections and the religious leanings of these regions. The phi- spirit
The philosopher had driven him to violate the pact sworn by his ancestors and by himself. Tormented by the itch to ensure the Joseph didn't take into account the happiness of others in his own way.
neither obstacles nor differences in customs. He decreed Liberalism, in religion and politics, with for-tyrant's mules. It was through despotism that he proceeded.
at the introduction of the new features, and without calculating that the resistance could be a duty of conscience or of Patriotism, he decrees, his good pleasure would be a law for all his peoples. He cast them in the same mold.
of philosophical abstractions, this mold had to make them
All in uniform and grateful.

11 had diversified, in Austria and Lombardy, the within the ecclesiastical hierarchy, he desired that it should be so in Brabant. Every day a new edict brought new-new changes in religious orders, in the marriages, in education, in confraternities, in the festivals, in the processions and in the ecclesiastical properties-ticks. He eliminated, he created, he decreed; Belgium had no choice but to obey the imperial order. The Belgians...

that, patient in its insubordination and not yet having the experience of revolutions, accepted only with repugnance France, the clean slate made of its privileges and its liberties

110 BOOK ONE.

religious orders. The clergy protested, and although seeing at its head, Cardinal de Frankenberg, Archbishop of Malines, he felt the seeds of fermenting within him revolt. Frankenberg, a character full of integrity, of firmness and moderation, he aspired to reconcile. Part interested in the debate, and nevertheless a respected mediator, he endeavored to calm discontent and open the eyes of the Emperor's eyes. His efforts were not to succeed, because the Emperor was relentless in his plans, and the Belgium did not want to humiliate itself for long.

The suppression of the University of Louvain and the creation—the formation of a general seminary, where theology was to be taught by professors seconded from Vienna, and directed by a Jansenist named Stoegger, were the signal of the struggle. Bishops were exiled, priests were persecuted very; they set about torturing consciences. They made themselves a toy of public peace, and, by an understandable, Joseph II, whose every inconsistency was a passion, he devoted himself to reforming instead of thinking to be kept. Deaf to the opinions of some and the prayers of others to others, he persisted, he stiffened in his unthinking tolerance. Shit. He had said that the Netherlands would submit "willingly". or by force under the yoke of his philosophical principles; he did call to violence. It was no longer to kings that he it was up to him to exercise it.

Joseph II supported the demagogic movement; he is carried away by it. He fanned the flames, the fire overwhelmed him.

The Revolution that broke out in France, and which, from Paris, will soon have repercussions throughout the world, and is being carried out in the name of Philosophy allied with Jansenism. In Belgium, The flag she is displaying is that of Religion. Louis XVI will, of his own free will, grant to his subjects

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 111

throws away all the privileges they were persuaded they had were starving, and Louis XVI would perish, a martyr of his generous initiative. Joseph II will also succumb, but the Belgium, which killed him, according to one of his statements to the marshal Prince de Ligne, Belgium will have nothing to reproach itself for. neither injustice nor ingratitude. ^ His revolt, as well as that of 1830, has only had bad luck; it is badly in-framed. It is done to safeguard the Catholic faith;

she finds herself absorbed in this terrible insurrection con-
three Gods, whose signal France gives.

Imbued with his system of tormenting the Church and the reduce to a state of servitude, but even more imbued with Joseph II did not abandon his idea of imperial omnipotence.
stopped at the thought that it might provoke resistance legitimate. He contested the authority of the Roman Catholic Church over souls; he does not allow anyone to question the power he claims to usurp the public conscience. The conscience revolts. The inaugural pact is violated; the States of Brabant proclaim Joseph II deprived of his rights, and a religious wars break out at the moment when unbelief announces that the reign of Christ is over. This war of religion, undertaken on the eve of storms, had for two prominent lawyers: Van der Noodt and Vonck.
Abbot Van Eupen represented the clergy there.

This is not the place to recount the events
military and the internal unrest that occurred as an inevitable consequence. The spirit of faction-para of this country; but when Joseph II became aware of these training sessions, when he understood that Belgium was going perhaps detaching himself from his imperial crown, the Catholic-
The lique was found in the sovereign. His entire life had wasted in an impossible struggle. We had seen him put his faith and his name in the service of the enemies of the Papacy.

H2 BOOK ONE.

To subjugate the Roman Catholic Church, he had diminished respect due to the laws by the strangeness of those he invented.
In 1783, if we refer to the knight's account
d'Azara, the Spanish minister in Rome¹, the Emperor con-even had the plan to break completely with the Holy See, and to patch up an ideal schism.

Seven years have not yet passed, and this great a reformer, brought down by the Revolution he prepared, in desperation, he throws himself into the arms of The Church. The time for witty sarcasm is over.
Anti-Catholic jokes are no longer in vogue; Joseph II is grappling with difficulties of all kinds.
In this unforeseen peril, Joseph II appealed for intervention-
The Pope's tion. With his hand weakened by suffering, this prince, still in the prime of life, but who has consumed in sterile attempts, address to the Sovereign Pont-he offered a supreme prayer. It was to shake the Church that he began this crusade of innovations; he begged the Pope to interpose his authority. Pius VI, who was more far-sighted than he, Pius VI, who has already forgiven so much, writes to Bishops of Belgium, January 23, 1790: "We Let us hasten to offer our care, to dispel these fatal [events]. divisions; we owe it to our love for our dear son Joseph, elected emperor of the Romans and your sovereign, who, himself animated by the spirit of concord, desired to We took this step; we owe it to our affection. for the illustrious states and peoples of these provinces which have always deserved so much credit from the Catholic religion, that

1. Historical and philosophical memoirs on Pius VI and his pontificate, by Bourgoing, former Minister Plenipotentiary, vol. I, p. 331 et seq. sales.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. m

The Holy See has always regarded them as its children more expensive. We are addressing you, who, not being-members of the Church of God, you must participate in our solitudes We certainly know that in this Revolution you had no active part, and that you always You remembered that your duty was to reconcile a just obedience to authority with the pastoral obligation- It is our duty to maintain the Religion intact... It is equally important to us- It was well known that the states of this nation, throughout this period of time, have never been animated by feeling- nor did they have any intention of rebelling, nor of overthrowing the authority of the sovereign; but that, without ceasing to depart from the Just respect due to Caesar, without ceasing to applaud his With fair intentions, they asked for nothing more. otherwise, we would put an end to innovations that seemed having been introduced against his express will, although under his name, and especially against the rights, customs and statutes of the nation... The remonstrances emanating from the various States attest to these provisions. Well, venerable brothers, what you have so rightly and earnestly desired, which the States have implored with urgent prayers, and now the Emperor grants it today. his own movement. He informed us that he had de- he clarified, without any restriction whatsoever, that he left it to the bishops the full and complete exercise of their rights, both in relation to at the episcopal seminaries, as for all matters ecclesiastics; so that everything will be put back in the First state. We hope, trusting in goodness. of the Emperor, that the same declaration will take place in the rest of his domains for the greater good of the Religion. He also assured us that he had declared without restriction that he would leave safe and intact in the future rights of the orders of the State and the people, restoring from this at the moment, in their first state, their privileges and constitutions, with a promise to forget the entire past; in a way that there is nothing left to desire for the peoples of these provinces. Now, therefore, that the causes of these great problems no longer exist, the problems themselves must cease... Let the people return to their prince obedience—the right due to him; that the rights of the Church remain intact; that those of sovereignty be inviolables; that the prerogatives of the people be maintained in their purity; that studies regain their brilliance in the University of Louvain; that we may finally see reborn in these regions obedience, love, joy, the rich—"Here, finally, is peace and tranquility."

These words of advice, worthy of the Pontiff and the Father, should have to be listened to; but it was too late. The United Belgian States had precipitated the break and proclaimed their independence. They were already playing at the sovereign congress; the aristocracy and democracy, represented by two lawyers, were pleading against each other. The two parties agreed—they were as little as a club of demagogues organizing the fraternity. These United Belgian States were emancipating themselves in, the discord. They were allowed to cross for a few hours by river—personal and liberal fictional works, then they fell, in conquered provinces, under the iron fist of the Republic—that French, which applied all its decrees of spoiling, proscription and servitude* For donation of A joyous entry, the Revolution loaded them with chains.

On February 20, 1790, Joseph II died, having recovered, in death, the holy traditions of his family and the good feelings, including an unfortunate need for fame could never manage to strip his heart bare*

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. Wô

The Sophists, who predicted the reign of the unbeliever—bed, they went away announcing to all the winds of heaven that the Roman Church had had its day, and that it would die a path of consumption in their arms. They didn't want no more Pope. Jansenism, Gallicanism and Josephism had not yet reached that point. A bishop of Rome well bound in his impotence, and reduced with sterile respects to exercise his ministry in the countryside Roman Catholic Church did not frighten them too much; but to this bishop improvised and fallen, they measured the air, the sun and the es—

They were confining him at the Vatican gate, in order to to be able to govern the Catholic universe themselves, and the to lead to the abyss by subterranean paths. Some Prelates, corrupt or seduced, lent a hand to mysterious innovations. We had grown tired of faith, of work and deeds. We grew weary of rest, when in Even in Italy, the impatience of Scipio Ricci tore apart all the sails.

This bishop of Pistoia had ideas when he found them. was going to borrow, and talent when one consented to him to give in. Leopold of Tuscany, servile imitator of Joseph II, his brother, had designated him for the episcopate, because that progressives described him as a docile instrument in the hands of Rome's enemies. Leopold has a bishop sanctioning and legalizing all his projects of ecclesiastical reform, updated and executed without consult the Supreme Pastor. This bishop has surrounded himself with Italian jurists and lawyers, who, following the example of Tamburini, Zola, and Palmieri, their masters, know legitimizing all usurpations, by applying all the laws against torture. The Grand Duke and the Bishop support each other by the other. Secular authority hides behind initiation.

8.

416 BOOK ONE.

episcopal initiative; this initiative draws new strength in the prince's encouragement. She mentions complicity in the Kingdom of Naples, in the person of Serrao, bishop of Potenza, was also fully prepared; like some other Italian prelates, but Jansenists, to free themselves from papal authority.

Honest mediocrity rather than its fleeting brilliance Ricci, more than to private virtues, is He gives or accepts the role of reformer in the process. abolished the worship of images, he proscribed the adoration of the Sacred-Heart of Jesus changes the rites of the Church, alters the discipline, then modifies the teaching. To arrive at to reinstate the use of the old canons, so dear to Gallicans- In this movement, we see him placing himself under the protection of writers. Jansenists, all, according to him, pious and learned martyrs of the truth. He establishes in his episcopal city the printing press meur and the publisher of works condemned by the Church, and in At the beginning of these works, Ricci announces that he intends "to to expose the unjust pretensions of this spiritual Babylon tuelle, which overturned and distorted the entire economy of the ecclesiastical hierarchy, of the communion of saints and the independence of the princes."

It is Luther resurrected, but Luther not apostatizing.
in order to better deceive the simple-minded.

The Tuscan people were not up to these sacrifices.
bequests, sponsored by a sovereign, and acclaimed as acts of heroism by the opponents of the Pontificate. The
The people murmur, they are indignant. Ricci, intoxicated by his populaphilosophical rigor, is unmoved by these murmurs nor by this indignation. He rebelled against Rome, he does not understand why his flock disobeys his orders, or closes his eyes to the light, of which his intolerance-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 117

rancc seeks to flood it. The clergy follows the example of faithful. Ricci, in 1786, convened a Synod; he introduced there-led the jurists of the University of Pavia. There, bra-before the Church and its leader, he preludes a draft of Civil Constitution of the Clergy. He had long been at Schism, he is heading towards heresy. He therefore proclaims that the Holy Spirit dwells in the midst of the Synod, and that his prayers keys become those of God himself'.

Ricci had set a fatal example. In a century where Terror thought he could do anything, he came to bring his contingent of scandal and its bundle of thorns for trouto disrupt the Church's peace. He invented, or allowed to be invented before his eyes, denunciations, acts more or less legalized by injustice, and accusing of hideous obscenities nities. It is Diderot's Nun put on trial-ball, or the comedy of the Visitandines translated by anticipation in indictment². Scipion Ricci died in 1810, the Some say he is reconciled with the Holy See, others say he is not.
repentance. Nevertheless, his attacks live on, and that they still find apologists.

He was the first, after Febronius, to be placed on the salt-
Letter, the successor of Peter; he had dishonored the Church, by outrageously violating morality and insulting piety. They did,
He will long be considered one of those model bishops.
of tolerance, charity and virtue, (as they dream of them)
the unbelievers of all countries, the indifferent of all systems.

A few days earlier, another assembly had held in a village, then unknown, on the banks of the Rhine.

1 Opening address of the Synod, p. 143.

2 See the Life of Scipio Ricci, compiled from autograph manuscripts by the prelate, by de Potter, 3 vols. in- 8°.

418 BOOK ONE.

The Archbishop-electors, swept away by this wave of rebellion
The lion that was climbing towards Rome had also experienced the need to mingle with the movement of the century. They tend-were trying to make the tree branches turn green again, while putting the axe and hatchet into the roots. At Ems Therefore, four delegates from these prelates: Heimes, bishop d'Audona and suffragan for Mainz; Becker, official for Trier; Tautphoeus for Cologne and Boenicke for Salzburg, discuss, propose and adopt a plan of ecclesiastical reform. This plan was born from a thought of in-episcopal subordination.

In Luther's time, and at the height of the invasion...
armed with his doctrines, two archbishops of Colo-
The group had separated from Unity. One of them, Geb-Hard Truchsès had renounced his faith and taken a wife. The trou-Skin wandered without a pastor. The Church of Cologne was about to perish.
because he offered no one to safeguard the principles. Rome sends a nuncio. This nuncio rallies around From him the scattered Catholics. In the common peril, he establishes certain jurisdictional rights and privileges which were not contrary to either the discipline or the decrees of the Council of Trent.

Two and a half centuries of obedience and peace have con-sacred this state of affairs; but in the disturbances pre-adorned with such care, the presence of a Nuncio in the middle of The location in the Rhineland provinces hinders the activities of the sectarians.
Maximilian of Austria, Elector of Cologne and brother of Joseph II refused to receive Barthélémy Pacca, delegate of the Apostolic See. The other ecclesiastical electors adopt this approach, and the council of Ems drafts
the new doctrine, which the Archbishops claim impose.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 119

This doctrine was, more or less, the negation pure and simple of all papal primacy and the mixture of all duties. The council abolished, transcribed-
He would add to it, according to the electors' pleasure. He them invested the Keys with power, he attributed to them, to expenses of the universal Church, an absolute independence read. If the Pope did not hasten to confirm the developments Thus emancipated, these bishops, said article 2,
"would find in the old discipline means of

to maintain their office, under the protection of the Emperor.

The priesthood took pleasure in denying or destroying self-spiritual rite of the Priesthood. By the most abnormal of contradictions, he placed himself under the yoke of the Empire, at which, by virtue of his secondary authority, he confers the double power.

Pacca was one of those men such as the Church knows always bring it up during times of hardship. He had the courage and wisdom, perseverance and erudition. He saw more clearly than the Archbishop-electors in this Untimely uprising. He spoke with this united deration to the force that is the tradition of language Roman. His opinions were scorned, his fears were smirked. His alarms were blamed. Those who sleep cannot to suffer being awakened; and in the historical memoirs From the pronouncements of Cardinal Pacca, we see how much this awakening owed to be cruel to the voters.

"The changes introduced into ecclesiastical discipline" siastic by Joseph II, thus expresses the former nuncio to Cologne¹, had undoubtedly, against the intention of this monarch, boosted courage and rekindled the ardor of

1. Historical memoirs of Cardinal Pacca on the Cologne legation, p. 13 (Paris, 1841).

120 BOOK ONE.

sectarians and those with ill intentions towards the Church; so that they were openly and publicly demonstrating their way of to think, as well as their hatred against the Catholic clergy, and especially against the Holy See. They printed in the states of the Catholic princes, various works which contained so many slanders and gross insults against the Pope and the religious orders, to which the nation Germanic owed so much, from a spiritual and temporal point of view porel, that they aroused disgust even among Protestants Honest. Prudence, duty, and self-interest. demanded of the German clergy, in these terrible and pe- in dire circumstances, which the archbishops and bishops, as well as all members of the hierarchy, attached themselves- increasingly felt at the Apostolic See, and took the defense of the Roman Church, to which they owed the power which they enjoyed in the empire; for they de- were well aware that the sophists and the perfidious Janses- nists proposed to shift onto them, with a new- such force, the slanders and arguments with which They were attacking the Pope's power. But in this circum- Constance once again proved this axiom true: "The children of

"Darkness is more prudent than the children of light"; and the enemies of the Church succeeded in fomenting between the Holy See and the archbishops electing this division and This debate, which scandalized the good people, caused the The clergy gained public esteem and paved the way for the future catastrophe which, in 1803, stripped the Church of All-Magne of its honors, its privileges, its riches and its ancient power.

These episodes, detached from Josephism, and by making touching on the disastrous consequences, revealed the The source of the evil, without indicating the remedy. To these spirits, seeking, like Tacitus' Nero, the things impossible, and in search of a fictitious improvement to paralyze The good that was happening, a revolution was essential. Most of the sovereigns had wanted every bishop was pope among them, and that the Pope was now nothing more than a bishop.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 451

Only one king, still young, had resisted all the suggestions. Surrounded by blind or complicit ministers; Mail, laughing at everything; Turgot, inventing the economic political economy; Malesherbes, openly protecting social progress and Philosophy, its apostle; Necker, a Calvinist from Geneva, based public credit on an impending bankruptcy, and of the Cardinal of Loménie, preparing for apostasy and suicide, through contact Louis XVI had not had everyday interactions with sensualists never deviated from the path of honor.

But, with the attributes of a power that is still boundless, This monarch was convinced of a discouragement without measure. He was, like Cicero, more inclined to fear the disastrous events than to hope for happy results. In his weakness, there were many weaknesses. He bought them all back out of a deep love for the little-ple and by a delicacy of probity that borders on the sublime blime. More than any other prince, he could have said with Charles V the Wise: "I know no happiness in lordship, except for one thing, which is the potential to do "Good to others." He never knew how to be a king to defend his authority; he never forgot it, when that of the See Roman found himself under attack. Only he was unaware—and his Ignorance of revolutions is excusable – how much one A small fire can light wood. He was content to be good. when he should have, to ensure peace and happiness of all, to be like the set square used by architects texts, a set square which is not only just and straight by herself, but who corrects and makes just all the things to which it is applied. Eraser for Pius VI, Louis XI had no crimes, errors, or vices to reproach himself for;

 Nevertheless, the old Pontiff and the young Monarch will to atone, in their innocence, for the sins of their predecessors-sisters. They both possessed that certain something, that sense of completion.
 that misfortune brings.

The Revolution, prepared on all sides at once, was about to burst. No human hand could no longer able to conjure it. The Pontiff's invincible firmness failed.
 as well as the monarch's inexperience. According to the Cardinal de Bernis: "Braschi had a completely fran-
 "It was from France that his most cruel tribulations.

This century-long revolt, shedding faith from his fathers as from an unwelcome garment, has something something so profoundly sad that it frightens one, even before the Terror, to see him wander off in search of various and foreign doctrines. Always finding it ready to put his foot in the stream to splash
 a belief or a virtue, we follow it, going like a blind along the walls, groping his way along, like if he had no eyes, bumping into something at midday, like if he were in darkness, and plunging into the obscur-Ritualized like the dead. Then suddenly one feels seized at heart of one of those painful pityings that the disasters.

Along with the decadent Romans, this century did not form that a wish, he was only expressing a desire: Detvitam^ det Opes y that we be given life, that we be given the

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 123

"Wealth!" he exclaimed. This century had fallen in love with this sweetheart of rest which imperceptibly gains over souls and ends by making inaction appealing. After having awakened all the evil instincts, dormant at the heart of human absurdity
 Maine, he set off to conquer the unknown.

The Nobility, which thinks neither of its ancestors nor of its descendants descendants, no longer even has the pride of a position since long lost. It displays a complete disregard for respect and of all faith; it celebrates the love of humanity, it im-provides pastoral care to culminate in the Terror. In the abuse of all kinds of minds, she always opens the wings, without ever being able to take flight.

Through an incredulity born of the excess of sophistry and of pleasure, we find ourselves simultaneously abandoned by God that we deny, and by the men whom we tried to corrupt—to break up. Then, driven by an incomprehensible vertigo, we throw ourselves back into the love of the marvelous and into the swaddling clothes of superstition. Paris disdains to bow down before Providence; Europe, following Paris, He lowers his reason before the Rosicrucians. The Gospel is having become a closed book; they are hailed as apostles of the social regeneration: the followers of the occult sciences. Mesmer, Cagliostro, Jacob Boehme and Martinez count disciples even among the princes of the Church. Cazotte Gassner makes adjurations; he evokes the spirits of the Nebrae; Lavater puts his followers in contact with the invisible powers. Believers in the new Jerusalem—velle that Swedenborg indoctrina, freemasons, char—Latins or visionaries, try to surround themselves with everyone the prestige of white or black magic. That of Chaldeans, even theurgics themselves, have their followers. One aspires to everything that is false, obscure, fantastic, or supernatural.

4 24 BOOK ONE.

Even the most inconceivable dreams are accepted with apology. covetous teeth; these dreams are at this very moment proven truths. Weishaupt, Zwach and the Count of Bassus founded schools for enlightened individuals. They mixed the mystact in politics; they unsettle minds before acting to destroy bodies; they create phantoms to dominate the Lodges, and magnetism appears as the light of the unknown. We need distraction, gold, refinements—new sensual experiences at any cost, and no one dare not apply to oneself this very true saying of Bonald: "Nothing is closer to ferocious customs than a people whose customs are voluptuous.

We had reached those times when the body of nations did not It can bear neither the pains nor the remedies. And, something else It's painful to admit that it's necessary to say, without the kings and Princes and honest people wouldn't have known much about it. Whom can they blame to be indignant? These kings and princes. they themselves sullied their history; they seemed to be doomed in defiance of their own memory.

Evil grew like a trial spreads under the hand of a public accuser. Evil was pleasure, he was the law. Although it had been proclaimed by the ancients that an entire people could not be punished by any human hand, one instinctively felt that the punishment was coming. It was not right, in fact, that those who were without justice or without pity, remained without punishment.

No country had ever taken it further than France culpable disdain for its historical and Christian grandeur yours, and the contempt for centuries' experience. France traded his glory for an idol. Which attested to the strength and the merit of his old customs became a cause of disapproval. The nobility and the people allowed themselves to be per-

PJE VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 125

to believe that in order to regenerate everything, everything had to be destroyed. believed that on the ruins of the old monarchy there was nothing could be easier than replastering an entire world nine. So they began to greet the promised land before the Crossing the Red Sea. These fools of constitution and of reform, so numerous in revolutions, resemble always to the giant of Ariosto, who is chasing after his head. In that head was a hair that his enemy wanted to tear it out. In order to obtain it, he decided to cut the head. That hair, that was the abuse pursued by the hon- are true apostles of progress.

But the Revolutions, which are the crime of a petty name- They blame everyone and never offer an excuse. Instead of demanding a necessary pardon, they don't need than new foods. The National Assembly, barely assembled, would coordinate them all, as well as the prejudice- the authority of the Church only at the expense of the throne. The throne does not oppose- offered no resistance; they seemed to be showing him charity. of a kind of conditional forgetting. It was thus possible to direct against the Roman See and against the French Clergy the first stirrings of enthusiasm for the revolt. We hadn't known to free oneself from all modesty towards those who free themselves They shunned all scruples. The Empire and the Priesthood they bore the penalty for their condescension.

Everything is immutable, everything holds together, everything is linked in the Church, its faith, its principles and even its way of combat. It is Virgil's Capitoli immobile saxum, poetry's place in history. It would have been reckless. It was deemed more prudent to attack the Church openly. tooth to lead him to destroy himself with his own hands. We wanted to have him undermine, without his knowledge, the building consecrated by so many generations of pontiffs and priests.

At the Estates-General, which soon became the Assembly
In the Constituent Assembly, the Nation was represented by its three orders. Constant and traditional practice dictated that each order voted separately; the Nation petitioned the Clergy and Nobility to amend these principles. In the name of a God of peace, ■ – a sacramental phrase that does not age-will never read, as long as the Revolution has anything to be wrested from us by hypocrisy – the Clergy is summoned to to renounce one's privileges.

The high clergy, whose foresight is awakened, resist to prayers that are threatening injunctions. The simple priests, whom we have attacked through every sensitive fiber of our being, lend themselves more readily to such a concession.
They allow themselves to be told that universal happiness is attached to the annihilation of intermediate powers. The fra-
The ternity must prepare the way for equality, and since the
The nation is preparing to form a people of brothers, shouldn't it not that the clergy should take the initiative for a rapprochement so desirable?

The clergy were defeated in the name of this God of peace, whose
The Revolution was so cheap, or rather he deluded himself.
even, according to Montaigne's forceful expression. Without wanting it, without knowing it, at least in the most nambreuse and the healthiest part of its members, it imposed itself the yoke of a sham majority. From that moment on, the era of what were called the great principles of 1789 was open, and France became this vast reservoir from which the the bloody waters of the insurrection spread over the worldwide.

A single assembly, with no other counterweight than the
the vehemence of its speakers or the imperious demands
"He controls the street, the State, and the Church." In this

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 427

Assembly, where the architects of ruins already combine Despite their efforts, there are some men who make a point of...
Moralization: a need and a pedestal. Mirabeau dominates.
this phalanx.

Its powerful breath stirs revolutionary passions.
Like the storm that shakes and bends the trees. The vices
From his youth have penetrated his bones: but, deep within this Superb and corrupt nature, there still remains, as in the germinal state, principles that would have been very difficult for him-
City of abdication. Obscene writer or demolishing tribune, Mirabeau admirably represents the eighteenth century

on his deathbed. He is, unbeknownst to him, the most complete type of this French nobility which, after having renounced all its beliefs and scorned all his memories, goes generous—how to die for his God and for his King, on the scale—false, in chains or in the wars of emigration and from Vendée.

When Mirabeau found himself surrounded by these men who boasted of being the sole representatives of the People, when he measured with his eye all these credulous mediocrities And all these ambitious betrayals filled him with a chill. and at the head* The anticipated excesses of the Revolution in him— They breathed the idea of Power. At this decisive moment, his Pride even encompassed religious restraint. In 1790, one He heard him say: "No, gentlemen, the watch will not work. It may make some noise, but it won't leave a lasting mark. "It doesn't tell the time. The main spring is missing."

In the eyes of this promoter of disorder, who did not know not enough time to separate from some pre-stains of the first and of these selfish appetites, which vice had de-Placed everywhere, what does this great spring signify? Mirabeau he revealed a little later. "We're being lost," he exclaimed, in dividing us too much, instead of showing us the urgency of unity and power.

128 BOOK ONE.

This Revolution, at its dawn, provoked in the soul of his only statesman and his most important orator—petty monarchist thoughts and polite remorse Catholic zealots. Mirabeau had seen it in action and judged the men who were walking in search of a new France. He had scrutinized the loins and the The heart of the various parties; he knew their strengths and weaknesses. weak. Contempt for humankind served as his substitute for last virtue. With that supreme insolence which is the a particular mark of his genius, he disdained to believe in his contemporaries, because he had worked with them. His contemporary, indeed, freed from the halo of patriotism their splendid brow, which is always adorned by the A grateful revolution, they were able to prepare great things. crises and work towards a massive levelling; but they never knew how to rebuild with the wreckage of the ship—Frage. Lost, adrift in a maze of utopias, they do not learn They focused on legislating instead of building a society.

The majority of this Assembly was decimating itself, becoming impoverished she herself twisted by the disjointedness of her plans and by the infatuation with limitless power. It was destroying the throne piece by piece, and she didn't even want to shake it-1st. There were, as in all parliaments, these fundamentally honest natures, but timid and irresolute, who, with a secret inclination towards good, love to to take root in evil. We were drowning in an atmosphere-sphere of ineffable parades these brave bourgeois of the small town, these simple country priests and this crowd of innocuous nobodies, who stun their pen-seized with words, and who blind their conscience with

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 429

lies. They were intoxicated by the triumph of their om-collective powerlessness; and, as in France everyone dreams equality from above, they were persuaded that the night of August 4, 1789 had only abolished titles of nobility for to make the most obscure individuals into a people of Mont-morencys.

But, amidst all these vain outgrowths aimless and directionless, he encountered men who the plans were perfectly defined, and who knew about thembetter where they were tending. We made ourselves a Public opinion is spring-loaded; its movements are slowing down-
They knew or accelerated at will. They kept time.
on the main principles of '89, an instrument full of com-pleasure boating, around which we play all the variations that we
It wants, and it makes all the sounds requested of it.
strived "to subvert and destroy the foundations of our monarchy, which was, according to the word of our ancestors-very, so well and wisely planted by the will of God. "

The Jansenists and the Gallicans, old ma- prosecutors dressed, always full of their little skirmish war against the Church and the King, wanted to proceed with caution decency and reserve, then discreetly apply the question ordinary and extraordinary. They enjoyed distilling their hatred in small doses, in order to make it penetrate more before, among the masses. They gave themselves to themselves.
the advice that the Roman emperor whispers to his boss their sole ambition was to strike the Church of
in such a way that, following Caligula's recommendation, She felt herself dying. "Ita ferij, ut se mon sentiat l. Les turmoil within the Assembly, combined with excesses

1 Suetonius, History of the Twelve Caesars, vol. III, p. 98.

from the street, did not allow for the extension of these adjournments, which diluted the bile of Jansenism in the vinaigre of Gallicanism.

Fear is the beginning of barbarism. The party philosophical, having no more considerations to maintain, no longer even having timid allies to drag along in his wake, he proclaimed He finally announced aloud the arrival of his masters. He did The People's fear of the Royalty, the Clergy, and the Nobility. Through a bold calculation, he frightened his own people with all the fables that he saw fit to put into circulation. A Rome, the ornaments from Hadrian's tomb served weapons against the Goths. The attacked civilization was trying to throw marble columns and bronze statues at the head of the new barbarians, which did not prevent them not to penetrate the heart of society.

In order to dominate the Assembly and inspire these ter- beneficial arguments, which ensure the enslavement of discussion and the servitude of voting under the name of liberty, a riot daily was necessary. It was important to maintain under The terror gripped the bishops in their dioceses, the gentlemen in their castles, the honest citizen of every condition- tion in his family. This riot must have the license of its appearance in the public squares of cities and in the background from the most remote hamlet. It will be national by the co- card and cosmopolitan in intention. The riot was decreed- team, organized and disciplined with such a rare understanding of the matter, which, in their history or rather in their Apology for the French Revolution, Thiers, Louis Blanc and Michelet cannot help but applaud the im- postures that they reveal.

In 1789, no one knew what pretext to invent to have the opportunity to create the national guard, the solvent

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 43]

the most active of the order and governments. "Everything to Suddenly, Mr. Thiers recounts*, letters began to circulate, and, crisscrossing France in every direction, announce that the bandits arrive and they cut down the crops before their maturity. People are gathering from all sides, and in a few days the whole of France is armed, awaiting the brig- giants that never arrive. This stratagem, which made un- the revolution of July 14th, by provoking the ar- the nation's leadership was then attributed to all parties, and since then it has been mainly blamed on the People's Party, which collected the results. It is surprising that we thus rejected the responsibility for a more ingenious stratagem

"No one is guilty."

To lie to the people, to deceive them in their isolation, exploiting his credulity to lead him into crime, all of that In Mr. Thiers' eyes, this is merely a more in-genius as guilty. Louis Blanc professes the same doctrine.
trine; he abuses the same recipe, and he says 2: "On February 28th February 1791, the day designated for the discussion of a new the emigration law had arrived. An emotion of a character-
An unusual color was painted on their faces; it seemed that a mysterious finger pointed to everyone, beyond a law Similar, something terrible... In the morning, on the very false, but very actively spreading-due, which had been transported to the dungeon of Vincennes 4 weapons and ammunition of all kinds, and that it existed, from the Tuileries to this dungeon, a secret underground passage through which the the king and his family had to escape, the people of the fau-
The towns, powerfully shaken, rushed to the fortress to "Demolish it."

1 History of the French Revolution, by A. Thiers, vol. 1, p. 4 37.

2 History of the Revolution, ^a. Lckjs B.aix, t. V, p. 205.

9.

432 BOOK ONE.

Thiers and Louis Blanc reveal the tricks of the trade.
bent with the aim of deceiving the people by slandering the court; Michelet will explain how a pre-
The assassination plot, partly linked to the conspiracy to specify... to depict the events between June 20 and August 10, 1792.

"How were we going to do it?" said this historian*,
To resist in Paris? The first thing was to...
to be master. But Paris did not have Paris, as long as the friend Prussians were in the Tuileries. It was through the Tuileriesreasons why the war had to start.

"Will we obtain from a people, thus far inexperienced,
a moment of generous anger, a violent outburst of he-
Was it Romanism that caused this sublime madness? That was highly doubtful.
This people seemed too wretched, perhaps brought down by the weight of evils. Grangeneuve, from the Girondins, in the fervor of his fanaticism, he asked the capu-Cin Chabot, that he would blow his brains out, that evening, in the corner of a street, to see if this assassination, of which one would have certain-
The court, having accused them, would not decide the move.
The unscrupulous Capuchin friar had taken charge of the matter;

but, at that moment, he became afraid, and Grangeneuve pro-
led all night, waiting in vain for death, and desolate of not being able to obtain it.

The patriotic deception and the revolutionary ambush are as expertly organized as the national guard and the Spades section. In every town there is a club, '
This club publishes a newspaper. With the help of these two mechanics...
new movements, a cou-
• an electric current that spreads enthusiasm or fear, and who measures hope or disappointment as he sees fit.
wants to gradually lead the French nation to repudiate

1 History of the Revolution, by J. Michelet, vol. III, p. 542.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 133

itself, its own history and its own cult. We breathe into the beehive, in order to enrage the bees.

To entice the people and get them used to it, they loot
some churches as a prelude to the spoliation of the Clergy;
We burn down some castles in order to arrive faster.
to equality. They teach the army, through wine and...
Lost women, for disobedience is the holiest duties. The property of the clergy is confiscated, it is suppressed-religious orders are abolished, titles of no-hurt.

When all these preliminaries of the so- decomposition
The civil acts were accomplished when the King saw the revolt and the murderer wandered through his Palace of Versailles, under the protection of all these majesties of disorder; when he
All that remained for the martyr of royalty was the right to countersign his dishonor or to witness his dis-
At the deadline, an English minister could rightly say to the House of Commons: "I congratulate my country in advance."
high destinies to which the French Revolution just called him.

By uttering these words, he demonstrated a rivalry.
shop window rather than an expression of a grand thought public safety, Pitt was then condemned to not seeing the events nations only with English eyes. Burke, better inspired, did not confine itself to this mundane British interests niques. Already anarchy, despotism in turmoil, had lay hands on everything that was noble or sacred, and Burke laments the fall of France in these terms!
"The age of chivalry is over. The age of the sophists, Economists and calculators succeeded him; and the Europe's glory is extinguished forever. Never, no, ja-

1 Revolution of France, by Eim and Burke, p. 133.

134 BOOK ONE.

but, we will not see this generous loyalty towards rank and towards sex, this proud submission, this obedience, this subordination of the heart, which, in the Even in servitude, they retained the spirit of an exalted freedom.
ted! The natural ornament of life, the inexpensive defense nurture of nations, this nursery of all feelings Courageous and heroic endeavors... all is lost.
This sensitivity to principles is lost, this chastity of honor for which a stain was a wound, which inspired courage by softening the fenxcity, which ennobled everything it touched, and which, in vice itself lost half its danger in him
"Which will remove all its vulgarity."

When the great English Protestant publicist arrives to examine and judge the confiscation of clergy property,
He expressed himself thus: "The tyrant of England, Henry VII, which was no more enlightened than were the in Rome Marius and the Sullas, and who had not studied in your new schools, Henry VIII only knew instruction-the invincible nature of despotism; one could find in this vast arsenal of offensive weapons against human rights.
When he had resolved to plunder the abbey, like the club
The Jacobins plundered all ecclesiastical property, he com-threatened to establish a commission to enter the examination men of the crimes and abuses that prevailed in these communities. Its commission, as expected, included truths, exaggerations, and... in his report lies; but, falsely or according to the truth, she reported on the abuses and crimes. However, although the abuses could be corrected, although the crimes the actions of a few individuals should not lead to the forfeiture-

1 Revolution of France, by Edmond Burko, p. 207.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 438

the structure of an entire community; and as in this century of darkness, it had not yet been discovered that the pro-Priesthood was merely the product of prejudice; all these abuses (and (there were quite a large number of them) were not looked at dice as a sufficient basis for pronouncing the confiscation, which was the goal we wanted to achieve.
As a result, Henry found a way to obtain a formal resignation of all these assets. All these ma-arduous tasks were employed by one of the tyrants the most determined that history has ever recorded, as necessary preliminaries before he could laugh quer (by corrupting the members of its two Chambers) servile, through the hope of gaining something from spoils, and by the promise of a perpetual tax exemption) to request confirmation of these unfair practices by an act of Parliament. If chance had reserved this tyrant for our time, four technical words would have did the whole job, and would have spared him all this embarrassment—nothing; he would have needed nothing more than a short formula for enchantment: "Philosophy — light — Freedom — human rights.

These lessons of history, dictated in 1790 by a A profound sense of justice, they were destined to remain sterile. speakers and newspapers, the only plague which, according to Ri-Varol, Moses did not dare to strike Egypt, they claimed the power to bind kings with chains, and the great ones of the earth with iron bonds. The man's feet covered— They would do evil; they hastened to shed blood. The Devastation and desolation were in its path. They were coaxed the people's most trivial passions. Stupidity was indulged. human; she was taught not to know how to tolerate either the neither royalty nor liberty.

4 36 BOOK ONE.

The National Assembly had given the signal for excesses; she soon found herself swept up in the whirlwind stirred up by She. The law had broken down the doors of the convents. She forced the monks and nuns to return to the world; She enticed them, she lavished upon them the name of brothers and of sisters led astray by fanaticism, to train them to apostasy.

It was necessary to invent a solemn consecration of the op-probre. The most infamous clubs held their sessions in the churches of the Jacobins and the Cordeliers. The Revolution seized these names to inflict them—to his henchmen¹. One was a Jacobin or a Cordelier by the The right to crimes. Then the preeminence of evil passed all entirely devoted to this double platform. The Assembly was not allowed constitutive that the derisory authorization to register and to sanction the motions of the clubs.

All these creatures, burdened by a soul, are they got rid of it as quickly as possible, by proclaiming themselves

1 When the Dominican Friars, in other words the Dominicans were called to France; the University of Paris gave to young students of this Order the church and the house of Saint James. This church was located on Rue des Grès, between Rue Saint-Jacques and the college of Montaigu. From there they were named Patres sancti Jacobi. The People, who do not understand Latin and who abbreviate everything, called them Jacobins. This name is so odiously popular that the new Brethren The preachers never considered reviving it. It remains in the possession of the Revolution.

The Franciscans, especially those of the Great Observance, were par- They are all called Cordeliers in France, and here's why. The Franciscans accompanied Saint Louis on the crusade. In an encounter, these reli- The nobles vigorously repelled a party of Saracens. When the knights, who had witnessed the battle, came to report to King, they could never say the name of these religious men. They were funereal. Vincii. The knights designated them by the name Cordeliers. From this came came the name Cordeliers.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 437

mant the French People, like the mud that rises from The pond thought it was water. There were no more ghosts for To frighten people, they invoked the patriots. Cardinal de Retz, who knew about it said: "When it comes to sedition, everything This makes her believe it, which increases it. Consequently, we gave the riot formidable proportions. It was made Right, duty, and power. Spoliation became a title. to civic duty; and in this Saint Bartholomew's Day Massacre of all the privileges, but one thing was forgotten: to apply to the lawyers, legislators enacting these measures, the law Cecina, who, in Rome, forbade them to have hands.

Legal theft was sanctioned. Royalty stripped itself bare. itself lost its prestige; the Nobility lost its prerogatives gatives and its property, the Clergy was condemned to almsgiving. The politicians of the Assembly believed that a time of ar- Perhaps retiring would be a good and useful thing. They hear- were republicans as advanced as Governor- Morris, the United States minister in Paris, asks how France would find a way to carry all the freedom she took upon herself.

These questions, presented in the form of advice, do not They were not only worrying about the future. We had debased the majesty of the throne, killed the nobility and impoverished the Clergy. They felt the need to rest a little at amidst the accumulated debris. But the ruin of the Church, consumed in a few hours, did not satisfy everyone appetites. In the eyes of the greedy and the hungry, spo- The alliance tolled the death knell of the clergy; the Jansenists, However, they did not judge it that way. The Church reduced to the For them, begging was a spectacle of revenge and a gentle consolation; nevertheless they needed something else thing. They knew quite well his perseverance and his vitality

138 BOOK ONE.

it was necessary to know that she would recover sooner or later from a half-What a disaster. Silver wounds are not wounds. deadly. The hatred of the sophists and lawyers was in-Dormie, that of the Jansenists, watches, harsher than ja-But they left it to others to plunder the Church; They reserve for themselves the pleasure of dishonoring her.

Disdainful of these grand tournaments of eloquence in which Mirabeau and Abbot Maury, Cazalès and Barnave raise questions of life or death for the people. the Jansenists, holed up in the offices of the Assem-national battle as in a citadel without walls triremes, they only form a wish, they only pursue one idea. What do all these passes matter to them, indeed? of weapons, where words are the sword? They do not like to use... They seek only with the dagger; they search coldly, methodically that the vulnerable spot. It was. of this calculation of advice-the aftermath of the ruin that brought forth the Civil Constitution of the Clergy.

The Jansenist Camus, or rather the pious Camus, according to Mr. Thiers, the conciliatory Fréteau de Saint-Just, nicknamed by Mirabeau the gossipy Fréteau, Goupil de Préfel'n, Treilhard, Lanjuinais, Legrand, Martineau and Durand de Maillane, eight forensic experts or lawyers, gathered and combined their efforts. Official or unofficial members of the Committee Ecclesiastics of the Assembly, they develop, they direct all his votes. A few prelates and the Abbot of Montesquiou are chosen as if to counterbalance the exaggeration-tion and the abuse of Gallican liberties that Jansenism enthrones. Among these prelates is Jean-Marie Du-Iau, archbishop of Arles, whose talent is no more No doubt about it, courage and piety. Dulau was appointed to unintentionally serve as a flag and cover the mar-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 439

Chandise. His name is popular and respected. He will give to the commission this degree of authority and trust which She feels the need. But Dulau, supported by François de Bonal, Bishop of Clermont, by Charles de Mercy, Bishop of Luçon, by the Prince of Robecq, the Marquis of Bouthillier, and by the priests Vanneau, Lalande and Grandin, struggles with such logic and perseverance that he exhausts himself the tenacity of the Jansenists. It even compels silence the loquacity of lawyers.

These preparatory skirmishes were perhaps the harbingers of defeat; Camus and Treilhard the con- swear by imagining a plausible pretext to compose themselves a more docile majority. Treilhard then comes to complain to the Assembly of the excessive workload to which the Committee The clergyman is bound. In order to remedy this inconvenience- They deny, which delays the Constitution of the Clergy, so vividly desired by the nation, Treilhard proposes that we add to The Commission has a number of new members.

Camus and Treilhard's wish was granted, as It had been agreed upon beforehand; and this first round of the lawyers' parliamentary maneuvering did not change the discussion, but he shifted the majority.

That was all the Revolution could demand; it obtained it.

The lawyer Chasset, the economist Dupont (of Nemours), The Carthusian monk Dom Gerle and three priests, whom demagoguery will soon change to constitutional bishops, Massieu, Expilly and Thibault are the main auxiliary members liaires of the Ecclesiastical Committee. The Assembly did not grant him- demanded more light, but a schism framed in a bill. Dulau and his friends withdrew.

Two years apart, we find them again

4 i0 BOOK ONE.

in each other's presence. The lawyers who wanted restoring the old cannons are Girondins or Terro- rists. The priests, who claimed to bring the Church back to its primitive purity, they assassinate the King, they publicly renounce lie to their God, or end up contracting a species of legal marriage. Dulau is the first martyr to fall at the Carmes under the blows of the September Massacres.

Therefore, there are two distinct parties within this Assembly. decisive. One, to remain true to his principles, does courageously sacrificing his fortune and his life; the other, in order to fuel envious or greedy passions, advances towards progress and dishonor with cries of joy. Cautious, argumentative, and loquacious, these priests and these lawyers, pooling all the efforts of their pa- Their aversion to the Roman See, they do not resemble not bad at terminals that would want to insult a pyra- mide. They only seek to rely on freedom to to make the Righteous fall into their traps, because the Righteous

It is inconvenient for them. They are at work, let's see them manage to publish their Civil Constitution of the Clergy.

In a few months, the Assembly had made prodigious upheaval in the Church's economy. The
On August 4, 1789, tithes were abolished; on September 27, Catholic churches are being deprived of their vases.
sacred; on October 18th, monastic vows do not exist
Furthermore, on November 2nd, the Nation is declared the owner of the Church's property; on April 13, 1790, he lost the administration transfer of these assets. The clergy are made into state employees, in order to enslave the priests through their needs for each day, and gradually transforming them into clerks moral policing services. On July 12, the Convention a constitution whose origin we have outlined.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 141

With a calculation of profound deceit, its authors repeatedly rushed to attack the dogmas directly.
of Christianity, which the unbelievers, their accomplices, do not ceased to be at stake. To tamper with the faith would be,
According to the Jansenists, to awaken the anxieties of the People and to provoke legitimate distrust. The People are not yet
It is ripe for this eagerly awaited work. It must deceive him and lead him astray by an insane slope-sible. We therefore set aside the dogma, until further notice.
useful opportunity, and they ingeniously use every kind of subterfuges, to dismantle the spiritual government of the Church, while shouting from the rooftops that it was being recalled back to the ancient canons and its primitive beauty.

In order to vividly grasp the spirit of the masses and to to associate with the regeneration of the Church, it had been decided that the election of their pastors would be returned to the people. This principle, accepted as the basis of the project, is an advance and A lure. The people fell for it. They were being deluded.
of its future splendors, tears were drawn from him on His past calamities, he was intoxicated by his omnipotence.
current. The People, dazzled, subjugated, see in all these changes usher in an era of equality and fraternity, emerging from the chaos of his supposed servitude. He applauded.
with hand and heart; then, when one offers to one's naive enthusiasms the Federation's celebrations, as pass-
Whether it's time or a toy, we manage to steal from the Church the authority she received from God.

The principle of democracy in the state, barely proclaimed, they are trying to forcibly introduce into the Church the principle of Presbyterianism. The King was now nothing more than a countersignature machine, they want to enslave the Bishops to the same stupidity. The former constituency of France was in turmoil; the territory and boundaries were reversed dioceses. Metropolitan sees and bishoprics are abolished, We create others. We pronounce extinction and death. legal of chapters, abbeys, priories and all benefice titles, other than those of metropolitan sees and bishoprics and cures established by the Constitution.

142 BOOK ONE.

This Constitution decides and promulgates that the evolutions of those who no longer need to address themselves to the Pope for this to obtain confirmation. They write to him as if he were the chief visible to the Church, only as a testimony to unity of faith and communion that they must maintain with him. It is up to the metropolitan, or the most senior bishop of the district forming the diocesan metropolis, which it Canonical confirmation must be sought. The bishops and The priests are elected by the same electoral body that appoints them. The members of the departments and districts. The bishop cannot exercise any act of jurisdiction, insofar as it concerns awards the government of his diocese, without having released with his usual and permanent council. His vicars can only be removed from office with the advice of this council and by a decision taken by a majority vote. The Parish priests have the right to choose their own vicars. among the priests ordained or admitted into the diocese by the bishop; but his approval is not required.

These are the fundamental articles of this Constitution. tion. This is the schism in its nascent stages, the schism elaborated by the Protestant Reformation, and developed in its consequences extremes by the Jansenists, but the schism had already begun. by law, a scandal and an oddity of which history had not no example has yet been offered. According to these past theories in laws, all power no longer comes from God, but from man. God is absorbed, erased, he gives way to an elect-sovereign elector. This elector, who is the first person who comes along, represents Christian society; it will be its organ, and, By decree of December 24, 1789, idolaters and Jews... Muslims, Calvinists, and unbelievers of all caste or any profession, are voters and eligible to hold office. Nearly; the clergy alone takes no part in the election. thus dates back to venerable antiquity and the primitive Church.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 143

The power of the Bishops was not much, the
The Pope's power is reduced to nothing. Communion with the Holy See was limited to the simplest of forms mules. The Sovereign Pontiff learns from her what has been settled outside of his jurisdiction. He is stripped of his authority.
and France, which owes its faith and its bishops to Rome, the Constitutional France separates itself from the mother church.
France breaks all ties with the center of the Unity ca-Catholic.

Born from the long-established alliance between the Jansenism and secular Gallicanism, this Constitution had eternity for her, has forever the constitutions
the most ephemeral tions. She was struck at birth of legal blindness and religious anathema. She knew

1 It would be impossible to recall in a note all the consequences your botffonnea or extravagant of such a mode of elections. What is Passing through Toulouse is enough to give its scope. We read in Y Antidote universal, p. 48:

"The first ballot having been invalid, the electoral assembly wanted to..."
to do a second one, without giving up. Several voters, who did not want not to lose the pleasure of the show, they told their friends that in case of be-Care, we'd find them at the comedy. The need arises. We run to the comedy.
media. An actor, tasked with giving his opinion, steps forward to the edge of the theater and said: "Gentlemen, the voters present here are hereby notified that..."
They are waiting at the cathedral to conduct a second vote and create a science.
"succ. esseï r des apôtres."

L'

4 44 BOOK ONE. m

accused both by the Church and by reflection; but the goal that we had hoped to reach could no longer escape to the revolutionaries. They were going to dishonor the clergy.
French, by forcing him to swear an oath to such a violation of all ecclesiastical laws, or dispersing it and dedicate him to almsgiving, if he listened to the voice of his con-

:-9lT(Ii

ico

The hour of danger was approaching; the vast majority of the Episcopate and the Clergy did not hesitate. Under the pre-club sion, spewing blasphemies and threats-Regarding these deaths, the Bishops and Priests were unanimous.

They rejected with eloquent indignation a serment that imposed the schism on them¹. They were placed in the alternative of subscribing to perjury or being abducted of their dioceses and parishes. This sacrifice was consumed, and the Church of France destroyed in its principle and in its action.

Impiety immediately set to work; it produced new bishops. The people of the Revolution elected them; Charles-Maurice Talleyrand of Périgord consecrated them. It more than enough was needed to bring bad luck to such a person an assemblage of vices and betrayals.

This tiny minority was turning away from God, as if the Lord's hand suddenly shortened so as not to be able to save more, and as if his ear had become harder to hear. The Constitution The clergy attributed to its bishops and priests civic duties, in exchange for their priestly duties. Less than two years after its promulgation, its bishops and his priests passed under the yoke of apostasy or of municipal cohabitation. Those whom the guillotine spared... repented later, or tried to maintain themselves in The Church as a stumbling block and a source of scandal. This is what the revolutionary idea has always admired-understood. So it's no surprise to see all liberal writers vouch for orthodoxy immaculate from this nascent schism, which could not be fertilized than the ridiculous.

¹ Leaving this session of January 4, 1791, where the Clergy refused the Oathing with such noble energy, Mirabeau said: "By my faith, if the The profit is ours, we must admit, the honor is theirs.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. Uo

In his History of the French Revolution and in that of the Consulate and the Empire > Mr. Thiers, who often gives Emperor Napoleon a lesson in tactics, reveals himself, in his spare time, to be more of a theologian than the Pope. The Pope and the Church have spoken out on this issue, which was even emptied, before any decision was made, by contempt with which the people welcomed its intruders. People, Church and The Pope was mistaken. Here's how: "The Assembly, in reforming abuses, said Mr. Thiers¹, did not encroach on ecclesiastical doctrines nor on papal authority, then-that the constituencies had always belonged to the temporal power. She therefore wanted to form a new division, to subjugate as in the past the priests and bishops to the popular election, and in this respect it did not encroach than on temporal power, since the ecclesiastics were chosen by the King and appointed by the Pope. This project, which was named the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, and who slandered the Assembly more than anything else that she had done, however, was the work of the deputies more pious. It was Camus and other Jansenists who, wanting to strengthen religion in the state, they sought to to bring it into line with the new laws. It is certain that, with justice restored everywhere, it was strange that she was not the case in ecclesiastical administration either although elsewhere. Without Camus and a few others, the members of the Assembly, educated in the school of philosophers, would have treated Christianity like all the other religions admitted into the State, and would not have been concerned about them-cut. They indulged in feelings that in our New customs dictate that it is customary not to fight. even when they don't share them. They therefore supported Camus's religious and sincerely Christian project. The clergy rose up, claiming that they were encroaching on the self-spiritual authority of the Pope, and appealed to Rome. The principal- The basic principles of the project were nevertheless adopted and also- They were immediately presented to the King, who asked for time to... refer to the High Priest. The King, whose religion was enlightened recognized the wisdom of this plan, wrote to the Pope with the sincere desire to have his consent, and to to thereby overturn all the objections of the clergy. We shall see soon what intrigues prevented the success of his wishes. "

1 History of the French Revolution, by M. Thiers, vol. I, p. 232.
I. 10

146 BOOK ONE.

The sovereigns that the voice of their conscience or the Predicting future calamities halts on the fatal slope concessions are inevitably controlled by intrigues. They are given alms quite generously. good intentions, but they are declared to have been achieved and defeated by moral ineptitude or weakness. For their evil- At this point, they all have an entourage that enslaves them to its wills or a cabal that loses them.

The Revolution grants itself, by right, a monopoly of lies, and she mentions historians who, like Mr. Thiers finds "this stratagem more ingenious than guilty." But the Revolution only allows its own to pardon cowardice, and to take under protection

 From their pens, the perfidy from which she can profit.
 The Holy See condemns the Civil Constitution of the Clergy; the
 The clergy of France rejects it as an attack on self-to the integrity and indefectibility of the Apostolic See. Mr. Thiers declares that they are all mistaken. A man who took to This Constitution, a very large part, one of the bishops instituted by her, Abbot Grégoire, is not entirely as absolute as the panegyrist of the Revolution, and he said: "In this Constitution, I consulted "Come, the Pope's authority is not pronounced enough."

Gregory, this man of vast ecclesiastical erudition that, but whose head was an upside-down library and the style, a continuous parenthesis, testifies to nothing He shows no regret, no remorse. He was crafting a his conscience, a kind of bastardized Catholicism, Gallican, if you will, but independent of the Church:
 something approaching the civil pontificate that he will dream of later Abbot Gioberti; nevertheless, Abbot Grégoire ar-shore to the conclusion that strikes everyone, except Mr. Thiers. Let us add, to be fair, that at twenty-five years old of interval, when reason begins to come to him with With white hair, the writer of Liberalism is not also explicit. In his History of the Consulate and the Fifth Empire, Mr. Thiers is much closer to the opinion of Gregory, that of his own. He contradicts himself; but does not does not retract yet, and he expresses himself thus: "The Religion was obviously one of the things with regard to the-
 which the Revolution had crossed all boundaries

1 Legitimacy of the civic oath, by Abbot Henri Grégoire, p. 25.

2 History of the Consulate and the Empire, vol. III, p. 196.

10.

148 BOOK ONE.

fair and reasonable. Nowhere else were there so many fix. "

Then on the next page he adds: "The Assembly con-constituent j driven by this taste for regularity so natural to the spirit of the reformers, assimilated, without hesitation, the admission
 The transfer of Church authority to that of the State. There were diosome were too broad, others too narrow; she wanted that the ecclesiastical district was the same as the district administrative conscription, and created a diocese per department

ment. Making all civil offices elective and judicial offices, she wanted to make them elective as well ecclesiastical. This arrangement seemed to him, moreover a return to the time of the early Church, where the bishops were elected by the faithful. She abolished at the same time the canonical institution, that is to say the confirmation of bishops by the Pope; and of all these provisions she comp-laid down what has been called the Civil Constitution of the Clergy. The men who acted in this way were motivated of very pious intentions. They were true believers. bleak, fervent Jansenists, but narrow-minded, stubborn in their theological disputes, minds consequently extremely dangerous in human affairs. To complete-
To find fault, they demanded that the French clergy lend oath to the Civil Constitution. It was giving birth to a matter of conscience for sincere priests, and a pretext for malevolent priests; it was, in a word,
"To prepare for a schism."

"Camus's religious and sincerely Christian project," this project, which Mr. Thiers, in his History of the Revolution-tion paints such a touching picture, only prepares one schism, according to the very testimony of the author of the Consulate and of the Empire. The schism is the attack on the unity of the Church,

i

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. U9

It is the peace of consciences and the tranquility of nations implicated is the civil war introduced into the sheepfold and threatening the flock. Rome owed it to all protection and light; it was his right and his duty to defend herself. By defending herself, she safeguards justice. tice and truth. It offers to all the trying devotions towards a consecration that doubles the strength and revives the courage. That is what the Revolution, in all its in-termites and its peripeteia, had the most pressing interest-ready to prevent, which she has constantly condemned at in the name of a God of peace.

She was born to be a lamb, she is forced to become tiger. She had peaceful and virtuous instincts; the Fanaticism, intolerance, and slander change all these beautiful sentiments in packages, not finding a valid excuse that in the apotheosis of a patriotism exalted by the dangers. She was determined to remain Catholic and Christian; she is first forced to make herself a weapon of a legal schism, then to move without transition to the atheism in laws and customs. A learned hy-

Pocrisie developed this dual theme; he does today an integral part of democratic ephemerides. We do not
They no longer reason, they are the only ones we swear by.

Because what we must never forget, what we must always and everywhere to compare with tolerance, with Progress and fraternity were promised, but brutality prevailed.
Fanaticism is delirium in the form of barbarity, blazing forth
as soon as the Nation renounces its prejudices and walks with the century. At the heart of all written or In the professed, one inevitably finds tears of com-hypocritical demands and pains, to soften the peoples on the wars of religion, or to inspire to

450 BOOK ONE.

humanity has a holy horror of the excesses committed in the name of
of faith.

The revocation of Edict of Nantes, the dragonnades and
The missionaries in their sturdy boots from the Cévennes are, with the Spanish Inquisition and the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre, a frame on which everyone embroiders inexhaustible declamations wounded. Some authors, even Catholic ones, have never dared to address such a thesis frankly. They have re-
He was brought to justice. In order not to compromise too much.
their commercial popularity, they have quite innocently es-tried to have, they too, their little stone to throw at the re-political impulses of Louis XIV and religious foresight Philippe II's gieuze. Few, very few writers of our days have dared to say, with Frédéric Ancillon in his Studies:
"The only role that could befit the majesty of history-
the only one who can retain his magistracy holy and necessary is to judge actions in themselves.
same, and to always bring them closer to the eternal principles
"Pipes of the righteous."

Ancillon, despite being a Protestant, spoke thus and acted in the same way. The timid and the revolutionaries will never have such scruples. For them, the foundation-
The lie of all justice will never be the truth.

We admire their eloquence as little as possible,
sprinkled with harmless interjections and hesitations embarrassed; but will we be allowed, we who only consent to walk in the ways of good meaning and truth, by asking a few simple questions to public opinion entrepreneurs?

The Priesthood and the Empire were wrong, in your opinion, to to crack down on the Albigensians, the Waldensians, the Camisards, and all those who broke away from Unity. The Compelle in-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 4ii1

trare, which gave rise to so many fine speeches and caused so much to spread across the globe, so many floods of philanthropic ink, was a violation of divine laws, an outrage against the conscience. History, odes, dramas, and novels make it so. Faith. That's very good; but then why don't you apply- Do you only express this indignation towards popes or princes? Why have you never, like Tacitus, had these flashes of distributive justice, sudden and terrible, which cast a terrifying light on the abysses of human heart?

Is it possible that those who invented and maneuvered- would still be at Are your eyes those of the apostles of tolerance? Do they, too, they would not have sought, through all sorts of threats and torture, to stifle public opinion and to understand What about pious resistance? Haven't we seen them adore an educated youth in ignorance, and fomenting these delusions of the mind, proceeding, by the most savage of inquisitions, the staging of the social paradox and of Deified disgrace? Haven't they claimed, haven't they proven not every day that, in order to achieve sovereignty of But are they allowed to dare anything against everyone?

You discover, you ardently lash out at the fana- ancient times. You declare war on it. Without truce or mercy, and this, in the name of your immortals principles of 4789, guaranteeing, you say, freedom re- religious and political equality and civil equality. But then for- What don't you see, why don't you tell us? Do not keep quiet about crimes of all kinds, persecutions of every species, of which these immortal principles were the cause Or was it a pretext?

It is beautiful to shed historical tears over misfortunes that date back several centuries, more beautiful in- core of arousing pity in the nascent generations over calami- These are often imaginary or exaggerated. Why remain silent? in the face of these evils which we witnessed, and of which he It is still possible for us to track the victims. of their blood?

45* BOOK ONE.

The "Force them in!" is an attack on the dignity of

The man and the citizen. So be it; but then what do you say?
of this National Assembly requiring an oath which repugnant to conscience? What do you think of these authorities?
These new men, sword in hand and blasphemy in hand... mouth, impose this same oath on every bishop, on every priest, to any nun, under penalty of dying of hunger or in exile? Where are they, in your stories or in your novels, the accounts of these spreading persecutions from the castle to the cottage, and go back to the humblest from presbyteries to the most sumptuous of episcopal palaces?
On what page do we hear you condemning these crimes, and saying with Livy: Crudelitatem damnatis., in crudelitatem ruitisj you condemn cruelty and you indulge in it-
Give it yourselves?

In all the provinces of old France, in Celts mainly, who were fortunate enough not to have-
I never saw Jansenists as spiritual leaders, there are Hardworking, peaceful, and faithful populations. Faith their fathers' is for them a consolation and a hope They believe in God; they believe instinctively.
to the infallible supremacy of the Pope; they venerate their bishop; they love their priest, whose word and charitual sums up the Church. Their virtuous instinct is wary of these multitude of rights with which the Constitution burdens them, because without ever having heard the name Ma-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 453

Chiavel, they know as well as he does that "men do not do good only by necessity; but as soon as they have a choice and the freedom to commit evil with impunity, they do not They do not fail to spread confusion and disorder. » &l * t>ii

Suddenly, at a nod of legislative approval, this People must renounce his ancient beliefs. He was poorly enlightened.
Without his consent, we make him happy in spite of himself; it will be necessary that, fro willingly or by force, he submits to the blessings that are bestowed upon him.
against his will. jq euQ S eoaomaoo sf b sn%uqm
These felicities consist of armed expulsion of every priest who has the courage of his faith, and in the advent-the liar of an intruder or a swearer, that public contempt welcomes in advance, quite convinced that by its morals
The intruder will not defy the voice of the People. The unbelievers-dules, who never set foot in a church, there finally enter in the wake of the constitutional priest, and the Silence reigns there, as in a tomb. The crowd 7a followed his true pastor into the valleys or into the forests. ioifibnoo auov ^

Through its unwavering constancy, the crowd protests con-to be innovations that repelled him. This madness, which are the true people, the working, fighting people praying and obedient, he is outlawed and declared incapable-capable of governing himself. He has just been freed.
of a yoke that hardly weighed on him; tu-constitutional officials who, through the harshest of services His studies will teach him the happiness of being free. He said and repeated throughout France the words of The Gospel: "He who does not enter by the gate into the sheepfold, but who goes up there by another

1 Machiavelli, Discourse on Titc-Live> 1. I. i]f>\ li0Yfi 3IIB3 1B*>

454 BOOK ONE.

"This place is a thief and a robber." These words are heard and understood; the thief ignores them, and he mausaid the sheep who flee from him and do not know the voice from abroad.

The overflowing of faithful priests has begun-the
The marriage of the jurors is celebrated in the parish church.
transformed into a temple of Reason. Those who do not attend not to these doubly national holidays are declared sus-respects. They are deported or massacred, they are violated or they drown them. Age is no more spared than sex.
Humanitarian fanaticism, hands full of good deeds
he corrupts, he preaches social progress; he declares war to convictions and thought. He wants nothing to remain standing; he crushes or mutilates. He leaves the wolves in repos, and he organizes in the countryside and in the cities long hunts for priests. He replaced the Cal-by a tree of liberty. He orders that his popu-
A group of brothers and friends bows before this tree, and adores the first prostitute who comes along who will be the same occasion goddess of Reason and License. This po-Pulace did not have enough money to have vices; the Revolution teaches him the rudiments of crime.

All of this was seen, but not all of this was said, or at least all of this found a national excuse in the indulgences of history. In order not to disturb his biased admirations and his great citizens of Convention, history passes by with both feet together and with eyes closed-
She feigns ignorance of these prodigious attacks.
rer, or, on her good days, she makes up for them: sometimes she even approves them by the supreme law of necessity.
City, the last excuse of tyrants.

History takes these privileged ones under its wing.

"sedition at all levels," which made a stepping stone of proscription, and who tortured beliefs for to soften them. She makes a bulwark of her admirations to low-level Herostratus, terrorists kept in the spirit of wine, or fierce lovers of equality, always ready to buy the most frivolous of distinctions at the price of all the packages. History was not ashamed to accept and to glorify such shames. She accused, she accused—Saint Dominic and Torquemada will remain so for a long time to come. Philip II and Louis XIV, the bloody Mary Tudor and Pius V. But fear nothing: she will never have anything but her defending themselves, a word of blame to stammer against the countless excesses of the Revolution.

The Revolution was provoked, it merely...

Answer 1. She wanted to do it peacefully, constitution—

1 On September 2nd and 3rd, 1792, the massacre of the Bishops, Priests and prisoners held at the Abbey, the Carmelites and in twenty other places, bloodied Paris. Three days later, on the 6th, the general council of the Municipality of Nantes decrees the following, which is signed by the citizens Joyau, Aimé, Payen, Donnet, Dufrexou, Gandon, Robineau, Halgan and Le Tourneux. This decree, which is a final semblance of humanity, resur—he cites the lettres de cachet in large numbers; he makes all the revocations pale in comparison with the Edict of Nantes and its prelude to drownings:

"The council, considering the danger that threatens the homeland and the ills to which it is exposed today are partly the effect and the following the criminal maneuvers of the unsworn priests; that it is evident that these men have sworn to destroy their country, and that no consideration will ever be able to rally them to the cause of freedom and equality;

"Considering that their expulsion from the kingdom is desired and requested" long ago, all good citizens considered it the only way to restore inner peace;

"Considering that this expulsion has already been carried out for several months, if the wish of the representatives of the Nation had not been stifled by the perfidious power charged with the sanction and execution of the laws;

"Considering that the People eagerly await the implementation of the

m BOOK ONE.

naturally and in its own way, the happiness of the Church, of the monarchy and the people. The Church, the monarchy and the

The people did not understand her. She saw herself in the cruel the alternative of succumbing or invoking a power of darkness still unknown. She placed herself under the invocation of this power, having as its elements and as its strength attractive everything that was previously considered worthless in the universe.

She called upon perjury and vice, selfishness, for help. and greed, sloth, and pride. All these have arranged to meet around her, here in the form of unpopular demonstrators, there under the carmagnoles of patriotic deranged. From the four corners of the world, this collection of vagabonds, will kill 'ml law; that, justly angered by the woes heaped upon his head by this horde malevolent, he burns to be freed from it, and the slightest delay could to drive him to take justice into his own hands, as happened to

Paris and other places; rifled

For all these reasons,

"The departmental council, deliberating in the presence of the general councils" generals of the district and the commune of Nantes, and heard the public prosecutor-General Syndic has decreed and decrees the following:

Article 1. Starting tomorrow, the commissioners of the three administrations will will return to the seminary and the castle of Nantes, where the Priests or non-juring clergymen of this department who are there are surrendered willingly, or who were brought there by force. mée, and will notify them of the law of August 26, which orders their export; They will order them to prepare to leave the kingdom within the specified timeframe. by the said law.

"Art. 2. The commissioners will make it clear to these clergymen that the administrators are willing to follow the literal execution with respect to them the decree of August 26th; but that the ferment of minds is such that it would be very imprudent of them to deviate by the in- Furthermore, the safest option for them is to prefer the sea route. to go to any place they wish to establish their residence.

Article 3. The commissioners shall declare to these clergymen that they have to dedicate themselves within twenty-four hours, at the end of which we will come to receive their statements; that time is of the essence, and that their safety would be compromised by a longer delay.

PIUS VI AND FRENCH DEVOLUTION. 107

gabonds, unnamed poets, ambitious lawyers,

lost women, greedy philanthropists, journalists
impure lists, of hissing actors, of enthusiastic naives progress, snitching doormen and debased nobles, treacherous priests, parasitic speculators, scheming begrievous, ruined cosmopolitans, young madmen, and mothers, composed this separate France whose De-Magogie will continue to sharpen evil instincts.

The tribunes of Athenaeum or Academy, the orators of alley or history, producing republicans under the Monarchy and the communists under the Republic, are taken for this kind of France with enthusiasm Easy to explain. They legitimize his excesses in the hope to seize the profits. That is why the Civil Constitution of the Clergy and all the revolutionary laws naires find admirers or apologists in a story fabricated for the sake of a passion or interest.

Pius VI and the Sacred College had studied with a ever-increasing anxiety during the various phases of the Revolution resolution. In Rome, better than anywhere else, they know that The defining characteristic of societies and empires that are destined to end is to
To foresee nothing, not even their end. Ignorance of the past veils the future, and the Pope was no longer able to admit that the
The French nation was teetering on the brink of collapse. In this movement-disordered turmoil of hearts and thoughts, through these feverish agitations of struggle and pain, the soul of The Pontiff was not shaken. His brow remained pure and serene like a beautiful autumn sunset. In Each of these complications brings sadness and
One more despair, he understood that a large reserve
It was imposed upon him. Rome initially condemned itself to silence, to allow passions time to calm down. When

158 BOOK ONE.

she judged that the time had come to break this prudent silence was Upon his arrival, Pius VI, on March 29, 1790, addressed the Sacred-College, assembled in secret Consistory. After having explained to him-
He mourned the afflictions that weighed upon the Church of France, he adds:

"When we learned all these things, did we
We could have suffered so much and not raised our voices apostolic against these guilty decrees, by which They want to destroy religion, and we don't see it.
that too much, breaking off all communication between the Holy-
The seat and the kingdom of France? The prophet Isaiah does not
He apparently disapproved of our silence, he who said:
"Woe to me for having remained silent!" But in what ways?
What terms could we break it off, and who should we contact?

To the Bishops: Are they not deprived of all authority?
plunged into terror, and forced, for the most part, to abandon to their seats? To the Clergy: is it not scattered, humiliated bound, unable to reunite? To the Most Christian King himself-Indeed: is he not stripped of his royal power?
submitted to the Estates-General, and forced to sanction all their decrees? Almost the entire nation, seduced by the phantom of a vain freedom, obeys like a slave this Asa group of philosophers insulting and attacking each other between them like rabid dogs; she forgets that the salvation of empires rests primarily on the Christ's doctrine, and that their happiness is never more assured than when obedience to the King is the effect of the full consent of all subjects, as taught Saint Augustine. Indeed, the Kings are the representatives of God to do good; they are the sons and the supports of the Church; their duty is to love her as a mother and to defend his cause and his rights.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 459

"We know for certain that the important mission of It is our prerogative to speak, to warn, and to exhort; but we are convinced that our voice would resonate in vain in the ears of a misguided people, and whose masses, delivered under license, constantly running towards the fire, to pillaging, torture and massacre of good citizens, and violates all the laws of humanity. We still know that we must be wary of further irritating this multitude and to drive her to even more heinous crimes. Saint Gregory the Grand teaches us in a striking way that the silence is not always irrelevant. Examining what There is a time to be silent and a time to speak, there is establishes the distinction; then he adds: & We must study-carefully determine the opportune moment for that a discreet mouth opens, and which one where the Discretion must be maintained. Who doesn't know that...
Saint Athanasius remained silent, and even fled.
of Alexandria at the time when that city was in the grip of The rage of the persecutors? He wrote, in fact: "Let us not be neither impetuous enough nor reckless enough to attempt the Sei-
"gneur." This is the same approach that Saint also followed.
Gregory Thaumaturgus and Saint Dionysius of Alexandria; that is what the most skilled interpreters of sacred books.

"But it is no less true that silence" that which keeps the one to whom the duty of speaking is imposed does not It shouldn't be forever. He should only keep it until... that he can break it without danger to himself and to the others. This is what Saint Ambrose teaches us when

He said, "Now David remained silent, not forever, but for a time, not without interruption, and with all the world indistinctly; but it did not respond to its neither the enemy who insulted him, nor the one who provoked him." As for to us, as long as our voice cannot be heard

460 BOOK ONE.

To the French nation, what must we do? We address—to serve God and to raise our fervent prayers to Him and multiplied.

"In the meantime, we have made a judgment about you"
to deliver this speech, so that people know that we Let's not ignore all the attacks being directed against the Religion and against the rights of the Holy See, and for dis-declare that the silence we have maintained should not to be attributed to negligence, much less to approval, but only to the conviction we have that this Silence is necessary for a time, and until other circumstances, which we hope to have soon to arrive by the grace of God, allow us to take "Usefully speaking."

Faced with the excesses of anarchy and the outragedies suffered by the Church, moderation and dignity of
This language has something paternally solemn about it.
Pius VI seems to have seen into the future. He has prescience.
misfortunes await him, and, a martyr already prepared for the sacrifice, he communicates to all his writings an aca hundred inimitable resignations. His style flows like the waters of a beautiful river. Those who preceded him on the apostolic throne, those who followed him there, all had, they will all hope that their struggles will not remain afflicted with sterility. This hope will not deceive them any more that he not abandon Pius VI; but that one, privileged by the pain, had to atone, like Louis XVI, for fatal complacency or depravity that were not the his own. He therefore resigned himself to the punishment without having par-
He participated in injustice. A devoted victim, he fought only

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 461

so as not to accuse Rome of inertia or exhaustion.
Nec terremus; nec timemusj, said Saint Ambrose, so sweet and so strong in his gentleness. We do not want to ef-

*, but we are not afraid, repeated Pius VI; and His calm, dignified demeanor was the eloquent commentary

of these words. ?/b <[j0[l jaGh^B fl^

In the difficult circumstances in which the King had placed himself, between his religious duty, which he never wanted to depart, and the new political principles that it followed Louis XVI needed a guide and a friend.

The old Pontiff supported the young Monarch; he in-breathed the courage of resignation, since a feeling incomprehensible mercy made Louis XVI forget

Ifj, it is not without reason that the leaders of the peoples of-the sword. In the presence of this Constitution, of which all the His vices were known to him, and he was forced to sanction them. Through all sorts of moral torture, the King hesitated and re-The French episcopate, rallied by the common danger, had gone into the breach; he fought with energy and with talent for preserving Christian unity. Louis XVI admired these generous efforts; however, his timidity-turelle made him seek advice or direction in an even higher authority. He was waiting for Rome would have ruled on the matter. Pius VI spoke, but His brief letter never reached the monarch. It was inter-cepta perfidiously, in order to leave the King to grapple with his religious conscience and his political uncertainties.

Harassed by the riot, exhausted by the interrelationships-Laughing, betrayed by some, slandered by others, and not finding that prayer brought solace to so many tribes lations, Louis XVI signed with the thought that he was conjuring from greater misfortunes, for never did a prince desire less knowing that energy is always the final word in all business. We were just waiting for this moment to leave To the Constitutionlists their complete freedom of action. Pius VI had inflamed the zeal of these pastors of souls, which were violently separated from the flock entrusted to their care. By his briefs, by his letters, by his example above all, he encourages, he excites this multitude of bishops and priests faithful until death. These bishops and these priests will endure it while blessing God and bidding their last respects to the Supreme Pontiff.

1 This brief is dated September 22, 1790.

I. 11

162 BOOK ONE.

In the dispensation of heavenly treasures, Pius VI did not open-ble point that he has, even among these Athanases of the Clergy French, sheep who no longer listen to the voice of the pasteur. While shining the iron above their heads spiritual censures, he grades the punishments according to the offenses; he threatens, and yet his charity does not cease to be gentle, patient, and paternal. He lists them to some the burning coals that sacrilege and the nullity of acts of jurisdiction exercised by them amass on their consciences. To the others, he announces their ruin pro-chain. It's no longer forty days that are fixed.

nevertheless, as by Jonah; Pius VI triples the longanithe prophet's moth. When this period has expired, the punishment will not begin yet; for, cries the Pontiff*,
"Then again we will be filled with sorrow, we will weep-"
We will groan, we will moan, we will feel our insides to dry out, as if our own members.

The one that Bossuet, in his admirable Sermon on The unit, so aptly named "the leader of the word and of

* Brief dated March 19, 1792.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 163

"the conduct," he had pronounced from the pulpit of Pierre. The bishops, the priests of the Church of France, measure the depth of the precipice towards which the Jan-Senism and Gallicanism drove them* Bishops and Priests bow before this speaking column of the faith, whose oracles are gathered like manna heavenly. They are called upon to dishonor themselves. They must swear an oath to the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, under risk of starving to death, because the salary granted is at The price of perjury. From one end of France to the other, the
The clergy rises. They refuse to obey laws that are repugnant to his honor and undermine the integrity of the Headquarters apostolic.

The arena is open to martyrs; they will rush in.
singing victory hymns.

The Comtat Venaissin and Avignon were the domain of Sovereign Pontiff. The Revolution seizes him, and immediately Jourdan Coupe-Tête appears at the entrance to the Icehouse. He inaugurates in papal territory the massacres which must, in every century, to make the paper on which they will be told.

There is no longer any shadow of armed resistance, no more throne, no more intermediary powers. The Parliaments are crossed off with a stroke of the pen from the list of con- bodies established. They no longer exist, not even in memory. The ma-

The scribe, who did so much for the Revolution, is destroyed by the Revolution. The priesthood, which fought against it, is Exiled or captive. A few traitors alone or guilty. Timidities, lingering on the path of concessions, hold them. instead, while awaiting their national condemnation to abjuration and marriage. Only these bishops and these relapsed priests, whom the common sense and faith of the people take*

464 BOOK ONE.

Whether mocked or pitied, they wander in their temples. lonely like lost souls. After disobeying at the Church, they feel struck by the unanimous disapproval Verselle.

At best, they can gather around them some indifference. In the ranks of these ecclesias-ticks, we count everything that made Gallicanism strong secular, everything that served to constitute the Jansenist party. It was Oratorians like Poirer who took hold, by right of conquest, of the principal parishes of Paris; of the Oratorians again who, like Daunou, Isabeau and Fou- They lend a hand to all crimes. In their resistance In their opposition to the Church, the Oratorians had as allies the Doctrinaires and the Genovefans. They have them as accomplices. of their priestly abjuration.

We wanted to go back to the old canons and to discipline Primitive Pliny. Bishops and parish priests are appointed to the plurality of voices, through the vote of the people. This people apart from that which has been shaped by murder, it sinks senselessly He faded into death like a decrepit old man. takes solemn possession of the disgrace, and, not excusing or rather, honoring only his own excesses, he does not admit He responds only to his passions, to his hatreds. He is As a citizen, he is a voter, he is an informer in his section. as he will be a juror of the Revolutionary Tribunal, in pairs francs per day, all crimes included.

Demagoguery creates a clergy to suit his needs. a clergy he elected, and to whom he imposed his vices, in hastening to adopt all of their own. This clergy, still more quickly ridiculed than condemned, product the effect of a caterpillar on a rose. It can do nothing for He is not for others. The good flee from him, the wicked from him.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. ftfft

They despise them. At most, on the day of vengeance Heavenly and human angers will find hearts to pity him or to teach him how to wash himself of the op-honest in the face of death.

Jansenism had taken the principle of its Constitution. Jansenism was quickly superseded, and Camus himself is indignant at the disdain he sees himself subjected to. The Jansenist movement feels it has corrupted too much. By what-some of its leaders shuddering at the sight of these simulacra of ecclesiastical elections, where unbelief and debauchery prevail His sister had only one vote in the ballot; Jansenism confesses defeated and outclassed. Like the Girondins, he always the opposite of what he announced, and perhaps of what he wanted, at least in the least gangrenous part of its members.

The bloodshed was abhorrent to the Girondins; they put their eloquence at the service of workers in the assassination.

Freedom was their idol, they created tyranny.

Regicide seemed to them a crime and a wrong; they were led to kill the King.

The civil war appeared in their speeches as the most unforgivable of social attacks. Once Having been sidelined or depopulated, they declared civil war. that they could not even sustain in the plains of the Normandy. These Marius of words, defeated without glory, found their Minturnae marsh in the abyss of a hopeless despair.

They were heard complaining about the injustice of men and the ingratitude of revolutions. They were indignant at being outlawed by the vulgar culprits they had elevated in power. They sowed corruption, they reaped-

466 BOOK ONE.

read in J'ignominie. They had had the pride of the destruction, the most ridiculous of all forms of pride. They died, and Montaigne's words were once again fulfilled. Once: "Those who set a state in motion, thus the author of the Essays expresses, are readily the pre-First, absorb into its ruin. The fruit of the trouble does not de-He hardly dies from the one who stirred him; he beats and confuses water for other fishermen.

Fortunately, Providence allowed what was true in Montaigne's time, it became even more so, and more so than never, during this French Revolution, where men had consecrated crime, and crime brought shame upon him all what she did for him. She had surrounded herself with figures kneaded in the mud; she had made the most terrifying-tables appeal to the most appalling passions. All the orgies of thought, all the depravities of the intellect-They crowned her with a crown of shame.

They seem to eat each other like fish.

the outpourings of her drunken fraternity, she would go, plan-everywhere there were trees of liberty, stunted poplars decorated with ribbons, and which must be adored under penalty of dead. Everywhere their branches produced only guillotines. The guillotine was like the sun, it rose for everyone.

When nature afflicts humanity with one of those winters rigorous and groundbreaking, the ferocious beasts leap from their hideouts, then wandering to the gates of the cities, They seek to devour the first passersby. Under the During the Reign of Terror in 1793, society was condemned to the same phenomenon. She suddenly saw people coming out of certain dives vile creatures surreptitiously named, and who, without this horrible shock, would be forever remained plunged in their native darkness. The Revolution-tion, this tender mother in a red bonnet, unmuzzled these ferocity. She gorged herself on the blood of her sons every day. And no one resisted, and everyone obeyed the tyrannic outlaw. This submission to the executioner does not This can be explained by the idea that at the time in France it was worth It is better to face a single death than to dread them. All of them. Few men were chained to servitude, They all chained themselves there voluntarily. As well as under the During Tiberius' reign, the Terror forcibly broke all relations human actions, and the more relentless the cruelty became, the more the Compassion was forbidden!

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 167

Through the resurrection and liberation of peoples, that she undertook on a fixed-price basis, we saw the Republic to temporarily and conceptually burn down foreign prisons, and she filled the Temple, the Concier- with victims gerie, les Carmes, l'Abbaye, le Luxembourg and all the palaces and all the churches. She slaughtered men in order to rejuvenate them; she was shedding the blood of France to regenerate it. She banished all memories and changed all the names. The Hôtel-Dieu was called House of Humanity; there was Marat Street, the street of Citizens, the street of the Sans-Culottes, the Lucrece- street Avenged. When the ransacked churches did not become clubs or fodder stores, they made some temples of Reason, Equality, Hymen, of the Old age, nature, or commerce. We changed the names of the cities, the calendar was turned upside down, and at the

In France, as with families, nicknames were imposed which were all, in a way, a mockery and an outrage.

It was a source of shame for so many centuries and so many men.

1 Tacitus, Annals, VI, 19.

468 BOOK ONE.

heroic, erasing everything that consecrated their titles by Respect for posterity. It was a confession that the weight
These immense memories weighed heavily on this generation.
prepared for all acts of cowardice and ignominy
by its emancipators.

Sometimes they dressed in the Greek style, sometimes in the Roman style.
This poor France, disinherited from Heaven and the Monarchy.
He was forced to embrace atheism for God and to face the guillotine for sovereign pontiff. Silence was a capital crime, and the Denunciation was a patriotically sanctioned profession. The law made it so.
All French people suspected of being suspects. They covered up
From laudatory adverbs, they decked themselves with enthusiastic adjectives
The massacres decreed in the name of the People.
He invented only one way to make men equal:
It was a matter of cutting off their heads, in order to establish a faster-lying, on deserted ground and in the night of tombs, the grim equality of nothingness.

As in the time when, according to the energetic words of Isaiah,
"God, the Lord of hosts, removed from Jerusalem and of Judah, courage and strength, all the strength of bread and
With all the force of the water, the people revolted. The great
They rose up against the powerful, and the rest of humanity... some against each other; the child rebelled against the old-
"lard, and the lowliest of the people against the nobles." They killed
The living were exhumed, the dead were dug up. Life was lived in the pulpits.
Ajax of crossroads or theater, who, after having tried to diminish earthly magnitudes, dared to defy God himself. They had been carried triumphantly Voltaire and Jean-Jacques in the Pantheon. Marat, too, had its apotheosis, the ultimate expression of extravagance in anarchy. Dugazon, Trial, Ronsin, Grammont,

1 Prophet. Isaiah, 111.

Collot-d'Herbois, Monvel and a thousand other actors, having learned in the acting trade how one became factious, were the Corybantes of these bacchanalia of impiety. Saint-Just, Robespierre, Carnot and Barère, makers of little social verses, academic philanthropists half, enjoyed crossing over, on a covered boat of ribbons and roses, the river of blood they made to flow.

One of their disciples, driven by a passion for logic to the point of cynicism, he was not afraid to say: "We must, of-ask those of '93, a broad conscience that does not erase-They do not, on occasion, enter into an adulterous alliance, the faith public order violated, the laws of humanity trampled underfoot the Constitution covered with a veil to do the job of the Revolution.

She needs all of that so that she can, in knowing the facts, working towards happiness in one's own way universal and social regeneration. We must give it grants excesses of any kind to be perpetrated or glorified to verify. He must be allowed to build mountains of human victims based on piles of corpses. The Revolution, which wants to destroy all abuses, overthrow fanaticism and destroy the family through divorce, has no other conditions to offer. That's the market. that she puts in your hand; she can do nothing if we don't He does not allow himself the right to lie and terrorize.

The Revolution is the obscure, gigantic and formidable-daunting image of death. According to Milton, it has a semblance of a crown on a semblance of a head, with a howl similar to that of the infernal dogs that bark endlessly nor It ceases around the belt of sin. It's a monster

1 Social Revolution) by Proudhon, p. 71.

470 BOOK ONE.

formless, born of chaos and hell. Homer, the regicide. thus depicted the time of Cromwell. The Committee of Salut Public was careful not to modify its report. She was the same, with all the filth, as a hundred Years of corruption added to its inherent corruption. In the third canto of Gerusalemme conquistata, a poem by Tasso that Jerusalem Delivered has made us forget, We read an octave, a dark prophecy, the most terrifying revolutions carried out as a whole and in its Details. The poet speaks thus:

La France adorna or da natura ed arte

Squallida im di vedrassi, e in manto negro,

Ne tempio illeso, o inviolata parte,

Ne loco da furor rimos) integro:

Vedova la corona, ovunque sparta

Le sue sostenze, et il regno affilitto ed egro:

Délia stirpe real reciso e manco

It's pretty cool, and it's full of anger.

"This France, so beautifully enhanced by nature and through art, one day we will see her pale, defeated and covered of mourning. She will not have a temple that is not violated, not a retreat untainted by fury. The crown will be A widow, her treasures scattered, the kingdom sad and ailing, Finally, the most beautiful offshoot of the royal tree will be cut down.
cut off and the stem struck down, »

It was in 593 that God inspired Tasso with such verses.
cruelly prophetic. The poet had seen it all; he had everything revealed, and he announced the calamities to France Futures. The Temple prison, the scaffold of January 21st, the unspeakable miseries of the young Louis XVII, the proscription of the dynasty, nothing is missing from this odyssey of misfortunes, not even the fate of Cassandra.
1 Gerusalemme conquistata. (Rome, 4593, in-4°.)

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 171

The Parliament of Paris was stirred; it condemned the prophecy.
of a decree of removal, as an infringement of rights of the crown and to the unwavering loyalty of the French.

Two hundred years ago, to the hour, the Par-crushed by the Revolution he had called for vows, his hatred and his inconsistencies, witnessed the fall of the throne. He saw it, he shared its mys-terrible pains, and, on the scaffold, he accused himself of his blind spots.

The nation had legally assassinated its King; it murders his Queen, and a voice, which will rise up to con-
to melt human pride, is being heard in Paris.
She shouts at every intersection the greatest joy of all the joys of Father Duchesne.

Voltaire had introduced these expressions into the familiar style.
low-level or pimp-like actions that one should not encounter counter that in bad places. He used it, the father Duchesne abuses it. In his journal, it is in these terms that he announces the execution of Marie Antoinette: "I saw The female veto's head fell into the bag. I would like...
f...., to express the satisfaction of the sans-culottes, when the arch-tigress crossed Paris in the car at Thirty-six doors. Her beautiful white horses, so well variegated, though well harnessed, did not lead her,

1 "I am accused of being Count of Ferney," wrote Voitaire on May 20
1760 (vol. LVIII, p. 413 of his Complete Works), that these Jean-f...----
If they come to Ferney, I will put them in the stocks. Don't go
I wouldn't presume to write to you: To the Count, as Luc (Fré-Deric II), but write: To Voltaire, Gentleman in Ordinary to the King, title which I value, a title that the king has preserved for me with the functions; for,
Good heavens! What people don't know is that the king is kind to me.
It's because I get along very well with Madame de Pompadour and Monsieur le Duke of Choiseul, and that I fear nothing and that I don't give a damn, etc.

478 BOOK ONE.

but two nightingales were harnessed opposite Master Samson, and they seemed so pleased with contribute to the liberation of the Republic, which they seem-they said they wanted to gallop to arrive earlier at fatal place. The g, moreover, was audacious and insoslow to the very end. However, his legs gave out.
what at the moment of making the switch to play by hand hot, no doubt fearing to find, after her death, a torture more terrible than the one she was about to face to suffer. His cursed head was finally separated from his neck.
crane, and the air resounded with cries of: Long live the Republicblique, f »

This extraordinary language, imposed on eighteenth-century France century by its reformers with blows from the guillotine, it is the Cynicism diluted in vocabulary. Licensed assassins
They disowned their souls, they dishonored their nature.
they trembled before one another, but they did to tremble before them. We didn't cry, we didn't write.
No, because the eye dried up with fear, and the pen too.
as if a scorpion slept under every stone.

The patriots, the demagogues, who called themselves
The sans-culottes had come with the mission of breaking the chains of fanaticism and slavery. In prisons, they condemned to death by starvation those who did not redeem not at a golden price the right of savage sovereignty that the Revolution was setting prices. The Revolution was creating a sky of

1 We read in the Table of Prisons of Toulouse under the reign of Robespierre, a decree of 4 Ventôse, Year II, thus conceived and signed: Groussac, Mayor; Michel, secretary: "The prisoners will be forced to pay in the cash box of citizen Estelle, treasurer of the administration, in the twenty-four hours following the publication of this, namely: the prisoners of the Visitation, the sum of thirty thousand pounds, and those of the Carmelites, that of five thousand five hundred pounds; what will be done with them?"

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 173

iron and a bronze earth, and, by one of these anomalies which she loved to lavish, she presented herself as leader and for the apostle Robespierre, the man who had said: "Kill
"This is a method worthy of tyrants."

This lawyer was so cold he could make the marble of the chambers cough. Pulcres. With every sentence that fell from his mouth, we were tempted to believe that he took pleasure in distilling vinegar to ice. He inaugurated the Reign of Terror. After having proclaimed at the foot of the scaffold on January 21st that Louis Capet would be the last of the Kings, he made people shout in all the churches in France that Pius VI was the last Popes.

The Republic, one and indivisible, believed it had its reasons we are for this. Through an operation in which she was seen near-Shedding all appearances of legality, she removed churches, gold, silver, iron, marble, in short, everything that she could carry away; the rest was destroyed. She left not on the ground the smallest vestige that could remind us of She has no idea of religion in her heart or mind. She ar-he stripped the woodwork and sculptures from the walls and the vaults; she transformed the bells into large coins; she made a clean slate of the priest, the altar, God and the Christian.

On the platform for speeches at the Convention, and as if to more directly associate the law with these savages impieties, a donkey, wearing a mitre and clothed wearing a cloak, he crossed the Assembly amidst laughter and blasphemies. There were, in every corner of France, an altar to the fatherland, as close as possible to the schattrains jointly by such means as the administration shall deem appropriate, and no-

"especially under penalty of total food deprivation."

1. Parliamentary History of the Revolution, speech by Robespierre, t. X, p. 66.

false. On these altars of the fatherland, more inexorable and more bloodied like those of Tauris, they presented the spoils of fanaticism, including some brothers and friends had not deigned to accommodate themselves. With songs mo-
As queurs, all these treasures of piety and re-knowledge. An honorable mention was a right ac-ropes to plunderers as an incentive bonus.

These destroyers, providentially struck by imbecilecivity, they had believed that by breaking the throne and debasing-
By the altar they were thereby tearing away from conscience of the peoples and the monarchical faith and the Christian faith.
Heirs to Philosophy, Jansenism and Gallicasecularism, they were fulfilling the last wish of all these powers of anarchy: they accomplished it without pity and without remorse.

But what was bound to happen, and what no one on earth
What no one would have dared to foresee happened. The churches were no more.
Rich, they were more sacred than ever. They were Naked, they were always full. There was no more pump, the prayer rose over the rubble.

In the intoxication of pleasures and innovations, France had been caught off guard. His nobility, which had not known To live, to learn to die. We had fallen asleep in disbelief in the palaces, Catholics awoke in the prisons and on the scaffold. Like Lauzun-Biron, Custine, d'Épré-Mesnil, Dillon, Mal Esherbes and Beauharnais, each he made a profession of faith out of his repentance, and of his sufferings
These women deserve a tribute to the God who forgives.
These gentlemen, these magistrates, these generals, thought that to die for the King was to die for oneself and for the family, which does not die any more than the kingdom. Only they were putting in a kind of last

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 175

coquetry to the point of dying as they had lived, a rose at the mouth. We would improvise a witty remark in front of the court.
revolutionary. We exchanged pleasantries at the foot of the scaffold; one had to climb it with good taste and fall with grace. He was still the Gallic gladiator, but the a gladiator armed with Parisian nonchalance.

Heavy guillotines were erected in all the cities;
Liberty and Reason carried around more portable ones deep in the countryside. They were massacring in Arras; they were killing by famine in Toulouse; they were slaughtering people in Marseille; they drowned in Nantes; burned in Reims; made of Lyon the Commune freed by all the horrors of a siege;

They were tried in Angers; they were shot in Toulon, which was Absolutely the same thing. Everywhere death was welcomed as an expiation or as a blessing. In mar-
In a song of torture, the men sang the Te Deumi;
The women modulated the Salve, Reaina in chorus.

When this immense hecatomb of nobles, of the people and of the priests was consumed, when the blood had flowed like water, and the number of victims was like the sand of the sea, the Revolution, which had left atheism taking the bit between his teeth, understood that it was necessary to regulate-to raise anarchy. Then the good Lord, changed into a Su- Being first, received a certificate of existence, pending his certificate of civic virtue. Then, since we only needed of a cult, the most natural, the most philosophical possible-
It was possible, so everyone was granted the right to make their own.
provided, of course, that the Catholic religion, apostolic, Roman, would be forever excluded from choice.

To glorify the persecuting Caesars, their courtiers
Imperial authorities kept announcing the extinction of Christ*

176 BOOK ONE.

Christianism and to have medals struck which were to to immortalize this great act of justice. On these medals we still read: Nomine Christianorum deleta. The Revolution tion had formed the same wish as the Caesars; only her medals were engraved on the ashes and on ruins. The Caesars and the Empire are gone! We search-Let's now consider whether the Revolution has a harder life than them.

But what we discover without difficulty, and not without pain-
The terrifying thing is that the history of the Caesars, even if etched in stone, Tacitus and Suetonius, is out of step. In order to accumulate on the Roman world this collection of stupid pride, of senseless cruelties and incredible follies beginning to Tiberius, to end up under Heliogabalus, required the power to... more despotic, exercised for two centuries by a succession of monsters. In a single year, a few sophists, opening a boutique of emancipation in the Paris market,
lawyers ignored for their talent and priests too Known for their vices, they surpassed them in excesses.
of bloody imagination all the imperial madnesses.
Through them, the collective crime reached such proportions, that in the eyes of certain complicit admiral-tive, it rose to the sublime heights of patriotism. The adulation was never pushed so far with regard to the Neros

and of Domitian, once God's justice had them left to be killed by a vulgar hand.

There is nothing better than what France is doing.
Well, nothing could be worse than what she's doing wrong. It seems that this nation, privileged above all others, must eternally-
She is destined to rush headlong into extremes.
all the glories; the Revolutionaries condemn her to
She bears all the blame. She takes all the initiative, she suffers.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 477

all the reactions. Of all the men summoned by the Whether by right or by chance, she governs it, she makes gods or scoundrels, depending on her whims of the moment. She
It is pleasing to both humiliations and apotheoses. Between the Capi-sheet metal and the Gemonian Games, there is never any interval for his inconsistencies.

In unspeakable astonishment, Europe had contemp-pled indulging without restraint in immeasurable Saturnalia.
Europe had seen priests who swore allegiance to the law, like the abbot Grégoire, to come and declare from the tribune "that all the Dynasties are voracious races, living only for human flesh, and that the history of the Kings is the martyr-
"Lodge of Nations." She had learned that, after the war,
In France, religion and the monarchy were, in
At a more or less recent time, the war established in principle against all religious and political authority, and Europe had folded its arms, without even wanting to de-
to ask where this torrent would stop.

A formidable insurrection against the scaffold had
The Vendée uprising broke out in the western provinces.
was standing. Without weapons, without ammunition, without leaders, Without tactics, she advanced into battle, that is to say, into martyrdom, with a sublime courage that will never be surpassed, surpassed; for, as a demagogic writer said:
"There is one point in France where royalism was heroic, the Vendée," and the Vendée was left to its own devices!
His soldiers, like the Maccabees, were still fighting more by their prayers than by their weapons: Per orationes congressi surit; and before these gigantic efforts which ho-would uphold the monarchical principle, the monarchs would tu-

1 Monitor, session of September 21, 1792, p. 1125 and 1130.

2 History of the French Revolution, by Michelet, vol. V.

rent. Believing themselves, as if perpetually struck by the lightning, they did not understand that, during and on— After such a harvest of attacks, it would be necessary to give to Republican France, in expiation of its inner tragedies, glory outside, but glory believing that liberty is carried in the folds of the tricolor flag lore. Before being defeated by arms, Europe mo— Narcissique was terrified by the eyes. Her steps, heavy through sleep, were slow and uncertain. She was sinking. of despair at the sight of this demagoguery to which all Crimes and all manner of happiness came as desired. Demagoguery constantly spawned monsters, and he did not never offered himself a royal Hercules or a monarchical Theseus— chic to purge the earth of it. Europe resembled these patricians of old Rome who, through heroism unprecedented in their baseness, presenting their four members to slaves of the Caesars, had the resignation to suicide or binds death in the hot bath, without having the courage to Life in peril. We were silent in the face of annihilation; a The old man alone displayed the fearlessness of all.

Like Louis XIV, instructing his son in the art of re— gner and formulating for him the true maxims of government— nement in this masterful style which retains its name, Pius VI was also able to say what the great King wrote on the power a people attributes to itself: "The more you give it grant, so says Louis XIV*, the more he claims; The more you flatter him, the more he despises you; and what he is once in possession is held by so many arms, that It cannot be torn down without extreme violence.

These wise words of advice, given by the grandfather and reproduced in another form by the Sovereign Pontiff, had

1 Works of Louis XIV, vol. II, p. 27.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 179

They were listened to respectfully, but could not be followed. Pius VI then had no choice but to publicly glorify the martyrdom, by denouncing the assassins. This sublime audacity, of which the The Pope appears animated, there is a protest from the Prince and an act of the Pontiff.

"Louis XVI," he said in this address, "the most magnificent perhaps, and certainly the most saintly audacious— Louis XVI, greedy of the Roman Bullary, was condemned to The death penalty, and the sentence was carried out. What

What men have therefore rendered such a judgment?
Had these maneuvers prepared him? The National Convention-National, which had established itself as its judge, did it have the right to do so? No or This Assembly, after having abolished the monarchy, the best of all governments, had transported public authority in the hands of the people, incapable to listen to reason and not follow any plan of action, without discernment to appreciate things, settling the most of his decisions, not on the truth, but on his warnings, fickle, easily deceived and easily fooled to incite evil; ungrateful, presumptuous, cruel, and who He makes a game of watching human blood flow, of feasting on it of the torture and agony of his dying victims, as in antiquity he rushed to bloody spectacles of the amphitheater.

Then, amidst her sorrows, addressing this France, which he loved so much, the Pontiff exclaims: "O France!
France, which our predecessors proclaimed the mirror of the entire Christian world and the unwavering pillar of faith, you who walked, not in the wake, but at the head of others nations, in the fervor of Christian piety, and the su-mission to the authority of the Apostolic See, how much to-Haven't you strayed from us today? What an attitude...

12.

480 BOOK ONE.

This site blinds you to the true religion, and has pushed you to outbursts of fury that place you at the forefront among the most cruel persecutors? And yet could you, Whenever you want to, ignore that this religion is the firmest support for empires, because it is she who re-bonuses and abuses of power by those who govern,
And what about the license in those who obey? Also, that's why...
those who oppose the rights of royal authority aspire to overthrow it, to the annihilation of the re-Catholic religion.

"Once again, O France! You to whom, you said, he-
A Catholic sovereign was needed, because in this way the will-
They were the fundamental laws of the kingdom, you had it, that Catholic monarch, and by the mere fact that he was Catholic-
"You murdered him!"

The man, the Christian, the prince, each in turn prayed and wept. The Pontiff finally dried his tears; he stood up in his intrepid majesty, then, seized by a sudden and Prophetic inspiration: "A day of triumph for Louis!"
he continued; for we have confidence that the Lord,

Where did he get this courage that defied persecution and makes it superior to suffering, called it into her bosom, changing for him an earthly crown, alas! if frail, and lilies soon withered, against another crown imperishable, woven from those immortal lilies that adorn the "Front of the blessed."

This is the sublime challenge that an almost eighty-year-old man... genaire, having no support left but a scepter of reed, door, in the midst of the Terror, to the unleashed Revolution-born. Pie YI found in her heart and on her lips words that are a hope, cries of the soul that reconcile with humanity. While the Pope sacrifices himself-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 181

1 finished • "

France was committed to justice and truth, but what was it doing?

What was Paris saying?

On January 21, 1793, the Republic erected its guillotine. tine on the Place Louis XV. At once accusatory, Judge and executioner, she awaits her royal victim there. For On this day of grim expiation, the people of Paris... raised. The Revolution had already made him witness more than one catastrophe. On October 6, on June 20, on August 10, on On September 2nd, she put his hands in the blood. the initial enthusiasm following the storming of the Bastille, the The people have moved on to the deceptive joys of federation. After denying his God and the worship of his fathers, he place opposite the scaffold.

This people, until then the most witty courtiers of kings his masters, borrows from the Revolution everything that will to his malcontentious whims, to his innate taste for barricades, to his eternal need for opposition and his glories from the Marquis de Tuffière shop. The nobles; the Parisian bourgeois received applause for the proscription which leaves him in first place. Someone stripped the clergy of their possessions; efforts were made to ruin them to undermine public opinion through sarcasms of impiety or by apostasy made into law. The Bourgeois of Paris, who likes to reason even with God, approved all with the eye and the hand.

At the dawn of the Revolution, he showed himself to be enthusiastic like poets, greedy like a usurer, credulous or Fearful like children. He joined this large a harvest of disorder and paradox that Philosophy and Jansenism gave rise to it. He took pleasure in bending the majesty of law under the whims of brute force.

In these delirious flights of fancy, the people of Paris, panting

482 BOOK ONE.

of equality, became intoxicated by the pains of an imagined servitude naire. The disordered precepts of all his Jamblithose, affirming only doubt, were translated into catechisms chism, that is to say in a philanthropic novel.

He had been deceived. By a marvel of stupid credulity-
In bed, he took pleasure in being deceived and in knowing it; but, the
On January 21st, he was afraid of his own work. This fear, which It was a holy remorse, stopped like a last A kind thought for the family home. There, dismayed and speechless before his weeping wife and children,
The bourgeois of Paris felt remorse on their foreheads, tears...
my, real tears in my eyes, a cry of des-hope or indignation in the heart. Arranged on the bou-Leviard, and having become a national guardsman again, he lends himself, pale and resigned to everything the Revolution demanded of him, he did of order in honor of crime; he bears arms to villainy escaping power by force.

France, which, through all its forms of courage, committed so many cowardly acts, had allowed himself to be dethroned, imprisoned at the Temple, to judge and execute the most honest man of Kingdom, the monarch taking gentle pride in to anticipate all improvements. In the one hundred thousand citizen soldiers, intelligent bayonets that Paris threw itself onto the pavement, not one in-courageous intelligence to demand accountability from the Gains of the Convention of Abel's blood that they were shedding.

In this multitude that had been pressing in from the prison
From the Temple to the nameless square, there was not a conviction to protest. The attack had something of legality. Those who, throughout the history of France, fu-
They always remained hostile to the law, they respected it when she was monstrous. The Parisian, disguised as

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 483

The soldier believed himself free from all remorse. Although in revolution it is often more difficult to know its
The Parisian knew this duty, and he
He recoiled from his accomplishment. He accepted the disgrace.
which the executioners awarded him as a civic honor. Then,
From this fateful hour, the capital of the Kingdom

was marked in the decrees of Providence as the city where, according to the words of an elder, disorder and whirlwind would forever expel all foresight conservative. The Terror quelled popular outrage. areas, and, in those moments, it is impossible to know to what degree of degradation does a people allow to descend his heart. Nevertheless, he always proves to be very patient for the torment of others.

Pius VI had better vision; Pius VII had a more sound understanding. appreciated the situation that the Kings of Europe and that the The French themselves. The sovereigns wondered, as in the 29th chapter of Deuteronomy: "Why the The Lord treated this country in this way, which is why he did "To unleash his fury with such violence?"

And Pius VI replied to them: "Because they abandoned the covenant that the Lord had made with their fathers, when he brought them out of Egypt, and they served and worshiped foreign gods who were unknown to them, and to the worship for which they were not intended.

The Kings of Europe had been caught off guard by the Revolution like children by the rising tide. They initially denied the danger, then they were seen. smiling at the embarrassments that fell to their good brother of France. Finally, caught off guard, some tried to By making a pact with her, the others strengthened themselves in their st- A precision to be afraid of them at their leisure. Since

ISI BOOK ONE.

For a long time, the Kings of Europe no longer had any contact with each other. of common link, more center of unity and action, more of an omnipotent moderator, who calmed anger, dissip- He paid off distrust, settled disputes, and acted as guarantor. of good faith as well as of everyone's word.

Violently separated from the Church by Protestantism, or brought about, through the culpable maneuvers of their mid- nisters, fearing the influence of the Papacy, the princes They had isolated themselves on their thrones. They only understood each other to allow evil to be organized around them, and to make of force against the Roman Siege. By a series of circ- constants that history has never bothered to to study or that it sought to obscure, the Chair of Pierre had gradually become unaccustomed to his legitimate influence. time. This influence that it exerted in the Middle Ages turned- constantly arises for the benefit of the people, including the Popes Interpreters and tutors were formed. They were always able to stipulate, pray or command last for him. Each pontiff then had the right to say and to do what Gregory II wrote to Emperor Leo. }nQySL' entire West, he sent him with a holy freedom, has its eyes turned towards our humility... It tells us look at how the referee and moderator of the tranquil-public order... If you dared to do that, Fessai, you would... would find us ready to carry you right where you are for to avenge the insults of your subjects in the East.

This power, which was a hindrance to the monarchs and a benefit to the people, had most often been exercised by the Pontificate with admirable moderation. His authority was a counterweight and a protection, to some extent- It is also a stimulant. The army of the double prestige of the virtue and spiritual power, it drew the soverains and nations under a common flag, and the Crusades and the Battle of Lepanto, and the Great Leagues They formed at his voice. In the name of the Pope, the Legates They roamed Europe, imposing war or peace. they discussed with the princes, they negotiated with the republicans religious, they served as a link in all the differences surrenders. Feared or respected mediators, they smoothed things over. the obstacles, and everything was done for everyone to consecrate everyone's rights. The entire universe rested safely under science, wisdom, justice, and courage Christian Rome.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 485

Through the thousand twists and turns of history, the Siege the apostolic church had never lacked men to replace to fulfill this great role of universal fatherhood. The famine strong characters and eminent minds is never felt around the Chair of Peter. The E- the church, constantly renewing itself and choosing its pontiffs, his cardinals and prelates at the highest and lowest at the bottom of the social ladder, always has at his disposal extensive capabilities that can meet all needs.

But when Lutheranism and Calvinism had divided Europe and changed its way of being, the Church com-realized that she would gradually have to fade from the political movement. litigious. It was no longer a question of being a Guelph or a Ghibelline, and to discuss with the House of Swabia the prerogatives- issues of the Priesthood or on the ambitions of the Empire. All these rivalries from another age crumbled before a a more pressing need. Rome wanted to preserve the Ca-Catholicism in a dangerous crisis. Rome resigned itself to let kings and peoples debate among themselves the questions purely temporal tions.

His calculated, but deliberate, abstention had the appearances of moral decline. By renouncing the exercise of an authority that fostered power and obedience In sance, the Popes had performed a sacrifice. No one They paid no attention to them. They spoke only in the name of of the power of the Keys; they no longer concerned themselves with anything but matters naturally subject to their examination. This was this moment chosen to accuse the Church of encroaching in the temporal domain. They shut themselves away in the matters of conscience; they kept themselves apart from everything political debate. We never wanted to convince ourselves that This abstention was serious; so they imagined doing fantasy paintings of their past preponderance. The desire was that the kings no longer have any ties with each other. nor agreed: they were taught to distrust the Pope and to be to distance oneself from the Church.

186 BOOK ONE.

We went further. The spirit of the age, which was in marching and progressing like all the minds of the century forced the kings of the earth and their governments to to humiliate ecclesiastical power and keep it under control, while it will always be wise policy to leave believe that religion is independent. The authority of princes, legislators, and magistrates is only possible, and perhaps sustainable, when these The same peoples have the right to look at Religion as the source and first of all authorities. This thought, innate in the hearts of the multitudes, is for They offer consolation and hope. By the same token, she becomes a support for thrones, for there is only what is powerful which gives strength or which adds to it.

Politics, therefore, brought down the thrones it had claimed. to grant their wish. By frightening them with a pontiff like Gré- Gore VII, or like Julius II, she gave birth to the princes

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 487

the idea of governing themselves, and especially for themselves. This thought of selfishness should have been forced upon them. tale: they didn't even notice when the danger approached. They were deprived of that constant vigilance active which, in times of peril, united them under the banner of the Church, and pointed out to them the enemy com- They were the ones who had to be struck down with words or with the sword. remained disunited, uncertain, forming only wishes sterile, or only reluctantly lending themselves to impotence healthy combinations. Homogeneity no longer existed in the council of monarchs, she went over to the revolutionary camp revolutionary. The monarchs had disdained or weakened the the only influence that could subdue the democratic idea; None of them felt the need to resort to Rome, as at the source of every principle.

For reasons of wisdom that elude the common people, Rome seemed to have lost interest in all the issues political. We had seemed to fear his activity and suspect her dominance; she restricted it to matters of Faith. Especially since Benedict XIV, she had seen herself unjustly attacked, the more she had sought to show herself-very conciliatory and reserved.

Instead of lulling philosophical doubts to sleep, this Their delaying tactics had excited them. To hear them tell it The Revolution, Rome was nothing more than a ghost, but this the phantom could still exert an influence on the multitudes prodigious rise. It was tacitly agreed in the council of Kings that the progress of the century and of civilization- tion opposed any intervention by the Pont- supreme certificate. However heretical England might be, it Pitt did not share this error. He had reflected on the moral and political consequences of the revolutionary event.

188 BOOK ONE.

He made himself its personal enemy; he sought the means to unite Europe against the preachers of demagoguery. His tireless perseverance was not concealed. obstacles of all kinds, including such an alliance surrounded; but he thought he had overcome more than one difficulty by proposing to the common Father to place himself at the head of this holy league.

Pius VI outraged and threatened at the podium of all the clubs and in all the theaters of France, had deemed it necessary to take some precautions in preparation for the invasion anti-Christian. Rather, to safeguard the borders of the Roman state, which was established to house the Holy Apostolic See, he had ordered military measures and a concentration- assembly of troops around Rome. He had with him Cardinal Maury, a vigorous man, who asked nothing there is no better way than to continue the crusade by force of arms. His eloquence had made its mark in the National Assembly.

The cardinals in the Pope's inner circle, Albani, Zelada, Antonelli, Gerdil, Busca, old Bernis and the young pre-Latin, Hercules Gonsalvi, were, by their character or by their backgrounds, all willing to support a coalition monarchical. Pitt had been made aware of these dispositions. He knew the vicar's personal courage of Jesus Christ. He knew that extreme evils require to oppose even more extreme remedies; he therefore believed that the kingdom of God could still be of this world.

The kings hesitated or trembled. Even those who had weapons in hand, they fought only for the purpose to reach a transaction, the least dishonorable possible-possible, but, above all, the most profitable to their interests of the moment.

Amidst all these royal collapses, Pitt enters-

•

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 489

sees that the only way to defeat the revolutionary idea,
It is to oppose it with the religious idea. The ambassadors English in foreign courts are ordered to approve to exalt, to cite as a model the attitude and vigor of the Pope. These diplomats are following their instructions-tions. Soon the praise of the Holy See and the urgency of re-to know the Pope as supreme head and ostensible link of the league against the Revolution are found in the mouth of all British ministers.

An informal negotiation opened in London between the the cabinet of Saint James and the émigré prelates, at the head among whom was Arthur Dillon, Archbishop of Nargood. William Pitt wanted to put the big image of the
The Papacy faced the Revolution; it hoped to take advantage of it.
for his later views. A correspondence without ca-
An official statement was made on this matter between the cardinal de Montmorency-Laval and Arthur Dillon, then François de Conzié, bishop of Arras, wrote, in May 1794, to Cardinal de Bernis.

"Since my last communications from Germany,
he commands the old ambassador of Louis XV and of Louis XVI near the Holy See, I received, upon my arrival Here is a note from Cardinal Zelada, Secretary of State of His Holiness, and I have spoken at length with Mr. Pitt about his content. The minister expressed to me a sincere and pro-expresses admiration for the vigor displayed by the court of Rome; but he told me very frankly that, without wanting making a broad monarchical coalition a partisan affair religiously observant, he believed more than ever in intervention
The Pope's position is essential in the present circumstances.

With his prodigious common sense, Mr. Pitt fits in very well in the reasons that the Holy Father develops; but he de-

190 BOOK ONE.

would like the Roman Curia to apply to the entire world the measures it has taken with a view to a republican invasion blicaine on the Papal States. Mr. Pitt thinks that he It is impossible to oppose the revolutionary torrent than by throwing the whole of armed Europe against him as a bulwark. His His ideas about this coalition are these. He told me: I don't He is not asking the Pope to personally involve himself in the... leading a political crusade or preaching it as Urban II. Those times are past; and, if I do not regret them not as an Anglican, I can well, in the situation actuelle, not having the same feeling as a man and as a British minister, responsible for to ensure the preservation of a shaken Europe. The coalition- the actions we are working on, in the name of order social, are fought and thwarted by vested interests individuals. In addition to one occasion, I have already seen the courses of the continent to back down in the face of differing opinions and of worship that separates us; I think that a link com- The world should unite us all. Only the Pope can be This center. It has Italy, Spain, Austria, and part of it. of Germany at hand. His authority, momentary- weakened by regrettable causes, can very easily to regain lost prestige, especially when the Prussia and Russia, in concert with England, there- will lay hands.* The uprising in the Vendée, which is more of a religious war than a political war. indicates that in France one could still, in several provinces, to find such devotion. I therefore believe that the Roman Curia could and should play a beautiful role amidst the upheavals.

"Based on the observation I took the liberty of making to him of the age of the Sovereign Pontiff and his way of judging the events, Mr. Pitt added that he understood and approved- had this reservation; that it had been wrong to hold the Papacy in isolation, that she was a force with which he It was always necessary to take into account, and that the governments of- they would reproach themselves for this ingratitude; but, he continued, In the face of common danger, there is no longer time to let ourselves to engage in pointless recriminations. By the agents of the gou- government abroad and by those I sent to Rome, I know the Pope's good intentions and those of the Sacred College. Since the beginning of the troubles

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 491

 From France, the Pope never had a moment of hesitation.
 He spoke, he acted with unwavering firmness Praise. Catholicism is destroyed in France. Oh, play on all the theaters, The Pope's Marriage, and all the mothe most odious queries. At the same time, we proposing, in the middle of the Convention, the threat of my assassination.¹ My Life is short, and England is not lacking in it.
 men to replace me; but to these men, attack-people like me who adhere to the conservative principles of societies Human beings, we lack a powerful lever.
 too divided by personal interests or by views politically, Rome alone can make its voice heard.
 biased and free from any external concerns.
 Rome should therefore speak out to the extent of its responsibilities.
 much more than his affections, which no one doubts.
 A papal bull, presented to Catholic courts by legates to Lalere, announcing the holy war, the War against anarchy would produce a great and beneficial effect.
 It would arm sovereigns and nations; it would found

1. In the session of the Convention on August 7, 1793, Citizen Garnier (de Saintes) proposed to decree that Pitt was an enemy of humankind, and that everyone had the right to murder him. – N

192 BOOK ONE. m

an indissoluble alliance, the only way to resist the saue vague enthusiasm for demagoguery. I had long conferences with some of your émigré bishops^
 There are several still in their mature stages and which... would be quite ready to support our views, if the Pope were to associated. Why wouldn't we use them?

"I replied that, on an order from His Holiness, the
 The French clergy were ready to make any sacrifice;
 but, I ventured to add, assuming that the
 The Court of Rome deems it appropriate to join a coalition Based on this, I believe we should not entrust to émigré bishops held the high offices of legate or nuncio apostolic. One would see in this choice a frai& framework çaise; and above all, Rome should be left with its iiiib tiative. – That's exactly how I understand it, repli^iile minister, and if the Pope decided to send legates
 At Catholic schools, I know my country well enough to to respond in advance that they would not be received with more respect is shown in Vienna or Madrid as much as in London itself.
 Religious differences fade away in an immense common peril. If the Pope agrees to publish the bull of coalition, an English fleet will cruise along the coasts from Italy to protect the Roman states, and this fleet will also carry an extraordinary ambassador^ of His Majesty near the Holy See to honor the head visible from this indispensable alliance.

"That, in short, is the account of my interview with him."
Mr. Pitt. Your Eminence will see that he does not back down from no obstacle, and he knows very well how to overcome them. The
The proposal that I am able to transmit has nothing – officially, it's the result of a particular conviction if one might want; but for those who know Mr. Pitt and his tenacity, he

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 193

there is no doubt about Parliament's support for a sem-blatant project. Parliament is under the influence of the minister-tre, and, like the minister, he professes the deepest Horror for all the crimes with which France is being defiled.
I saw Lord Moira, Mr. Windham, Mr. Burke, the most infatigable and the most eloquent opponent of the revolution.
They all believe with us that such an august manifestation could have incalculable consequences. But at Rome, where there is counsel, light, and guidance, will be-
Do we share the same opinion? Sir and HRH the Count of Artois, to whom I had the honor of submitting this project, the ap-fully prove it by letters. The Venerable Monsignor Asseline, whom I consulted during my brief travels, in desires fulfillment, but without hoping for it, he tells me-
He does not believe that the time has come.

"Knowing only by hearsay the character of the per-sonnages and being in regular correspondence only with Monsignor Consalvi and Monsignor Galeffi, precious witnesses
I dare not, given the royal affection of Madame Adélaïde, nor to express an opinion, or even to formulate a wish. Business Relations with Rome are always very delicate, and, in my position
the exile's condition and especially in that which the august one makes me
I would not want to lose the trust of the Count of Artois.
that beyond the mountains one could think that a French bishopçais sought to play politics at the expense of Holy See. Our policy is to suffer after to have struggled; Rome's role is to show us the way, to encourage us along the way, and to bless us at
The arrival. These reservations made, ex intimo corde, I must do Your Eminence should note that Mr. Pitt's proposal
It seems to me to contain many advantages and very few of disadvantages. The Roman Curia is undoubtedly aware of this.

not the fate the Convention intended for him; one day or
The other, the Vatican, will fall prey to our revolutionaries.
And what will become of the Pope? I care little about that.
papacy, knowing full well that it will survive; but the Holy Father touches on old age; the moral pains that afflict it blent can have a deplorable influence on his health.
The Holy City occupied or taken by storm, and the Pope dead.
Where will the conclave be located, where will it meet? All these questions that I am trying to resolve and which, in Rome, must-
The wind often presents itself to minds, making me incline for Mr. Pitt's plan. England, in this circumstance-stance, sees only the temporal interests of Europe, and his own, especially compromised; but today these interests are confused with other, more sacred ones. Wouldn't it be
Is it wise to pay somewhat close attention to it?
Mr. Pitt, while discussing the possibilities with other prelates of his proposal, put forward the idea that in the event of an invasion planned from the heritage of Saint Peter, the Pope and the Sacred Colleges could safely retreat to English ships, which would transport them to Sicily, to Madeira or the Balearic Islands; the chosen retirement location would be protected from a surprise attack by the fleets of brtannic. England has shown itself and continues to show itself every day, towards the French clergy, animated by such a holy and such generous delicacy, that I would think I was doing an insult to humanity, suspecting this of an ulterior motive the people around us, we, the outlawed bishops for our faith, of all kinds of pious homage and care paternal.

"I don't dare to insist further on all these points"
Rome is a better judge than I. I pass on to Your Eminence, the main details of my interview

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 495

with Mr. Pitt, and I beg you to submit them to the Holy-Father, in order to fulfill the mission I am fortunate to have...
"They were disappointed to have been put in charge."

This communication, which was not lacking in insight...
"Neither efficacy nor foresight," Cardinal de Bernis replied.
June 10, 1794:

<(The Most Holy Father, in the last audience which he deigned to grant me, he wanted to read aloud himself voice and before the Cardinal Secretary of State your letter last. In the midst of all the torments that overwhelm her,

His Holiness was deeply moved and showed himself to be very-grateful for the sentiments Your Majesty expresses was the interpreter. The Pope wishes you to bear witness to this.

He expressed his sincerest gratitude to Mr. Pitt.
with such eloquence of heart and language that I
I can only very faintly convey to you the impression that I felt it. The Most Holy Father appreciates it with a High wisdom, he understands all the dangers that surround him; he...
He knows them, he's been anticipating them for a long time. His unwavering Constance will know how to brave them; he has the martyrdom of duty to to endure: he prepares himself for it through prayer. Mr. Pitt has kindness to offer him, if necessary, guaranteed asylum under the protection of the British flag. His Holiness declares that she would happily accept this honorable asylum, and that the Sacred College would follow him there with full confidence.
But the Pope believes he cannot and should not allow the tomb-beautiful of the holy Apostles whom forced and constrained; his reso-
The irrevocable solution is to wait, at the foot of his crucifix, the enemy coming in the name of the Revolution.

"The papal government has taken, to the extent of his resources, the military precautions which were suggested to safeguard his beloved subjects; but 13.

It falls outside his policy, nor his wishes.
fomenting wars that are more or less just. More than per-
His Holiness deplores the unspeakable excesses of the what revolutionary France indulges in; but these excesses,
It is not up to the sovereign Pontiff, who is always a father,
that it is their duty to punish them with temporal weapons;
The Holy See may have the will, but it no longer has the power* While admiring Mr. Pitt's active energy,
The Pope resigns himself to the spectacle of evil, and waits to be part of it.
the victim^98fjei3 im 7^q{ïie«ïJ9«j $& j#q Up tiBjioqmi iBİSéih^ coalififRP»i^Rfc^0CCUpe Ie gouvernement britan-
The government
The pontifical court is quite willing to adhere to it and to lend it to him, spn competition: for him, it is both a right and an obligation; but For the moment, His Holiness does not wish to go any further before. The Papacy was too often criticized for its interference in the quarrels of kings and peoples so that the Holy-
The seat may still provide material for unacknowledged blame.
stunned or guilty of reprisals. The Pope cannot no longer having to order or wage war, even just war.
He preaches; all that remains for him is to suffer the consequences.
•iiioPjBfiBt'y a Not enough unity, not enough homogeneity among sovereigns, and especially in their councils, for hoping that the papal intervention would be effective desired. Mr. Pitt, who is negotiating with all these uncertainties royal or ministerial, must understand, better than

no one, the sense of dignity of which the Holy Father is animated.

To place the Pope at the head of a coalition, made up of Catholic or non-Catholic kings, and to do to render homage by these kings to the power of the Keys that they had so long disputed or refused him, was a project of uriëTfitffe^titëîlligence. The Papacy alone, in fact, could have triumphed over the revolutionary idea. For this to happen, it would not have been necessary to distort his character for a long time or diminish its power over the masses. The project designed His arrival in London was therefore too late. His accomplishment was impossible; for if, at a given hour, it is always— It's easy to shake a people out of their torpor, but it's not The lethargy of princes will never be like this. We had circ— conscripted the papal initiative. To revive it, he it was important that she could be tempered again in the crucible of the tribes— lations, and that terrible events would come to castrate ^pride of the enemies of the Church. That was the thought of fKë VI, he only concerned himself with realizing it in an intimate setting union with the Sacred College at the iùî Tff0(i >' luoonoo

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 497

"ul(Lél old Pope does not hide that the days of His reign is numbered. After having had so many words encouragement and perseverance to be given to the Epi— Scopat and the French clergy, after having supported them in this four-year struggle, crowned by martyrdom or Despite his exile, Pius VI did not believe his task was yet finished. With a voice made more brilliant by the approach of dangers, he extolled those who die confessing their faith; he wants to watch over, like an attentive mother, the be— care for all the outcasts. Bishops, priests, nobles and people, wandering across Europe without bread and without clothing The revenues from Saint Peter's estate are greatly weakened. Pius VI imposes upon himself every personal sacrifice. the most rigorous to provide for so many glorious miseries.

He offered royal hospitality to Mesdames Adélaïde and Victoire, aunts of King Louis XVI. To all the exiles that piety or the chance of events leads to the States

198 BOOK ONE.

To the Church, the Pontiff opens his arms and his heart; he He shares, he gives, he lavishes.

His inexhaustible charity reminds the earth, astonished by so many wonderful results, that watchful eye, which speaks of the prophet Daniel, and whose eyelids did not grow heavy Never. It seems like the miracle of multiplication Bread has become the most common thing in Rome, which was never a stepmother to anyone. Pius VI consoled, he has rescued in his states; it is necessary that his consolations and his Relief extends wherever misfortune occurs. and devotion. His hand, already trembling, never ceases to write. He urges, he implores the princes and the bishops. Italy, Spain, and Germany to form a coalition in holy generosity. He passes his soul into the soul of all the faithful, and, renewing the era of the primitive Church, he wants there to be only one in Christendom one heart and one mind.

At the sight of this benevolent solicitude, imploring of each and every one of the asylums to shelter the outcasts, monetary donations to prevent them from dying of Hunger, the universal Church applauds by imitating her. Catherine II of Russia made available to the émigrés well at beyond what the Pontiff's prayers seem to ask. Heretical England opens a credit to the French clergy of hospitality, which she will continue even through the disasters. Since the day she separated from unity, England has only had relations with the Holy See hostile. Pius IX has spoken; England lavishes its treasures to honor a religious consistency that she does not have imitated.

Revolutionary France had little faith in a similar demonstration. Pius VI provoked it, Pius VI had to

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 199

to suffer the glorious punishment. Rome was the point of target of all demagogic or impious ambitions. Displaying the flag of the insurrection on the Capitol building hand and place the red cap on the head of Saint Peter the bronze statue seated in the middle of the basilica was the vow of All clubs, the dream of all fools.

Only war could establish the religion of nothingness. in the capital of the Catholic world. They were fighting then. on the Rhine and the Pyrenees. The Vendée military ab-single-handedly absorbed and devoured the main forces of the Republic. The Committee of Public Safety, which could well to invent in the Moniteur fourteen fabulous armies, not the It didn't go up as quickly as the scaffold. He slaughtered- He vilified his enemies and his friends; he slaughtered himself or he would banish himself, always to the applause of the people'; but war, to liberate nationalities oppressed or to annihilate kings and priests, was not neither in his intentions nor in his calculations.

1 Bertrand Barère, the Anacreon of the guillotine, who so fiercely beat my-naie on the Place de la Révolution, was the eulogist of all the crimes. He excused them, he admired them everywhere. Nevertheless, Barère was in turn outlawed, and he heard the people, once so hungry for his carma-oratorical magnolias, howling his death with mocking songs. That day, Barère was just by chance; he cursed the people who had raised him, and in his Memoirs, told by two revolutionaries [Memoirs of Barère, published by Messrs. Hippolyte Carnot and David d'Angers, vol. III, p. 28, Paris, .4843), he exclaimed: "With the French people, one must only slander the useful men, only to lose them forever. These Frenchmen, from Paris on-everything is of such a nature, such carelessness, such selfishness, that with pamphlets and newspapers they would lose themselves, and proscribe in six months all the great men of Plutarch, if nature were barbaric enough and generous enough to give it to them as a gift.

Facing the scaffold of January 21st, and all the crimes ordered or legitimized by him Barère, this man presenting you as an unrecognized Aristide and in second-hand Scipio, Barère invoking Plutarch, that's the whole thing
Morality and the style of the Revolution 1

The Revolution may have tried to assemble an army without... discipline and lack of organization: this army must necessarily-to appoint a leader and a master. After having decreed Victory or death, we must finish, like the old Sar-Mates, by worshipping a sword. This idea, unbearable. to the demagogues, inspired in them fears that they would not con- They were proud of the guillotine. The Republic killed its generals. so as not to be suffocated in their embraces. Lau&un-Biron, Beauharnais, Custine, Dillon, Luckneté^ old gentlemen; Bouchard, Beysser, Westermann, and so many other children of the people were in turn his^ She was crippled by her premonitions or her terrors. She had fear of a sword; she suspected she would perish by the saber. It was therefore only against his will that*ëHê undertook the conquest and plunder of the Etenafe nations managers, whose liberation she proclaimed. JîoJfjGfhfiq

It was not given to the Convention and its terrible Committee of Public Safety to begin the Papal States. Following the first victories in Italy of the genei&l BonapaHie is ordered to seize the patrk monk of Saint Peter. The general evaded this order and he proposes an armistice to the Pope. This armistice left the the papal tomb standing, but it inaugurates the spoliation of Rome and its museums. The Church and the State are struck by a enormous wartime contribution. This contribution, inter- fully paid, this was not enough for the Directory, which, having entered two orgies, indulges in the joyful pastime of installing to be in all the churches of Paris the worship of the theoeb eoiôioujJ xuob /libi^0 te iffofioînA bîfn< ;q

1 By article 8 of this treaty of 5 Messidor year IV, the Pope must deliver to The French Republic, one hundred paintings, busts, vases or sails, your choice
"1^o the sullied Republic, which notably demands the bronze bust of Junius Brtilus-, and relinquishes in the marble of Mareu* BruU;?.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 20t

philanthropy, one of whose members, Révellière-Le-Paux is the inventor. He needs the Pontiff's dishonor.
supreme and the debasement of the Apostolic See. It is demanded therefore, Pius VI annulled and retracted all his Briefs re-related to the Constitution of the Clergy. >i !<yiobfî ib<

This Constitution lasted only for a speech; it did not is no longer part of the laws of the Republic. Virtual-Although abolished, it only served as a hyphen for to move towards legal atheism. The Directory is not concerned for so little; he has a passion for ridicule and love fanatical about egalitarian rapprochements. Also, by decree dated 8 Ventôse, Year IV, he orders en bloc the fer-measurement of a gambling house, a cabaret, the church Saint-André, an anarchist club and the theatre of rue Feydeau. The Civil Constitution is also his perfectly indifferent to the freedom of citizens and the honor of the country; but the Constitution is a thorn in the side.
under the Pope's bedside table. The Pope must sanction it.
by an act of public apology, even though it does not exist more. And the Directory persists in demanding "that the Saiofr
The seat revoked its acts since 1789, as having been surprised in his religion by common enemies. » oqoiq

With a knife to their throats and the Republican army at at the borders of the apostolic heritage, one prayed derisory-Pius VI offered the Revolution this new pledge of Peace and love. The circumstances were so difficult that he did not want to give in to a perfectly natural impulse outrage. Twelve Cardinals were summoned and consulted.
by him. Leonardo Antonelli and Gerdil, two lights of

*) eh £ mH *

3))ëud ,XL/i jiiiuq^fl fil

1 When in 1773 Clement XIV reserved Sigismund Gerdil as cardinal in petto, he designated it in these terms: Notus orbi, vix notus Utbi;

the Church, two of those men whom the desire for reconciliation will never make one weak in the face of duty, and forcefully uphold the immutable principles of politics sacred. The Congregation of Cardinals unanimously declares—stated that "the Directory's request is inadmissible," that this is an attack on the Church at its very foundations, and that the Pope must suffer martyrdom rather than violate the laws of the Church.

This was to enter into the secret aspirations of Pius VI and to give the august old man the advice he desired. The Sacred College offered him a glimpse of a pro-martyrdom chain, the Pope simply replied: "Let no change nothing to this resolution, and we will support it, even if it cost us our lives."

The Directory declared the Pontiff tainted with fanaticism. The Pontiff had spoken, had acted within the limits of his rights and responsibilities. He didn't want to disavow himself, he could not. It was claimed—as one claims still without proof — that he was surrounded by schemers and factious minds; and that, dominated by some, deceived because of others, he no longer had freedom of action. In order to restore this freedom to him, the Revolution marched his army on Rome.

At the beginning of his career, Bonaparte, who was not yet neither someone nor something, has only a vague premonition—moment of its future greatness. Nevertheless, let us principal religious symbols placed deep in his heart, or calculation of great political significance, Bonaparte, at the head of The Republican army prefers to run to noble combats than to attach his name to the sack of Rome or to the characterizing in these few words the high reputation of the writer and the humilitant of the Bar nabite.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 203

ruin of the Church. He is loath to improvise as executioner—author of the Directory's revenges and to associate with sacrilegious vows of unbelief, flattering themselves to finally see The last day of Catholicism. Oppressing the Pope and... to make lawyers a scourge, is a shame to which Bonaparte wishes to withdraw, without compromising his command. On October 21, 1796, he wrote to the Cardinal Mattei: "Save the Pope from the greatest misfortunes; Consider that, to destroy its power, I need than the will to do it."

To these threats, which nevertheless opened a port in The storm, Cardinal Mattei replies: "The sovereign Pontiff, custodian here below of the maxims of which Jesus-Christ set the example for his faithful disciples and for the
The whole world has always sought ways to maintain peace and harmony in Christendom, and he has worn of himself to all the sacrifices that moderation more complete was able to allow it. When France, bouraised by the unfortunate events that afflict her with-Then seven years, which saddened his soul and his heart, he remembered that he was by profession the father of Christians; and then-that he saw that the children of the Church were immersing themselves in the most dreadful errors, he thought that the ways of gentleness was the only thing he had to use, hoping that it would please God to cure them of their blindness,
and to lead them to just and reasonable maxims.
It is as a result of these principles that His Holiness, making self-denial of all that is temporal, had lent itself to considerable sacrifices to preserve the peace of the State and the Church with France. The successes of your
The Italian army has blinded your government, which, by an intolerable abuse of prosperity, not content with having tondufe»<^gtôs^^

and he still demanded that the Pope perform the sacrff of his anthology and those of its peoples whose administration is con-entrusted to his care, demanding of him the overthrow and the total destruction of the foundations that constitute the principles of the Christian Religion, of YÉvmgm(àëWWëim& of Church discipline. welrfcoo Indasiuq iup te

His Holiness, dismayed by these intolerant claims rables, she gathered herself in the bosom of God to ask-to the Lord that it pleased Him to enlighten him on all this that she had to do in such an unfortunate situation.
It was undoubtedly the Holy Spirit who inspired her in making her remembrance of the example of the martyrs; and, after having feèlfrî cited in vain that the Directory lent itself to condMoîfe reasonable, the Roman Court had to prepare to war: it is up to all of Europe to decide who provoked it.
The death you would frighten us with, my-General, the happiness of eternal life begins.
good people; it is also the end of prosperity.
youths of the wicked, and the beginning of their ]*& remorse has already begun,
"^^fr^ctre army is formidable, but you know even you yourself that she is not invincible; we oppose her-will be our means, our consistency, the confidence that gives the good cause, and, above all, Dieri's help, that we hope to obtain. We know very well that the incredulous people and modern philosophers ridicule spiritual weapons; but if it pleased the Lord that Your barrel, in the case of deploying them, your phalanges would undoubtedly a disastrous experience of their effectiveness. I I agree with you that the war you would wage against the Pope would be of little glory to you; as for the peril that you

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 205

You wouldn't believe you'd find there, our trust in God does not allow us to believe that there were any others besides for

y#us and pflflr^iliftte^I Jaob Jfôtonètj
*[fh WmtmWh&m mWSÂ^Pfà^ which, makes that of Your letter. You desire peace; we desire it.
more than you. Grant us reasonable terms.
and that might suit our loyal allies, and that you find-
You will see both sides willing to subscribe to it. From its
On that side, His Holiness will make every sacrifice to obtain it.
which will not be contrary to his ffâffl^qMùtâ an iefc
.^iôjÇift^s let us dare to believe, General, that in your
In particular, you are inclined towards the principles that justice Humanity inspires estimable men, and I ^S!ftrteWours delighted by smm^mf^W^MRiM^ to the salutary soul of R#,fif01f 1U03 Bf ^MdmnoBĭm
-owiq jsl ibne » Cardinal Matteî. » moo

-name çt tbuo/ aooV Snob Jlioftĭ &1 .sèjup

King Pie VI was surrounded by enemies. The Revolution did not ca-
It neither fulfills its purpose nor its hopes. The Church, threatened in his rights and seeing his territory invaded, appeals to her allies. She invoked the protection of Austria, and Cardinal Busca, Secretary of State, and Prelate Joseph Albani, conveyed his prayer to Emperor Francis. The
The prayer was not heard, or it was evaded by the baron of ïhugut. :orf ô| 6fl(3U?b

At the head of his troops, Bonaparte advances. The vic-the church follows its flags, but in a time when the priests
Those very faithful to their God did not find in the Republic French people, rather than persecutors, in a time when the pontoons of the island of Rhé, Cayenne and Sinnamary, are remfolded every day by these lawbreakers, by principle of conscience, J^onneur, Bonaparte, of his

206 BOOK ONE.

of his own movement, grants them protection. Pius VI covered the exiled priests with his aegis; Bonaparte them covered with his sword. By a decree dated from Macerata, the 27 Pluviôse, Year V, the victor ratifies the most widely accepted wish. song of the vanquished.

This attitude was not without danger. It was a decisive one. so much so with the provisions of the Directory and the hosti- revolutionary events, which no one could explain at the time In Paris, demagoguery and impiety were already celebrating the fall of the Roman Siege; in Italy, the general of the ar- The victorious army wrote to Cardinal Mattei: "Some anything that could happen, I beg you, sir, the car- dinal, to assure His Holiness that she can remain in Rome without any kind of concern. Prime Minister of the Through religion, he will find, in this capacity, protection for himself and for the Church.

Bonaparte obviously thwarted the plans of the Di- rectorate. Bonaparte thwarted all the projects of adversaries of the Church. The Treaty of Tolentino impoverished it- It is true, he knows. This treaty completed the stripping of her artistic treasures and most of its territory ritual. But, amidst these harsh conditions, faith remained as intact as honor. The Chair of Peter was not overturned. Pius VI was no longer required to fraternized with the constitutional apostasenes, and Bona- parte stopped at the gates of Rome, as for mon- tor that he would always be its respectful defender.

The Revolution understood nothing of such things. deferences. The Monitor himself sought them in vain- He was unaware of the causes. They eluded him; the Revolution took hold. his revenge.

The Roman people loved the Papacy, which was their strength.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. «807

its glory and its wealth. The Papacy is almost for He has a family inheritance. He proudly counts them all the immortal names emerging from the obscurity of the cloister or the modest functions of the priesthood to arrive at the power- supreme power. But, in this time of upheaval, he lawyers and scholars had met even in Rome, doctors, artists, disgraced nobles, misunderstood tents, idle or ruined, who dreamed of making a fortune- democracy on a pedestal. The Directory could not defeat the Bonaparte's instinctive reluctance to seize the capital of the Christian world. Through sheer artifice and suggestions, the Directory imagined it would be easy for it to triumph, without its general, over Catholicism and the Papacy.

In Ancona, a few French soldiers, encouraged by
The commissioners of the Republic get to work;
They usher in a new era. Anarchy replaces the conquest; the fanaticism of impiety paves the way for all the excess. Misery was profound in Rome and in the state.
The instigators, whom the Revolution managed to enroll-Gimenter, strive to sow discouragement everywhere and irritation. Pius VI had only a choice of evils,
And, by a rare stroke of luck, he had preserved the Church. Pius VI
He is therefore still, and more than ever, the father of the nation.
The people of Transtever and the inhabitants of Monti acclaim him always as the savior of the people; but the agents of The Directory incited the Italians to insurrection, among whom they They make henchmen or accomplices. In the streets of Rome, the Carmagnole and the Ça ira of 1793 popularized their refrains. We read on the walls of the cupboards where the
The wishes of the Revolution are no longer concealed:
Non abbiamo patienza,

IOS BOOK ONE.

Non vogliamo (iu cminerza,
We do not want Saint,
Ma egualianza, e liberia.

Such were the songs that resounded in Rome.
reign of a few fanatics of Italian progress and humanism
The Masonic order was beginning. French booksellers, a A Jew and some Roman patriots form a conspiracy to proclaim the Republic. This plot is discovered; Others succeed him. The Pope is dying; it is necessary to pro-fitter of this moment, then, in anticipation of death Next, arrive, with Brennus shields made of bag and rope.
to replace the tiara with a red cap.

Already, on January 13, 1793, two French citizens, Flotte and Bassville, secretary of the legation in Naples, have,
through demonstrations as unusual as they were odious, tried to provoke the Roman people. The people rise up.
But it's against the agitators. Bassville falls wounded.
mortally. In his final hour, he confesses his guilt and proclaims his repentance. Bassville will nonetheless be eternal-one of those martyred heroes of the Revolution, who exploits lies so well, will always exploit the dead.

On December 28, 1797, events had, despite-
The Directory, however, accused them of this.
slowness. In order to hasten them, he had ordered the riot permanently. The riot, led by the students of The French Academy is playing its part. It is attacking the papal troops. The riot, repelled, can take refuge in the embassy palace, which she made her Headquarters. Joseph Bonaparte, Minister of the Republic—Duphot, the republican, and General Duphot, leave the palace.

1 Lesjibrières were called Bouchard brothers, and the Jew, Isaac Ascanelli.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 500

is killed in the melee. This death, certainly very explicit—cable, and above all very forgivable, provided to the Revolution the pretext so long sought. As long as it is a factious minority, the Revolution has as its principle of to demand, to insist on the rule of law. It is necessary that it covers the rights of people and the henchmen it needs. Once victory has been achieved through violence or surprise, The Revolution knows no other decree than its own will. Force, arbitrariness, and terror are the elements constitutive of his power.

Two and a half months before this insurrection, on October 1st... In October, the Directory wrote to Joseph Bonaparte, his Minister Plenipotentiary to the Holy See: "You have Two things to do: 4° Prevent the King of Naples from to come to Rome; 2° to help, far from retaining the good the dispositions of those who would think that it is time that the reign of the Popes should end; in short, to encourage the momentum that the people of Rome seem to be moving towards freedom.

We like to think that the ambassador of the Republic French had not followed such instructions to the letter tions, authorizing diplomatic ambush and transformation a man dressed as an international riot police officer of a sacred character. Nevertheless, the insurrection fomented by the Directory, it erupted in Rome under the protection of The French flag was lowered. Duphot had fallen victim to the less than an imprudence, and, in May 1804, in a dispatch to the First Consul, Cacaault, successor of Joseph Bonaparte, near the Holy See, is not afraid of to push justice further. "You know, thus that I, he asks Napoleon, have the details of this deplorable event. No one in Rome gave the order. to shoot and kill anyone: the general was im—
I. U

210 BOOK ONE.

Cautious; let's be clear, he was guilty. There was in Rome

A right of people, just like everywhere else.

The Directory knew this as well as Bonaparte and Cacauly; but he needed an accident to legitimize a attack. We have the version of the Minister of the Republic-French republic; Cardinal Consalvi will give that of the papal government, of which he was then the Assessor of the Delia congregazione militare, or the Minister of Arms. They are identical. Consalvi, in his unpublished memoirs, explains the death of General Duphot as follows: "This young man, An ardent and great republican, he attempted to incite a revolt. in Rome to overthrow the papal government. Five about a hundred people had gathered under the windows of the French ambassador (whose name was Joseph) and was brother of General Bonaparte) shouting: Liberty, Long live the French Republic, down with the Pope! Duphot n'hé- Sita did not have to go down, to put himself at their head, and to the to lead an assault on the nearest soldiers' post: It was the one at Ponte-Sisto. The soldiers initially held themselves there. closed in; but seeing themselves insulted and attacked, and not there Finding themselves unsafe, they advanced against the popu- She did not give in; the soldiers felt they were in a awkward position; one of them fires a shot. The fate-kindness, or rather Providence in its hidden designs, He wanted that single blow to reach the middle of this mul-General Duphot, who was in the lead, was laid dead. The frightened crowd scattered, and the corpse was buried. the following day.

"This death, although accidental and caused by a an act of pure self-defense on the part of the soldiers, provoked on the side of the victim by the most culpable project, threw the government and the entire city in the largest consternation. The result of this attack could not to be universally known at the moment. Also the villains, upon hearing that the assault had been launched, that the revolution had broken out, they rose up in insurrection. Gunshots rang out. In various places in the In the city, attempts were made that were unsuccessful, thanks to the promptness of the military arrangements which were taken by the authorities... One of the first things to do was to watch to the safety of the person and the ambassador's palace of France, and in a short time everything regained its appearance ordinary. Nevertheless, the following day, the ambassador left-Frenchman; no prayer from the government, no offer their complete satisfaction could not keep him in Rome. We had to be, if not guilty, at least responsible. "Blessed by the fact."

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. i\\

The Pope has nothing left but the freedom to suffer; the Cardinal Doria, his Secretary of State, increased them by overcoming evil through the humility of her prayers. The Royal Court Maine was as innocent as the people and the army of this unforeseen event; it had to be accepted as a case due to force majeure. Doria and Joseph Bonaparte lost Both of them were at the head. The Directory and its Minister of Foreign Affairs foreign, Talleyrand, apostate bishop of Autun, profi- They are suffering from this double weakness.

Cardinal Doria had just succeeded Cardinal Busca, whose vigilance and ferocity demagogues feared- mete. Doria, former nuncio in Paris, believed herself to be in the obligation- mission to serve French interests, even when they were revolutionaries. He served them, and probably at the beyond his wishes. His abandonment of all individual authority- He knew the old cardinals and the young prelates. He left the Holy See at the mercy of a few insurgents, because

u.

212 BOOK ONE.

uq

the army, which had just loyally done its duty, found herself accused and disavowed.

The Directory usually didn't have much more energy. What initiative! He was content to live from day to day. to proscribe a little and intrigue a lot. It was the im- morality diminished by ridicule or shame, and trying to atone for the crime by squandering the for- Public tune. Barely had the news of the general's death broken. Is Duphot announced in Luxembourg that the Direc- The village is covered in mourners, and mourning is imposed on the homeland and is quick to adopt concerted measures In advance. The French army is ordered to march. on Rome. Bonaparte no longer commands it; it will have So, the misfortune of getting there.

Faced with the imminent danger, the Pontiff, even more weakened by moral pain rather than suffering He physically gathers what little strength he has left. it breathes new life into his government; it surrounds himself with the Sacred College; then, convinced of its futility Faced with all resistance, he ordered his troops to retreat. in front of the French, in order to avoid bloodshed. The

The French enter the capital of the world without a fight. Christian, and General Berthier, who triumphs, inaugurates the Second Republic through this expansion of the college system:

"Shadows of Cato, Pompey, Brutus, and..."

Cicero, of the Hortensius family, receive the homage of the French free in the Capitol, where you have defended so many times the rights of the people and illustrated the Roman Republic. These children of the Gauls, with the olive tree of peace in their hands, come to this august place to restore the altars of the Freedoms erected by the first of the Brutus family. And you, people Romain, who have just reclaimed your legitimate rights,

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 213

Remember the blood that flows in your veins! Throw your eyes on the monuments of glory that surround you—Reclaim your ancient grandeur and the virtues of "Your fathers!"

In the name of the free and sovereign people of Rome, a delegation of Jews, foreigners and mercenaries from the Revolution, representing the spirits of Cato and Pompey and the Brutus figures mentioned by the future Prince of Wagram. Vice-Constable of the French Empire, dares to inform Pius VI that he has been stripped of all his temporal rights. He is informed that from that fine day onwards he is nothing more than a simple citizen. This first insult goes unanswered. The general Cervoni, governor of Rome, has the audacity to offer the august victim the national cockade, which will invest him with all civil rights. "I am not familiar with them," replied Pius VI, no other uniform for me than the one the Church gave me Honored. You have complete power over my body, but my My soul is beyond your reach. I have no need of boarding house. A stick instead of a crosier and a simple habit. suffice for the one who is to die under the hair shirt and on the ash. I love the hand of the Almighty striking the shepherd and flock. You can destroy the dwellings—the living and the tombs of the dead, but Religion is eternal. It will exist after you, as it exists—He was before you, and his reign will continue until the end times.

This refusal falls within the revolutionary predictions; it gives the signal for all the looting. In the name of Democracy—Universal Church, a Lazarist, apostate and regicide, John Bassal, and a Swiss Calvinist named Haller, president to these abuses, which do not only affect the public treasury, on museums or on the fortunes of the parties—clerics. The Pontiff is stripped of everything that belongs to him. personal. He is insulted, he is abused, he even goes so far as to... even sharing his clothes in her presence, like The deicides shared those of Christ. He is made to attend to the proscription of the Sacred College. The Roman Republic imitates her mother and her sister from France; she confiscates, she exile, while awaiting permission to slaughter. The cardinals Albani, Busca, of York, Mattei, Gerdil, Antonelli, della Somaglia, Rinuccini, Braschi, Archinto, Roverella, Archetti and Borgia suffer the fate reserved for Supreme Pontiff.

The citizens, whom a partial disorder improvises, had Flattered to be free, the Revolution arranges to make them more than slaves; she disguises them as extras, The Revolution had given them hope that after having put the By getting their foot in the door of civic infamy, they could put the hand in the spoliations organized by the Directory and by its commissioners. It forces them to contribute as the others to the salvation of the fatherland.

Rome, emancipated but ruined, makes its first ap- the promotion of liberty, equality and fraternity, triple chimera that is unified in death, and which, since the The beginning of the world engenders more martyrs. than executioners. Pius VI, a captive, will travel as far as the Calvary, the path of the cross laid out for him by the Revolution.

There are three perfect phases in the life of this Pontiff- distinctly; they all lead to his glorification. By ascending the throne, by reigning like a father, he is the admiration of his people. An apostolic pilgrim, he tra- poured Italy and Germany amidst all due respect Catholics and Protestants. Then, when a ra- The goddess of old age covers her shoulders with white hair.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 245

The Pontiff is called upon to render to God a supreme witness gnage. It seems that, like Saint Peter, having just offered to Jesus Christ the twofold consecration of his love and of His devotion, Pius VI heard, he collected the words which were addressed to the Prince of the Apostles by Christ He himself said: "Truly, truly, I tell you: When You were younger, 9, you used to belt yourself and you would go where you wanted; but when you are old, you will extend the hands and another will gird you and lead you where you will not You won't want to.

And the Evangelist adds: "Now, he says this to emphasize by what death he was to glorify God. And, after having Having spoken this, he said to her, "Follow me."

The successor of the Apostles acted like Saint Peter, He followed.

In this body weakened by age and suffering, He displays a magnanimity of courage that would make others envious. hero. His pure gold crown was tested in the furnace— Seven times ardent tribulations. Nevertheless, Every word that falls from her lips is sublime; each smile of resignation that the martyr gives to princes and peoples thronging in his path, will be a blessing or a sign of happiness. It was removed harmfully tally, so that, as in the Passion narrative, he There should be no unrest among the people. It is being hidden from all eyes; there was hardly anyone around him who— devoted servants. At the moment he is about to leave Rome forever, one of those Jesuits whom the storm destroyed Perses presents himself to Pius VI. "Speak to me frankly, said the Pope to Father Marotti, secretary of Latin letters:

1 Gospel according to Saint John, ch. 21, v. 4 8.

2IG BOOK ONE,

Do you feel brave enough to go up with me to Cal—"Vaire?" And Marotti replies: "Here I am, ready to follow the steps and the destiny of the Vicar of Jesus Christ and of my soul Verain L. » •

The peoples, whose eyes had long been accustomed to crimes and disasters, they were not surprised Not much left. However, upon seeing this old man, having strength only to bless, having a voice only To forgive, people are moved by one of these gene— reuses pities which prepare the restorations and make com— to take up the faith. People greeted the Pontiff as he passed by, they kneeled before him; from all eyes flowed tears Tears of tenderness or veneration. More than one At times, even the common Father found himself forced to intervene to rescue from death the satellites that were escorting it and that the outraged crowd wanted to massacre.

Step by step, that is to say, from pain to pain, the victim being dragged to sacrifice passes through All trials. Trials produce hope. Italy, where everything is Catholic, even the sun, has become in— bowed before this uncrowned brow, but on which res— plendit the triple majesty of old age, misfortune and of virtue. Italy protested against the outrages of exile.

These protests are an insult to the Directory. One of its members, a lawyer, hunchbacked and deformed like a bag of nuts, but theophilanthropist, La Révellière-Lepaux, obtains from his accomplices in the government the trans-
The Pope's visit to France. There, at least, they hope, the

1 The Archbishop of Corinth, who was Cardinal Spina; the prelate Caracciolo; two secret chamberlains, Calvesi and Morelli; Father Fantini, his confessor; Abbot Baldassari and Father Pie de Plaisance, composed the wandering house of the imprisoned Pope.

III AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 217

The old leaven of priestly fanaticism will not ferment to refute all their predictions.

The procession of the imprisoned Pontiff enters the In the Alps and in the mountains of the Dauphiné. Deep in this province, which gave the signal for innovations, there there were rough peasants, simple shepherds, and women... tedious, that the conquest of civil equality and of the Religious license must have been charming. The sky is filled with apostasis, the atmosphere becomes imbued with a mocking incredulity. The Revolution applauds itself for abducting a dead pope or alive, and to show it to the people as the last vestigestem of expiring superstition.

The people have grasped the lesson, but in the opposite way. He told him he was free; he uses this freedom to... kneeling by the roadside. It was legislated for him and decreed that there was no other God than the one whose The nation made its own choices at will and in the long run, "no more Pope, No more heaven, no more hell. At the sight of this poor man old man, who can barely raise his hands to bless, this The people yearn for their God; he covers with the most touching Homage to the vicar of this God.

Despite all his constitutional thefts and pillaging at At home, the French Republic is reduced to begging. The shortage of the treasury is something so inexplicable that the Revolution finds itself forced to leave to the charge of its prisoners the costs of their forced transfer. The Revolution is ruthless and shameless. appealed to the base passions of his people, in order to to sorrow the patience of Pius VI; the Pontiff does not intend to... Throughout his journey, he only encountered filial voices: he only meets... respectful tenderness. Authority wants to obey superior orders she received and opposing so many Incredible demonstrations. The authorities remain baffled.

in his powerlessness.

On the road that led to Calvary, the God-man found no willing hand to help him to carry his cross. Simon of Cyrene, who was returning from fields, saw this burden imposed upon him. Happier than his Master, the Pontiff-King evokes devotions everywhere.
Passion Day precedes Palm Sunday, and Pius VI, dying but consoled and edified, was able to exclaim:
"All of this proves that faith is not dead in France."

Her exile and her wanderings awakened her in the hearts.

The common Father, exhausted by pain and defeated by
The emotion finally arrives at the citadel of Valence. The para-Lysia wins over all its members, and the Directory still wants that he walks. Pius VI does not resist; it is the doctors who oppose this ruthless transfer: they declare-rent that the dying man has only a few days left to to live. The Pontiff indeed died on August 29, 1799, at the age eighty-one and a half years old.

The Lord had given this great Pope the knowledge of saints. His feet walked constantly in the way right; he was zealous only for what was good. That is why, as it is said in the Book of Wisdom, God restored his long works venerated in the eyes of all, and glorified them of a final crown of honor.

There was no longer a Pope, there was never to be one again;
No more Church, therefore. The Revolution rejoiced, with the Directory, to reign at the Capitol and to command last at the Vatican. She congratulated herself on having dispersed the Sacred College, and thus make any conclave impossible-possible. The days marked by Philosophy united with

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 219

Jansenists and civil constitutionalists were arriving at a pace precipitated. The Roman Catholic Church was about to fall apart.
like an old wall that no longer (was, when everything at Suddenly the course of events changed with rapidity.
providential.

Pius VI died on August 29, 1799. Less than three Months later, the Directory in turn succumbed under the laughingstock of France and before the sword of General Bonaparte. The Directory wanted to corrupt everything; it is dying from His corruption. He sold everything, bought everything, debased everything. He allows itself to be auctioned off and bargained over like an object by chance. It falls into decay, without even giving dung; and, on its ruins, General Bonaparte founded a new government.

On 18 Brumaire, Year VIII (November 9, 1799), anarchy France, in ideas and in deeds, was defeated. Europe would finally breathe a sigh of relief from this long turmoil. of immorality. As if to offer a consecration to so much With justifiable hopes, the Conclave met in Venice on December 1st of that same year, which concludes the eighteenth century.

Meanwhile, what was happening to Rome, delivered into the hands of The first joys of his republican liberation?

By calling all peoples to revolt, by proclaiming or offering themselves as the liberators of the nations oppressed peoples, the French demagogues had attributed to themselves a singular mission. They were creating republics where There were kingdoms; they killed the republics by- everywhere they were legitimized by several centuries of duration. Switzerland, Genoa, and Venice have disappeared. The poor- The truth of the Republic of San Marino alone preserved it greedy people afflicted by the Revolution; but a rep-

220 BOOK ONE.

a Cisalpine republic, a Parthenopean republic, and a Roman republics rise in Milan, Naples and Rome, on the ruins of thrones.

The French Revolution, which organizes within itself the Brotherhood forged by the scaffold, preaching concord to all These sisters are enemies. She cannot keep them alive in Peace, she enslaves them. It is impossible for her to grant their disparate wishes; she conflates them in the same catastrophe stanza. It allows them to no longer have a God; one congratulates them on displaying the utmost disdain for the Religion; but, willingly or unwillingly, one must pass under the level of abuses and atrocities. The Revolution takes up arms in support of the peoples it proclaims oppressed; she never delivers them except in Marseille-ease. Only she always makes them pay dearly for it map of liberation. One is only a republican at this price. There. The foreigners, who were playing the role of the old Romans, They subscribed to it without difficulty. Immediately after departure Thus, under Pius VI, the era of civic prosperity began.

The French army was to offer Rome an example of all patriotic virtues; civil war breaks out within its ranks. There are squanderers who enrich themselves, and honest officers who are starving to death with their regiments without pay or clothing. The tax collectors of The army displays a less ostentatious luxury than their plunder.

1 We read in the History of the Abduction and Captivity of Pius VI, by Abbot Baldassari, p. 248, provides the following details on the atrocities committed:

"The agents of the Directory truly displayed a rapacity of Vandals. At the Vatican, they not only seized the paintings, but also... statues, cameos, marbles, columns, they even took juice- than to nails and locks; so that a national Institute, which one imagines- Gina then created, having wanted to hold her sessions in this palace, was forced to have the nails and locks that had disappeared replaced.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH EVOLUTION. 221

Berthier relinquished command to Masséna. The officers violating all forms of discipline and subordination military actions to safeguard the integrity of the flag. They gather at the Pantheon, which has become their Aventine Hill. They deliberate, they protest against their general, they accuse them of "banditry and extortion." They say "that the Venetian territory, and especially Padua, is a a fertile field where the most evidence can be gathered numerous examples of his immorality.

The army was building up its reserves, the general made his proclamation He is indignant at being slandered and misunderstood. As Scipio, whom he mentions very little, but whom he quotes frequently, Masséna simply replied: "Let's go to the Capitole to give thanks to the gods for the victories I have won carried. » '

While the general ideally travels the Sa- Way

Thus, this superb residence of Roman pontiffs, where the masterpieces by Raphael and Michelangelo, and everything that Greece and Italy had produced something more curious, which presented itself to the astonished eye as a deserted and devastated dwelling, and this was the work of a civilization that had been so praised! (Botta, Storia d'Italia.) The authors of such Were these acts of vandalism not worthy of a republic that had had the pen- was it their idea to elevate sans-culottes to a virtue? Here is a sample of their impos- modesty. Despite all the looting, despite the enormous taxes paid by the Pope, the new Roman Republic was soon reduced to asking Almsgiving. It was declared in the forty-fourth issue of the Moniteur from Rome, that "the public treasury is empty, the loss and waste of funds "national, sad legacy of the inept and rapacious administration of the government-

» past circumstances forced the provisional government to resort to the for-"Private funds to obtain some assistance." In memory of all the prosperity bestowed upon the Romans, a medal was struck with these words: Berthier, restorer Urbis; Gallia, salus generis humani.
These enemies of all virtue at least had the merit of having made a "Good epigram."

1 This address, dated Rome 9 Ventôse, was presented to the Directory.
It is inserted in the Monitor.

222 BOOK ONE.

created, the inhabitants of Trastevere and Monti benefit the division introduced among the French to display the banner of the insurrection. Vial takes command troops, and once again military discipline triumph of despair. Cardinal Albani exercises in The Velletri mountains had a great influence. These mountains loincloths are raised to the cry: Long live the Madonna! Long live The Pope! Murat, with his usual impetuosity, pushes his cavalry upon these masses, advancing towards Rome. He them Having reached Castel-Gandolfo, he routed them.

Romans, leaderless and almost unarmed,
had fought bravely against the French army.
The Italian patriots, who were careful not to take
They take part in the fight, abusing a victory they did not earn.
won. They take up residence in the Capitol as government provisional. Under the name of Emulators of Brutw> they found a kind of Jacobin club. Lucrezias of the counter-gangs and Cornelias of the makeshift variety join it to work-to work towards the emancipation of women. The Revolution, which has only one mold and which, despite the differences in characteristics morals and customs, wants to drown all men there, im-establishes its laws and customs.

The Romans, a wittily caustic people, and wielding the Epigram even better than the stylus, do not con-never felt like taking these evocations of the seriously past* They had witty remarks to mock things stupid, and acerbic jokes to clear their honor* The Revolution is not fond of familiarizing itself with the licenses of the mind; she is always afraid of being the one victim; She nevertheless let the inhabitants laugh at her resurrections, and she continued her work. As with among all peoples, there was among some Romans the a-

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 223

death of progress and the desire to reform abuses, love and desire that make everyone tremble with the fever of revolutions. These beings, predestined to sentimental foolishness or to incurable bourgeois vanities, will always be the most active instruments in each combination of mess.

All civil institutions of the Pontifical government Tax breaks are eliminated. Their advantages, their abuses even are in perfect harmony with the genius of the few-
The Revolution, which concentrates everything, in order to do everything-Mining creates thousands of civil servants.
National Guard is established; it oversees the return of burdensome taxes that overburden the state. There are no more no more commerce, no more transactions; only misery reigns amidst the ruins. The heritage of Saint Peter is divided, fragmented into departments. It has its own constitution.
based on one of the ten or twelve spares that France possessed.

When all this disorder was regulated and initialed, a
A French soldier made the bad joke of returning to Rome, its consuls, its senate, its censors, its aediles, his tribunes and lictors. An Oratorian, more famous Daunou, one of the..., was not known for his impiety as much as for his writings.
commissioners of the executive power in the Papal States Caux, honored with a certificate of civic virtue the seven new consuls. Two used to be enough for to govern the world; it took no less than seven to obey the call from the Directory"

The Roman Republic, barely born, was to be judged very sick, for at his cradle he was surrounded by three me-doctors, combining, with their health functions, the medical-a third of consuls. A midwife, named Angelucci, the %U ' BOOK ONE.

presides1; a renegade monk, Faustin Gagliuffi, begins to the head of the tribunate. Of all Catholic institutions Only Propaganda remained standing. An order from one Unusual brevity destroys it. This order is thus conceived:
"Commissioner Halier abolishes Propaganda as
"A completely useless establishment."

The senators of Rome, whom a Domitian of the crossroads could have done better than ever to deliberate in order to know What sauce should he put on the turbot, the senators con-
They enshrine in law this firman of a Calvinist.

The Inquisition and the Holy Office are abolished. The tribes-
They will sit and judge publicly. Therefore, we write

In Moniteur2: "The trial of the detainees takes place in the most Big secret. Today all is quiet. Rest is restored. public affairs, the course of business, are in no way disturbed by the army divisions. Masséna, who did not withdraw, As had been wrongly said, continue to command. He form of clubs and public instruction societies: on Much is spoken and written. The sovereign people do not delay— will not be able to extricate himself from his stupor; but, for The present is still too steeped in ignorance. The priests are becoming increasingly hypocritical, so as not to let to completely escape their empire. They have resumed their habit long, which they previously disdained to wear. The fanatics moan, the guilty tremble, and the rich "They pay. That, in short, is the picture of Rome."

1 We read in the Moniteur under the heading of Rome, 1 Germinal year VI, The following news item: "Consul Angelucci, a famous obstetrician—surgeon, enjoys great popularity. He published a notice announcing to his fellow citizens, whom his duties as chief magistrate will not prevent not to assist suffering humanity, when one believes one needs to his ministry as a midwife and surgeon.

2 Rome, 47 Ventôse year VI {Moniteur}.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. 125

To condemn such tyranny, accusing herself— Indeed, Tacitus would not have used other terms. Hal— Ler and Daunou reign in Rome under the name of seven con— They are ridiculous. They dictate to an inept senate the laws that will promulgate. The tribunate is responsible for announcing each morning to the Catholic universe the regeneration of the city Holy. Rome tears away the swaddling clothes of fanaticism; happiness Being republican makes her forget that she is the capital of Christian world. Everything that was ignoble, proscribed everything that who was illustrious1.

The newly manufactured Cincinnatus, escaped remnants from a nursery of parricides, could well, in their ceremonial speech, awarding oneself such praise;

1 Cardinal Gonsalvi recounts, in the unpublished Memoirs on the various periods of his life, his exile and that of the main figures of Rome. These Memoirs contain the singular tribute that the Roman Republic took pleasure in restoring equality:

"I was supposed to leave for Civitavecchia, where there were already seven or eight cardinals and various prelates. We were all destined to do sailing to America; we were relegated to Cayenne Island. However— but we did not dare to go that far, and we were only condemned to the deportation to a place of each person's choosing, with perpetual defense, under penalty of death, to return to the states of the Roman Republic.

This sentence was received as a grace of life, granted to the condemned.
born who march to the gallows.

"I choose Livorno, hoping from there to be able to join the Holy Father;
But just as I was about to leave, I was arrested again, thrown into prison from-for several weeks, escorted back to Rome, and finally it was decided to ex-
I went to Naples. I had in my hands for a long time the general's order to do leaving that same night, and all together, the individuals designated on a list containing twenty-three names. Given the principles of equality which re-In those republican times, the twenty-three names were jumbled together.
mixed. There were eighteen galley slaves, a religious man, two lawyers, and an officer of the old government; my name was thirteenth on that list.

"In Albano, we were taken to an inn, and we had to dinner all together.

I. 45

226 BOOK ONE.

But these praises were belied by the facts, beli-tied down especially by proscriptions and terror. Re-Armed uprisings erupt on papal soil. One would have said that the Romans were still harboring this silence of the great-anger and great terrors of which the historian speaks Latin.

The towns of Ferentino, Veroli, Terracina, Ala-
Tri and Frosinone rise up to cries of "Long live Jesus!"
And Marie! They're being machine-gunned, set on fire, and put in bag.

The countryside does not want to humiliate itself under a yoke Foreigners. They are oppressed in the name of freedom. Equality cults make them slaves to atheism, and in the end
The Republic, even the Roman Republic, is for everyone.
Impoverishment accompanied by dishonor. The countryside organize a war with knives against those who come-
They bring them cannon war.

The Romans regained their independence. They did not
They don't want foreigners to tyrannize them, fraternal-neither midwife consuls nor renegade tribunes to parody their old story.

They have taken away their Pontiff-King; they fight as the Vendée uprising. They succumbed like her; but Their defeat is still a profession of faith. The day is not far from where the martyrdom of a pope, where the prayers

The blood of some and the blood of others will bring her forth triumphant of all disasters, because the Church has always known how to operate Wonderful things in death. For her, no more night
The darker it is, the closer the light gets.

END OF BOOK ONE.

BOOK TWO.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON.

The Sacred College, dispersed, is unable to reunite. – Alliance
of Russia, England, Austria and Turkey against the Re-
French public. – Souwarow's campaign in Italy – Conclave at Venice. – Manuscript of Cardinal Consalvi. – Election of Pius VII. – The Marquis Ghisleri, envoy from Austria. – His confidential mission to the Pope. – Consalvi, Secretary of State. – Portrait of Pius VII. – His return to Rome as told by Cardinal Consalvi. – Battle of Marengo. – Bonaparte understands that a return to religious principles is necessary. – His pre-First openings in Rome. – The Revolution retreats before the first Consul, and changes tactics. – First negotiations relating to the Concordat.
– The First Consul wants to deal directly in Paris with Cardinal Con-Salvi. – Bonaparte and Consalvi. – The Cardinal's account of these negotiations. –
Signing of the Concordat. – The Constitutional Church formed into a club. –
The policies of this party. – Its lies and doctrines. – Abbé Grégoire and the French Church. – The intruder Vernerey and teaching by the Saints Fathers. – The Pope, condemned to omnipotence, forces the French bishops to to resign from their seats. – The French episcopate and Abbot Bernier. – If-Religious destruction in Europe at the time of the Concordat. – Joy of France
Upon the reopening of the churches, Napoleon had himself proclaimed emperor.
Negotiations with Rome for the coronation. – Pius VII in Paris. – Meeting of the Grand Sanhedrin. – He declares that the Jews have never been persecuted by Rome. – Napoleon and Pius VII. – The regicide Alquier, ambassador of France near the Holy See. – Alquier's maneuvers. – Address that the
The Pope addresses him. – Bonaparte seizes the Papal States. – Excommunication issued against the Emperor. – Pius VII prisoner. – The car-Dinaux in Paris. – Interview between the Emperor and Cardinal Consalvi. – Account of the cardinal. – Bonaparte's marriage. – Red cardinals and cardinals blacks. – Exile of the black cardinals. – Consalvi at Reims. – The Council of Paris. – Protest of the council demanding the Pope's freedom. – Atti-Study of the French clergy in the face of Napoleon. – Etienne de Boulogne and François d'Aviau. – Pius VII in Savona. – The English want to abduct him. –
Account by Cardinal Bemetti. – The Pope's translation at Fontainebleau.
Pic VII, isolated, 'signs the so-called Concordat of Fontainebleau.' – Pacca, di Pietro and Consalvi. – Letter from Pius VII to Bonaparte. – Secret address From Pius VII to the cardinals. – Annulment of this Concordat. – Mr. Thiers and his History of the Consulate and the Empire. – Pius VII is released.
Fall of Pempare. – Return of the Pope to Rome. – The Pope and Europe.
narchic reaction to Napoleon's captivity. – Restoration of the Church. – The

228 BOOK II.

Cardinal Consalvi in London. – The Prince Regent and Consalvi. – Consalvi at Congress of Vienna. – Death of Pius VI. – New attitude of the Revolution–tion opposite the church.

The French Revolution, which, through sit-ins and uprisings constitutional, bestowed eternity upon so many ephemeral things mothers, had announced to the whole world the end of the Pontificate supreme, and the eternal enthronement of the Republic Roman. The Executive Directory, meeting in Paris, had constituted the jailer and almost the executioner of an old man, with the avowed aim of hastening the widowhood of the Church. With Pius VI dead, it was humanly impossible for the Sacred The dispersed college convened in conclave. Everything had been Thus prepared, thus resolved long ago. The men tasked in France and Italy with ensuring the success of this the conspiracy displayed such zeal and such threats, that Everything seemed to be working towards their triumph.

The Senate and the Roman People, the famous SPQR of old eagles, so cruelly translated by the ironic so little that rierij were much more protected by the fran– army French than by love or respect for their citizens emancipated. Every morning they crowded the Sacred Way which leads to the Capitoline Hill: unfortunately, one day in the i– their happiness, its consuls, its censors and its The tribunes took the wrong road. Instead of turning towards At the Campidoglio, they disappeared amidst the rubble. of the Tarpeian Rock, closer than ever to the Ca– pitole.

In the eyes of the apostates of Paris and Rome, every master was good; they followed the nearest one without worrying about the better. They had set and multiplied their traps. so that Pius VI would be the last of the Popes, as well as Louis XVI was the last of the tyrants. They were counting on the uncertainty of the princes, regarding the self-serving calculations of their ministers and on the exhaustion of the people. The Kings had never been able to agree, never knew how to unite in a holy brotherhood of efforts, in order to wrest Europe to the convulsions of war and the perpetuation of anarchy shit. But, as Bossuet says with admirable rai– his: "The future always turns out very differently than we do not think, and the very things that God has revealed things happen in ways we would never have planned.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 229

After the various attempts against which failed William Pitt's genius, these manners did not even lull plus Christian and monarchical hopes. Faith The Church did not waver; it resigned itself. Deprived of She waited for her pastor in exile or in tears. that Providence saw fit to signal his action. The Pro- His evidence did not fail him. Providence made the events serve him. political movements leading to the triumph of the Papacy; the revolutions the resolutions of empires contributed to the accomplishment of heavenly designs.

Since Bonaparte's first campaign, Italy groaned under the yoke of the Directory; but Bonaparte, then in Egypt, could no longer defend its conquest. What until now has been the impossible becomes Suddenly, the simplest and most achievable thing. rivalries, misunderstandings, hidden ambitions, of sad miscalculations had, since 1792, maintained between The cabinets of the powers, a fatal division. Their ar- women, lining up and getting beaten by each other after the others, had not produced a great captain nor a great military achievement. Suddenly, Emperor Paul I, from Russia, places itself at the head of a formidable alliance.

230 BOOK II.

Souwarow, his field marshal, marches across Europe of the race, and, in the plains of Italy, he extends his hand Austria on one side, England on the other. McDonald's- Nald, Moreau and Joubert are fighting against this new adversary Saire. After heroic battles, Macdonald is defeated At the Trebia, Joubert succumbs to Novi, and the infidelities the victory forces the Republicans to abandon the country. On September 30, 1799, as a consequence of these successes, as prodigious as they were unexpected, the English, united to the Neapolitans, seize Rome; then a fleet Ottoman forces take control of Ancona.

Long ago, the barbarians of the North crossed the Alps to sack the city of the Caesars; the ships of the Turk, infested- both the papal shore and forced Sixtus V to protect Behind thick walls, the Madonna and the pious treasures of Lorette. Today, twenty peoples, astonished by the link who bring them together, march to liberate Catholic Rome- lique. In this countryside, where everything is wonderful, the fearlessness of the vanquished, as well as perseverance of the winner, there is no trace of ulterior motive or of calculation. Extraordinary thing! The princes forget their disagreements, the ministers no longer remember their Passions: all are fair, all are moderate. Good— Soon ambitions and interests will regain their dominance; But at that moment, everyone is dominated by a thought. higher. It seems as if the sky, deigning to contribute to their work of reparation inspires in everyone a profound sense— administration of justice.

Russians, Englishmen, and Turks improvised— seized the allies of Catholic Austria; by a subsequent not interrupted by victories, they open at the Sacred College the doors of the Conclave. The Cardinals, sheltered by the bayonets

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 231

Souwarow's nets, emerge from all the places where the de— Magician banished them. They arrive in Venice, where Bonaparte, master of France's destiny through his coup d'état of On 18 Brumaire, he will be careful not to disrupt the election which is getting ready.

The French Republic and its Directory dethroned Pope Pius VI and persecuted the Roman Catholic Church. The Republic— The republic no longer exists in name; the Directory has sunk to universal acclaim, and twenty-two Days later, the Conclave assembled peacefully.

In the midst of this gathering of princes of the Church, all purified in the crucible of tribulations and having all passed through Exile, or suffering, is noted as a secretary from the Conclave a prelate whose name will soon be one of the glories of the Apostolic court: this prelate is Hercules Consalvi. A protégé of the Cardinal Duke of York, Henry IX of a Fictional England, the last of the Stuarts; the most courtier a regular visitor to Mesdames de France, Adélaïde and Victoire, in their misfortunes so nobly borne, Consalvi the par—

1 It has often been said that Cardinal Consalvi was the son of a peasant of Toscanella. Without attaching more importance than the cardinal himself by chance or by the privilege of birth, we believe we are performing an act of historical justice by letting him recount the origin of his family and his name. This passage is taken from the Memoirs on the various periods of his life. Consalvi explains it this way:

“I was born in Rome on July 8, 1757. I was baptized under the name of Hercules, in the church of Saint Lawrence in Damaso. I am the first of four brothers and one sister, who died in infancy with my three— sixth brother. My parents were Marquis Joseph Consalvi, from Rome, and the Marchesa Claude Carandini, of Modena. My ancestor, the Marquis Gregory Consalvi was not Roman, but from the town of Toscanella.

He was not a Consalvi either, but a Brunacci. The Brunacci family was one of the noblest families of Pisa; it has been extinct for only a few years. in two women, the last of this family. About a century ago and a half that one of the Brunacci of Pisa came into the ecclesiastical state, and

232 BOOK II.

He ran a brilliant career in the prelateship. He is one of those in Rome who supported the energy of Pope Pius VI, and who, in the most difficult circumstances, held Heading through all the storms.

The events were exceptional; history dictated it. that men were crowned with the same halo. It was therefore on Consalvi that she shifted all her interest. the election. Several French, Italian, or German writers settled in Toscanella; it is from him that my ancestor Gregory descended Brunacci, as evidenced by the testimonial letters of his birth, and those of his ancestors extracted from the parish registers. The family Consalvi, of distinguished status, but not belonging to the nobility Roman, resided in Rome. The last of them, named Hercules, left his inheritance to Grégoire Brunacci, with the responsibility of taking up arms and his family's home, as evidenced by his will. Thus, Grégoire Brunacci became Grégoire Consalvi. Enriched by the wealth of the house— His son Consalvi, he settled in Rome, where my father Joseph was born.

"Upon the death of the two Brunacci ladies of Pisa, my family could have..." inheriting part of their property; but the abolition of trusts, decreed in Tuscany by Grand Duke Leopold, had preceded. It ren— made this acquisition somewhat dubious.

"I paid no attention to it. The desire to acquire has never been my passion." Sion: moreover, my existence, without being opulent, was sufficient for a modest maintenance, thanks to the various incomes from the positions I have held successively. Thus, placed by a favor of heaven outside of Without any vanity or ambition, I never had the idea of doing con— to be born that I was a Brunacci and not a Consalvi, when jealousy or The ignorance of my titles led people to speak of my family as a family of new nobility, and not old like the Consalvi were not. I could easily have refuted these accusations or errors. Convinced as I am, the most precious nobility is that of the heart and of actions, convinced at the same time of the falsity of these allegations, and convinced that I was indeed a Brunacci, and not a Consalvi (which I— (and they knew very well), I scorned these rumors, which I could to bring down instantly, by bringing my offspring into the open of the Capitol. I did not change my point of view, when the position The higher elevation I reached later made the path much smoother for me. Do it.

Mands have seized upon, each from their own point of view, this Conclave on foreign soil; then in stories, which are sometimes innocent tales, sometimes polite fables ' tics, arranged according to the needs or whims of the narrator- Consalvi, the rating agency, prepares and directs the future selection process with a profound skill. The knight Artaud de Montor, in his History of Pius VII •> Mr. Thiers, in his History of the Consulate and the Empire, make him speak, make him act as the regulator and moderator of all participants pants to the vote. Consalvi was more modest and more ve- ridiculous.

During his exile in Reims in 1812, he wrote about the events in which his name is associated with notes or memories. These memories, which are the true story, history stripped of all embellishments and all the more or less questionable assessments, should not to see the light of day only when the holy memory of Pope Pius VII would be attacked. It is in these terms that, in his will- In a handwritten letter, Cardinal Consalvi made known his last will. It is carried out today, thirty- five years after his death; and one of the rarest fortunes of my writing career will be, after a few others similar joys, having been associated with this a work of historical justice and pious reparation.

The handwritten documents of this great statesman are entrusted to me.² I therefore leave the secretary of the Conclave

1 Cardinal Consalvi died in Rome on January 24, 1824.

2 These documents, which it might not yet be appropriate to published in their entirety, they are in the Italian language, entirely written in the hand of Cardinal Consalvi, signed and annotated by him. The cardinal divided them into four parts.

The first is entitled: Memoirs on the conclave held in Venice in 1800; to explain how the events unfolded. The real- semblance will gain at least as much as dignity from The Church. We are translating from the original text.

234 BOOK IT

"Of the forty-six cardinals existing at the death of ' Only thirty-five people were able to intervene, according to Pius VI. By ma- women, whether from old age or other causes, were em- The cardinals whose names follow were caught: Bathyani

(who died during the Conclave), from Frankenberg, of the Rochefoucauld, of Laval – Montmorency, Ranuzzi, of Rohan, Migazzi, Gallo, Sentmanat, Mendoza and Zurlo.

"We waited for Cardinal Hert-" zan, who was also to occupy the position of re-featuring the imperial crown.

"The government of the German emperor appointed the meeting place was the convent of Saint-Georges, in the island of that name; he granted a sum of 24,000 écus Romans for the expenses of the Conclave,

"I had been in Venice for a long time, an exile."
of Rome and accused of the crime of loyalty to the Church and to my sovereign. I had been an auditor of the Rota; I was all naturally appointed as secretary of the Conclave, and
The cardinals entered it on November 30, 1799.

"After a few days, the polls seemed to indicate that Cardinal Bellisoni would be elected; he was gathering already eighteen votes; after him came Cardinal Mattei, who had ten.

"Cardinal Albani, Dean of the Sacred College, committed then the fault of allowing Cardinal Hertzan to send

The second: Memoirs or recollections of the concordat signed in Paris on July 15, 1801;

The third: Memoirs on the marriage of Archduchess Marie-Louise;

The fourth: Memoirs on various periods of my life.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 235

a letter, in order to consult the Austrian Chancellery to find out if she would give her exclusive to the cardinal Bellisoni. However, the response from the Viennese court was delayed.
a lot. It was a pretext on her part. She desired very keenly that there was no other elected Pope than the Cardinal Mattei. More than anyone else, it was believed, perhaps-to be wrongly disposed to ratify the cession made by the Holy-Seat of the three Legations. This cession was wrested by France at the Treaty of Tolentino. The chances of war gave the three Legations to the imperial army, and the
The court of Vienna wishes to add them to its hereditary states.
from Italy.

"That is the only great and sole reason that made to postpone the election for several months. This reason would have delayed even further, if the urgent needs of the Church and the fear of scandalizing the faithful. The cardinals finally decided on a kind of compromise.

"It was therefore agreed that those who supported the party Cardinal Mattei's choice would determine the decision; but the Pontiff would—The signatory was believed to belong to Cardinal Bellisoni's faction. Things happened this way; and Cardinal Chiaramonti was unanimously appointed on March 14, 1800.

"The new Pope was to be crowned on the eighth day after his election. The governor of Venice pre—appeared to have received neither orders nor a response to his request for this ceremony. Consequently, he declared he could not—see allow it to take place in the basilica of Saint—Marc. He also refused to cover the costs of the Ceremony. The donations and generosity of the faithful made it possible. saw and beyond. The exaltation took place in the church of Saint George, with a huge crowd. The In the evening, the whole city lit up; the government did nothing.

236 BOOK II.

» By order of his court, Cardinal Hertzian insisted a lot with the Holy Father, with the aim of making a name for himself—The cardinal, secretary of state, was an imperial subject.

The Pope, who for several reasons did not accept this choice, nevertheless did not want to begin his pontificate by a refusal of the first request addressed in the name of the gou—government in whose states the Conclave had found hospitality. The Holy Father simply replied, "that, Not yet having a state, he did not believe he should choosing a Secretary of State with whom he felt no affection need; and that, for other matters, he would employ the prelate secretary of the Conclave, continuing his functions tions with the title of Secretary to His Holiness.

"The Viennese court (and here we note in terms very deliberately making this distinction, just and necessary, the court of Vienna and not the Emperor, whose dispositions per—His sonnelles were excellent; but his ministry, that is—that is to say, mainly Baron Thugut/who knew how to forbid access to the emperor's residence to anyone who could give to Her Imperial Majesty information on the true state of affairs. Thugut, in short, acted in the spirit of Kaunitz and Joseph II). The court of Vienna therefore made, from the very first days and through Cardinal Hertzian, very earnest appeals to the Holy Father for the de—to conclude by first undertaking a trip to Vienna.

These requests were not heeded, because in these events
Such hasty decisions meant that no one should have tied their hands.
side and not expose the Papacy to further affronts
"Like in Kaunitz's time."

Consalvi's account, as simple as it is instructive, is ac-
It doesn't really work with all the fine speeches and scholars.
calculations that history attributes to him; but he reveals to us what

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 237

History had never known before; it was the action of José-trying phism, after all the upheavals of which the
The world was the stage, to resume against the Church its work of silent persecution. In his Memoirs, which the posterity will only know today, when all the ac-directors of these great historical scenes will have since Having long since descended into the grave, Consalvi hastens to establish a dividing line between the sovereign and the minister. He doesn't want the imperial family to be confused with riale with the court of Vienna or its Chancellor advisors-Lerie. Later in the story, we will see, as the to note Consalvi, with all sorts of authority and precaution, that this distinction was as accurate as necessary.

The cardinal continues in these terms the revelations which History has kept the secret so well:

"Then Marquis Ghisleri arrived in Venice, in qua-
His Imperial Majesty's ambassadorial commission. The envoy of Thugut, rather than the Emperor, first made me con-to be born that the government of Vienna, after having forced the French army to withdraw, occupied itself, and to in turn, the former Papal State up to the gates of Rome. After the French left, the rest of the heritage was in the hands of the Neapolitan troops, who also, they pretended to want to retain at least a part.

"The imperial government was, according to the Marquis" Ghisleri, quite willing to return to the Holy See the provinces he had conquered by force of arms, with the exception, however, of the three Legations of Ferrara, of Bologna and Ravenna. These provinces had been de-volumes to the French Republic by the peace treaty of

238 BOOK II.

Tolentino; the imperial government understood the con-to serve as having ceased to belong to the Holy See. Thugut demanded a new investiture by confirming-tion of the previous one, and in compensation for the remainder of the State, which he claimed to be ready to leave to the Holy Father.

"From these strange revelations, we understand what was my surprise. I tried to make Ghisleri feel com-
His proposal was indeed superfluous and insulting. Bad-
Despite everything I could tell him, he persisted in wanting that it be brought before the Holy Father. I declared to him that the Pope would never condone such an outrage. Ghisleri persisted in explaining to me the dangers of refusal, and in particular with regard to the restitution of the remainder of the Papal States. Defeated on this point, the envoy of Thugut made another request. His government
He would be content, he said, with two of the three Legations. I I persisted in the same refusal.

"I had given this absolute and formal refusal on behalf of the Sovereign Pontiff. Ghisleri himself reported the aforementioned proposals to His Holiness. The Pope responded with a formal demand for full restitution from all States of the Church, including specifically the Legations. A official dispatch, written by me to the Minister Baron de Thugut, and a letter in the Pope's own hand addressed to the Emperor¹, were directed towards Vienna, in order to give no more weight was given to the request. Letter and dispatch did not receive There was never any response whatsoever from the Imperial Court.

"The Holy Father, seeing that he would wait in vain, said to

1. Note in Cardinal Consalvi's hand: "Everything that is said in this written about the Viennese court during the time of the Cuiclave was the work of Minister Baron Thugut, who succeeded in closing all avenues for to reach the Emperor himself.

PIE Vil AND NAPOLEON. 239

Ghisleri, in another audience, these remarkable paroles: "Since this restitution is so stubbornly refused, also governed by Religion and by justice,
The Emperor should think carefully about this. It is because by putting- both in his wardrobe clothes that are not him, but in the Church, not only will he not be able to get away from it to serve, but they will also transmit the moths to his his own clothes, that is to say, to his hereditary states.

Ghisleri, who knew how to restrain himself, did not respond to this argument of the Holy Father; but, running immediately At my house, he complained about this language, and said with a extreme irritation: "The new Pope is a good spirit"

He is a novice in the field, and he knows very little about power. of the imperial household, because, in order to introduce the ringworms in her wardrobe, she needs a lot, a lot, beautiful-cut. "

"The event soon proved the words of His Holiness. Two months had not yet passed, and the battle The Battle of Marengo (June 14, 1800) caused Austria to lose not only the Legations, but also Lombardy. The French victories only slightly diminished the post-sessions of the Empire.

"The Austrian ministry feared the involvement of the people and the respectful cheers in the Legations, if the Pope were to cross them. Thugut therefore opposed this that the Sovereign Pontiff should take the overland route. The Bel-Lona, an old, poorly equipped frigate, had to be used for the voyage by sea to Pesaro. This journey lasted eleven days. From Pesaro to Ancona, it continued by car; and at the moment where the Holy Father arrived in this last city, the new-The young woman of the Marengo defeat also succeeded. The consequence of this memorable battle was the cession simultaneous throughout Piedmont and Lombardy up to the Adige.

240 BOOK II.

"The Marquis Ghisleri, at heart an honest and religious figures accompanied the Pope on behalf of the Emperor. Upon learning of the disaster, he couldn't help but tell me, with tears in her eyes: "I unfortunately see s-to fulfill the Holy Father's prediction; yet she had It seemed impossible and outrageous when I had overheard in Venice.

"The official return of the territory to the Holy See" from Pesaro to the gates of Rome took place in the town of Lorette. A few Austrian troops alone-They remained garrisoned in Ancona; then soon they returned to Venice by sea. The Pope continued in sous-verain his journey from Foligno, and he arrived in Rome July 3, 1800.

"The Neapolitan troops, who were still there," came to meet him. His entrance was a true triumph. He went to pray in St. Peter's Basilica, to the tomb of the Apostles, then from there he went to the Quirinal, where on the evening of that same day General Nasalli, at in the name of the king of the Two Sicilies, he restored the territory to him. route from Rome to the borders of Naples. Under pretext to occupy the capital of the Christian world as military post, Nasalli, despite my prayers, did not consent never to withdraw its troops. It took the treaty of Florence came to force the hand of the Sicilian government. Later still, this government decided to evacuate The Duchy of Benevento, an enclave within the kingdom. Nean- less so the Neapolitans retained civil power there. No longer daring to prevent the installation of the pontifical authorities In their official capacity, they sufficiently demonstrated, by their actions, this that they would have liked to do in more favorable circumstances favorable.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. U\

To prepare for this return, to which Cardinal Consalvi makes us attend, it was necessary to overcome difficulties of every kind. They no longer came from the Revolution French: Josephism, which administered in Vienna and at Naples tried to create a thousand obstacles. Thugut and Acton, claiming to be the interpreters of the Germanic Caesars and the Bourbons of Naples, were stingy with the Papacy who, with no other strength than his moral prestige, had more contributed that their armies contributed to the triumph of the principles social. But the Baron of Thugut, raised in the school of eighteenth-century sophists, successors of Kaunitz, friend of Ghoiseul, of Pombal and of Florida Blanca, con- damned the sad pride of not humiliating his reason under the hand of a divine power.

Hating the Revolution more for its effects than for its He felt himself caught in the middle of contradictions because of his causes. the most blatant. By his public actions, he was destined to to condemn or combat demagogic maxims; by its secret aspirations, he desired its success. Minister of a a Catholic and legitimate government, it had for its part- the mission of protecting the threatened Church, and of ensuring the security the rule of the throne. His ideas did not agree with his interests. In this alternative, and in order not to compromise everything compromising at the same time, he began to declare war on the Revolution and the Church.

Thugut was maneuvering the Austrian cabinet on the the most important questions as well as the most delicate. He hesitated when he should have acted; he acted when he should have. He had to remain neutral. He coveted possessions of the Priesthood, at the very moment when the Revolution threw his focus on those of the Empire. Such a policy,

 For him, the science of paperwork had truly become a skill.
 double standards, reflecting the character of Austrian diplomacy an appearance of Josephian slyness, of which she was long steeped in, and which alienated many from noble hearts. The House of Habsburg had as its aim-special mission, in the midst of the turmoil, to safeguard religious and monarchical principles. Thanks to a deviation which, under the reign of Emperor Franz Joseph seph, will be largely bought back, the Austrian Chancellery-
 The female dog persisted in her conciliatory attitude.
 towards the Revolution, and indirect attacks against the 'Holy See. By such a disastrous tactic, obviously Having just left the encyclopedic workshop, Thugut had compromised-
 He put more than his faith into it; it seemed as if he were striving to expose the honor of his masters.

The Pontiff granted to the universal Church in circumsuch extraordinary constants is, by the purity of its life, by the eminence of his talents, and by a singular
 An expression of morbid gentleness painted on her face, the height of the misfortunes and glories to which the Providence destined him. Gregory Barnabas Chiaramonti, born born in Cesena on August 14, 1742, he was initially a Benedictine monk.
 bishop of Tivoli, then of Imola, and cardinal. Parent of Pius VI, honored by his friendship, and having, through happy qualities, won the esteem and almost the tolerance of the me-
 In terms of songs, Pius VII may have had rivals. He would have been It's impossible to call oneself an enemy, so full is the milk of kindness.
 Humanity overflowed from his heart. He did not believe in evil.
 His throne, which already possessed the gentle majesty of an altar, was naturally surrounded by respect and love.
 A law of clemency seemed to rest on his lips. He

Typ. Henri Pion.

THE PAPA PIUS VII.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 243

he stole from envy without shrinking from glory, and his
 The spirit was so high, that there was never any room for the small things. Chiaramonti proved more worthy of honors that he is ambitious to conquer; honors did violence to his modesty. To see him, and especially to hear him-tender in his apostolic palaces, one arrived very quickly to convince oneself that the kingship of Christ, written on his clothing and on her own body, she radiated even more vividly in his soul.

By taking on the burden of the tiara, this Pope, at with such a clear gaze and such an expressive face, had accepted a heavy responsibility. He had come to an era of upheaval and crisis where men, Even the best among them stubbornly refused to understand. in order to be excused from doing good. There were crimes of all kinds to atone for, monstrous injustices to re- to prepare, touching misfortunes, noble exiles to consecrate- Pius VII had understood all of this, too, in his encyclopædia. accession clique, dated May 15, 1800, and addressed, according to custom, to all the bishops of Christendom, he does a large share to those who suffer. "We are experiencing, he said, with profound sadness and deep sorrow in his heart- astounding those of our children who live in France; we we would sacrifice our lives for them if our death could to bring about their salvation. A circumstance diminishes and softens the bitterness of our grief: it is strength and constancy that several of you have shown, and which have been imitated by so many people of all ages and genders and of every rank. Their courage in not sullyng themselves with a servant illicit and culpable, in order to continue obeying the decrees and to the sentences of the Holy Apostolic See, will remain eternally engraved in our memory, as much as the 46.

244 BOOK II.

cruelty, renewed from ancient times, with which one continued these faithful Christians.

It was in Venice, during his dispute with the minister from the Austrian court, that Pius VII, turning his gaze towards France, he tried, with gentle words, to to maintain some, to strengthen others, and to pre- To prepare for all an era of peace and reconciliation. Oc- cut into the interior of his Rome to heal the wounds- still bleeding wounds that the Revolution brought to The Pontiff makes no secret of his position to either the Church or the State. Salvation or ruin will not be born solely from France. The life or death of peoples seems linked to a movement the order of his armies, to one of the thousand shocks that throw This country is at its extremes. France seemed tired. of anarchy; in its exhaustions as in its shames, She felt a genuine need for order reborn within her. moral and material.

By having fun destroying the idols with his own hands of blood and mud, which she was forced to descend into abjection.

civic and constitutional sacrileges, France
A happy present and confident future.
Under the protection of Bonaparte's sword, new destinies unfold before her, and the First Consul, whose victory at Marengo cemented his authority, desired to con-
to consecrate, through a sincere return to God and his Church, the work of repair that his genius undertakes. He respects the Holy See; to ensure it is respected, he says to his messengers: "Treat the Pope as if he had two hundred
"A thousand men under arms."

Four days after the battle, on June 18, Bonaparte wrote to the other two Consuls: "Today, despite I'll tell you what our Parisian atheists might say about it.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 245

grand ceremony at the Te Deum which is sung in the metro-Milan pole.

In order to carry out this act of high politics by-More than courage, one had to be something other than a happy soldier. The next day, Bonaparte crowns the solemnity of his first Te Deum, praying to the cardinal Martiniani to serve as his interpreter with the new Pope. He defeated anarchy; in the hope of consolidating
He bases his edifice on Religion. He asks to Pius VII to second his efforts, and to help him restore and to pacify. This unexpected opening, made on a battlefield, had to go straight to the heart of the Sovereign-
The Pope. Barely back in Rome, the Pope responds that his dearest wish is granted; then Consalvi, re-dressed in sacred purple and appointed Secretary of State, begins negotiations with the French government.

Twenty years ago, in Y Histoire de la Vendée mid-Literary, we recounted this triumph of the Christian faith
On revolutionary impiety, we wrote:

"The First Consul may well have let it be said that he would be a new Monck; but it wasn't a role secondary which was supposed to smile on this general, whose ge-
The scope was as vast as the ambition. With ideas ad-admirable in their power and social organization, Bona-Parte thought that on the ruins of anarchy, a child of the Revolution alone could rise. To compress the turmoil of evil passions, and to restore to the France, its rights so long ignored, its duties so Long forgotten, a man of iron and intelligence was necessary. This man needed no ancestor but

1 History of the Vendée military, by J. Crétineau-Joly, vol. II, p. 460 and following (4th edition).

246 BOOK II.

his victorious sword. He had to, by energy or by the seduction, to draw these desires into its new path rebels for ten years against all yokes. Bonaparte, great an even greater warrior and administrator, he imposed himself on these party factions which, in order to bring about the triumph of misery-unstable constitutions, dragged France along in the wake of their deportations. He took it upon himself to investigate the ruins, to heal the still bleeding wounds, to restore the country's dignity, to put the government back in the head of civilization, and to rebuild everything on the old foundations that demagogic ideas had shaken- He regulated force to achieve order.

"What the Vendée military had done with the insurgency-tion, he tempted him by persuasion, he accomplished it by the audace. The prestige of his victories fascinated the people; he took advantage of his influence over minds to bring them back to the ideas of faith and monarchy. This soldier, still so young, and whose life was spent in anguish of republican misery or in the intoxication of triumphs, from what source did he then draw the principles that he resurrects with such authority? How can this general, lulled by the sounds of religious apostasy, raised in scandals of all kinds propagated by images sick ginations, was he able to understand so quickly that there are Things that never die? This is where it's revealed The influence of the Vendée was fully felt by Bonaparte. wished to build a new social structure in which he would the cornerstone; but, without taking into account the obstacles inevitable reactions that the various sects would provoke in him, not-health through all the phases of ridicule before arriving at the negating all forms of worship, he admirably grasped that there was no had no stable power other than that of which the Re-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 247

Religion was the foundation. It wasn't in Paris yet. defiled by the shameless profanations of the deities of the past tionnaires, it was not the provinces that, with indifference-rence, had let the storms rage above their heads of impiety, the mockery of the cult of Reason, which he asked for advice and support. No doubt, faith was not extinguished in the hearts of populations who had not had the courage to resist tyranny. She slept alone-

ment; but in the Vendée, it was vibrant, it had fantasized about martyrs, and produced miracles of self-denial and heroism. With each peace proposal that one addressed to the peasants mutilated by the Convention, hunted down like wild beasts by the Directory, these noble priests Those vilified by oppression had only one answer. This The answer was a lesson for Bonaparte's genius: "Give us back our God!" said the Vendéans. It was a protest that seven years of appalling calamities, sacrifices of every kind and unknown glory, could not to stifle. The First Consul saw that this was not by a motive of heroic daring or by courageous madness that the royalists had renounced all happiness servants to face all kinds of misery.

"This man, whose gaze was so penetrating, and who had exhausted a question at the very moment when one was looking for— This man appreciated the scope of his work. and the moral consequences of the great act of insurrection monarchical union. In order to be at peace on the throne that he reserved for his ambition, and to wrest from the hands of the Vendée, the weapons that previous pacifications had not— had been able to bring her down, he dared to give her complete satisfaction faction. In the midst of this mocking and skeptical society who had trembled under Robespierre's incorruptibility, who had smiled at the corruptions of the Directory— The First Consul gazed with admiration at these such strong and pious characters of the Vendée standing out with such purity of this painting of all the depravity— human actions. His profound thoughts lingered on some and on the others. On one side, we saw the peoples who had accepted everything from the hands of the Terror, everything, even the denial of God; of P, another, humble farmers who, on the corpses of their families and on the ashes still steaming from their cottages, they required nothing for The only compensation is the freedom to pray to God. Between these two Given the clear divisions, did Bonaparte have any reason to hesitate? Didn't he know that the apostles of atheism under Chaudron— depending on the circumstances, they would be either devout or impious. at his leisure, and that he only had to give an order to be Obey!

248 BOOK II

"To the generals of the Republic, to the tribunes whom the democracy had shaped its exaggerations of equality, He lavished gold and the promise of noble titles: • it was the salary reserved for these patriotic acts of selflessness, to these lovers of human rights, whose measure he had. But to the Vendée, to this religious population, that

In his military enthusiasm he proclaimed a people of giants, he surrendered his faith, firmly convinced that he could not—would never be able to rally consciences to his authority as long as this high level of satisfaction would not have been granted to them. The Vendée and the revolutionary demands had not no other rights to claim. The Vendée proved that her efforts had not been in vain; she proclaimed—He insisted that it was not for the purpose of narrow selfishness. that she had risen up, but in a thought of moral—religious and social faith formation. The First Consul to him

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 249

He won his case; he resurrected Christian France. that the blood of the Catholic western provinces had redeemed from the depravities of impiety, and he resurrected her at profiting from monarchist ideas. The alliance of religion and the monarchy is indeed too intimate for a people being simultaneously revolutionary and Christian. The de—Magogy excludes faith.

v It was under the influence of this ever-present thought to his mind because it is true, that Bonaparte treated with the Vendée leaders; he understood their repugnance that they felt compelled to serve a political cause that was not theirs. At the dawn of greatness, he even respected these repugnant feelings; but, in agreement with the Royalists on He left the major religious interests to time or to persuasion, the task of winning his loyalties, which he... viait.

"The First Consul," wrote Abbot Bernier on February 15th February 1800, is an extraordinary man, who feels by—in fact that all the sacrifices made by the Vendéans can be condemned to sterility. When I tell him piety and acts of courage of which I have been more than once The witness's face lights up; one would think he was jealous of These soldiers whom he did not command. He told me more than one times: "I would be proud to be from the Vendée;" and he asks me

It was only for their princes that our peasants thus faced all dangers. I replied that the The Bourbons certainly had their share of such devotion. ly, but that the majority of peasants do not fought as well as because their

to faith and to their priests. More than once he has already told me: "I I will give them all back: shouldn't we do something? "For those who have done so much for religion?"

I am certain he will do it: perhaps no man has ever
"So well understood the scope of things."

Without knowing Bonaparte personally, Pius VII, with the sagacity of an Italian and the foresight of a leader
The Church, in general, passed the same judgment; it pre-
It is a pleasure to place the same hopes in him. They arrived having come to power just a few weeks apart,
They were allowed, while deploring the past, to dear-dear to rebuilding the future. Strangers to the latest
They came to put an end to the struggles. Bonaparte Invoking the moderation of Pius VII, the Pope appealed to the soldier's Christian sentiments. Both were studying the means of dominating the Revolution, by weakening its prestige.

The Revolution had seized upon even the most imperceptible things.
avenues of power; she occupied them through her henchmen or by its usufructuaries. While obeying servilely, after having tyrannically commanded, she trembled before the sword, in order to better raise her head in front of the tiara.
The Revolution humbly placed itself at the command of the pre-
First Consul; nevertheless, this submission was rather in both form and substance. We were going to meet the Bonaparte's desires; one could guess his wishes, one could enter in his ideas; one could even carve out a place for oneself in the sun of his glory; but, through a series of deceitful obsequious gestures, one hoped to link his goodwill towards the Roman siege. The Revolution had made the sacrifice mo-
She was made aware of his cruelties and his licentiousness: she did not consent never give up the hatreds and prejudices that she nurtured hatred against the Church.

In this era of sudden rises and falls sudden again, a civil authority, whatever it might be, did not

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 251

must have seemed temporary to these men who, since Seven years had broken or degraded everything. A riot happy, a change of opinion or a punch-gnard, could, from one moment to the next, plunge back into the France and Europe in the abyss of demagoguery. With the Church, such guilty hopes were not per-
His marvelous vitality was revealed in the very midst of it.
persecutions. A triumphant Pontiff succeeded a Pontiff who died in exile, to a Pontiff whose coffin, solemnly returned to the Christian Basilica, served From flag to reconciliation. Then, on the ruins amont-concealed around this ephemeral Republic, the Chair of Pierre still dominated the world, as if to attest the sterility of the wishes and efforts of anarchy.

To directly oppose the will of the First Consul, it was losing, without any appreciable benefit, the chances that the future still held in store. It was therefore resolved to obey officially and to obstruct, through all sorts of in-secret schemes and calculated distrust, the movement religious figures, of which Pius VII and Bonaparte gave the signal. Impiety pretended to give up the fight. After a cam-loincloth of public sacrileges and bloody profanations Afterwards, she went back to her tent, but she left on the ground of partisans more tenacious than she. The Revolution had found in Jansenism and Gallicanism secular, having become a constitutional church, allies that failure was no more deterrent than apostasy. Revolution yielded to them the floor; of their inveterate hatred Against Rome, she made herself a shield.

The reconciliation of the Holy See with France was the overthrow of all anti-Catholic projects. Bona-
The party has spoken; all that remains is to submit ostensibly

BOOK II.

blement, and to cover the path with hidden traps which the Priesthood and the Empire must ultimately achieve desired.

A man of whom Bonaparte, Consul and Emperor, had had the idea of making him his independent advisor and monitor-private tutor, he explained to him, even at that time, the difficulties concerned about his situation. Fiévée wrote to the First Consul [:

"Political Republicans are almost all..."
people-quite respectable because of their integrity, but that the The unfortunate results of their attempts were all the more surprising. that they have not converted them; therefore they will do it again whenever they find the opportunity.

"Incapable of making a movement on their own"
Decisive for their cause, they are preparing this movement, and When he has an abortion, they appear to justify it with their speeches and by that ascendancy conferred by probity. All the works that today deny the Revolution in his violence, while continuing to praise political principles the techniques that brought them, originate from the hands of the republicans Citizens of opinion. Provided that no one is killed, or that one kills very few, we see them following all the situations-tions that can give their opinions a chance;

but they do not belong to any government; their kingdom is not of this world.

"These men are more dangerous than we think; in all circumstances that could be decisive, we saw them present themselves as intermediaries between the factions, and prolong the Revolution with false conciliations, which perhaps they were not fooled by. I don't No doubt the current government has often

1. Correspondence and relations of Fiévée with Bonaparte (1802-1813), t. I, p. 14 and following.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 253

encountered on his journey, and, if I were bolder, I would have—I would assert that he must have been more embarrassed by their tempo-measures taken by the most active parties.

"The republicans of interest, I mean the revolution-men consecrated by the blood they shed, have become politicians since they can no longer show their fury. Called upon for almost every position, some even to trust, being able to guess the plans of the leader The state, far from showing opposition, they are putting in place warmth to ensure its success; but, in silence, they cause to fail what they seem to support, or, when This is impossible for them; they are diverting public opinion. from the joy of a present good to striking her with fears come. This tactic may explain how the first Consul was always an acquirer, through astonishing victories Nantes, a popularity that seemed destined never to end to finish, and of which no trace was found for some weeks later. The message from these men is that one must use Bonaparte, and, to achieve this goal, to exalt all his passions rather than trying to calm them. Foreigners Those who visit France are mostly surprised to see that the The first Consul inspires less enthusiasm there than in outside. This observation, which is true, and which I had I had the opportunity to do so in England, for several reasons that it would be interesting to look into. I will stop at the most natural.

"The Revolution having exaggerated popular expectations" laires and having produced only greater unease, the The people, always fooled by those who exalt them, were waiting so many of his flatterers, that nothing can be done for him who approaching what he had been promised.

"He hopes, however, that every government which will happen and bring about the happiness with which he had been flattered. Also, eight days after the general peace!, people were wondering at Paris, what good resulted from it! Such is the people that the Revolution has formed.

The internal situation, captured in the act by a writer deeply versed in the secrets of politics
Having left, he thus reveals himself to the First Consul. This situation has its difficulties of all kinds. Apart from the material-lists from the Institute, which, after having broken down France, strive to chemically decompose thought, and who shudder with anger at the mere mention of God, he arises from everywhere, from schisms and divisions. The constitutional clergy, on the one hand, persists in its usurpatory tendencies and in this moral disorder which wounds Christian society to the core. On the other hand, the Faithful clergy are beginning to raise their heads. The scaffold and The persecutions decimated him without weakening his zeal. could never separate him from the Roman Catholic communion; This perseverance gives him strength and a title.

Having remained on French soil, the priests had, in the the secret of their charity, words of patience and hope to whisper in the ears of the flock whose guard their is entrusted. When the satiety of crime finally brings a Little peace and quiet, these priests reappear in the midst of towns and countryside; they reappear with a halo sanctified by suffering. In churches without enclosures rooms, without altars, without ornaments, and where every stone the temple is still covered with images of lust They only speak words of peace; they do not preach They say that forgiveness of insults is necessary.

But this clergy has no leaders. The holders of the bishoprics--

1 The Peace of Amiens.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 255

Many French citizens died, were exiled, or emigrated. After having worthily borne the burden of the bad days, they wait, in the calm of their consciences, for it to please to the Holy See to reward their devotion with a solemn act of justice. Pius VI encouraged them; his successor Can the emperor on the throne abandon them?

Thus, Fiévée is not afraid to reveal it to him with a rather rare frankness, Bonaparte did not feel master of all his movements. The Revolution dominated him. born against his will. All the while allowing him to be pacified by victory and to govern by the brilliance of intelligence, she knew nevertheless impose indirect conditions on the one who no one was bothered by him. He had barely arrived at the helm of the business, he had seemed to want to follow the advice that Cardinal de Retz gives: "The great secret of those who Entering the workforce requires first and foremost capturing the imagination men through an action that some circumstances that makes it special.

"In less than a year, he had performed miracles." According to the word of the prophet, he found the peoples man-kicking up dust like snakes, and terrified (like the beasts that crawl on the earth. By energy acting on his own will, he takes it upon himself to calm these ter- | reurs, and he succeeded. Peace had just returned to the minds, he wants to make it enter into consciences, because He firmly believes that everything that cooperates in the rest of the Church and the liberation of Religion contributes thereby contributing to the salvation of the Empire.

The engineering corps' mission is to preserve or restore, when he comes too late to create; Bonaparte restored- He knew, then. He always recovered happily when he followed his inspirations; unfortunately sometimes, when the impetuosity of his character and the pride of the victory delivered him, unbeknownst to him, to the suggestions of the schism or demagogic intolerance.

256 BOOK IT.

Joseph Spina, Archbishop of Gorinthe, was summoned to Paris with Father Caselli, in order to open negotiations relating to the Concordat. The issues to be resolved are as difficult as they are numerous. The questions of per- These sounds clash with matters of principle. The fact is that... every moment encroaches on the law; the lie substitutes for truth, and paradoxes try to beat undermines ecclesiastical power. Eraser in all the important transactions, it rises with every step of the misunderstandings, demands, compromises, uncertainties attitudes, rapprochements and distrust.

Spina and Father Gaselli spoke as con- theologians summoned; Abbot Bernier, the priest of the Vendée Militaire, was the Consul's mouthpiece. Joseph Bonaparte and Cr  tet do not appear yet. There was no agreement on the things nor about men; suddenly the First Consul, whose very natural slowness tires one's forbearance

Having quickly become exhausted, she decides on a masterstroke. Cardinal Consalvi enjoyed the most intimate confidence of Sovereign Pontiff; Bonaparte wants the Cardinal to come in person in Paris, in order to remove all obstacles and to smooth over all difficulties. On the orders of Pius VII, Consalvi sets off.

The man of the sword and the man of the church will find themselves face to face. We'll see if, as in the holy Scriptures: "The patient is better than the brave, and if He who tames his heart triumphs over he who takes cities.
1 Proverbs, 16:32.

I

N^Sà

Typ. Henri Pion.

CARDINAL CONSALVI

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 257

Although both still young, they possessed, to the highest degree, the genius of politics, the coquettishness of women, and the consummate caution of veteran diplomats. Like all the great Italian minds that Machiavelli admired, all two are not simple, but half swans, half foxes. Bonaparte is bold by calculation and audacious to cool-headed. With his eyes that flashed like lightning and his His lips, heavy with thunder, reach the sweetness through feigned abruptness or borrowed violence. He threatens victory, in order to seduce more surely. Its austere beauty possesses no less authority than grace. He is armed with sarcasms, stinging like hell-stone nale; it looks like a gold mine, sometimes liking to cover itself of fake stones.

Consalvi, insinuating like a perfume, knows how to make herself a duty never to neglect the art of useful complaisance, provided they are honest. Perfected nature with the most exquisite kindness, he lavished everything to assist within him lies the extreme desire he has to please everyone. In his words as in his attitude, one recognizes the senator. Torius, the decor of a patrician from old Rome. His handsome head, who will never bow down before force or before

Hatred radiates with restrained frankness and serenity.
intelligent. Seeing him, you feel that no man has ever been born will not show a wiser application of skill in virtue and calculation in righteousness.

With Bonaparte, he will look at the minor incidents like victims that must be sacrificed to the great business. They both know admirably, when they Those who wish to do so, take the ear of corn in its proper sense; nevertheless the ambitious concerns will never make us forget the Prince of the Church, that all that is done well is done

I. 47

*8 ^ BOOK II.

always early enough. When these two men are going to meet-worm in the presence, trying by all the charms of the spirit of diminishing their flaws in favor of their qualities
In terms of titles, we will see which one will develop the better this temperament of hope and patience, vethe statesman's true temperament.

Most contemporary authors, in analyzing the negotiations that preceded the Concordat, adopted the version that the Intruders and the Jansenists had in-Interest in disseminating. The facts are pretty much everywhere.
they are the same; they differ only in the way they fuappreciated rent. For almost sixty years, we haven't understood that only one party; that it is finally permitted to the story of giving the other person a voice. Thanks to the names-
From numerous previous works, we know of what the way the events unfolded and were judged by the Gallicanism and the Revolution. Let's now listen to how Cardinal Consalvi exposes and elucidates them. For it is A serious witness is one who has seen; this is a more serious one.
even though he who saw the events and took part in them a certain share. The best of all is the witness who recounts, in the peace of his conscience and in honesty of his heart, the affairs he directed. The cardinal ex-premium therefore as follows:

"Writing these memoirs almost after" eleven years of in-tervalle and without having the relevant documents in front of them on the subject, not only will it perhaps lack some facts and circumstances that are no longer present in my mind took hold, but it could still happen that he slipped in some error, an uncertain date or something else seems-Nonsense. Nevertheless, nothing will be found there, for sure.
that which is very accurate and very true regarding the substance, and finally, it will be revealed with what instructions and what fidelity each of the two parties proceeded in this negotiation, one of the most important of the history of the Church.

"Returned to Rome on July 3, 1800, and barely recovered" in the possession of the patrimony of Saint Peter by Austria And in Naples, the Holy Father was immediately besieged by new fears, because, after the Battle of Marengo, the The Republic of Piedmont and Cisalpine Gaul reappeared until... than at the borders of the ecclesiastical state.

"Through Cardinal Martiniani, Bishop of Vercelli, the Holy Father was invited, on behalf of the first Consul, to be sent to Turin Monsignor Spina, archbishop of Corinth in part, inf., to deal with him matters of religion in France. Monsignor Spina, who had followed Pius VI in Valencia, was therefore directed to Turin, with orders to hear and report, con ordine di sentir ee refe- laughter. While Spina waited in vain in Turin for to deal with the First Consul, suddenly he is re- qu'de aller en Paris, où Bonaparte assigns him ren- Dismissed. Monsignor Spina took the road to Paris, em- leading as theologian Father Caselli, general of the Servite order. I no longer remember if he had the time to first apply and obtain a response Answer. In Paris, he received only offers. unacceptable; difficulties were raised upon difficulties, without nothing real or that could be favorable to Religion.

"But then, unexpectedly, Mr. Cacault arrives in Rome," without any official title, without direct responsibility to negotiate, but nevertheless negotiating and managing the affairs of the Republic-French republic. Mr. Cacault was personally a A rather good man, and already very well-known in Rome. His lan-47.

260 BOOKS

This pledge initially gave the Holy Father hopes, because each of his words guaranteed excellence slow preparations of the French government. During this Meanwhile, negotiations with Monsi- continued in Paris. Gnor Spina. We were hardly making anything but proposals. unacceptable, and yet the situation was such, in France, that the smallest concession would already have been accepted as a benefit. The government of the Republic opinion argued, he exaggerated this argument to...

to achieve one's goals faster and concede as little as possible.
He kept repeating "that the Pope's persistence in His refusals would produce extremely amoral consequences.
res not only for the Catholic faith, but also for the temporal dominion of the Sovereign Pontiff.

"These threats surprised the Holy Father; she did not de-"
They did not encourage them. The Congregation of Cardinals ad hoc supported him in the lath. Even if it meant risking losing everything In his temporal domains, he was very determined not to compromise on no essential point. If necessity compelled him to do so,
He preferred to sacrifice everything else. Monsignor Spina received his instructions in this regard; I drafted them under the eyes and almost under the Pope's dictation.

"Amidst this waiting and uncertainty," Monsignor Spina received no reply. On these en-
Mr. Cacault notified that if, within five days, we had not signed the draft Concordat drawn up in Paris, and this without the slightest change, without the most Indifferent to amendments or restrictions, he, Cacault, had to leave Rome immediately and go to Flo-Rence, his legation, to General Murat. This departure ipso facto notified the break between the Holy See and the France,

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 261

"To obtain a delay, or at least to have While waiting for a reply from Paris, I did all that that it was permissible to do. Mr. Cacault retreated into his instructions, which, he claimed, he was forbidden to to deviate from any point. The Holy Father was content to say with his usual placidity: "I retract my case
"Into the hands of God."

"The proximity of French troops and the malicious acts"
the arrangements of some agents of disorder do not gave too much cause for concern in the event of a breakup. Finally Mr. Cacault suggested, then insisted on, the immediate departure for France, the Cardinal Secretary of State. I had to go from my person in Paris; the First Consul demanded it, and We couldn't fail to get along. It was, re-Cacault was farting everywhere, the only remaining evasive means for to prevent the overthrow of the authority of the Holy See.
Whatever one might say, it was a necessary step. However
It was agreed that in order not to arouse suspicion among the people or to some dissatisfied people, no trace of a break, the mid-
The French minister would leave in the same car as me.
We were supposed to travel together to Tuscany, and the Things happened thus: I left Rome on June 6, 1801, terrified by the heavy responsibility that would weigh upon him on my head.

"After a two-week trip, during which I only took rest in Florence, Milan, Turin and Lyon. I arrived in the early hours of the night, from Rome to Paris, overwhelmed with fatigue and still unaware of what The way we would have received the news of my mission, having vainly awaited en route a response to the communication the action that had been taken by the State Secretariat Monsignor Spina as soon as my departure had been decided.

262 BOOK II.

I went to stay at the hotel where this prelate was lodged with his theologian, Father Caselli, and I couldn't find any subject of consolation in the account they gave me of the state of things.

"My first thought the following morning was to inquire to form the first Consul upon my arrival, and to ask him—der at what point I might have the honor of seeing him. I asked him at the same time what costume he wanted me to introduce myself. This request was necessary—saire, because at that time the ecclesiastical habit in Paris, as elsewhere in France, was an absolute thing—out-of-use lument. The priests were dressed as the secular clergy; the churches consecrated to God were dedicated to Friendship, to Abundance, to Marriage, to Commerce, to Gardens, to Fraternity, to Liberty, to Equality and others deities of democratic reason. None were visible. outward signs of religion. Republican ideas were still in full possession of all the uses of the society. Everyone was given the title of citizen: he was given to me during the journey, well that I should be clothed in the insignia of the Cardinalate. I had not I didn't think I should leave them for a single day, although I did This demonstrates more courage than prudence. In the capital of France however, and especially in presenting myself both in front of the head of government, it is obvious that the matter required a certain circumspection on my part. tion. I didn't want to give up my clerical garb, but I also didn't want to display the Cardi- insignia natal to some unpleasant accident.

"To forward the aforementioned requests, the abbot..." Bernier acted as my intermediary. This clergyman had was one of the main leaders of the Vendée, in his struggle heroic against the Republican government. The same ecclesiastical had later been the most active instrument of the pacification of the royalist provinces, when, deprived of all outside help and overwhelmed by the most atrocious violence of an infinitely greater force, they had should consider themselves lucky to be able to accept the conditions peace terms less harsh than those of the new government consular, in his own interest, had had the wisdom to to offer them. The fortunate intervention of Father Bernier in such an important matter had put him in favor with of the government, which, having decided to appoint a newborn-negotiator, from the very first openings with Monsignor Spina had wisely chosen him over any other, because he combined within himself the knowledge of the subjects clergymen, the negotiator's skill, and reputation of a man who, on the one hand, could not be suspected of Holy See, no less for the purity of its principles than for the cause he had supported, and which, on the other hand For his part, he had every interest in not losing his recent merits that he had acquired from the government to which he had rallied during the pacification of the Vendée. This ecclesiastick, which until that moment had always dealt with Monsignor Spina, having scarcely received the news of my upon arrival, he hastened to visit me, and it was through him that I sent to the First Consul the communication which I just mentioned.

"The First Consul's response was more prompt than someone who desired a certain interval between arrival and presentation, less because fatigue from the journey as well as lack of time for to obtain some necessary or useful information, which could at least serve as a light and a rule for him in an initial interview. Father Bernier returned immediate with this response: "That the first Consul He would receive me this very morning, at two o'clock afternoon, and as for the costume, which I was supposed to come in "Cardinal as much as possible."

26i BOOK II.

"This response, which I found unpleasant because of its excessive..." great promptness also put me in an awkward position by not making no mention of Monsignor Spina, who, not having yet been presented to the First Consul, he I didn't think he was allowed to accompany me, which put me obliged to go completely alone, to my great displeasure, given the novelty and my com-

complete picture of the situation I was in. As for coming as cardinal as I could, I did not feel at a kind of embarrassment. Although I understood that he wanted me to attend the hearing in great distress red tane, I reflect that the cardinals do not present themselves were in this costume only in front of the Pope, and that it was through abuse only that some cardinals went so far dressed at the court of the sovereigns, of whom they were subjects birth. I therefore resolved not to present myself until... short black dress, with stockings however, the barrette and the red collars, as cardinals usually wear outside their homes, when they are not on duty.

"At the appointed time, the master of ceremonies of the Cour is at my hotel, as Abbé Bernier had told me warned; he took me in his car, and, alone with I arrived at the Tuileries. I was ushered into a sa- along the ground floor, called the ambassadors' lounge The master of ceremonies told me to stay there. for a few moments, until he had given notice of my arrival. I remained alone, seeing nothing around me.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 265

I was left with nothing but profound loneliness. I had probably been in- deliberately introduced by this silent and solitary side of the pa- lay, so that at each step my surprise would be greater, and greater also was the embarrassed impression that should naturally be the result. And indeed, the master ceremonies resumed shortly afterwards, and having informed me that I could proceed to the hearing of First Consul, gesturing towards a small door which overlooked the vestibule of the grand staircase of the pa- But I truly felt the same surprise as he did to experience a sudden change of scenery in the theatre when from a cottage, a wood, a prison, or from In any other similar situation, one suddenly moves to dazzling spectacle of the most magnificent court and the more numerous.

"That was the day, as I have since learned, when it took place at the Tuileries the grand parade, which, at that time, renewed every two weeks, and which were attended the three Consuls who represented the government, the heads of state, that is to say the Senate, the Tribune, the Body legislative bodies, high-ranking palace officials, ministers, Generals and other orders of the State, and a number immense crowds of troops and spectators. The first Con- Sul wanted me to go to the hearing for the first time once in this solemn circumstance, in order to give me- to give, I believe, an idea of its power, to strike me of astonishment, and perhaps also of fear. He will not be

1 This is the account of the presentation of Cardinal Consalvi to the first frnsul, and their first meeting at the Tuileries. This account comes from the Cardinal himself. Mr. Thiers, always so well-informed about the great events, even down to the smallest details, have a completely different version.
rent, and he arranges things this way:

"Cardinal Consalvi arrived on June 20 (1 Messidor) in Paris. The abbot

266 BOOK II.

It's not hard to imagine that a person arriving in Paris
the previous night, without being warned, without knowing anything customs, traditions, or personal dispositions the images before which she appeared, and which was re-dée in a way as the author responsible for the the negotiations pursued up to that point had yielded a poor result.
must have felt from such a device, as imposing as it was... expected, a deep emotion and even the most visible embarrassment. Unable to imagine that my first au-
I would be given permission in public, and completely ignorant-
Regarding the circumstances of this parade ceremony, I I thought that this multitude, which filled the vestibule and the staircase, had rushed over out of curiosity, having learned (without that I could imagine how) my presentation to Tuileries. The sound of drums at the highest marks rooms, staircases, living rooms and anterooms, all filled with richly dressed figures, the great dignitaries silences that crowded there, and that it was impossible not to recognize them by their costumes and attire.
filled me with ever-increasing surprise.

"I finally arrived in a living room where I saw only one person-"
The sonnage who came to meet me greeted me without...
to say a word, then walking with me and preceding me-Dant led me into an adjoining room. I didn't know
So who was this character? I learned later.
that it was the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. de Talleyrand, a name all too familiar in the events of the Re-

Bernier and Monsignor Spina rushed to receive him, and reassured himto review the First Consul's arrangements. The costume was agreed upon in to which he would be presented at Malmaison, and he went there, deeply moved by the idea of seeing General Bonaparte. The latter, well warned, took no chances with the id to add to the cardinal's troubles. » History of the Consulate and the Empire, by A. Thiers, t. III, p. 255 and 256.

evolution so that I need to add to it here. I thought that he had just introduced me into the first office Consul, and I reassured myself with the hope that I could Finally, to be alone with him. But what a surprise it was, when—that, as this last door opened, I glimpsed in a vast hall, an immense multitude of characters, disposed as if for a dramatic turn of events! At the back of the room, the various bodies were symmetrically arranged. of the State (which were, as I have since learned, the Senate, the Tribune, the Legislative Body and the high courts of the magistrates), and on the sides, the generals, officers of all ranks, ministers, senior civil servants of the State, and ahead of everyone else, detached and isolated three characters whom I later learned were the three Consuls of the Republic!

"The one who was in the middle took a few steps alone towards I, and it was only by conjecture that I sensed Bonaparte, a conjecture soon confirmed by his attitude of Minister Talleyrand, who, always at my side, introduced myself to him. I then wanted to say something to him compliment him and tell him about the subject of my trip; but He didn't give me the time, because I was barely there. He immediately spoke to me, and said in a tone In short: "I know the reason for your trip to France. I I want the conferences to open immediately. I'm giving you five days, and I'm warning you that, if, at the end of the fifth day, the negotiations do not are not finished, you will have to return to Rome. whereas, for my part, I have already made up my mind about such a hypothesis.

"Such were, without another word, the first paroles that Bonaparte addressed to me, with an air neither affable not abrupt. Then he fell silent, waiting for my reply. I said then: "That the dispatch made by His Holiness of his prince—The chief minister's presence in Paris was proof of the interest she led to the conclusion of a concordat with the government French nement, and that I flattered myself with the hope of being happy enough to finish it within the time frame that he desired." Either that this first answer did not give him would not have been displeasing, even if he had not conceived an idea of me too unfavorable, seeing that with the grace of God I I was not disturbed by the unusual spectacle. of this imposing apparatus, that is, that he had resolved in advance, to do after our meeting what he actually did, Nevertheless, after this exchange of our first He suddenly got to the point with these words, and for more for half an hour, in the same attitude and in front of He spoke to everyone about the Concordat, about the Holy-Seat, on Religion, on the current state of affairs, and even on the rejected articles, with vehemence and an inexpressible abundance, without anger however nor harshness in language. I answered everything with this that I felt I should say, without any mental turmoil (I repeats, by a special grace from heaven and in no way by my own merit) and leaving no complaint against Rome without a proper justification. This is not the place. the place to report everything he said on this occasion: That is not the purpose of this writing. But I cannot help but-sin by recalling only one thing, solely as an indication he gave from that moment of his aversion for the religious society I am about to discuss. He said, therefore "which he could not see without astonishment and scandal" the Pope's union with a non-Catholic power as was Russia, manifested by the restoration the Jesuits at the request of Paul I (who had just finished (by a tragic death). This union, he added, must obviously to upset and offend the Catholic King, then-that it is designed to please a schismatic sovereign. I replied with great candor that he had been very poorly informed on this matter, given that if the Holy Father had not thought it necessary to refuse the Emperor of Russia the He had not reinstated the Jesuits for his states. acted without the consideration his mother commanded him affection and his high regard for the King of Spain, and that the proof lay within the interval of several months elapsed between Paul I's request and the sending of the Bull, which had only been sent after the The Pope would have made sure that the Spanish court would not find there no grounds for complaint.

268 BOOKS

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 269

"After a few similar responses from me to many other things he told me in that first In a public hearing, he ended by repeating "that we begin- This would therefore immediately halt negotiations, not having he had no time to waste, given the big business he had in "Hands." Then nodding at me like He greeted everyone, then stepped back a few paces to the place where were the two other Consuls and dismissed me from the sort. I then made a bow (as I had done at my entrance) and I left the room, accompanied by Mr. de Talleyrand to the place where he had come to my meeting. From there, the same master of ceremonies ac- He accompanied me and drove me back to my hotel.

"Not a single day passed without Abbot Bernier came to see me. He told me "that he had received from the first Consul ordered negotiations to begin immediately—tasks, which were to be completed within five days, and that, failing a conclusion after this deadline, I could to leave again. He added that the government wished to con—to give in detail the Pope's reasons for the refusal to adopt the Concordat project purely and simply presented in Rome by Mr. Caeault. » It was the same pro—a proposal that the Pope had rejected when Monsignor Spina I had passed it on to him. I had made known the reasons for his refusal, as well as the reasons for the amendments and the modifications that had been made and that France had rejected. Abbot Bernier "wanted to have from me on this the object a memorandum that he would have to submit to the first Consul the following day.

270 BOOKS

"Not yet twenty-four hours had passed" since the moment of my arrival, after a journey faster and the most devoid of any rest, including that of the night, and I had to indulge desires that orders appeared, so as not to give, from the com—At the beginning, there was no cause for discontent, and so as not to not to alienate the mind of the man who was in command and who was already used to encountering no obstacles to his wishes. I reserved my refusals for what would be intrinsic—seque on the subject whenever the matter required it. I I therefore believed I had to go over everything that was... personally, and I promised that it would be done.

"The Memoir, the fruit of a night's vigils, was submitted" the following day to Abbot Bernier, and through him to Mr. de Talleyrand, who was then to communicate it to the pre—First Consul. The purpose of this Memorandum was to justify the rejection of the draft concordat as it had been sent by the French government, and to show what there is there was something reasonable and fair in the modifications demanded by the Pope. I pointed out there that the Pope,

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 271

at the same time as he gave in to so many things, not he gained nothing on his side, reduced as he was to being content of the mere re-establishment of Catholicism in France, without none of the prerogatives he had previously enjoyed there, and that he still possessed in all the other Catholic states liques. I concluded that if, for an object as large as the restoration of religion in France, the Pope of-

He was going to consent to all sorts of sacrifices, he could not to be reduced to that of principles, which, in matters of Religion, were invariable and never allowed that error or false maxims were substituted for the truth and the laws of the Church.

"The result of this dissertation was not a happy one. Far from it."
to recognize the reason that guided the Pope in his refusal to subscribe purely and simply to the fran- project
The Spanish; far from admitting the truth and importance of the sacrifices the tricks the Pope was doing by simply being content with the only the change he had made, the minister's report to the First Consul, upon presenting him with my Memoir, was as brief as it is strong and significant, and singularly unique to turn him against me and to confirm his idea that my zeal for the cause of the Holy See was especially excited through my personal hostility towards the government French. Mr. de Talleyrand wrote in his own hand to the margin of the first page of the Memoir I had written These words, which I saw later, were spoken by the First Consul myself, when the Memoir passed into the hands
by Abbot Bernier: "The Memoir of Cardinal Consalvi has pushed the negotiations back much further than any other.
the writings that preceded it.

"Such an unfavorable report, although it greatly displeased-"
The first Consul, however, did not slow down the course negotiations. I have already warned that this document did not have not at all intended to report its content, nor toto delve into the substance of the matters that were discussed there, in reproducing the reasons that determined the Pope and his agents to adopt or reject such and such clause.

272 BOOKS

Since all of this is located in the offices of the Secret-
State silence and detailed relations of the negotiation that she received, I refer you to it. The purpose of this The writing is to give the story, I would say the external one, of the negotiation, and not the internal history of the case, ex-accepted this part of the background, which has too much connection with the interior or with some related event (as we will see later), and that we would not pass, without prejudice to the intelligence of the principles of conduct who guided me in these circumstances. I am content-based on a few observations.

"The work involved in these negotiations could not have been more stubborn; although they were not finished in the five prescribed days, each of the additional days was con-always stunned, like the last one. One can easily imagine What fatigue and discomfort surrounded each conference!

and each report to be written. It was necessary to pass the nights and still find the time to change, to correct what we had written before handing it in. Besides the con-
I had two daily meetings with Abbot Bernier with the First Consul in a private meeting.

"Throughout this entire affair, I was able to--"
how to visit the other two Consuls and the minister foreign affairs (at whose house I once dined) and to the ministers of Spain and Austria, without seeing the others and without hardly visiting Paris.

"When I worked with Father Bernier, I was in

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 273

the most disadvantageous position; for, in everything that presented some difficulty, he always assured everyone that he could not-- was not going to decide anything; that it was impossible for him to adhere to my reasons, however obvious they may have seemed to him, obliged as he was to refer it every day to the first Consul. As for me, on the contrary, I was never permission to send a letter to inform and consult the Pope, under the pretext that one should necessarily to conclude the following day. My capacity as plenipotentiary
I was told that this exempted me from any recourse to Rome.
when they were afraid of hearing me prove that nothing of Nothing like it had been seen in any treaty, and many less so in matters of Religion, where, lastly Analysis shows that it is the Pope, and not his representative, who is the master and regulator.

"Nothing helped to make these negotiations less bitter, even less likely to obtain better conditions lures for religion, no more all the facilities possible, nor an obvious spirit of conciliation, nor a reasonable eagerness, as well as all sorts of selflessness. Indeed, the Church and the Holy See not only made the most enormous sacrifices of money, territory, prerogatives and rights;
but I never proposed anything in these negotiations temporal object, such as the recovery of provinces lost, the repair or relief of ill-months that the Church had suffered.

"Finally, no effort was spared, certainly,"
No care, no effort, no good manners, no demonstrations of firmness and vigor which could, depending on the circumstances, lead the matter to the

The best possible ending, given the possibilities in which one finds oneself-

I. 18

274 BOOK II.

France was, the character of the one who governed it and the combined efforts of the unbelievers, the constitutional clergynel, as well as all enemies of Catholicism and of Rome.

"The best testimony to all of this is undoubtedly..."
that of the two representatives of Austria and Spain loincloth, and especially the first one. The Count of Cobentzel was, as is known, the minister of Emperor François, sent expressly to Paris to deal with Jes af-
He then went onto the rug. He came and pressed me several times.
of all his influence to complete the Concordat. He repeated to me-it was constantly said that if the First Consul did not arrange not with Rome, if he definitively broke away from the Head of the Catholic religion, the fire and the resulting ruin would not be limited to France, - although this single loss was incalculable for the Church, - but that the First Consul would want accomplices in his defeat
tion, in order to lessen the impression in the eyes of the people and the horror, and to prevent its unfortunate consequences to his authority; that he would gird the hand, as he had said more than once to other governments, and led-Germany, Spain, Italy, and the Switzerland, Holland, and all the countries where his influence was felt Power already boundless and irresistible. The ambassador Austrian listed all the fatal consequences of a such a revolution, both for Religion and for the State. He did-knows how to highlight the immense difficulty, not to say the impossibility of repairing, in such matters, the losses already consumed (as history teaches) and experience), even in the supposition of some change, which at the time did not appear in all its forms points of view that are in a very distant place. It me

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 275

conspired, for the very good of Religion and the di-towards States, to attempt everything that was decidedly not impossible for the ratification of a concordat without which The universal ruin was irreparable.

"These observations and prayers, all too true and all too based on the current position and the nature of the regulator of common destinies, did not make me for-so much as not deviating from a single line of my instructions nor from my homework. I felt its full force, I discovered its full force. the importance. Nevertheless, they had no other effect than to confirm me in the determination that was imposed upon me the Pope's own orders, namely: not to break the negotiations and not to reject the Concordat, because that I would not have obtained it as well as possible, but not to conclude it either, by going beyond the instructions that had been given to me, and which I have as mentioned above.

"It is always with this perspective in mind that I have continued," for about twenty-five days (I couldn't predict- (to refine further), the conferences with Abbot Bernier, being perpetually assisted by the prelate Spina and the theo- I worked in collaboration with them; they attended all the interviews, gave in common With me, every day, the answers to the proposals of Abbot Bernier, and together they determined the objections to present to him. This is not the place to say what efforts, What anxieties these conferences caused, what obstacles... Incredible keys were found there; what were the claims of the French government, in what ways? Traves was placed the one who acted for the Holy See; for This is not the main purpose of this writing, as I have said at the outset. There is one point, however, that I do not 48.

276 BOOK II.

then pass over in silence. It's necessary to justify not so much the one who dealt with the Concordat in Paris (the matter is already made by the reformed concordat project in Rome before my mission, although it was rejected by the Government French, failing several concessions for others objects) that the Holy See itself, which believed itself in the inevitable necessity of adhering to it, after having exhausted all imaginable means and efforts to de- I will turn the French government away from this request. I want to talk about the matter of the resignation of the former bishops.

"The First Consul had declared from the outset that he it was essential to reduce by at least half the number of the former bishoprics in order to be able to endow the new, with regard to the usurpation of ecclesiastical property- that we had to consider irremediable, unless that no one should try to see it as an insurmountable obstacle to the restoration of Catholic worship in France. He had declared again in a stronger and more immutable manner that the new government had no confidence among the titular bishops, supporters of the old government nement, for which they had generally emigrated to the continuation of the expelled dynasty; that he had no intention whatsoever of following price that they occupy the new seats, apart from those who, having resigned, would then be named appointed to new seats by the Government area, to which they would be indebted. Before I had been sent from Rome, the Pope had made efforts unspeakable things to divert the Government from this claim, but the Holy Father encountered resistance invincible. The French Government formally declared- the fact that a concordat would never be made, and consequently

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 277

that the Catholic religion would not be re-established in France, if the Pope did not get involved in one of the articles keys to the Concordat (as seen in the draft of the government), to have the former bishops given their resignation. In case of refusal, the Pope was obliged to declare their seats vacant and canonically institute on the new sees the bishops appointed by the new the government, in the name of its sovereign authority.

"When the Pope was convinced beyond any doubt that he restoration would only be achieved at the price of this article of the Catholic Religion in the Populous Provinces of France, he had yielded, albeit with the most extreme bitterness, due to the force of circumstances, and this in the opinion unanimous of the Sacred College. He considered the very great good or the very great evil that would result from the restoration the ment or the non-restoration of Religion in this country, not only for France itself, but for the states that it would bring into its party, during- that this decisive defection of the Catholic Church would take place lique. He also considered that, assuming that the an- These bishops refused to contribute to such a good. immense and prefer their own interests to those of Religion, that fact alone made them unworthy of being... for them, disastrous regard for Religion and the Church. Moreover, the history of the Church offered striking examples of this conduct in similar and even less frequent cases urgent.

"These considerations had therefore decided the Holy Father" to accept this article, even before I had left Rome. But I knew how cruelly that thorn tore his heart. I therefore did not let, in the course of the negotiations- ciations of Paris, to attempt all the labors of Hercules

$7* BOOK IT

(allow me an allusion inspired by the name that I wear) to persuade the First Consul to renounce it. It was in vain that, in our private conversations, I tried to... I forced him to taste one of all the reasons that I could imagine for that purpose. In vain I represented to him- I felt that the ancient Bishops, before him, were recalling them. at the head of their Churches, would have every obligation to him gation, and that this bond, joined to that of the oath they They had to lend him money, they assured him of their loyalty. When I seeing that all these arguments were useless, - he replied- done by others who claim to be drawn from the nature of the heart human, and consequently of stupidity, as he expresses himself. First, there is reason to flatter oneself that they would change their hearts and would attach themselves in good faith to the new government - I tried out a pattern that seemed likely to embed it to wear. I relied on the maxims professed in France. I argued to him that the much-vaunted privileges and the those famous liberties of the Gallican Church were about to receive by this fact a blow which the histories of the country do not contain They certainly provided no example. Have it filed by the Pope, by an act of his supreme authority, four- twenty or one hundred French bishops all together, in case where they would refuse the demand for the resignation of vo- the legal proceedings imposed on them, to detain them without trial, without judgment, to replace them with new ones, if, I was saying, it's not unfair, because of the end we wants to achieve, it is certainly to attribute to the Pope on the Churches of France have an authority such that it is sufficient for to bring down the great colossus of its freedoms and privileges They were so highly praised. And it was true.

"I also pointed out that if the Holy-Siège had been driven by the desire to exercise this supreme

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. " 279

authority in a country where she had encountered so many re-resistance, instead of opposing so vigorously, as
At the request of the First Consul, I was playing the Pope at the-should have gladly seized this opportunity; but, I added, his just respect for Bishops, so deserving of the Religion, through their conduct during the Revolution, made him... know how to desire the opposite.

"Nothing shook the First Consul. All I could..."
The outcome was that the Pope would formulate the Brief according to his wishes.
by which he would ask the Bishops for their resignation vo-lontaire. And certainly the Brief was subsequently written in the the most honorable form, and the most unofficial, and the most affectionate as one could wish for them. But it was impossible. It is possible to arrive at a point where no mention was made in This brief outline of the necessity where the Pope would be, in the case of a refusal to override by virtue of his supreme authority, in order to achieve the good of the restoration of Religion in France. I had suggested it, so as not to offend them, in the request itself. The First Consul objected that, without this insinuation, none would give the resignation desired outcome, and that then the exercise of absolute power on a much larger number would become more violent and would make more noise.

"What a cost this Concordat has cost the Holy See!"

I will only say one thing, which is that the price of all his sacrifices, the compensation for all his concessions, the counterweight to all his suffering was always the certainty-study of the total extinction of the schism and the abandonment sincere of the constitutional clergy, that the Government French promised in the most solemn manner and the more authentic as the effect of the Concordat, if we par-came to write it.

280 BOOKS

"Through unspeakable fatigue, suffering, and an-goisses of all kinds, finally the day arrived when it seemed that the desired end was reached, that is to say, the conclusion-sion, as to the substance, of this same draft treaty amended in Rome, which the French government had re-pushed before my trip, and which had prompted the order to Mr. Cacault to leave Rome within five days.

"Abbot Bernier, who carried every evening to the First Consul shared the results of the conferences with us and informed us of his membership, when he managed to obtain it, after the pa-the most persuasive roles and the greatest efforts, an-Nonca finally one day (it was July 13th) that the The First Consul accepted all the articles discussed, and that Therefore, we would subscribe to both the following day. similar copies of the Concordat. After its signing and that of the Pope, these copies were to remain in the hands from each of the two contracting parties. He asked me if I wanted to sign alone, then the brother of the First Con-Joseph Bonaparte, whom he claimed to place on the same rank that I would sign on the side of the French Government-çais; that if I wanted to associate with other people in Regarding the signature, I had to indicate how many and which ones. so that the Government can choose a name for it - equal and of the same quality. I replied that I could I will probably sign alone, since I arrived last

My position and my status gave me the right to intervene at any other previous agent; but that I wanted to acknowledge the credit goes to whoever worked on this major negotiation before me, and to cause no one any displeasure. I added that I would therefore have the prelate Spina and the Theologian Caselli. Father Bernier told me he was going to wear my reply to the First Consul, and that, in the morning

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 281

next, he would come to tell me those that the general would have chosen to sign, which was to take place in the day. He warned me to prepare a copy of the Concordat already agreed to put the signatures there respectively, like him, would, for his part, make a copy of it similar.

"The following morning, he told me that"

The First Consul had appointed Councillor Cr  tet to be the equal of the prelate Spina, and himself, Abbot Bernier, to respond to Father Caselli. He added that it did not seem decent to hold the ceremony of the signing such a solemn and interesting document in a hotel like mine. (I lived, with the two other delegates, at the H  tel de Rome.) Bernier proposed to me, and it was the First Consul's desire to lead me, with my two colleagues, at Joseph Bonaparte's house. I was there consented, setting aside any non-indi-unthinkable. He said he would come and pick us up himself. shortly before four o'clock in the evening, in order to drive us at the agreed place, "• where," he assured, "we would finish with a quarter of an hour, having nothing else to give than six signatures, which, including the compliments, do not "They don't even require that much time." He showed us then the Monitor of the day, where the government had done announce to the public (note this circumstance) the The matter was concluded with these words:

"Cardinal Consalvi succeeded in the object that he..." brought to Paris.

Bernier added that the following day, July 14, where was then celebrating the biggest festival in France, "the Pre-The First Consul wanted to proclaim, at a public dinner of three hundred covers and more, the happy news of the signing of this solemn treaty, which prevailed by many-blow to the Concordat of Francis I with Leo X, by the importance of restoring religion in France, after the unprecedented shipwreck of the Revolution which ve-born to burst.

282 BOOK II.

"A little before four o'clock in the afternoon, Bernier"
He arrived, a roll of paper in his hand, a roll that he did not
He elaborated, but said it was a copy of the Concordat to sign. We took ours, as agreed, and we went together to the house of Citizen Joseph (as they used to say then), brother of the first Consul.

"He received me with the utmost courtesy."
tesse.

"Although he had been ambassador to Rome, I had not
I haven't had the opportunity to be introduced to him, being still only Prelate, in the few days I stayed in Paris, I did not
I hadn't met him, despite paying him a courtesy visit.
as to the brother of the head of government, because he reshot quite often in the countryside. So it was the pre-the first time we saw each other. After the first com-
With compliments, he invited us all to sit down at the table.
that had been prepared for this purpose, and* he also said himself,
as Father Bernier had done: "We will finish this quickly, having nothing else to do but sign, since It's all over already.

"Sitting around the table, we devoted a moment to The question of who would sign first. It seemed to Joseph Bonaparte that this honor was due to him as brother of the head of state. I pointed out to him, from the mathe gentlest touch and with the necessary firmness in this meeting, that my quality as Cardinal and representative
The Pope's order did not allow me to take the second row

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 283

in the signatures to be affixed; that in the former government
In France, as everywhere, the Cardinals enjoyed knew of an uncontested precedence, and that I do not I couldn't give in on one point, not looking, my no one, but the dignity with which I was clothed. I give back to Joseph, this justice, which after some difficulties, he did very graciously retired, and asked me to sign the pre-first. He was to sign the second, then the prelate Spina, the Councillor Cr  tet, Father Caselli, and finally Abbot Bernier.

"So we set to work, and I went to take the feather.

"How surprised I was when I saw Father Bernier!"

offer me the copy he had made from his roll as to make me sign it without examination, and by throwing it with my eyes, to ensure its accuracy, I noticed—were aware that this Concordat was not the one whose commissioners—respective managers had agreed between them, of which was agreed the first Consul himself, but a whole autre! The difference in the first lines made me examine everything else with the most scrupulous care, and I as—I was sure that this copy not only contained the projet that the Pope had refused to accept without his corrections tions, and whose refusal had been the cause of the order given to the French envoy to leave Rome, but, moreover, that he modified in several places, because certain things had been inserted there—certain points already rejected as inadmissible, before This project would have been sent to Rome.

"A process of this nature, undoubtedly incredible," but real, and which I do not presume to characterize, — the thing, moreover, speaks for itself, — a sem—The blatant procedure paralyzed my hand, ready to sign. I expressed my surprise, and stated clearly that I did not

284 BOOK II.

I could have accepted this sheet at no price. The brother of The First Consul seemed no less astonished to hear me to pronounce myself like that. He said he didn't know what to think about everything what he saw. He added that he had heard it from the mouth of First Consul that everything was settled, that there was no more than to sign. As I persisted in maintaining that the exemption—"Plaire" contained something entirely different from the Concordat decree. He could only reply that he had just arrived from the countryside, where he dealt with Austrian affairs with the Count of Cobentzel; that being called precisely for the ceremony of the, signing the treaty, the substance of which he knew nothing about, He was brand new, and believed he had only been chosen for legal purposes. to be conventions accepted by both parties.

"I wouldn't dare, today, to assert with I wasn't certain whether he was telling the truth or lying. I would then recognize it more readily; but I have always been inclined, and I am still inclined to believe that he was ignorant entirely of these things, so far removed did it seem to me from all dissimulation in what he did during this internment A good session, and without ever contradicting himself. Like the other one Commissioner, State Councillor Crétet affirmed equally, and protested knowing nothing, and being unable to admit what I was saying about the diversity of the writing up to which I would have demonstrated to them through the confrontation of two copies; I couldn't help but turn around quickly towards Father Bernier.

"Although I have always sought, in the course of the negotiation, to avoid anything that would have tended to suspend the discussion and to give pretext for irritation and the In a bad mood, I told him that no one was better than him. could attest to the truth of my words: that I was very-surprised by the studied silence I saw him maintain on this point, and that I was expressly calling on him to tell us shared what he knew so well.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 285

"It was then that, with a confused air and an embarrassed tone- Once he'd had enough, he stammered that he couldn't deny the truth of my words and the difference between the concordats that were proposed to to sign; but that the First Consul had so ordered, and had assured him that one is in control of changing so much that we haven't signed. Thus, Bernier continued, he demands these changes, because, all things considered, it is not not satisfied with the agreements reached.

"I won't go into detail about what I replied to a si strange discourse, and by what arguments I demonstrated How much this maxim, which can always be changed before Having signed was inapplicable to the current case. What I I noted it even more vividly; it was the mode, the sur- I used employees to succeed; but I resolutely protested that I would never accept such an act, expressly contrary to the Pope's wishes, according to my instructions and my powers. I therefore declared that if, on their side, they could not or would not subscribe to the one whose It had been agreed, the meeting was going to be adjourned.

"The brother of the First Consul then spoke. He tried in the most urgent way to press on the consequences of breaking off negotiations, no less for Religion than for the State, and no less for France, this large part of Catholicism, that for all the countries where its omnipotence was felt influence. We must make, he repeated, every attempt imaginable ways to avoid surrendering to us, who are present, responsible for such cruel disasters. We must succeed in to understand each other and to get as close as possible; It must be done, that very day, because the conclusion hand.

286 BOOK IT

The Concordat was announced in the newspapers, and that one The signing must be proclaimed at the grand dinner the following day.

"It wasn't difficult," he continued, "to understand" what degree of indignation and fury (those are his words) would become enraged by a character that yielded to no obstacle, like that of his brother, if it were to appear, in the eyes of the public, having inserted in its own newspapers a false news about such a serious matter.

"Joseph Bonaparte therefore implored me to attempt at least, on that same day, an accom- in any way. Seeing me an invincible rep- gnance to discuss the plan contained - in the copy of the government brought by Abbot Bernier (I had asked myself, in the answers I gave him successively, as absolutely determined not to touch this plan already rejected by the Pope and definitively excluded from the outset virtue of negotiation), he had no difficulty in to discuss the plan already adopted by my exem- to please. He believed that we should try to change him so that it might be hoped that the First Consul agreed to receive it. The weight of the reflections he had- born to do, and the great politeness of his tone and his mannerisms in what he objected to and replied to me, me did, in the opinion of the prelate Spina and the theologian Caselli, who were to sign with me for the Holy See, con- I finally felt ready to begin this work. I resigned myself to it. less in the hope of succeeding, given my determination unchanging nation of not departing from a point of the the substance of this plan which was rejected after having been accepted, so as not to appear ungraceful and unreasonable- nebulous, by rejecting an attempt at accommodation on such a serious matter, an attempt that was proposed to me with exquisite urbanity.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 287

"So we took hold of the plan of the copy that I had brought it, and we started the discussion towards the Five o'clock in the afternoon. To understand how much She was serious, how precise, how much debated... ceasingly on both sides, how laborious, comp- very painful, it will suffice to say that it lasted, without interruption no break, without any rest, for nineteen hours in a row, that is to say until noon the following day- before. We spent the whole night there, without sending back or neither the servants, nor the cars, as happens when We hope to finish this matter within hours, which is in train. So it was noon. We managed to agree on all articles, with one exception, according to the content of the plan amended in Rome, then accepted in Paris, with what-these non-substantive modifications, and finally rejected inopinned down by the first Consul in the manner that I have described. We had managed to reach an agreement again on all the articles according to the content of the old plan, by means of The new modifications are also non-substantial.

which the Holy See was not to be displeased to the point where things stood.

"But we couldn't agree in any way."

on an article whose amendments by the Government
The French were getting to the heart of the matter, or, to put it better, managed to formulate a maxim that the Holy See could well suffer in fact (as was arrived and arrived again), but that he could never to approve (canonize) as a convention.

"We could not possibly have agreed"

cord on this article, and the hour was about to strike when the brother

288 BOOK II.

the first Consul had to attend the review and report back to him on the signature. It would be im-
It was possible to report all the attacks that were then carried out against me.
true so that I would comply with the government's wishes French on this article. I was being begged to give in, in order to that the brother of the first Consul did not have to pass it on to him
The fatal news of the breakup.

"Nothing could persuade me to act against what was..."

my homework. I remained firm in my negative stance, but I I proposed a course of action which I indicated was the only one that was suitable for me.
permitted. I declared to them that, given the impossibility I was to adhere to what not only exceeded my powers
see, but it wasn't even in accordance with our maxims,
I would sign the rest of the Concordat, leaving in question this article, the decision to which would be referred to Holy Father. I offered to send a letter for the information-mer of the motives of the French Government and my objections against, promising at the same time to do to faithfully and fully highlight the necessity where believed it was the Government that wanted this article, given the demands of the circumstances. I pointed out that, the Concordat cannot be published before the ratifications res-In terms of prospects, this reservation had no adverse results. It did not even prevent the conclusion from being announced in general-sion of the case, because it was not presumed that, re-reduced to a single point, the Holy Father, united with the Government French ment, in a mutual feeling of good agreement, did not find a conciliation joint.

"That," I added, "is all I can do without man-
I must attend to my duties, and I cannot go beyond them.
with one step.

"The validity of my reasons could not fail to

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 289

to strike a blow at the spirit of the brother of the first Consul as with the other two. So we stopped at this method term. The article in question was detached from the part ac-accepted by mutual agreement; then a copy was made of everything Concordat that we had settled in this eternal session, so that it could be immediately handed over to the First Consul by his brother. He told us that neither he nor the two other delegates could not believe themselves authorized to sign a Concordat as different from that of the first Consul had ordered to be presented, without him seeing him first,
He flew to the Tuileries, where they were waiting for him; that he would return with the answer within an hour, or even sooner; but that he trembled at the thought of returning with an answer that was too stupid to indulge our common desires, after such a long, such a long time
It was a terrible and bitter task. He left, and we remained there.
wired with fatigue, sleeplessness, and anxiety, while waiting the decision.

"In less than an hour he was back, revealing on his face, the sadness of his soul. He reported that the pre-
The First Consul had flown into a furious rage at the news of what had happened; that, in the impetuosity
In anger, he had torn the sheet into a hundred pieces.
of the Concordat arranged between us; that finally, ceheeding her prayers, her requests, her reasons, he had consented, albeit with unspeakable reluctance, to accept all the agreed articles, but only for that one that we had left unresolved, it had also remained inflexible rather than irritable. Joseph added that the First Consul had finished, by instructing him to tell me that he, Bona-Parte, he absolutely wanted that item, exactly as he had it.
had it written in the copy presented by Abbot Ber-to deny, and that I only had one of these two options to choose from,

I. 19

290 BOOK II.

or accept this article as is and sign the Concordat?
or break off all negotiations; that he absolutely meant to announce, during the grand meal of this day, or the signing or breaking off the deal.

"One can easily imagine the consternation" sent us a similar message. There were still three hours left. until five, the hour of this meal where we all had to attend. It's impossible to list everything that was said and by the brother of the first Consul and by the other two, to convince me to satisfy him. The picture of the horrible The consequences that would arise from the breakup were among the most dreadful; they made me feel that I was going to ren- to be responsible for all these evils, either towards France and almost all of Europe, either towards my Sovereign himself- even and towards Rome. They told me that in Rome I would accuse me of inappropriate rigidity, and that I would be given the wrongdoing of having provoked the effects of this refusal. I feel- I was going through the anxieties of death, I saw rising up before me All I was told was: I was (it is permissible to (to confess it) like the Man of Sorrows. But my duty He prevailed; with heaven's help, I did not betray him. I I persisted in my refusal, during the two hours of this struggle ensued, and negotiations broke down.

"Thus ended this sad twenty-four-hour session"

whole hours, starting around four o'clock in the morning the previous day, and closed around four o'clock this unhappy day, with great physical suffering as we understand it, but with a much more great moral suffering, and such that it would be necessary to res- to feel it in order to form an idea.

"I was condemned (and that was the cruel circumstance)" of the moment) to appear in an hour at this pompous dinner

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 291

I had to face, in public, the first shock of the im- petulant anger that was about to stir up, in the heart of the ge- General Bonaparte, the announcement of the break that his brother was supposed to carry it to him.

"We returned to the hotel for a few moments; we we hastily did what was necessary to present ourselves to ter properly, and we went, my two companions Gnons and I, at the Tuileries.

"We had barely entered the living room where he was standing the First Consul, a salon filled with a whole world of magistrates, officers, high-ranking state officials, ministers, ambassadors, the most illustrious foreigners, invited to this dinner, which he welcomed us in a way that's easy to imagine, having He had already seen his brother. As soon as he saw me, he cried out, "The

a flushed face and a disdainful, haughty tone:

"Well, Your Eminence, you wanted to rom-
Pre! So be it. I don't need Rome. I will act on my own-Even. I don't need the Pope. If Henry III, who didn't have a twentieth part of my power, knew to change the religion of one's country and succeed in this projet, much more, will I know how to do it and will I be able to do it myself? In changing religion in France, I will change it in almost all of Europe, everywhere the influence of my power. Rome will realize the losses it will have
Do it; she will weep for them, but there will be no remedy.
You can leave, that's the best thing left for you.
You wanted to break up, well then! So be it, since You wanted it. So when are you leaving?

"— After dinner, General," I replied calmly.

"These few words caused the first person to startle"
Consul. He looked at me very fixedly, and with vehemence
To his words, I replied, taking advantage of his astonishment—

49.

292 BOOK II.

ly, that I could neither exceed my powers nor compromise on points contrary to the maxims that pro-
The Holy See is under attack. In ecclesiastical matters, I added, we can't do everything we would do in the temporal things in certain extreme cases. Nonob-Given that, it does not seem possible to claim that I wanted to break with the Pope as soon as we got together.
stretched across all articles, with the exception of one, for which I asked that the Holy Father himself be consulted-even; for his own commissioners did not reject this proposal.

"More conciliatory," the Consul interrupted me, saying that he he wanted to leave nothing imperfect, and that, or he would conclude on all or nothing. I replied that I didn't have the right to conclude on the article in question, as long as he would want it exactly as he had proposed, and that I would not allow any changes. He resumed very sharply that he wanted it exactly as it was, without a single syllable less or Furthermore, I replied that, in that case, I did not under-
I would never cry, because I couldn't in any way-nier. He exclaimed: "And that's why I'm telling you that You wanted to break up, and I'm considering the matter as finished, and that Rome will realize it and pour Tears of blood over this breakup.

"While he was speaking, he found himself near the count"
He turned to Cobentzel, the Austrian minister.
with extreme vivacity, and repeated to him almost the same things as to me, stating several times that he would do, changing ways of thinking and religion in all the states of Europe, that no one would have the strength to resisting him, and that he certainly didn't want to be alone in to do without the Roman Catholic Church (that's his phrase), which he puts-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 293

rather depicts Europe as being in flames from top to bottom, and that the
The Pope would still bear the blame and the punishment.

Then he suddenly mingled with the crowd of guests, repeating the same things to many others. The Count Cobentzel, dismayed, came immediately to me, and began to praying to me, begging me to invent some means to avert such a calamity. He did not describe to me that too eloquently the certain consequences which would result for Religion, for the State, for Europe. I replied that I saw them all too often.
that I was sorry about it, but that nothing could make me to subscribe to what was not allowed for me. He confessed to me that he understood perfectly well that I was right not to betray my duties, but he was surprised that we could not discover some means of reconciliation, and fall Okay, when there was only one item left in question. I replied that it was impossible to fall agreed, and to reconcile, when one claimed to be obstinate-how not to subtract or add a single syllable to the article in dispute, as the first one expressed it Consul, since from then on it was impossible to achieve what customary practice in all negotiations, to knowing that each of the parties, taking a few steps, we They finally met. We opened at that moment the dining room, and we sat down to eat, which broke the interview.

"Dinner was short, and you can imagine that I didn't taste any of it."
Never a more bitter one. Back in the same drawing room, the count de Cobentzel resumed the interrupted conversation with me.
The First Consul, seeing us talking together, approached next, and, addressing the count, he told him that he was losing his time, if he hoped to overcome the minister's obstinacy

294 BOOK II.

of the Pope, and he partly repeated what he had previously stated.

previously, he put the same vivacity and the same force. The count replied that he begged him to allow him to declare that he encountered not obstinacy in the minister of the Sovereign Pontàfe, but indeed a sincere a desire to make things right and extreme regret for this a break, but that in order to reach a reconciliation, it was It was up to the First Consul alone to open the way.

"How?" he replied sharply. "It is," he continued. the count, to authorize a new meeting between the com- their respective ministers, and to kindly allow them to to find a way to introduce it into the controversial article some change suitable for satisfying both parties. Then, added Cobentzel, I like to think that your desire to bring peace to Europe, as you have asked me to do- The promised wind will convince you to renounce this determination. nation to suffer no addition, no subtraction referring to this article, especially since it's really a calamity to consume such a regrettable rupture for "Just one item, once everything else has been adjusted."

"This speech by Count Cobentzel was accompanied" of many other words coming well from the mouth of a truly shameful court, all full of politeness And by grace, which he was very skilled at. And he maneuvered- trua with such wit that the first Consul, after "Some resistance," he cried, "Well! In order to..." to prove that *it is not I who wishes to break up, I agree so that the commissioners will meet tomorrow for the Last time. Let them see if there's a possibility of reconciliation. things; but if we separate without concluding, the breakup is considered done, and the Cardinal will be able to leave. I also declare that I absolutely want this article

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 295

"as is, and I do not allow any changes." And then- He turned his shoulders over us.

"Although these words of Bonaparte were contrary to diction with themselves, since on the one hand it us allowed us to meet to discuss a citizen's con- ciliation, and that on the other hand, at the same time, he demanded the article as is, without any changes, which excluded a conciliation; however, unanimous agreement was reached on take advantage of the opportunity to meet and see if we don't would not find some bias in the arrangement, in the esp- France (if we could manage it) to convince Joseph, his brother, to to bring him there himself. The Count of Cobentzel, who was dealing Joseph, in charge of Austrian affairs, was very well regarded. He spoke to her warmly, all the more warmly because he

he himself seemed to sincerely desire to avoid a break. It was therefore agreed to hold, the following day, at At precisely noon, in the same place, this new session, as we had held the previous one, which was so bitter and so deplorable.

"I won't recount how I spent that night."

painful, but I cannot remain silent about how much they have increased my anxieties when, in the morning, I saw him enter my In the room, Prelate Spina, with a sad and embarrassed expression, and that I heard him confess to me that the theologian Caselli came out of his room, where he had come to tell her that he had reflected all night on the incalculable consequences the traps of the rupture; that they would be more than 100% fatal to Religion, and that once they arrived, they would- were going to be irreparable, as the example proved of England; that seeing the First Consul declare that he remained steadfast in his refusal to admit of changes in the controversial article, it was determined-

296 BOOK II.

undermined, for his part, to consent to it and to sign it as such; that he did not believe the dogma was harmed, and that he thought that the circumstances, the most compelling ones ever seen, justified the condescension that the Pope would use in in this case. There is no proportion, he added, between the small loss from this item and the im- the month that would result from the breakup.

"The prelate Spina declared to me that, since Father Caselli, a much more learned theologian than him, thought Thus, he lacked the courage to assume the responsibility. the potential for consequences so fatal to Religion, and that it He, too, was resolved to accept the article and sign it. as such, adding further that if I judged that their signature Their knowledge could not be given without mine; they did not hide it from me. not that they saw themselves as having the need to protest of their membership, and thereby to guarantee themselves against the responsibility stability of the consequences of the breakup, if it were to take place.

"I cannot express the impression that they made on me and this statement, and the idea of finding myself abandoned alone in the fight. But if that surprised and grieved me The excess, however, did not overwhelm me, nor did it shake me. point in my resolution. After searching in vain- I was trying to persuade them both, realizing that my reasons were not in their weight balance to equal to the consequences that terrified them, I ended up To say that, not being myself convinced by their reasons,

I couldn't go there, and I would have to fight all alone.
in the conference; that I was simply asking them to ren-see at the end the protest of -their adherence to this artticle, if, failing to reconcile the matter, one was forced to break off. Which is what I was resolved to do as a last resort.

PJE VII AND NAPOLEON. 297

although with great sorrow, rather than betray this which, in my mind, was my strict duty. They They promised it, and furthermore assured me that they would not let-
They wouldn't support my reasons to the end, would they?
that they did not want to persist in it at the time of a breakup.

"So we met at the hotel of the brother of the first Consul, and the discussion began at precisely noon. If this
The session was not as long as the first, assured-
It wasn't short, though. It lasted twelve hours.
consecutive, because it ended right at the half-time mark night.

"At least eleven hours were devoted to the discussion of this fatal article. To fully understand the af-
To do this, it is essential to enter (on this point alone) in the intrinsic nature of negotiation. I will study it.
to bring the greatest possible clarity, while remaining in the the brevity of the story, which does not allow for developments Elements of a theological dissertation.

"The two things we had looked at in Rome as the two pivots (i due cardini) of the Concordat, and as the two conditions sine quibus non, as we say ordi-Primarily, were the freedom of Catholic worship and the pu-the legality of its exercise. The state from which it was exercised was considered more as People only came to the one they were walking towards. And, speaking In truth, it was still too early to form an idea of this to-Leranism of all cults, and of the Catholic cult as well of others, whom we then saw. We admitted that it was of indispensable necessity that was expressly stipulated these two essential conditions in favor of Religion, which were worth and justified all other sacrifices that was demanded of the Church and the Holy See. I will say in-

298 BOOK II.

core that, even assuming the prediction of this tolerant-the ism I just mentioned, one would not have believed it any less in Rome that it was necessary to require these two conditions tions, because experience has long since demonstrated that, in practice, this much-vaunted tolerance promotes all sects, except the true Church. By this to-universal freedom of any other religion, the government The secular government aimed to subject the Church to its laws. Under the fallacious pretext of an external episcopate of the Sovereign Catholic, in his capacity as protector and advocate, he pretended to make her a slave and dependent on his domain Absolute. If this way of acting had already taken such a firm foothold before the French Revolution, as evidenced by the The reprehensible laws of Emperor Joseph II, it is clear that we should have feared it much more, after a crisis where the ir-religion, impiety, contempt for the sacred hierarchy, and especially from his head, the existence of clergymen which has become precarious, and I would almost say servile, through the spo-the linking of their landholdings made it much easier suppression of freedom of worship and of its ministers.

As for the publicity surrounding his practice, the same reasons-sounds added to this hateful fury against the real Religion. It is indeed the sharing and the characteristic sign-only unbelievers, sectarians of all kinds, Libertines, even Jews, all equalized and even favored in the exercise of these alleged rights of citizens, of Public officials and magistrates. This sharing made it essential to ensure freedom and the public practice of worship through a formal and so-lennel. For these reasons, it had been desired in Rome that the freedom and the publicity of the Catholic faith were proclaimed included in the Concordat. And it was believed all the more to be born-necessary, that all efforts made to have the The Catholic religion, the state religion, had not led to nothing, although they had been most animated. The Governor-ment always argued that the fundamental basis of the Constitution, that is to say, equality of rights, of persons sounds, cults and all things in a word, there opposed, and in such a decisive way, that one had to to look at it as a great victory to have, I would say The Concordat I made was more of a struggle than a hard-won victory. a statement that at least the Catholic religion was in France is the religion of the majority of citizens.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 299

"I said all that first to demonstrate with what force and for what reasons it was desired in Rome that in the Concordat, freedom and public worship were ex-hastily stipulated. I will now say that, during The negotiation, I did not encounter any difficulties. targets (although I've encountered many) to do to decree freedom. Perhaps the government thought already laughing then at appearances and simple noise of this commitment, which he was forced to include in the Concordat, by annihilating it entirely through these laws organic matter that was never mentioned during the negotiation, not even long after, and of which later I will have the opportunity to speak.

"But as for the Cult's advertising, the opposition..." were infinite, inexpressible, invincible for the pro- to put indefinitely. The main argument, which kept coming back under a thousand shapes and a thousand colors, all more vivid and more strong, and, to tell the truth, quite sincere in part, was the absolute impossibility of exercising public authority everywhere. in all matters and practices of the Cult, especially in towns and countryside where the number of Catholics was inferior to that of the sectarians and enemies of the Catholicism. They would not fail to insult, to... to prevent public processions and ceremonies which take place outside of churches and external practices. Catholics would naturally oppose it; the Public tranquility would therefore be compromised, especially- all when, in the excitement of the early years, The Government would not have the strength, nor the will to have weapons in hand every day against his pro- nearly administered, of which the recent Revolution had shown the nature and magnitude of the power. The Government He concluded that it was impossible for him to accept an indefinite cult advertisement; and, by imposing a restriction that he deemed absolutely necessary, he formulated in the following terms this article so often referred to and so strongly contested: "Worship will be public, conforming to However, police regulations must be observed.

300. BOOK II.

"But for several years now, the Kings' legal experts" They had made their demands all too clear to us. on the hypothetical right of the prince to regulate worship exterior, to which so much extension was then given In practice, the Church was not exempt. in almost nothing or even in nothing at all of the legal-secularism. I therefore had to, through experience, understand sovereignly this indefinite and so elastic "in conforming. » With all sorts of motives, it was necessary to fear that by virtue of such a convention, signed by the Holy-Siege, the police, or rather the government, did not interfere of everything, not subjecting everything to his discretion and will, without the Church ever being able to claim, always as a result of the convention "by complying." That's why I had steadfastly refused to adopt this article.

At the same time, he effectively subjugated the Church and offended the principle by its mere acceptance.

"The Church can sometimes, as everyone knows, or by prudence, or charity, or powerlessness, or by other just reasons, to tolerate in fact the violation of its laws and its rights, but it can never authorize by an agreement. While refusing me by the more just reasons for this indefinite and so broad restriction of the Cult's advertising, which was no less offensive the principle that harmful in fact by the same Extending, I felt the strength of some of the rays sounds, (if not all) which were pushing the Government to want it. I had proposed various temperaments that The Pope could take action, in conjunction with the Consul, especially in the early years, when the excitement re- the revolutionary element still remained so formidable, as if by for example, a Papal Bull to the Catholic Clergy France, in order to refrain in the early stages from certain certain public ceremonies, where the sectarians were more numerous and more intolerant: or an article additional with a time limit, and the declaration- tion of things that the police would have the ability to prevent only for the reason stated above; but the The government had always persisted in its idea. had rejected these expedients and all others like them. When He seemed convinced by the reasons I presented. in order not to admit its restriction, however indefinite and if Extended in the advertisement article, he was saying to me: "Eh Good! If the Pope cannot accept such a restriction indefinite and also broad, that we pass the article under si- "Lence, and renounce all publicity for the Cult."

"For me, if I hadn't received the most extreme orders"

302 BOOK II.

I am about to formally publish this article, I confess that I would have adopted this position, that is to say, I would have absolutely- I omitted the article, convinced that the very nature of things would have at least made you give, in the course of time, in the Catholic faith as well as in others, this extent of publicity that one could expect from the restriction of: "By complying with the regulations of police", without it being necessary to stipulate it, at the risk of to touch a principle. But the orders I had were not to I mustn't omit this article; the positive things were too much for me to...

allow me to violate them. I asked to be allowed to send a letter to Rome, with the aim of obtaining or the ability to completely disregard the article or to arrange the thing in some other way. I am told- The passport was constantly being flung open. In this situation, I had therefore always opposed it, even if it meant breaking off the relationship. as I have explained, admitting this restriction, which was brought up again in the previous meeting, by the will of the First Consul, after having been rejected, when we had managed to agree on everything, through Abbot Bernier. And even then, was it True? Wasn't it rather a pre-prepared ruse? Weren't we counting on the surprise, and the new data by the Government of the conclusion of the Concordat, and that of the signature to be published in this grand meal of Would a party break my resistance?

"That was the essential point of the matter when we began the second session, the outcome of which would decide of the fate of Religion in so many States, and to produce such serious consequences. The question then became which- that bias which, added or subtracted from this article, the made it admissible for both parties. I cannot af-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 303

to confirm with certainty if the French commissioners had the order to work there, or to continue demanding admission pure and simple sion of this article; but if I must judge according to the words of the First Consul, by allowing the new session, as I reported, and according to the the most stubborn resistance of the commissioners to lend themselves to Whatever the change, I have to believe that they were ordered not to participate in any way. What Be that as it may, we opened the new discussion, of which The duration - eleven hours by clock - will tell how much it It was serious, arduous, and incredibly difficult. I won't recount it. not everything that was proposed and rejected in turn, it is unnecessary; but only what, after this discussion, brought the matter to a conclusion.

"This is what the commissioners always repeated." French against my unwavering resistance, against my positive, and ever-renewed, protests of not not to sign, even at the risk of the most terrible consequences frequencies, the article in question, in the mode and terms that the Government demanded, because I did not want to authorize, by formal consent of the Holy See, the slavery of the Church, in this obligation of duty comply with police regulations. They assured that I was giving too broad an interpretation to those words.

as if they brought with them an addiction absolute authority of the Church over secular administration. They added-said that this was entirely false, and that the Government-ment had no such claim whatsoever; that I do not com-
I didn't grasp the true meaning of the word "Police," which,
According to them, this was the cause of my mistake and my resistance.
untimely rebuke. The police, they asserted, are not the government itself, but this single part of

304 BOOK II.

the exercise of governmental power relating to maintaining public order. This tranquility public access, they added, is also desired by the Church.
although by secular power.

"The endangerment of public tranquility compromises" puts the salvation of the people, which is the supreme law, as one as is commonly said. To procure and maintain peace, inter-Reason is a necessity, and necessity has no law that one could oppose it. Public tranquility would be certainly exhibited in France, if, after freedom, the innovations, equality of rights introduced by the Revolution tion, and after the immense changes made in the ideas as in customs and traditions, were allowed in any place to carry out all sorts of public practices Worship. In some localities, one will be able to do all es-a kind of external worship practice without any risk;
but in others, and especially where members of Catholic faith would be in the minority, the exercise of pra-Religious tics would provoke insults, brawls, the internal wars, massacres, which would compromise Certainly, public tranquility. Only the Governor-ment is able to know in which places and in what circumstances can occur, with or without risk-questions, the publicity of worship, that is to say the exercise of its practices and ceremonies outside of churches, because, in the inter-In a laughing place, you can freely do whatever you want. They concluded that the Pope was being too sensitive.
that he even claimed to do something unjust and harmful, to something foreign to his ministry of peace, when he required, especially in the early days, this indefinite freedom of worship. For such freedom cannot be granted thought that in more peaceful times, and to countries that have not undergone such a complete revolution of ideas and customs. Therefore, it was out of the question to establish it in the circumstances in which France found itself, without causing to unrest and even bloodshed.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 305

"I was responding to all of the commissioners' objections." that, although they speak the truth in large part, if not in However, the article, in its content, did not present no restrictions on objects or time, and that by there, in the extension of this restriction that we put on the publicity of the Cult for given reasons, we were—imposed a restriction of such a bad nature, of so much of importance, of such real harm, that I should not absolutely admit it, unless there is a restriction, for Thus, to speak of the restriction itself, did not render it innocent. fair and therefore admissible. But we didn't want not, on the part of the Government, to hear talk of res—restriction tightened, and therefore no progress was made. Finally, a last dilemma overcame the commissioners of Government, who found nothing to say in response.

"I objected to them: 'Either one is acting in good faith, in affirming—the motive that compels the Government to exercise in the advertising of the Cult the restriction to comply according to police regulations, is the imperative maintenance of public tranquility, and therefore the Government cannot not and should have no difficulty in expressing it in the article; or the Government does not want us he expresses it, and then he is not acting in good faith, and he shows that is why he wants this restriction, in order to subjugate The Church does as it pleases.

"Caught in this dilemma, the commissioners replied that the government was acting in very good faith, that it did not did not claim to enslave the Church, but only to guarantee

i. 20

$30 BOOK II.

public tranquility; that it was not necessary to to express it in those same terms, because it was already contained in the word "Police", which has no other meaning than that of regulations intended to maintain the tran—public quality. I replied that this was not true, at least in all languages, but assuming that it And so it was: "What difficulty and what trouble," I continued, Is there a need to explain it more clearly in order to remove any misinterpretation that is detrimental to freedom of the Church? If we are acting in good faith, we should not raise this difficulty; and if we raise it, it's because we're not of good faith.

"Increasingly pressed by this dilemma, and unable to-"
Before triumphing over it, they said to me: "But what use is it?"
"Do you find yourself in this repetition?" (Because they support-(They always felt that the word "Police" stated it sufficiently.)
- "I find it extremely useful," I replied; "it is by clearly restricting and explicitly stating the obligation to ensure that religious advertising complies with the rules Police matters, by that very fact, exclude everything else.
because inclusio unius is exclusio alterius. It is because we "assume it"
The Church did not submit to the will of secular power, and that we do not violate the principle by not having it signed, in
In this case, according to the Pope, what cannot not be, because que necessitas non habet legem.

"The strength of these arguments and the innate resolutionshaky in which the commissioners saw me of not to accept the Government's restriction, if the
The government did not accept the restriction I added.
to his own restriction, finally allowed them to gain access, in protesting, however, that they were not responsible for the assen-
The First Consul's time. He had indeed defended

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 307

that anything be added or taken away from this article. I pointed out that they could make him the report and postpone the signing until the next day, only if he accepted...

"At this point, the brother of the First Consul spoke up" to declare that he knew him too well not to be a-confident in advance that, if he were to consult him on this point, he would refuse to ratify the addition I had made. But,
Joseph added, the only way to get him to accept it (although, he repeated, and again I do not promise to
To succeed, it's about bringing him the ready-made solution. From my
On the other hand, as I want what's best and therefore conclude-
Regarding the Concordat, I feel obliged to say honestly That's what I think.

His conclusion was that it was better to sign the article.
final in that same evening, given that if the First Consul he didn't want to accept, he could do so by refusing his ratification; that, as for the indignation he would feel,
He could, as a brother, expose himself to it with less danger.
ger, and that he was taking the matter upon himself. This statement reassured the other two commissioners, who were not concerned not to risk going against the orders they claimed to have receipts. It was thus decided to subscribe immediately. The two who were with me, and who would have accepted the ar-
The article, as it stands, was more than satisfactory.

to believe in an amendment and a new restriction that they did not expect to be welcomed by the other part.

"We set to work making the two copies of the

The articles were thus adopted. Approximately one hour was spent on it.

Midnight struck when the six commissioners affixed their signatures in the order indicated above. That is 20.

308 BOOKS

as well as the Concordat was concluded and signed, I mean the only articles it contains. He never said a

In his word, he never agreed on anything else.

than on the aforementioned articles. This must be pointed out here in order to which I will have occasion to say later. As we separated rant of the brother of the first Consul, to return each to his respective home, he had told us that he would make us to know the next day whether the First Consul approved the new draft of the much-controversial article, which he

He had many doubts; but he added that he would make every effort possible ways to obtain it, and that he did not give up on hoping-rancid that "the thing once done (as he repeated)

(Often), the First Consul would not want to undo it.

I instructed him to declare to the head of government that,

In the case of an absolute refusal, I would never sign the agreement.

a simple and straightforward article, and that I would leave, whatever the cost. to happen.

"It's easy to imagine the anxiety with which I waited,"

the following day, a response of such great importance.

I finally learned from Joseph that the first Consul had been very angry about the amended article, which he initially refused to approve it on no account, but finally, thanks to thanks to the repeated requests and endless prayers of his brother, especially to the most serious reflections that he presented to him on the consequences of the break, the First Consul,

after a long meditation and a long silence (that the subsequent events explained sufficiently), accepted and ordered that I be informed.

"No sooner had the news of the signing of the Concordat been received than..."

she said in Paris that the joy was universal, except among the enemies of Religion joined with the Clergy con-

Constitutional. The foreign ministers, and more specifically

The Count of Cobentzel came to offer me their congratulations, and also their thanks. They considered such a matter also as their own, because of its notable influence on conservation and tranquility of their own states.

"I asked to see the First Consul with my colleagues—gues in order to return, after the signing, a respectful tribute. The audience was granted for the following day; we also found there the three commissioners who had Signed on behalf of the Government. The reception was courteous. Amid these mutual declarations of satisfaction, in the thought that the conclusion of the Concordat would ensure the restoration of Religion in France and the good harmony between his Government and the Holy See, I felt obliged to point out that, throughout the course of this thorny negotiation, neither in Rome, nor in Paris, nor before, nor after my arrival, had the Roman Church ever pro-uttered a word in favor of his temporal advantage; that the mere sight of the good of Religion had brought him Holy Father to undertake and conclude the Concordat, without to mix in no self-interested view, although the Holy See would have suffered very great losses as a result of the Revolution, and that he had so many reasons to speak of it. "His Saint-Tété wanted, I added, to prove to France and the world that the Holy See is slandered when it is said to be moved by temporal motifs. He also wanted to highlight the concessions and the sacrifices made in the Concordat under the protection of the accusation of the wicked. The wicked, in fact, at-could have said that it is not spiritual good, but the temporal advantages that determined this peace treaty religious, if we saw that on the occasion of the Concordat the E-The church might have gained some advantage or some territory.

310 BOOKS

I added in closing that, having fulfilled the purpose of my mission... sion in Paris by the signing of the Concordat, I was obliged to cause no delay in my return to Rome, where I reminded me of all sorts of needs and my burden of Secretary of State and the orders of His Holiness. I announced Therefore, I told General Bonaparte that I would be leaving very soon. of days.

"The next day I was unexpectedly called by the pre-First Consul, without knowing the reason. Being at the hearing, I couldn't have guessed it from his first words. They rolled over objects foreign to the Concordat; thus, for example, he required a lot of information on the state of affairs in Rome, on health of the Pope, on past and present affairs, on the finances and other similar matters. So that, in My ulterior motive was, I thought he had called me because to make me talk and learn useful concepts relatively to the views he might have had. While I was well attentive to answering all his questions in a which could not be harmful, I finally saw, after an artful language circuit, that these were only detours, and what That would be the real purpose of this interview. He dropped it From his mouth, this phrase, as if by chance, and as if something of no importance: "I am embarrassed (o difficoltà), after the new diocesan boundaries and in the the appointment of the new Evos, having to choose them in both parties of constitutionalists and non-constitutionalists.

"Extremely astonished by this idea, I took to I continued speaking, and expressing my astonishment, I he told him that he knew very well that the Constitutionalists were not not in communion with the Holy See; that the Concordat

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 311

had been done precisely for the supreme reason of putting a term' to the schism and that the Civil Constitution of the The clergy having been condemned by the Holy See, the ju- Their intruding relatives could neither be named nor admitted for pastors of these churches. Bonaparte replied coldly- the fact that reasons of state did not allow him in any way dismiss the Constitutionalists entirely, because that they formed an extremely large party, and that he he necessarily had to take some of them; but that he would first require them to accept the Concordat, which implied the disavowal of the Civil Constitution of the Clergy. I immediately set about demonstrating to him that it was a mistake. to believe it, because the Concordat made no mention of this Constitution, as it is already subject to prohibition by the Briefs of His Holiness. Now the simple acceptance the establishment of a Concordat, which does not mention the alleged The Constitution does not in itself imply that it is held to be erroneous, but something essential to enter into communion with the Holy See; for one can believe that one renounces the said Constitution as being replaced by the Concordat, in the same way as a law or a An order succeeds and replaces another, and not not as being condemned, declared schismatic and erroneous. I also made sure to point out which The choice of such pastors would be scandalous, what a little... They would inspire confidence in the people, even in confession.

health and retracting their mistakes.

"But this reason made no impression on" the spirit of the First Consul, because he always supported that the reason of state irrevocably forced him to have some consideration for the Constitutionals, including the party was powerful; that this very thing would smooth the way for

312 BOOKS

of the Legislative Body and other judicial bodies to the acceptance of a Concordat, which found as much en-mentioned that there were supporters of the Constitutionals, re-kept by them as having supremely deserved of the Revolution. Not to mention, he added, the others opponents of the Concordat due to irreligion, and who are very-Many, certainly. I was forced to return to the pre-his first argument, which had no reply. I told him-I clarai that without a doubt a retraction was necessary. positive of the error embraced by the Constitutionals; that, without this, the Pope would never grant them instruction canonical tuition, even if they were named; because it does not he couldn't do it, he shouldn't, and that certain-He didn't want to. Seeing himself being pressed so closely, The Consul exclaimed that he could not demand of them, by their a public retraction, such a mortifying humiliation, such a sacrifice of self-respect and honor. But, I replied, in matters of Religion, these con-amazement is vain or superfluous; and, on the contrary, it It is honorable to confess one's mistake and repent of it. After very strong resistance, and for reasons and circumstances-teeth that would take too long to list, he finally said that he In desperation, it was necessary to devise a formula that hit them as little as possible and did not injure them.

"I hastened to reply that, if we could search to avoid harsh words as much as possible, he was It is impossible not to express oneself clearly, regarding the the substance of the thing, without reflections and without double meanings.

"Well then," he asked, "what is the substance of the thing?" that must necessarily be expressed?

"It's about accepting," I retorted, "the judgments emanating from them." of the Holy See on the Civil Constitution of the Clergy.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 343

After much debate: "It will suffice," he said, "to agree" accept the judgments emanating from the Holy See, without naming the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, which is included in these judgments, and we will thus avoid a shock that is not necessary and which is too violent, such as the act of formal designation.

"No," I replied, "it is essential to designate her," precisely to focus attention on the judgments that we accept, and not allow for loopholes, to false statements after the fact about the meaning of a general acceptance. This formula is by far the gentlest. that one could imagine for the lyrics, but she spec- simultaneously specifies the substance of the thing. Without This formula, the acceptance of their nomination would be im- possible. Nevertheless, I keep repeating, I added- I, how much better it will be not to choose them, when even if they were to retract, and for the reasons already mentioned mentioned.

He persisted in refusing, for the reasons stated above, and concluded by declaring that he would oblige those who would appointed to the formula he had spoken of. That's how ended this stormy hearing, in which (note- (e), after the signing of the Concordat, he spoke of doing certain constitutional bishops, when he had a hundred times previously assured that he was abandoning them entirely.

"In the three or four days that I still stayed at In Paris, I had no other specific audience. I I only saw it the day before my departure, on the occasion from a journal in which I participated with the Diplomatic Corps, as is customary. I intended to say a few words to him, in taking leave of him again, just as before of a departure, since I had this opportunity to see him again.

314 'BOOK IT

But when he entered the room, and, as was customary, He began his tour as sovereign with the Diplomatic Corps- matic, at the head of which I found myself as having The first step, he looked fixedly at my face, no he stopped neither to say a word to me, nor to charge me to greet the Holy Father in his name, nor to make myself the less politeness. And perhaps wanting, through this lack absolute attention, to show the public what little regard he has made him a Cardinal and of the Holy See (after he had (having settled his affairs), he spoke at length, deliberately without doubt, and spoke of completely indifferent things with the Count of Cobentzel, who came after me, and then with the others in succession. Afterwards, he went down to the review. I did not wait for his return to the living room, as did the others; but I left immediately.

Once I arrived at my hotel, all I did was... my packages for departure, which was set at the beginning- the night. Suddenly, almost at the moment of "Get in the car," said Father Bernier, "to announce..." that the First Consul absolutely wanted, in order to avoid the difficulties that might arise, that we consult with each other, before my departure, on the content of the Bubble which, according The custom was supposed to accompany the Concordat. We had already The Bubble was discussed in the sessions; it was agreed that various things that the First Consul did not leave to include in the treaty (because, he said, being two who spoke in the Concordat, he and the Pope, he did not could mention them, because of circumstances which were particular), would be inserted into the Bull, where The Pope speaks alone. Father Bernier made me understand that the First Consul now wanted to know from a precisely the substance of the Bubble, and also the expressions of at least the main things that one finds there he would say, because that was of interest to him in the last respect.

PIE Vil AND NAPOLEON. 315

"It was pointless to demonstrate the impossibility of write a bubble in a few hours, complain in a way of always acting by surprise and proving that I wasn't allowed to do the Bubble, but the Concordat. Bernier objected to the first two difficulties that I could postpone my departure, and on the third that It was also in the Pope's interest to reach an agreement on this. and to eliminate difficulties that do not resolve themselves He added so many others, not just at a distance as easily as up close. reasons (the strongest of which was always willpower) that he I had to go along with it. I declared very loudly that it was The Pope is always free to approve or condemn the the content of the Bull that we would have agreed upon. We put the hands to the task, and the work lasted eight hours devoted- cutives.

"I saw in this fact the goal that the first one had set for himself" Consul. He hoped to surprise me in those moments of press and arrive at what was not inserted, even in the Bubble, the things he didn't like. But he didn't succeed hardly in his design. Except for a certain point whose reason I demonstrated in the situation in which he found himself France, I stood firm so that certain things that the The government would not have wanted them to be included in the Bull; and so it was in the drafting. I asked to Abbot Bernier if I were to be assured that the first Consul would not find anything to criticize in the work that we had just done together; he replied to me: "Be-Very sure, because I had the powers to combine the the way it happened, although one might have wished even more, but your resistance has only allowed this.

316 BOOK II.

He eventually returned to emphasizing what we were already agreed, that is to say, on the time when one was to send In Paris, the ratification of the Concordat. "The most
The positive view of the First Consul, he said, is, as you know you know, to publish it (let's note this down to keep the (I'll remember this when I talk about this publication later) as soon as ratification is received; the interest of the Religion and the state do not allow the slightest delay.

"I promised to put all possible speed into the journey, without regard for my personal convenience, then the
the greatest care in the examination of the Concordat that had to be done in Rome to ratify it. We We parted after eight hours of a laborious session.
went to rest; and I, without tasting any of it,
I got in the car and quickly headed towards Rome. It was July 23rd or 24th, if I remember correctly.
deceives.

"The Pope's review of the Concordat" was to take place in conjunction with the Sacred College, in order to
to be able to ratify it afterwards, after consulting with his advisor, according to the custom accepted for important matters, and this one was certainly one of the most serious. Such an examination does not Therefore, it could not be superficial: this consideration... made me travel day and night. I only stopped in Lyon, in Milan and Parma. I quickly reached Florence, where I
I was planning to take a little rest for a few days, visit the commander-in-chief Murat and the mid-
Mr. Cacault, who were waiting for me there with the most lively worry. I hadn't yet spent a few hours at Florence, a French courier is contacting me, to make me (let us also note this) new and very pressing instances of flying to Rome, because it was of the highest order

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 317

importance for the first Consul to have as quickly possible ratification by the Pope, in order to publish the Concordat, which could not be postponed without immense dommage, as they said in the dispatch.

"I had to give up the rest I had promised myself"

Florence and get back in the car without delay. I took my race towards Rome, where I arrived, I can say without exaggeration, more dead than alive, overwhelmed by (fatigue and sleep, and my legs were so swollen that I couldn't sleep to stay upright (the same was true of my poor brother) and my two servants). I arrived on August 6th, day which just completed the two months that had passed since my departure, because I had left Rome on June 6th.

"This is not the place to recount the inexpressible kindness" the Pope, his tender welcome, and the approbation that he deigned to give to my conduct, of which I had sent all the details by special mail to my departure from Paris. The operation that required the most serious activity, to respond to the very keen urgency The First Consul's task was to send the ratification to Paris. within the agreed timeframe. The Pope believed it appropriate, in such a serious matter. the matter, of not being content with simply convening the Congregation of the Cardinals, who had been employed there since the beginning of the commission, but to consult them all. They distributed Therefore, each Cardinal received the Concordat and the documents necessary for the exam, after making copies of everything with extreme care and promptness. Then having had the time, suitable for studying the subject, the Congress- The general assembly of the entire Sacred College was assembled in the Pope's presence, in order to offer him his opinion on the ratification-cation.

"There were really only two articles that made a subject of discussion. All the others were perfectly essentially identical to the Concordat plan which had been determined in Rome before the break (it was his non-acceptance by the French Government which had given (This refers to the claim made by Minister Cacault and to my trip). Having succeeded in Paris, at the cost of the most arduous hardships and of the most bitter concern, to get these articles accepted by the Government, except for a few modifications in the non-substantial parts and in expressions, one does not find no obstacle to the Holy Father confirming them and ratified them. The whole difficulty was thus reduced to these two articles, for which one could doubt whether the modifications made in Paris did or did not affect not to the substance of the articles already written in Rome, in the project I was working on when I left.

318 BOOK II.

"Firstly, it was the article that looked at the publication-City of the Cult. The words Cultus jmblicus had been added. eritj, these others: "Habita tamen ratione ordinationum poli-tiæ, which would be recognized as necessary for tranquil-public order"; (I don't recall, as I write this, the Latin words of the last part of the bill).

Secondly, the article that looked at the promise of the E-church not to claim the property of the clergy taken in the Revolution, and in which they had abolished in Paris the restriction to only goods sold, as can be found was in the copy of the project already rejected by the Government -French government.

"As for this second item, the goods sold and not Once sold, there was no opposition in the votes. All opined that the substance remained the same, that is to say the concession, or more precisely the non-claim by the Church of its possessions, although, in the article arranged at

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 349

In Paris, a larger portion was lost. All came to the fact that, however desirable it might be to see the Church to return to a part of his property, the part that was not sold; nevertheless, as this could not be achieved, it The Concordat should not have been broken for this reason, because that a weapon would be provided for slander against the Holy-Seat; that there would be grounds to proclaim that reasons self-interest had prevailed over this great spiritual good of restoration of Religion; that this was the price of sacrifices made in the Concordat, as if the Church were more eager to recover some of her possessions than to procure the salvation of souls, by restoring, in the vast and populous regions of France, liberty and the advertising of the Catholic faith, and by turning off the schism. This article was therefore approved by a unanimous vote. nime.

"The same was not true of the other one regarding advertising." Of Worship. The restriction required by the Government French displeased some Cardinals, despite the restrictive-tion of this restriction that we had added to it. The Opponents admitted that, subject to this restriction or explanation of the restriction imposed by the French Government In Spain, the principle was safe and intact. They admitted in-core that one had to take into account the police regulations in the publicity of the Cult, in those things that tranquil-public order necessarily requires; that it was a necessity-blindness that could neither be denied nor condemned. But they said at the same time that they feared the abuse that the The government would do it in practice. We were going to-to chain the authority of the Church and to get involved in things that did not concern public tranquility. This is what led some to judge that it should be rejected absolutely the addition made to the words cultus publions erit and a few others. They said we should at least, to give the meaning of addition a much more expressly specified, by adding the word "only," and say "for the sake of public peace alone," or even to take other similar precautions. By bringing together the votes against the article, both from those who wanted the removal of the addition that others who desired with a few changes in the wording, we counted in—about twelve votes, unless I'm mistaken, because I don't have a single one of them. to come precisely, after a ten-year interval; but that may to know from the records of this Congregation; and I I can only be wrong by one or two votes, more or less less.

"The largest number of votes (it increased, if I don't Don't be mistaken, at around nineteen or twenty) was for the opposite opinion. These Cardinals declared that certainly It would have been better if the Government had not demanded this addition; that the efforts made to avoid including it there—introduce, as seen in my story and in the the negotiation documents proved everything we had tried to achieve this better; but, since it was not It was impossible to achieve this in any way; it was not necessary. examine the matter from the point of view of the best, but well consider whether, despite the modification made to the addi—The principle of government intervention was still under attack. What the opponents did not claim, they admitted quite the opposite. They added that it was necessary to see if, because we couldn't achieve a better outcome that no law could achieve or principle does not forbid giving up, one had to break a Concordat which contained nothing less than the restoration—the formation of Catholicism in France, and its preservation in almost all of the rest of Europe, because of the defection of the France would infallibly divert it in turn. They added—they further stated that, in this state of affairs, they would judge highly reprehensible agents of the Holy See who would break down because they couldn't achieve the best. After presenting many other arguments, they voted in favor of ratification.

PIE VH AND NAPOLEON. 321

"The Pope had remained silent, in order to let the li—freedom of discussion and suffrage. When the Cardinals Having finished speaking, he gave his opinion, which was entirely in line with that of the majority. He says that That had been his thought, before he had their opinions. The Holy Father further emphasized the impossibility of obtaining at- a modification in an article on which there had been So many debates, as could be seen from the report of the negotiation; that it was necessary to renounce, although at its Regret, at the thought of making new attempts on this point. Approval and ratification were therefore official. cielles; and thirty-five days after signing, if I do not I'm mistaken, they arrived in Paris via an ex- courier. extraordinary.

"Everyone hoped that this letter would bring, to his back, the news of the publication of the Concordat, that the The French government announced it wanted to do everything possible to... as soon as he learned of its ratification. But that was not the case. Not so. Instead of this news, we received very- strong reactions regarding the content of the Bubble. The The First Consul was essentially saying that, although everything had This matter was settled between myself and Abbot Bernier to his satisfaction. faction, he had nonetheless made new re- bends. He was no longer satisfied with them. He felt that, in

This timed bubble, we were still saying too much about it, that he wanted
J. 21

322 BOOK II.

that many things had to be removed from it. It was necessary that the Congregation, intended from the outset to deal with these matters to do, meets again. The spirit of conciliation which animated the Holy See and the desire to prevent slander denies spreading the idea that if Religion were not restored in France, the fault lay with Rome, made them concede, by comparison Port à la Bulle, several points that I didn't believe neither the power nor the obligation to grant, and which I had refused in Paris.

"The same thing happened with the measures relating to the priests' marriages and other attacks committed by clergymen against the laws of the Church, in the time of the Revolution. As a result of repeated legal proceedings, born in Paris, but all subsequent to the Concordat, and On the advice of the aforementioned congregation, the Pope marched on the traces of Julius III, in the reconciliation of England- land and by separate Briefs, intended to be published at the era of the Concordat itself.

"On the one hand, we didn't receive the news of this..." publication, and on the other hand, requests relating to Concordats were multiplying daily. One of the principal- Pales was the dispatch of the Cardinal-Legate; I had already been told maintained, in Paris, not as something that should precede the publication of the Concordat, but which was indeed due to follow her. However, after my return to Rome, the government made urgent requests for... sent it immediately, arguing that many measures that it was appropriate to take at the time of publication. The Concordat's provisions required the authority of the Legate. He did not forget to emphasize how much his presence would be useful to the Holy See.

"Speaking in Paris about the person on whom the choice was supposed to fall, the First Consul said he absolutely wanted-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 323

Cardinal Caprara lies. On the representations that I addressed him, drawn from health reasons and others that could- were trying to prevent his arrival, he kept repeating that he desired- Caprara would say, and that, in the case of an absolute impossibility. He read it, he asked Cardinal Joseph Doria. The Pope, no. Having no other option, he decided on the first one. and sent him to Paris. The subsequent events explained and justified Bonaparte's request and our repugnance. I do not claim to attack Caprara's intentions, that I have every reason to believe them pure. But his maxim was, throughout the course of his Legation, that condescension only she could save Rome from complete ruin, both for the spiritual as well as the temporal, given the quality and the character- the state of one whose will was omnipotent. "It is necessary, Caprara kept saying, stay on your feet at all costs. Because if you fall once, you never get back up.

"With this maxim, he legitimized an infinite number of things." which they in Rome would have preferred he hadn't done. acted without first taking orders from the Pope and some- even against his orders, believing he was doing the right thing by a false judgment. Consumed things no longer had need for a remedy, and the Pope's demands were always useless; his recall could never be carried out, although it has been ordered more than once. This is enough on this digression.

But neither the ratification of the Concordat, nor the Bull combined to the satisfaction of the joint French Government- nor the sending of the other briefs we have discussed. the Legate's, were not sufficient to initiate the long-delayed publication of the Concordat itself. Several Months passed again without her arrival, and without that we knew the reason for this delay.

Finally, at Easter the following year, almost ten months after the signing of the Concordat, the cause of all these delays was revealed. A volume was published bearing the title Concordat in large print. The various articles of the treaty were neither numerous nor long; but at following them and on the same date, an in- a compilation of supposedly organic laws. organic laws were supposed to be part of the Concordat, and be contained in the approval granted by the Saiiu> Siege. These laws, truly constitutional, overturn- know roughly what the new building we had taken so much of punishment to be imposed. What the Concordat stipulated in favor the freedom of the Church and of worship was called into question by Gallican jurisprudence, and the Church of France of- was afraid of being reduced to slavery again.

"The Holy Father hastened to protest. In order to mon- to state very explicitly that he condemned these laws orga- naughty and that he didn't even want to let them have the appearance Having been approved with the Concordat, the Pope made print and distribute everywhere his address to Consistory held on the day of the Ascension of Our Lord. It was on that day that the Holy See had published the Con- cordat; and, in his address, the Holy Father did not fear- It was not wrong to say: "that the consolation he felt the restoration of Religion in France was owed to him However, this was due, though quite bitterly, to organic laws, which had been written without his knowledge, and especially without that he would have approved them.

"There would be nothing easier for me than to to go back to the origin of these sad laws. I could explain- I will go into the main details of their manufacture; but I I still believe it is inappropriate to lift the veil on certain questions.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 325

"Lions that are too personal."

Cardinal Consalvi spoke, and through him, The Church, ever so discreet, grants privileges to history has the right to finally reveal the secret of the negotiations tions relating to this treaty of religious peace which we have sur- named the Concordat of Granite. These memoirs, of which, to On his deathbed, the minister of Pius VII was still revising each page as if to bear witness before God, that he had altered no fact, distorted no character neither torment, nor yielded to the bitterness of exile or to bad joys of revenge, these memoirs do not allow the doubt. Consalvi, whom we finally know and whose... Consalvi will better appreciate genius and courageous tenacity. He meticulously recorded, preserved, and bequeathed them in such conditions. precautionary principles, which in our eyes change everything to everything that history has shown up to this day, even the most impartial, believed to be the truth.

In the midst of these negotiations, for the success of which everything is a danger or a stumbling block, the first Consul turns out to be exactly as one imagines him, imposing everywhere and constantly his will to do good to his In his own way and in his own time. He deals with, he discusses, he reasons sword in hand. It seems he enjoys penetrating the field of ideas and on the terrain of faith with the with the same impetuosity with which he throws himself upon a conquered country.

Bonaparte, himself somewhat Italian, and knowing how to sea-Vigilantly, when the lion's skin is too tight, to sew the fox's there, Bonaparte was not surprised, nor was irritated, not bothered by these necessary delays, of these necessary delays, that in order to better cover to open his retirement. He demanded with loud cries, he sommaster with terrible threats; but full of composure of reserve, of affability or of spiritual abruptness that The Cardinal deployed his actions according to the moment, but above all the a deep sense of justice and duty which Bona- parte was then animated, immediately bringing these together two skilled jousters. They wanted, by means different in their characters and positions, arri- to one of those well-ordered governments, where, thus as Bossuet said, "widows, orphans, and pu- Pillars, even children in their cradles, are strong.

326 BOOK IT

The expedients of the most flexible diplomacy were brought into play by an audacity that considered itself invincible target; they were paralyzed-or relaxed by an energy hiding under an appearance of weakness or leaving I went there in awe. This struggle, to which the precious accounts Cardinal Consalvi's presence was making us witness, and was about to end up... to start again soon under other pretexts; nevertheless, during these battles of thought and speech, the Revo- The spell had not fallen asleep. It had breathed into the heart from his supporters, avowed or secret, the fire of discord; She fueled it with all sorts of calumnies and sub-terfuges.

Forced to accept some cult and submit his official reason was the belief in a God that Bonaparte takes it upon himself to proclaim, the Revolution has taken a step in back; but she does not admit defeat. After having ruled by terror and atheism, it is visible trying to perpetuate his reign through fraud or by duplicity. Condemned to impotence in practice, she she gets up, she sustains herself through her obstinacy in the schism. The schism was for her a way to stir things up:

1 Politics drawn from Holy Scripture, vol. I, p. 4 36.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 3-27

she throws it like a burning stick of discord in the middle of these thorny negotiations.

Based on the principle established in 1517 by a lawyer, the Revolution, in 1801, spoke the same language as the Par-the Parisian court in 1517, at the time when King Fran-Pope Francis I settled ecclesiastical affairs with Pope Leo X. ques of the kingdom of France. At these two times so separated by dates, yet brought so close by events-ments, a public prosecutor said: "The Concordat, of Whatever name one might wish to bestow upon it, it will never be that a violent act in which two powers mutually-
"They granted what did not belong to them."

The Revolution aligned itself with this doctrine.
In order to hinder any kind of transaction, she resurrectedsilenced the constitutional Church or allowed it to act, that is to say, to scheme with the manifest aim of achieving still in chaos. The first draft that comes along can very easily-
It can easily overturn a state, but its reconstruction is a divine work. Efforts were therefore made to stop this work. With his prodigious common sense, the First Consul does not ignore that true things are always so simples that they never fall into men's heads to the system. He distrusts ideologues, he loathes them instinctive; but he sometimes sees poorly, when he finds himself placed under the fire of their self-serving flattery.

Claiming to bring together two things for too long Separated, power and freedom, he aspired at the same time time to be confused in the same thought of unity the ortho-Doxie and the schism. He forgot that the soul of a bad
The priest is as hard as hell and that stubbornness in

1. Indictment by Advocate General Lelièvre to the Parliament of Paris, in 4,517.

Terror is the consequence of incurable pride.
 Bishops? These priests of the Constitutional Church are... stubborn and at the same time characterless, the worst kind of stubborn. France and Rome, Pius VII and Bonaparte, were... tooth, hand, to put an end to the turmoil in people's minds. In
 The aim of maintaining this unrest was for the apostates of 1790 to...
 They decided to form a so-called national council.
 competition between the two Churches was clearly de-Once born, the Intruders began to support her with weapons* their scope.

This Council, or rather this club, is meeting in Paris, the June 29, 1801, as if to counterbalance the Sacerdoce and of the Empire. It's the bat in a ray of sunshine. Already, on several occasions, and notably in 1797, These bishops and priests, under the name of [name missing], have reunited.
 conspirators, then, in a culpable obstinacy, they don-their perjury gave rise to a kind of legal consecration.
 Divided on all points of doctrine and law, they did not agree that when there is a blow to be struck on the Apostolic See. They strike this blow, without pity, thus without remorse; afterwards, they return to their obscurity native, seemingly referring to themselves as belonging to the Roman Church what Jeremiah said about Babylon: "We have cared for Babylon, and she has not been healed. Let us abandon her and that everyone return to their own country, because the condemnation-the nation she deserves has ascended to heaven and has "Raised to the heavens."

So they moved away, sowing dissension everywhere.
 and spreading everywhere their blasphemous writings or their corrupt newspapers, they strove to be popular in spite of the people. Indifference or contempt was their

1 Prophet Jerem., chapter 10, verse 9.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 329

inheritance. This inheritance did not frighten them. Thrown by the Revolution in lost sentinels, they did not give up never to serve the cause of error. It was their life; they lived it.
 attached themselves with all the more obstinacy, as they felt-
 The hour of justice was coming.

The reconciliation of France with the Church was for
 They faced defeat and punishment. They deserved it.
 It was hard for them to endure it. They were seen summoning the assembly and the rearguard of all intrusions into synods

first, then in provincial councils. They pre- thus tended to give more splendor to their assembly constitutionally episcopal and priestly. "The first Consul, recounts Mr. Thiers*, had granted this authority to stimulate the zeal of the Holy See and to make it They sensed the danger of its slowness. In this meeting, they spoke out... nion a lot of very nonsensical things about customs of the early Church to which the authors of the Constitution Civil authorities had wanted to bring back the French Church. he professed that episcopal functions should be conferred by the election; that, if this were not the case completely, it was necessary at least that the First Consul chooses the topics from a list presented by the faithful of each diocese; that the appointment of bishops should to be confirmed by the metropolitan population, that is to say by the archbishops, and that of the latter only by the Pope; but that the episcopal institution could not be left to the discretion of the Holy See, and that after a delay determined that she had to be forced: which was equivalent to the complete annihilation of the rights of the Court of Rome.

More invariable in their errors than the historian in his assessments, the Constitutionlists of 1790 persevered-

1 History of the Consulate and the Empire, vol. III, p. 261.

330 BOOK II.

would support their return to the ancient canons; only- they had allowed themselves a slight change in their ecclesiastical title. The Revolution made them bishops of a department, Loir-et-Cher, Landes or Somme For example, Grégoire, Saurine, Desbois, and all their colleagues are resuming the Church's usual practice. According to the former capital of their dioceses, they call themselves bishops from Blois, Amiens and other episcopal cities.

Natural death, the scaffold, marriage, or apostasy without constitutional hesitation, they produced vacuums immense within their ranks. To supplement them and offer without no doubt a pompous example of equality, the bishops decided the fact that priests will be admitted with a deliberative vote. The doctrine of the presbyteria- was flattered and advocated nism; it naturally bears fruit. The Bishops complain about the spirit of independence and anarchy. shit that ravages their dioceses; the priests respond that in the presence of these oath-takers, consecrated by the revolt, and in insurrection against the Pope and the legitimate pastors, They are perfectly entitled to assert their wishes and their ideas. They don't ask for this permission: they impose it, under threat of provoking a new schism.

calf in an old schism or to separate from the comheterodox communion. The faithful were already quite rare, The priests were talking about deserting. The episcopate constituted-tional feared finding himself in the most complete isolationcomplete, when he vowed to fight against the Church universal. He stepped back.

These internal debates were irritating; the Revolution did not
She could soothe them, so she tried a diversion. A few Tuscan priests, worm-eaten remnants of Scipio's sectarians
Ricci, and two Piedmontese lawyers, claiming to be the mandated ones

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 331

Representatives of the Italian clergy and people rushed to the the name of this Clergy and this People, who had no idea hardly, to fraternize with the schismatic Church. He was offered in a small format a second edition of the ridiculous deputy-tion of humankind at the National Assembly; the club Gallican accepted it as a blessing. In order to characterize in a very precise way the trends and the goal of the
At the meeting, Desbois, Bishop of the Somme, placed on the order of The Oratorian Quesnel's maxim of the day. The Church constituted
The tutional approach was born from Jansenism; it was returning to it.
It was therefore established "that the fear of excommunication
"Injustice should not prevent us from doing our duty."

Following the example of Pius VI, the Pope had already more than once once addressed to this rebellious clergy and making of his rebellion
The lion is a demagogic matter of conscience. The Constitution-
They had scorned these paternal advances. The Revolution lution, who no longer dared to speak aloud, but who knew to still act discreetly, taking these contempts into account.
affected. Turbulent and misguided priests, they were striving to stir the leaven of evil passions. With their encyclicals, their pastoral instructions, their declarations human rights doctrines and their eternal outrages at Roman seat and in truth, they still applied to to irritate minds and to stir up the world, when the world, tired of sterile struggles, he longed for rest in the recon-universal ciliation.

Cardinal Consalvi did not appear to notice
the existence of the so-called Council, and -Bonaparte, who possess-admirably seduced the art of judging men, knew tacitly thanked the minister of Pius VII for his skillful dis-creation. Bonaparte wanted to regulate the various par-tis under the guard of his sword. It was his hope or his dream; but a great politician even when he dreamed, the

The first Consul had not concealed from himself all the embarkations nothing that the Intruders were expected to provoke in his government repairman. In the harmony of powers that he proposes To establish it, he needs to merge the old society into the new. He attempts to bring about, through an order of things exceptional, like his genius, the fusion of rights and interests, truths and utopias, persecutors and the persecuted.

In this thought, there was an undeniable feeling-a man of generosity and justice. Pius VII was worthy to understand it; he joined in. But this feeling, what had actually happened disrupted the calculations of the Revolution.
tion. The mutual sacrifices that had to be imposed on one another or com-
Asking others was not within everyone's reach.
intelligence and integrity. Bonaparte knew
It has been a long time since we knew what to expect regarding the civil clergy.
When the Concordat was signed and ratified, an order from the pre-
The First Consul closed the club. Like the lawyers of lost causes, and which try to win some time, by being ambiguous about the procedure and by misrepresenting the subject of the dispute, no protest was made; no one obeyed; one made a show of separating based on a report from a certain Moses, Bishop of Jura. In this report he is often question of Rome, "of this treacherous and cunning court" who takes advantage of everything. If the Pope, we read there again, declares Regarding our vacant seats, we will tell him that he doesn't have the right, and that they are fulfilled more canonically than that of Saint Peter.

The Revolution must have been pleased with its clergy.
Before dissolving their assembly, its bishops found-

1 Acts of the Council, vol. III, p. 4 45.-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 333

there is still time to act as rebels or to... triot. Moyse protests, and Grégoire records it in the minutes the warning to Catholics "to remember that they are citizens before being Christians, and French before of having been admitted into the Roman Catholic Church.

Of all the theories and scandals that the
The constitutional clergy fomented it, but only one survived.
material error and at least two singular principles-links. Here is the error, as propagated by one of the the very authors of the Civil Constitution. Count Lanjui-written in 1817 2:

"To extinguish this schism, Pius VII had offered..."
Bulls and the cardinal's hat for the Greek bishops goire and Saurine; but the majority in the Directory followed—had a plan to persecute religion and only favored Theophilanthropy.

Pius VII offering to the Directory to recognize as bishops, two intruders who are even exempted from repentance, Pius VII, intending to clothe them in the royal purple, Maine, it was truly an incredible spectacle. On the testimony from a contemporary and friend of these two men, all the historians who followed him, have accepted and reproduced the same version. According to the circumstances
In these passages, the Pope is either blamed or praised for this act.
Qualifiable. The Directory alone remains responsible for the crime.
of intolerance; and the revolutionary idea is indignant at having she herself put an obstacle to the alleged degradation of such high dignity.

The most decisive answer Ton can give to

1 Acts of the Council, vol. III, p. 241.

2. Assessment of the draft law relating to the three concordats, by JD Lanjuinais, p:jir do France, p. 17 (Paris, 1817).

334 BOOK II.

such an assertion is found in the comparison
even dates. This connection has never been made.

On 18 Brumaire, that is to say November 9, 1799, the
The Directory was annihilated. It fell to the acclamations of the
All of France, and Pius VII was not elected Pope until March 14th 1800. Between the fall of one and the exaltation of the other, there are more than four months between them and a century of distance.

The two unique principles are the invention of a
The so-called French Church, and the suppression of classical authors music in education.

One of the members of the Council of 1797, named Ponsignon, — because there are more synods than years in the existence of the Civil Constitution and its jurors, — was tasked with drafting a new sacramentary. This Pont-Signon was the episcopal vicar of Clement, bishop of Seine-et-Oise. Ponsignon was promoting French patriotism to the point of complete ignorance of Latin. The need He was innovative. He administered the sacraments in French, he officiated in French, and finally he created the French Cult. Plu-

The bishops and parish priests adopted the practice; then Grégoire, who would be one of its most ardent promoters, the transmitted, after the July 1830 insurrection, to the abbot Châtel.

Ponsignon had the idea of having the mass sung and the Vespers in rather poor French. Vernerey, another intruder, still sponsored by Grégoire and his members, formulates a second project, in this last Council, which will be the swan song of the Constitutional Church. This An educational project for young clerics was adopted in in favor of the schools; but already there were no more schools to implement it. Vernerey thus develops his plan:

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 335

"It would probably be," he said to his companions, "to pretend to dant fathers of a council, an excellent method that the one where I, without any difficulty and without a new job, the Latin lessons would simultaneously adorn the students of ecclesiastical knowledge, which, at that age, is acquired would see it etched in their memory in indelible marks. For
For this, it would suffice to substitute the explanation of ecclesiastical authors-chosen siastics from that of secular authors, and of the arrange in order of ease of Latin. Also the Congregation offers you the option of having a document designed and printed a collection of this kind, in the style of extracts from Chom-pre, to be used in clerical schools of Latin. With help from this collection, as it will be presented to you, the students will con-will be born, so that they will never be forgotten, the principals brief facts from the ecclesiastical history of the first six centuries; they will draw even more knowledge from it theological at a time when the ancients had none Ordinarily, no idea. It's an effective way and perhaps unique in inspiring more generally the priests very much the taste for the study of ancient religious monuments gion. It's less about seeking linguistic purity Latin specifically, rather than putting students in a state of to understand ecclesiastical authors. No doubt we will find a fairly pure Latinity in Saint Leo, in Sulpicius Severus and in Lactantius, nicknamed the Cicero Christian; but even if one were to lose something on the side of the genius of the language, this loss will be more than compensated by the significant advantages that will result.

Through this twofold innovation, including the ingratitude of bias or plagiarism do not sufficiently take into account constitutional schism, the Revolution offers a hand, of a on the side, to Abbot Châtel, ridiculous primate of Gaul, and of the other to the Theatine Ventura, fiduciary heir of the intruder Vernerey, for the anti-classical education system. Abbot Châtel was resurrected and saw others die again between his arms the French Cult. From the year 1824, Father Ventura, in search of pretexts for future opposition, raises a question exhausted, even by Brother Jerome Savonarole, the revolutionary Dominican of 1495. This despotism that the Florentine reformer wanted in education for young people, the study of the Holy Fathers was substituted for that of the historians, orators and poets of the anti-pagan 1. The Theatine Ventura was careful not to indicate to seek the sources of such a doctrine. Those who came after him, in good faith or bad faith, they took as their model about his discretion. This oversight must have been due to his ostentation. Humility is a cruel, gnawing worm.

In 1844, at the fall of the Empire, we still find The demagogic Church. Abbot Gregory, who was not more bishop of Loir-et-Cher than of Blois, was count of the Empire and senator by the grace of Napoleon Bonaparte.

One can always expect from a bad priest what one will never have the right to demand anything from a dishonest man ordinary.

To escort Louis XVI to the scaffold, the Convention and the Paris Commune resorted to an apostate priest. Stat. Jacques Roux was chosen, and history has told us with what perverse brutality the wretch carried out this evil deed a third that would have made a hangman's servant blush.

When the Imperial Senate dared, on April 3, 1844, to don-

1 In Perrens' Life of Savonarola, p. 135, we read: "The teaching of ancient languages was beginning to no longer draw from Cicero, Horace and Virgil, but in Saint Leo > Saint Jerome and Saint Augustin.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 337

to the vanquished lion the last kick of the untrained titule in servility, he thought that a swearing bishop only one could draft a deposition, a masterpiece of baseness. This bishop had more than once, through grossness His flattery pushed the Emperor to secularize the Church. Together with the former Oratorian Daunou, he had declared in 1810 that "the abolition of the earthly power of Pontificat was one of the greatest benefits that Europe could

"Duty to a hero 1."

The hero, thus challenged, had only understood that half, and often he had exclaimed like Tiberius: "The infamous ones! More enslaved than anyone would like!" As early as 1812, the bishop, count and senator, while feeling around, with a admirable punctuality, the reward for his lucrative sinecure, is busy drafting the decree, which is to affect the great man once fell. In a note from 1814, now lost Among Grégoire's papers, we read: "Since "For two years I had been preparing a plan for my downfall."

It was merely a matter of hurling insults at an expi- power Gregory was unanimously chosen. He acceded left his mission as Jacques Roux had fulfilled the His own. Guilty of the same betrayal of the Church, their mother, these two men arrived almost at the same infamy, one by the Place de la Révolution, the other by the Luxembourg Palace.

This Church, as we can see, was good at everything? Everything, except for the good. She felt supported on one side by the ex-Bishop of Autun, Talleyrand, who mocked her, and by the former Oratorian Fouché, who kept her in reserve for

1 Historical essay on the temporal power of the popes.

2 We read in the Universal Biography, vol. LXXX, p. 405: "The acle of "This decline was the work of Abbé Grégoire."

I. 22

338 BOOK II.

revolutionary possibilities. These two ministers had all the qualities which, according to the times, elevate a man to power or to the gallows. With this double chance, too deserved on one side, and on the other, they used the The schismatic clergy, like a spring. They are allowed- it was a matter of opposing, if not in a clear conscience, at least in processing security; but that is not, in the eyes of the Sovereign Pontiff, the insoluble difficulty.

In agreement with the First Consul, the Pope changed the former demarcation of the dioceses of France and the countries annexed by victory. On the ruins of the old Gallican Church, a new kind of Church, and most of the holders exist in- core. These Bishops, scattered in Italy, in Germany, in America, Spain, and England are atoning for the crime of their loyalty to the Roman See. They fought, they have

They suffered, they devoted themselves to the voice of the Supreme Pastor. Pius VI maintained them on this path, Pius VII encouraged in this struggle: and, captives, exiles or martyrs, By their example, they preserved the Clergy and the People.

Between the exhortations of the Chair of Peter and the blood of the massacred priests, he survives, the unwavering perseverer—the faithful's willingness, attesting to their docility towards the exhortations their respect for the persecuted. Rome was united.

It was a testament to this courage; Rome accepted this solidarity. he neither dared nor wanted to part with it, because it was in Rome especially since we know how to honor faith and misfortune, in Rome although the deposit is preserved with pious care universally followed rules. Rome has always said with Pope Saint Leo the Great: "It is the harmony of all the parts of the body that make it a single whole, full of health and beauty; and this harmony cannot subsist that by the agreement of all those who form it, but principally through the union of priests."

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 339

However, following disturbances of all kinds, including the France was the stage; this union was impossible. The Episcopate, exiled as a Catholic, made it his duty to to remain an émigré as a royalist. The religious question... complicated by a political question, and the Holy See, which over the past ten years he had seen so many extraordinary things, of insolence, audacity or villainy, arriving in France, One could, without exaggeration, expect other shows. The name of Henry VIII had often been mentioned. One invoked his example as a threat; the Cranmers would not have been any harder to find than the Thomases Cromwell.

In his Napoleonic ideas, Louis Bonaparte, today Napoleon, the current Emperor of the French, wrote: "Napoleon, in arriving on the world stage, saw that his role was to be the executor of the Revolution's will.

The title of executor of a will presupposes a death, And Bonaparte, who stifled license, did not kill the spirit. demagogic. He softened him into obedience; he coerced him to give his conditional resignation; he silenced him heavens and servile by showering him with wealth and honors: But, instead of opening his estate, he had to close it. Bonaparte had the authority and prestige of power; He allowed himself to be deceived in his repair plans by a mis- a burning desire for conciliation. To bring the Pope along, he evoked the shadow of Henry VIII. This shadow, hovering above of all the schisms already consummated and of all the in-differences in embryo, were to produce in Rome an im-pressure favorable to the First Consul's plans. The 22.

340 BOOK II.

the threat to separate from the universal Church was rather a game of his imagination rather than a carefully considered or deliberate plan. Bonaparte wasn't there yet, and he never would be. there; nevertheless, as he liked to break down all obstacles on his way, he refused to be delayed by the justified uncertainties of Pius VII

In the letter that Bossuet wrote and which was addressed by the famous Assembly of the Clergy of 1682 to the Bishops From France, we read: "There are circumstances where it is necessary to take counsel of necessity, and, in the great In business, one never neglects opportune times with impunity. ports and favorable opportunities.

When the Gallican Church, in its most luminous hour, posed the dilemma of necessity; she hardly expected it that a day would come when this double-edged argument would be invoked against her, and that secular Gallicanism would beg the Pope to apply it even to the detriment of his prelates. Events are always less inconsequential- quents than men; and the Church of France, which had believed it could limit papal authority in matters temporal, one saw, through a harsh experience, in the obli- the mission to place Roman supremacy even higher that this supremacy did not want to rise. In the transactions- religious decrees of 1801, it was Cardinal Consalvi who alone remembered the Gallican liberties and who avenged them of consular oblivion.

This inconsistency of secular Gallicanism, forced to to rely, as a last resort, on the unwavering loyalty of the Chair of Peter, did not escape the Bishops emi- sandstone. Therefore, it is no surprise to read in their complaints canonical and very respectful: "Moreover, we will not-

1. Canonical and most respectful claims addressed to our most-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 341

We certainly laugh at nothing we've seen of what we complain about. if we had shown the slightest respect for the freedoms of the Church

Gallican, and one can never be too astonished by this that the same government which forced us to come to operations so destructive of these freedoms, at the time where he published so many innovations, which he included among the These abuses constitute an attack on freedoms, franchises, and customs. of the Gallican Church.

To escape the chaos into which the Revolution tightens it as the anvil on which they constantly hammer, the Gallic Church-Cane appeals to the Pope; against his will, she condemns him to omnipotence. Bonaparte seized a dictatorship. military and civil; then, in the name of Gallican principles which he believes he is professing, he is investing the Pontiff with a dictatorship spiritual power that Rome had never exercised. Appeals are being made. to the fullness of apostolic power. In order to save Christianity in a religious crisis, this power is raised sance above all rules of discipline 2.

•
Saint Father Pius VII, pages 18 and 19 (London, 1803, new edition).

1 Article 6 of the organic articles states: "Cases of abuse
"These are an attack on the liberties, freedoms, and customs of the Gallican Church."

2 Charles de Brosses, president of the Parliament of Dijon, has, in his Familiar letters written from Italy in 1739 and 1740, vol. II, p. 100, makes a picture as curious as it is accurate of the situation, as the requirements French authorities imposed their will on the Roman Stege. What was true in 1740, was still under the Concordat of 1801, and always will be. "It is necessary, since I I am on this chapter (the power of the Pope), so says the president of Brushes, let me give you an excerpt from a conversation I had in last place with a man who has infinite wit and knowledge "Your French," he told me, "are strange people. No nation ca- The Catholic Church no longer pretends to despise the authority of the Pope, and none of allocates more, when she needs it. If you come to ask the Court of Rome, whatever order it might not have considered issuing, No matter what objections are raised, you place the power of the Vicar of Jesus Christ. You must be sent off immediately; nothing more

342 BOOK II.

Rome resigns itself; and, in the affliction of his soul, the Pope I am addressing this to the emigrated Bishops.

They had offered a magnificent testimony of devotion loyalty to the Church and fidelity to the Throne. Despite the fortune, these courageous hearts had stubbornly clung to hope. In this strange eventuality, their priestly conscience found themselves in opposition to their political beliefs. Most They generously consumed the sacrifice; others hesitated They were silent; a small number resisted. This resistance was taking shape

Its source lies in a deep conviction. By addressing to the common Father, they spoke to him in a manner worthy of their authority and their virtues:

"Most Holy Father,

"We do not conceal from Your Beatitude the grave pain that afflicted our souls, as soon as we received Your Holiness's letters, dated August 4-5, 1801, This second of his pontificate. This pain is so profound based on the fact that although there is no greater duty for us dearer and higher than listening as much as it is in our Simple. What is it that the Pope cannot do? It is the French fury. And Then, when the order is issued, you take it to France to your parents. elements that cause us a thousand indignities. However, when the brilliance is achieved, we are in some way bound by an honor to support what we we have done; wouldn't it be up to you to know if what you are asking is Does it comply with your state's laws? But at the same time, you refuse in your country to have the slightest deference for anything that emanating from papal authority in spiritual matters, it seems that you You wanted to attribute unlimited power on this same point, either to your king, either to your clergy. They come to us seeking consolation against things about which we would have remained silent, and, when we We have given, and you attack us; you accuse us of being the authors of your dissensions, of which you yourselves are the sole cause. You You're wrong.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 343

power, with complete deference, the advice of Your fatherhood, however, leaves us with this same pain. not only uncertain and fluctuating, but also we forced against our will to temper our obedience.

"The power of these letters is such that if they obtain- They never do what they prescribe, in a single instant all the episcopal churches that exist in France will become widows. Your Holiness does not inform us, And to freely confess the truth, we ourselves do not we cannot conceive how the sudden widowhood of all the churches of this vast empire will produce the salutary effect of preservation of unity and restoration in France of The Catholic religion. Certainly the experience of all The calamities that are tearing the nation apart clearly demonstrate all this. that we must fear evils and misfortunes which will result for the Catholic Church from this simultaneous widowhood tanned and universal: the way to avoid these ailments can only be opened to Your Holiness by an assembly wheat of all the bishops of the Gallican Church.

"We don't want to speak like that to make ourselves heard." that it is painful and unpleasant for us to take a step in back through these times of pain and mourning; to
On the contrary, in our weakness we would experience a consolation for each of us, and an ineffable happiness for all, seeing us relieved of such a great burden-water (if indeed it were permissible to think of any con-solitude and some happiness, after our minds have were broken under the weight of so many evils). But the right to Our ministry seems to be asking us not to suffer that we may never easily break this bond that has united us to the churches immediately entrusted to our care,
by the providence of God, most good and most high,

314 BOOK II.

"We earnestly implore Your Holiness to consent-to ensure that, in a written document that will be transmitted to him without delay-Therefore, we may be permitted to explain and elaborate further the arguments on which we base our feeling. However, filled with confidence in Your Holiness's truly paternal affection
As far as we're concerned, we hope it won't determine anything.
more on this matter, until it had had an impact, with with all the fairness and prudence of which she is capable,
the reasons that sons will give before such a pious father.

"Prostrate at the knees of Your Beatitude, we Let us implore with all the strength of our souls the blessing apostolic: we are the most devout and the most-obedient sons of Your Holiness.

"London, September 27, 1801."

This respectful request from thirteen exiled bishops for the faith raised insurmountable difficulties. He was
It is impossible to convene a Council, even more impossible to consider, in such an instance, an assembly general of the Gallican Church. There was no longer a Church;
that's at best if there were any faithful left.

The Concordat, as it had emerged from the hands of Bonaparte and Consalvi, appeared at the Revolution as the at least temporary ruin of her hopes. She could neither mitigate nor delay its effects; it conceived the idea of mysteriously turning his pro-
She reflected the impetuous nature of the First Consul.
He therefore recruited accomplices; each, to the extent of his passions or his interests, drove Bonaparte into the the way of requirements. It was calculated that by doing so we would the Roman See, odious to the émigré episcopate, and which one re-would cast a seed of suspicion or division over France a sion that might bear fruit. A letter from Abbot Ber-Denying the Cardinal Secretary of State leaves no room for doubt on the projected plan. Bernier had played a double game pen-during the Concordat negotiations; he was still playing it.

"Your Eminence," he wrote on October 6, 1801, must have received the de- acts in successive shipments mission of the sworn bishops. They must have been for the the heart of the most holy Father and for yours a sweet con-Solitude and a fine reward. Our premonitions of Paris, which Your Eminence allowed me to present with They are coming true, just as we had always hoped. The French episcopate is proving itself worthy of its ancient glory, of his past misfortunes and his present trials. He immolates himself with his own hands with a sublime abnéga-tion, which His Holiness must be deeply moved by, and which the The First Consul admires aloud. But there is no longer any hand-Heeding to doubt it, resistance will arise in Angle-land and perhaps in Germany. The refugee bishops in these two countries mix a little politics with the af-religious practices. They differ, they temporize, they re-throw themselves onto impractical proposals, and they serve thus the cause of the common enemy. Asseline, Dillon and Conzié worries me most of all. Three points from From different perspectives, these are the three leaders of the resistance.

"In the private conversations that Your Eminence has deigned to grant me, I spoke to him with frankness which she encouraged, and with a sincerity that she possessed kindness to acknowledge. I have often expressed my the most secret feelings, and political events to which my name is attached, do not allow me not perjury. x\u amidst the most serious incidents of the civil war, I understood that we were walking on a dead-end road; and as soon as I was given the opportunity to see a Being somewhat unclear, I felt it was my duty to align myself with the principle savior of order and religion, including General Bo-Napoleon was the emblem. I competed, according to my abilities, to the restoration of the laws, and God is my witness that, even while appearing to maneuver in our so laborious lectures on the act to which your name is attached In such a glorious way, I had only one goal: to arrive in concert with Your Eminence at the completion of the Con-

346 BOOK IT

Cordat, which raised so many difficulties. Today, I
I would like Your Eminence to allow me to give him a simple opinion, with the deep respect I profess for a prince of the Church, and affectionate admiration that I feel for him personally and for his genius.

"The Revolution does not lay down its arms; it seems to at-"
to anticipate an unforeseen event and place one's hopes on it in a case of force majeure. It has hints of co-and imprecations against the bishops resisting the prayer, much more than at the command of His Holiness. Well!
These imprecations are a feint of war and a means to push the First Consul into regrettable acts.
No one, as you know, exerts direct influence on his will or his decisions. That's how you You defined him so aptly and so spiritually: man of thoughtful spontaneity. He feels very keenly the need to put an end to all the unrest; he wants to calm France and force it into a great moral rest, after so much terrible shocks. The Concordat offered him the most a sure way to achieve its goal, so Christian and so praiseworthy;
But this Concordat, Your Eminence knows better than
I don't have everyone's approval. He has ad-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 347

public associations like the defunct Constitutional Churchnelle; he has others hidden, and which are thus many more dangerous. Two men in particular, including Your Emi-Nence learned to defy herself in Paris, constantly, throughout sort of possible means, to push the first Consul to always demand and never give in to the Pope.
Your Eminence knows by heart, because she refuted them with her frankness in the discussion, by his loyalty in his actions and by his promptnessstudy in the resolutions.

"In a thought that was as Catholic as it was patriotic, the
The first Consul resolved to resolve all the difficulties relating to the Concordat. This intention is used to to incite him against the court of Rome; they would like to make him pe-to be violently opposed to the Holy Father's decisions, in order to that it was said in exile that the Pope no longer has freedom of his assessments, and that therefore the bishops are right not to comply with what is asked of them. The second Consul, who is fully aware of this tactic, revealed it to me and to Mr. Portalis; but we have not did not consider the moment opportune to warn the pre-First Consul. He ardently desires that everything be arranged.
for the period he specified; everything that abounds in this
This makes sense to him, and the enemies of the Church use this means to weaken or distort the great act that we we have consumed. As long as the émigré bishops have not not having adhered to the Concordat through a pure resignation and Simply put, the reconciliation of France with the Church will be dead work; nothing will be complete until the Schism and exaggerated faith will be confused in one same feeling of respect and obedience towards the Vicar of Jesus Christ. Haste may be necessary—

348 BOOK II.

The fact that one puts oneself in relation to the court of Rome is the governmental of the First Consul, but it is not a an act that is personal to him.

"Your Eminence knows the position; it is at his perwell-proven spicacity that I address confidentiallysafely and securely. There are obviously things around the First Consul of the people who have an interest in dragging him away of the path he so gloriously forged for himself. These people are the remnants of all political or ungodly systems that the Concordat came to overturn some upon others Very. Revolutionary passions are not stifled, They wake up; by a fatal series of circumstances— These, in the minds of the good, can sow seeds my of malice or mistrust towards the Apo— Headquarters stolic. That is, without a doubt, their principal but. The Revolution is represented in the provinces Catholic bishops, his first victims, such as hecatombs that the Pope drags at the feet of the first Consul. She extols their resistance, because she hopes to derive positive results from it one day or another. If this state Things continue, there is no doubt that a a new schism completely opposed to that of the Constitution civil.

"Until it is possible to submit this to the first Consul, and to make him experience the inconveniences In my humble opinion, I dared to believe that Your Eminence would know me perhaps some appreciation for speaking with her in all confidence fiancée. It would therefore be good and beneficial to act in isolation and individually on some prelates, and of their mon—to openly discuss the unfortunate situation in which The Church and France could fall again. These prelates have All of them possessed great virtues, many great talents. I

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 349

I know that the Holy Father has a very special tenderness for them. eternal, and that Your Eminence professes with regard to them an esteem based on justice. But under the necessity which embraces us, these virtues must extend to the heroism of Christian sacrifice, and that they adhere to instead of letting yourself be forced. It will be much more worthy of the Sovereign Pontiff and the episcopal body; the pre-First Consul, who is never one to miss an opportunity to admire the fine characters and acts of devotion, will not be forgotten not these unexpected allies. We seek to dominate the Revolution or to weaken it: it is the natural enemy of the Church; that the Church not be divided at the time of the success.

"It is in London that the seat of the epi- opposition is located Scopale; Your Eminence alone can triumph over it. Therefore, Without their knowledge, the émigré bishops will have gave a terrible blow to the Revolution. May Your Your Eminence deigns to strongly emphasize this fundamental idea. mental, and they will appreciate the intolerable situation that "What they want to do to the Church and to themselves."

This letter from Abbot Bernier was for the Pope a a new source of worry and torment. The Church Rome had seen the Revolution at work; from everywhere it A cry of horror arose against Demagoguery. Everywhere Indeed, it had brought about, along with the dissolution of morals, contempt for religion, hatred of authority, terror, theft legal and servitude, under the pretext of emancipation. To perpetuate or maintain the storms, to always stir things up, was, From that time onward, the tactics of the Demagogues. Bernier has... Consalvi had guessed it, and thought he had found a way to paralyze her. Ser. Charles Erskine, Roman prelate, was charged, on the \ no- November 1801, on a special mission to 'the

350 BOOK II.

French bishops residing in London. This mission, to which was not unrelated to the letter from Abbot Bernier, its aim was to verbally inform them of the po- the situation of the Holy See, the need to extinguish a too long schism, and the indispensable need to revive Religion of its ruins.

The Pope was trying to make the Bishops understand that, having become impossible due to events, they must not have wanted faith to resign itself to the same impossibility. Erskine had orders to insist, to to pray, to conjure; but exile, which, like hunger, is undoubtedly a bad advisor, did not leave to the u- the unanimous support of the Episcopate for the honor of a spontaneous sacrifice Tired. Some, perhaps confusing the saints too much obligations of the Pastor of souls with a duty of faithfulness monarchical order, did not hesitate to discuss the vow the most ardent of the Supreme Pontiff. The magnitude of evils the Church's was incalculable; the Pope submitted to the need to deploy power proportionate to the immensity of disasters, and the religion of the people was saved.

The Concordat of 1801, as a whole as in its details, it was certainly not a perfect work. There were unavoidable gaps, calculated omissions, and almost frightening concessions. The misfortune of the times was such that the Church, the pillar of truth, had granted everything that did not offend either faith, doctrine, or the morals. Seeing further than the Bishops, because he was placed higher, the Supreme Pastor understood that this It is not only for the sake of historical admiration that God sends providential men to earth.

We had to accept the First Consul and the restorer without getting too bogged down in details about the methods. Following Caesar's example,

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 351

He was led, through flattery, to believe that men They had to submit to his words as if they were laws. In short, In a very short time, he had achieved this personal glory. nelle, the most precious reward of all the work of man, and he put it at the service of the Church. He par-milk to restore to Religion its vanished splendor, of to restore public worship to its former regularity, and to to spread the teaching of morality and all the homework.

For this teaching to become universal and popular—the area, the First Consul was confident he could resurrect the feelings of justice, inner peace and subordination tion. The abolition of divorce, which was in his wishes, would restore to marriage, and consequently to the family, a dignity long lost. The door of the Daughters of Saint Vincent de Paul, those of the Missions seminary—Foreigners and members of the Brothers of the Christian Doctrine, were going reopen. In the midst of the twelve-year hurricane, everything had perished or had been threatened with destruction. The Pope felt the resolve to rescue as many as possible from shipwreck Possible solutions: given the presence of so many different duties, Could he have hesitated?

The situation was as extraordinary as the men. Evil had triumphed everywhere. Rome, whose policy The traditional approach is to condescend paternally to all honest transactions, accepted the relative good that was offered fresh. She lent a friendly hand to those who, out of need or by temperament, were prepared to rebuild. His voluntary or forced concessions preserved Christendom stemming from a religious crisis, an inevitable consequence of So many social crises.

It was not only in France that the outdated spirit

352 BOOK II.

The tionary had corrupted. All of Europe had placed itself under the yoke of demagoguery; and Europe was cruelly atoning—the catastrophes due to a chimera of regeneration—tion. Endless wars, terrible upheavals had ushered in the triumph of the preached doctrines through equality and fraternity. Italy and Germany had become the battleground for armed struggles. Lawyers, sworn midwives, but patriots, of university professors, ruined nobles, and a few relapsed clergymen, in Italy as in Germany Magne and in Belgium, fomented opposition against the Holy See. This school of thought, even more so than that of sacristy, soon turned into open revolt.

The contagion of philosophical systems spread under the guise of Jansenism. Princes blinded by pride, like Joseph II, had made a glory of themselves human in their affected contempt for the Apostolic Chair—that; this glory killed them at the very dawn of the Revolution—tion. The Italian or German governments had protected the uprising that incredulity was attempting disguised under the trappings of indefinite progress. These gou—Governments were swept away in the whirlwind. A weak Their resistance only served to demonstrate their obsolescence. They had believed that by sacrificing Rome to modern ideas, They thus gave fire a large place. The dreamers, who inspired such confidence in them, were the first to raise the banner of rebellion.

In the universities and dioceses of Italy, the jurists and priests, who had shown themselves to be the most hostile to the Church, they did not hesitate to join forces with Enthusiasm for dissolving principles. The Sovereigns fostered the spiritual revolt against Rome; this re—

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 353

The turnaround is to their detriment. Philosophy has created From the wicked, wickedness breeds rebels.

Soria, Palmieri, Zola, Tamburini, Eustache Degola,

Molinelli, Scotti, the bishops Serrao, Ricci and Solari accept and formulate the right to insurrection. Italy has nurtured by her eternal dream of liberation and unity; She is applauded by some of her lost children. at the fall of the Roman Siege. Italy then saw its camps its cities flooded with blood, its towns covered in ruins; then The armies of Europe divided the spoils among themselves. wonders of the arts accumulated in its palaces and in its museums. Italy had aspired to be free; it falls under the harshest of all despotisms. The missionaries the most active instruments of its independence of his servitude.

In Turin, Milan, Genoa, Venice, Bologna, and In Florence and Naples, the need to innovate had as its corollary- the natural area the need to create a social position. It is found by stroking the victor; one begins to his continued. The victor marches under the flag of the Revo- He stripped the churches, he proscribed the clergy. faithful, he put confiscation, the unbelie- hardship and pillaging. Triumphal arches are erected at victor; the people are forced to pay for these celebrations with a strange brotherhood. They try to persuade him that, if he is not yet free, his reason and his conscience must to feel at least free from the heaviest tyrant- nees. The Papacy died in Valencia in the person of Pius VI; the revolutionary idea will never resurrect her.

In Italy, the moral upheaval was immense.

The people had resisted, because the people do not give up their possessions.

as quickly as an ambi- priest
I. n

354 BOOK II.

more than a scheming jurist; but in Germany, the disorder appeared under even more conditions worrying. Josephism was spreading its ravages everywhere. Emperor Joseph II, who died on the eve of the crises of which he became the leader, but did not have the strength to stop the torrent that he unleashed without realizing it. The torrent had engulfed him, And the war at the Roman Siege became a reality. Protestantism allies itself with the Josephites for the continue.

1. In Germany, one still encounters scholars who have the infallible panacea to regenerate the world, and sur- everything to bring down the Chair of Saint Peter. These scholars, starting from Lutheranism, arrive from the very first stage to the most absolute indifference. They invent systems and philosophies, create new exegeses, im-

They appoint themselves school leaders without disciples, and march on, the Blindfolded, discovering unknown globes.
freedom of examination pushes the reli- license to the extreme gieuse. We pride ourselves on erasing a dogma;
We become intoxicated with happiness by distorting the truth.

The Empire had succeeded in sowing internal discord in the priesthood. The Catholic clergy, held in check or weakened by burdensome laws, no longer has enough self-
Rite for fighting successfully. The lessons of Rome's advice is as despised as its counsel; no one listens. His prayers were ignored, and his threats were disregarded. It was an opening Protestantism was an arena in which they could not descend only against opponents who are already half-defeated. Protestantism uses and abuses its new right to war.

The philosophers of the eighteenth century had, in
In France, everything denied and everything reviled. In Germany, the

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 355

The sophists of Lutheranism take it upon themselves to explain everything. Kant appeals to pure reason against revelation, and, in the obscurities of his metaphysics, he leaves no trace Swimming in nothingness. Protestant theologians, again bolder than the thinker of Königsberg, set out duty to shake the very foundations of all religion. Doerderlein, Steinbart, Ernesti, Eberhard and Semler inlift morality's sanction, Christianity's mi-scrapers, and to the Gospel its divine character. There is no more
No more precepts, no more mysteries, no more faith; man is quite naturally thrown into the arms of the Revolution by Tolerance formulated as dogma. During the 4th grade lesson this Revolution, which sometimes slumbers as if to re-to regain its strength, France has sometimes employed One means, then another. Here, weapons have opened the
The way to principles, there, the principles prepared the way to armed conquests. In their flight, these two cannonballs and oars sometimes lighten each other, and sometimes they strike at the same time; nevertheless the two elements
The elements still exist and are inseparably linked.

The Revolution had drunk from the philosophical cup, and She had gotten drunk; but she wanted all the people shared her intoxication. As in Italy, she introduced him to
It was carried into Germany by cannon. The cannon was the cor-rectification of these anxieties of the soul, of these aspirations to a vague independence and a chimerical perfectibi-

The Revolution transformed Germanic naiveté.
as prostitutes of unreason; she weighed upon the peoples of the full weight of conquest and immorality. Thanks to the According to the word of their doctors, the people had hoped for cloudless bliss; the Revolution fashioned a heaven for them desert and a forbidding land. By one of those good instincts

23.

356 BOOK II.

that develops uprightness of spirit, the German nation gradually returned from these vain abstractions and from this hollow metaphysics, which was made into a law for her. She had asleep, indifferent, or atheist to the deafening noise of sophisticated declamations; she wakes up full of faith and of repentance under the hand of misfortune.

Misfortune, in Rome and in France, had produced the same results. A ghost of a republic, evoked by doctors, lawyers, and some apostate priests, had passed over the Holy City. He had sown around the Seven hills of shame and death. The wind of betrayals had breathed, and a prince of the Church had not judged himself of strength to resist it. Cardinal Vincent-Marie Altieri abdicated the sacred purple at the moment when danger ap-was approaching. A small number of prelates re-engaged in this fatal path; but the Roman people had not yet suffered the yoke of such pusillanimity. The people had become embarrassed-
He was remarkably persistent in his faith; he received his reward for it.
by acclaiming the new Pontiff, who, by his mere arrival vée, freed him from all his native oppressors or foreigners.

Pius VII has just been, in an almost miraculous way, elected pope, and to recover the patrimony of Saint Peter;
for, as Bossuet says: "What seems to be drawn from the ha-
"Sardin is secretly guided by the hand of God."
At the same time, the Revolution, which relentlessly attacked its glo-his predecessor, who made him bear all the crosses, bows before the tiara. The Revolution would like to discipline itself To flex and regulate herself. Before accepting herself
As an established power, it must sanction itself.
his own eyes by a blessing of the Pontiff. The re-1 Politics drawn from Holy Scripture, vol. I, p. 520.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 357

Reconciliation is announced and sealed by the Concordat;
Let us see with what feelings France and Europe acknowledge it.

picked.

It was finally given to the land of Saint Louis to establish the to assess the outcome of his revolution, and to calculate its losses and profits. It had held constituent assemblies and le-
She was devastated; she had neither constitutions nor laws left.
had proclaimed the brotherhood of peoples, and the peoples they slaughtered each other. To enrich the Nation, it had de-
The Clergy was plundered along with the Nobility, and the Nation was dying of Hunger at the bakers' door, reduced to nothing due to lack of grain.
to desperate unemployment. The Revolution had dethroned God, who massacred the priests, deified all crimes, and legalized for all bad passions a certificate of civic responsibility.

On the ruins of churches, or in the altered temples in clubs, new ora- appeared every day tors, howling parodies of humanity, their hands covered-green with blood. One was only a great citizen after having sullied any virtue whatsoever. The Philosophers of the Tenth-eighth century had tried to kill Catholicism in detail; the first generation to graduate from this school
Outrages and errors killed all beliefs en masse.
She left standing only the atheism organized by the echafalse; she only sponsored certain books that were intended to be propagating one through the other. These were the Origin of Cults 3
The Spirit of Religions, the Anti-Priest, the Ruins, the War of the gods and the Dictionary of Atheists, works deploringflawed from all points of view, and that the government directorial took under the protection of its vices.

There was no longer a society, no more beliefs, no more Homework, no more brakes. Following these misunderstandings-

358 BOOKS he.

Due to the decline in public funds, the public treasury had diminished.
like private fortunes. Money became a scarcity and paper money, a bankruptcy, liquidation by guillotine or deportation. The agriculture, industry and commerce did not even exist
no longer a name. The Terror took its place after the war.
civil; the extravagances, the tasteless luxury of the Di-the rectory and the abuses of its agents, granted by-Misery had every right to exist. Misery reigned supreme.
ruins.

During these ten years, the memory of which will never perish but in the hearts of the people, - for it is the shame of-laid in blood, - the experience of the immortal princes-
The 1789 census was conducted on a vast scale. We are starting from universal brotherhood to end up in war general. Liberty was supposed to break all despotisms; It ushers in anarchy in turmoil, the anarchy of the penal colony. elevated to the status of patriotism, the anarchy of the gutter is becoming... declaring civic power. Equality was going, through a new social contract, perpetuating on earth the golden age of rights of man; equality throws all races pell-mell into the same contempt, and in the most exaggerated of all the prostitution. France had been surprised and violated; the The principles of '89 were powerless to console her. this unfortunate passion overexcited his military vanity heroism, the epic driving force behind all his adventures, cause eternal from all its disasters. Then time itself, which never managed to bring the French people to maturity, seemed to put part of the effort to prove to him that glory always ends by being momentarily right.

Glory had preceded reparations, Bonaparte vowed to conflate them all in a single act. The Concordat was ratified and proclaimed law of the state. Then, on April 18th 1802, Easter Day, the old basilica of Notre-Dame, having barely escaped the devastation and sacrilege, could, by saluting the peacemaking soldier, she too celebrates the The resurrection of the Church. It truly was that day. that the Lord had done; Catholicism trembled and rejoiced within him.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 359

Ten years of titanic impiety and endless outrages to God as to the common sense of the peoples are completed in A Te Deum of thanksgiving. Demagoguery, defeated. and not converted, she kneels, but does not repent. under the blessing of the Cardinal Legate. The People alone are happy, because, understanding nothing of the reluctance and the He only stops at the denouements, resorting to subterfuge. Alone, by religious demonstrations, he lavishes on the first Consul expressed his feelings of gratitude. Upon seeing him again its bishops, its priests, deported by the Revolution, and brought back to the threshold of their churches by the victorious hand The People mourn a child of that same Revolution and prays. Isn't all his eloquence in the tears and in prayer?

He returned to his parish church, wondering what-sometimes having forgotten the way, and learning it again children, to whom, during the journey, he stammers a pre-First catechism lesson. The survivors of this at the time, – and there are still some left for port-their testimony, – attest with history what mer-

These early changes produced this return in the world unexpectedly close to God. Shuddering with horror at the excesses of all kinds that the Revolution caused France to commit, the world had imagined that this country had been sudden-deprived of moral sense, and that, struck by dizziness, he

360 BOOK II.

could only lead to the abyss through decomposition itself
of its intellectual elements. Suddenly the world
He wakes up, and he learns that the eldest sons of the Church do not re-
They no longer shame their mother. The temples are reopened and the Worship is free. Priests, exiled or captive, return to the Christians whom they nourished with the word of life, and The Cross still stands where the trees of liberty they believed they were planting eternal roots.

Witness in Paris to this miraculous return to God, and seeing the Church emerge, like Lazarus, from its tomb anticipated, Friedrich Schlegel, the great German critic, is captured at the heart of a thoroughly Catholic thought. It is through the upper classes that evil spread across the earth; this
It was the learned men who became the spokespeople for the demorealization. Schlegel, with Dorothy Mendelssohn woman, understands that this incredible spectacle of a people Renouncing his errors cannot be lost. Schlegel allows himself to lead to the religious movement that the Concordat proevokes, and that the Genius of Christianity, by Chateau-Briand, develops in the masses.

The work of reparation is being carried out by France. The writing-vain protestant becomes Catholic in Cologne, in 1803;
then he inaugurates this apostolate which will bring together at the center common to so many brilliant minds. The Philosophy of History
A major work, and one which, by the breadth of its vision, proceeds from Bossuet's Discourse on Universal History, was the banner that rallied the intellectuals around Schlegel agencies weary of doubt. The poet Werner, Adam Mul-the first, the Count of Stolberg, and later Louis of Haller, the painters Overbeck, Esslinger, Frédéric Hurter, and all
A host of illustrious writers and artists have lived,
some in the intimacy of the émigré priests, others

LIFE VII UÏ NAPOLEON. 361

under the spell of the stories that popularized so many verses Schlegel fosters in everyone the feeling of faith.
The one who dominates him. This proselytizing of talent is communicative.
nique throughout Germany by the Concordat of 1801.

Machiavelli said: "There is no more certain sign"
"of the ruin of a state through contempt for divine worship."
France returned to her God with such magnificent fervor.
of faith, that finally the people explained how
She had not been swallowed up in the storm. This spec-
The strange and mysterious tackle struck every soul.
'The man became agitated, and God brought him back to his ways.
Amidst the applause of nations, there is now only one
one flock and one shepherd, for dissidence, almost individual or isolated, are lost in the unanimity
the number of endorsements or acclamations. The Gallic schism-She refused to confess her crime. The humiliation of a defeat, which becomes a triumph for Rome and a subject joy for the faithful, offends the old pride of the Jansenist nism; it irritates the hateful passions of the constitutional clergy tutorial.

In the eyes of the First Consul, disobedience sacer-Dowry is no more a duty than the most sacred of duties, that of a civil insurrection. To its generals as to its administrators, he imposed a directive; it must be res-to respect. The Jurors respected it, while trying to to impose mental restrictions, or to give rise to difficulties of form. These restrictions and difficulties do notin no way extinguish the source of the principle; time is left to chance.
the task of erasing the wretched discords that the Revolution-tion strives to maintain in some souls. The intruders those of 1790 had gone through all the phases of contempt

1 Discourse on Livy, 1. I.

■m BOOK II.

public; they were, according to the word of Isaiah: "like a a sea without fixity or rest, whose waves cast
"On the shore, only foam or mud." They were there.
left.

But by a rather singular coincidence, the Concordat, which nullified the Civil Constitution of Clergy, aroused unexpected opposition among the populace the most devoted to the Church. The extremes are tou-will fall once again, and those who had the conscience, the most delicate, like those who had none
Not at all, they saw themselves, from protest to protest, driven to the same conclusion. The schism also emerged rather than an excess of insubordination fidelity; disobedience led to the same rut as the attachment. The Roman Catholic Church was not disturbed by these opposing tensions. She had given in a lot in order to preserve intact the deposit of faith. The essential point was preserved, she only concerned herself with calming things down.

The Revolution always has dispensations to grant to perjurers who serve her. The Constitutionals were allowed to submit to the Pope, and to explain this submission mission according to their whims or interests. The abbot Bernier secretly helped them in this shady business; This was an act for which Rome made him atone, by not granting him— never received the honors of the purple he coveted. But deep in the Catholic provinces, in the Vendée In particular, the military resistance was more conscientious. and therefore less formidable. We had fought for the faith. Bishops were honored for their renewed faith. exile; and one could see a sizable minority from the Epi* Scotat to take refuge behind an obstinacy whose The principle had something loyal about it. The Concordat, negotiated by the Revolution, could only be the de— development of the revolutionary idea; therefore, he had to, in a more or less direct way, tending towards the des— Church instruction. The Pope had been misled; the energy one of these faithful ones still dares to compensate for his weakness. A very small part of the clergy places itself at the head of this silent opposition which, after having suffered so much For the King, nothing could be better than to suffer in— core for God. She was designated by the name of little Church; however, this schism, born of an exaggeration of Virtue gradually died out for lack of food. History He even forgot about it.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 363

Amidst the dazzling display of an authority without limits, the First Consul then found himself, like the The Holy See, under attack from extremist parties. In Rome, where The Popes have always known when to yield or resist, these oppositions, divergent in their principle and in their But, they hardly worried the Apostolic Court. It has, in its traditions, the secret of men and parties; It is through endless delays that she spares them or that she wears them out. The Church's patience borrows something something to the eternity that is assured to her. The more she sees herself The more she is attacked, the more she tries to moderate her opponents. through its own moderation. This calculation, which would be human— skillfully, if it did not have a divine source, it offers to Pontificate: an ascendancy recognized by all centuries. Rome She places her hopes higher than the earth: she confides in to a wisdom that will never deceive her. She delights in leave it to time to soften passions and to calm— sea the disagreements. The First Consul was not That's it.

The work of double restoration that he aspired to do

3<>i BOOK II.

Marching together did not lull his enemies to sleep. Us se
On the contrary, they awoke; they became overexcited at the noise of His victories were like the news of a glorious peace.
it was no longer permitted to overthrow his power, or to
To question him was to attack the man himself. Ceracchi, Demerville) Topino-Lebrun and Aréna threaten him with their republican daggers, at the very moment when the the infernal machine of Saint-Régent and Limoëlan must kill it with its explosion. In the slums of the royal-Lism, like the surface of demagoguery, is something to ponder.
assassination attempts. Bonaparte escaped them only through a series of events.
of fortunate circumstances. He is rampant, and with good reason.
against the assassins; but these attacks do not stop him in its race. In order to reconcile all interests and bringing all the dissidents together, he made forgetting a Duty and amnesty, an instrument of peace. The gates
"France is reopening to all exiles." The nobility
The emigrant returns to her property not sold by the Nation.
and the republicans of the previous day, staunch apostles of the e-equality, can already try their hand at the role of dukes or of counts of the Empire. A new aristocracy emerges from the
the very core of democracy.

Bonaparte imposed silence on hatred, whether written or spoken.
It didn't compress it. More powerful on the outside than^ the Holy See, but less solid than him, he liked to pre-to hasten the outcome. His fever for action drove him to
He broke down all obstacles; they were reborn under his hand.
These obstacles were of more than one kind; they held as much to the fluidity of the French character as to the foreign the vicissitudes that the country had gone through.

In order to more surely dethrone anarchy and to
To seize his last hope, Napoleon believed that in

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 365

founding a fourth dynasty and having it crowned through the Pope, he would fulfill his vows. First Whether Consul or Emperor, Napoleon sometimes promised himself,
He never gave himself up. This perpetuity of the Church to tra-towards the centuries, and which marks all its actions with a seal of supreme reflection, weighed like an indirect reproach in the spirit of Bonaparte. As great on the battlefields of battle that in governmental conceptions, this man considered himself small, drawing a parallel between his impetuosity and the wise temperaments of Rome. He had religious instincts and almost unbelievable passions. We sensed that sooner or later his outbursts of his will, directed against his will towards a goal that was abhorrent to him, were likely to precipitate him down a fatal path.

The Cardinals, Consalvi especially, held the Pope in defiance against his own affection. Pius VII was happy to express to Napoleon his grateful admiration. Napoleon had done a great deal for the Church, Pius VII did not. He didn't want to reduce her to ingratitude. Nevertheless, in his gentle firmness already put to severe tests, he loathed having to constantly make sacrifices without thought for the Church, and sometimes even harmful to its cause. The organic articles, added after the fact to the Concordat, by a secular pen, were a bone thrown to the Revolution; they provoked suspicions and inquietude in the conscience of the Pontiff. Bonaparte, without stopping to calm them, requires that Pius VII grant to the Cardinal legate Caprara the full powers necessary for to deal directly with him with matters relating to the Italian Concordat. It's only if Consalvi knew, thanks to his Roman diplomacy, to establish equality of forces between temporal power and spiritual power;

366 BOOK II.

Therefore, no one can hide from the Vatican that the Caprara's incurable condescension will be exploited in a way that was disadvantageous to the Church. Pius VII resisted, and it was through the ambassador himself of the First Consul in Rome that the course of action indicated is that of the Pope will not part again. On July 28, 1802, Cacault wrote to, his government: "I must inform you that the Pope summoned me to a special hearing, to to publicize a dispatch he received from the cardinal Caprara, dated July 3, in which was inserted a draft Concordat between the Italian Republic and the Holy See.

"The Holy Father was deeply saddened by the decision to refuse" to Cardinal Caprara the powers he requests from him for to deal with this matter.

His Holiness told me: "We would like to never do anything to refuse the wishes of the First Consul, but let us not does not throw out of bounds, out of the measures of what the The Pope can do it. There were reasons that will justify us. still within what has been granted to France, where however—in our condescension towards some bishops which cause scandal through writings, including newspapers are filled has already had a fatal drawback which This exposes us to many criticisms.

"What we did with regard to France was necessary, and will be a merit for us before God; but The Sovereign Pontiff is the custodian and guardian of the laws, rules of the Catholic religion. We do not want— Let's not disturb the world by declaring no species war against the temporal authorities who abolish insti- religious tuitions, but we could not be the first The Pope is acting against our laws, our principles. How can he—would it be possible for us to adopt, by a Concordat with part of Italy, new upheavals— new, new suppressions, and a sub- doctrine revival of the rights of the Church?

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 367

"The First Consul persuaded us to establish, in concert with him, the best possible order of things for the France's attitude towards religion. France has shown in Its inhabitants possess a fundamental morality beyond praise. returning to religion after such a terrible shock Absolutely. France and the First Consul deserved it all. But why today want to make common and generalized? general, which is truly due only to extraordinary merit. The dinner of the French Nation and its leader?

"If we sign the Concordat that is being proposed to us with the Italian Republic, it would be necessary to sign it the next day a similar situation with all other powers. Thus it would be the Pope who would become the promoter of a new re- evolution, after the one from which we are emerging, and to which a the necessary calm following so much dis- orders.

"I did my best to calm the mind of the Pope, by making him feel that the First Consul knew as well as the sovereigns, who themselves do all reforms without the assistance of the Holy See, which 1 authority The Consul would make any changes he wanted. but that his love of rules, principles, and his Respect for the conscience of the people made him re- seeking the Pope's support: that too much rigor in Maintaining the old rules exposed Religion, in what is essential to it, at much greater losses, and than the progress of Protestantism, perhaps more com- fashion for governments, would become every day

there was more to fear if the Pope refused to give his approval to views of temporal well-being and necessary political economy to countries ruined by war.

"The Pope answered me from the bottom of his soul: 'Alas!

We find true peace and true rest only in the Government of Catholics, subjects of infidels or heretics. The Catholics of Russia, of England, from Prussia and the Levant cause us no trouble.

They are asking for the Bubbles, the directions they need-care, and they proceed after that in the most peacefully, following the laws of the Church. But you know- Consider all that our Predecessor had to suffer from changes made by Emperors Joseph and Leopold.

You are witnessing the attacks that are being launched against us every day. days by the courts of Spain and Naples. Nothing so How unfortunate it is today for the Sovereign Pontiff. He is guardian of the laws of Religion, he is its supreme leader; Religion is a structure that some want to completely overturn. the parties, while simultaneously stating that we respect them the laws. They think they need us to operate without the subversions cease, and it is not considered that this is our conscience and our honor, which refuse all These changes. We reject them with temper, with anger. Our objections: the requests come to us almost all-days accompanied by threats.

"We had flattered ourselves, sir, that France now having in her possession what constitutes the ambition of the au-very powerful, it would be in perpetual harmony with the Holy See. We still rely on this great good, from which depend the perfect tranquility of minds and the a-death of Religion in the vast expanse of France. However, if the First Consul brings the innovations, there will no longer be any way to hold out in Rome, and This great man surely has no intention of us to lose and to make us the object of accusations and reproaches from all the churches of which we are the head.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 369

"I will now submit to you, citizen minister, Some thoughts. The prevailing mindset at present The leadership that governs everywhere is in discord awful with the feelings of a Pope like that of au-today, whose heart is good and pure, whose spirit is righteous and wise, but animated by religious ideas and an accomplished theologian. This good Pope, whom you would like as I would know, if you knew him, is of an infinitely natural nature-sensitive nature; it is affected by all contradictions and the least danger. The spirit of Europe's cabinets is not kind to His Holiness, who has no confidence and support that in the first Consul, whom he fears of to displease beyond anything I can tell you.

"Seeing the Pope's poor health and sensitivity, I must inform the First Consul, who certainly does not want to cause a respectful religious man to die of grief table, that it is necessary to solicit him to do what one wants without upsetting him too much. So many things have already been granted, that by pushing too hard beyond this point one could to drive not only the Pope to despair, but also the old cardinals who are over eighty years old, and who they say: "I am going to appear before God, to whom only I will have to account for it; and what do I care about the power of the France!

"I have persuaded the Pope to consult on the proposal" to send his powers to Cardinal Caprara, regarding the Concordat with the Italian Republic. 11 there was a

Assembly of the Pope's chief advisors; I have done all

I. 24

370 BOOK II.

My efforts to bring about a good decision were unsuccessful. It was possible to obtain full powers. The cardinal Caprara receives very extensive instructions, in which one recalls-raises the objections that oppose his request.

These words of Pius VII, transmitted to the First Consul by the man of her choice, are an early revelation events. In the ongoing interest of society Christian rather than in that of his power, Bonaparte has done much for the Church, but the Church has not point shown ungrateful towards him. By combining their forces, the two powers have achieved pacification hearts. The revolutionary idea will no longer circulate. world; and yet what the most penetrating minds have, along with Cardinal Consalvi, already glimpsed in the te- The darkness of the future is gradually being revealed. Demagoguery, Defeated on the surface, she will retreat behind the sword itself. who tamed her. By flattering Bonaparte's passions, by evoking, against the prestige of his authority, the ghost of the old papal supremacy, it will bring about pacifism—leader to declare war on the Holy See. The roles set—will have been reversed, but at least the Revolution will not have. He neither wasted his time nor his effort.

Bonaparte professes the most supreme contempt for the sophists of whom she boasts; Bonaparte will be, despite his repugnance, gradually led to make cause common with them. They claimed, sarcastically, through corruption and lies, overthrow the Chair of Pierre and thus deliver the world to all the debaucheries of Intelligence. One man alone forced the Revolution into his own camp. He made her retreat just as her desires—, breasts were about to be fulfilled; the Revolution takes its revenge for this man. She would never dare to turn him into a Voltairean.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 371

or as an ideologue; she cherishes her ambitions; she... It stirs in the heart that after having been Charlemagne, he does not. He must not resign himself to the role of Louis the Pious. Thus will develop this struggle where territories replace—will spread the ideas, and in which, under the pretext of specifying or to resolve questions of political law, we will come until the absorption of the Holy See.

This struggle, of which Cacaault's dispatch is the first clue, will never have, neither in the heart nor in the will Napoleon's proportions of the anti-Christian war done to the Church by Demagoguery. The Priesthood and the Empire will certainly be divided on points of the of the highest importance; but the Empire, while threatening of schism or separation, will only ever tend towards triumph of his political thought. Religion and morality remain outside the debate. Confined between a Pope and an Emperor, the dispute will never affect the faith of peoples. The Revolution has sown further discord; that Will she benefit from this new attack strategy?

Napoleon Bonaparte declared himself emperor. With all France wholeheartedly supports the major state bodies, voice and gesture. It seems that, through his obedient followers—with enthusiasm, she wants to embody for him the right to dispose, as absolute master of his fortune and his freedoms. France is tired of the turmoil and the crime. She has paid the price, so dear to his dream of 1789, that after having lingered in the She turns to worship the hand of justice of her Kings. a sword and to remake it into a scepter. The First Consul dictated laws to him; she charged the Emperor with their execution. cution. She reserves for herself only the right to applaud and the permission to admire in silence.

The Pope could not have asked for anything better than to follow 24.

372 BOOK II.

the example of France; but to exceptional events
In terms of official functions, Napoleon felt compelled to offer consecrations.
more exceptional. He desires that, unlike all the customs of the Roman Curia, the Sovereign Pontiff comes in person in Paris, in order to sanction, in the eyes of the Religion, of Europe and of the People, the fourth dynasty whose foundations were laid by military glory.

It hasn't even been five years since an octogenarian pope,
led by a few gendarmes, from brigade to brigade,
He suffered captivity and death on French territory. At this a spectacle prepared by his orders, the Revolution had Throbbing with joy; Napoleon proposes to the Holy See a
A resounding revenge. The new Charlemagne does not want to go and receive the gift in Rome, in the Basilica of St. Peter, the religious consecration of his power: he needs to strike—more directly influence public opinion and legitimize by as needed, in the eyes of all, the sovereign authority Raine. Napoleon loved pomp and splendor. The extraordinary was his life. He was quite convinced that the seduction of the eyes is even faster than that of the ears, it makes itself a the joy of showing the whole world the modern Leo III who crosses the Alps to bless him in a solemn ceremony without precedent. The idea was grandiose. It evoked an-souvenirs; she made shine, before France, the old crown of the emperors of the West. It does not res-
It was more than just a matter of sensing the Pope.

Negotiations, which history has not yet fully recorded.
revealed, they open simultaneously in Rome and Paris.
In Paris, they rushed headlong into difficulty; they resolved it.
was, even though it had not yet been officially presented heavenly. People rushed to throw flowers, while waiting—Dante's fruits, following in the Pontiff's footsteps. In Rome, there was hesitation

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 373

t
Again. Considerations of more than one kind share

The Sacred College. Repugnances and polite affections Ticks are emerging; but, in the current state of affairs, the unusual the approach is so completely related to the unprecedented circumstances, which the Pope hastened to ob-to temper according to the Emperor's wishes.

Charles-Maurice de Talleyrand, Bishop of Autun, had, in 1790, at the dawn of the Revolution, employed the last-
The last days of his episcopate were spent preparing prelates intruder, then he contracted a legal marriage. In 1804, Tal-Leyrand, the former minister of the Directory, is still halfway there.
Napoleon's minister, and in a letter where debates are discussed killed by him all questions relating to the journey of the Pontiff, we read: "His Holiness has nothing to fear from old parties that divided France for so long.
she will barely have taken a few steps on French soil, that she will realize that these parties no longer exist. All the united hearts will fly to meet her, and the men who paid the most dazzling tributes to the remains of Pius VI, who died in captivity, will be venerated with rapture his worthy successor enjoying in their midst the heurich fruits produced by his wisdom and moderation.
The most precise orders will be given so that the re-reception of His Holiness in France be worthy of the great-honor of the sovereign who invites him and of the sublime dignity of head of the Church. Everything will be handled with the same care What delicacy it takes for His Holiness to find at each at the moment, whatever may be necessary, useful, and pleasant for him.
His life is not in any danger whatsoever. They are too dear to Her Majesty and to France for them not do not ensure the preservation of these precious days.

"His Holiness will receive a letter of invitation such as

374 BOOK II.

the desire, or by the hands of Cardinal Fesch, or by those of two prominent members of parliament.

In Rome, where everything is weighed by the weight of the sanctuary and of Human dignity was a matter of very natural distrust.
against similar reversals. Proverbial skill the Apostolic Court had never been able to lend itself to similar accommodations of conscience. The soul so delicate-Pie VI's timid demeanor was frightened, and not without reason.
In these expressions of respect to which the Emperor forced the Revolutionaries, who had become the great vassals
With his crown removed, the Pope saw only what he was supposed to see.
See. The Church, which may derive some spiritual benefit of such extraordinary complacency, yielded neither to objections, neither to the predictions, nor to the admonitions which he were addressed in the form of advice.

The coronation of Napoleon (December 2, 1804) is in the Memories of Europe, a memorable date for more than one Title. A few months earlier, the Duke of Enghien had perished in the ditches of Vincennes, under the bullets of a council of war, who seems not to have been very aware of the bloody act with which the Revolution charged him. She willingly, this Revolution, to publicly disappear from before the Emperor, but she demands secret deposits. The Duke of Enghien was shot; who can say if Pius VII is not intended to serve as a hostage to Democracy, on its own soil where was Pius VI his victim?

These apprehensions are public in Rome; they would eventually touch the soul of the Pontiff. The Cardinal Consalvi saw Napoleon up close; he judged him. Consalvi reassured the Pope. The Pope is crossing Italy and France in the middle of places of holy outpourings of piety and tenderness tributes of veneration.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 375

History, which, like the popular of all, time and all countries, loves the splendor of the holidays and pleasures in the splendor of the ceremonies, reproduced the various episodes of this triumphant journey. History has recounted, in all its details, this unique solemnity. Painting, music, and eloquence have immortalized her. David painted the coronation scene; Lesueur composed the music for it. Mass; Fontanes, a few days earlier, had, at In the name of France, congratulations and thanks were extended to Pius VII, who joined in to its new destiny. Nevertheless, the festivities are not always just celebrations; the speeches, even the most delicately inspired, they change nothing in a situation. The Sovereign Pontiff was in Paris; his mere presence... stirred up passions. This people of the Revolution, whom we had said, so proud to shake off all the yokes, he took them back one after the other with bursts of national pride and Christian sincerity that would make the heart of a prince leap and the soul of a Pope. The People formed a procession of cheers and respects. He was accompanied He accompanied us in the streets; we followed him into the churches; we knelt as he passed; people begged for his blessing with childlike smiles. The sweet name of Saint-Father soon became as popular in Paris as in Rome 1.

1 The Concordat and the Coronation, which was, so to speak, the political corollary—that this great act of religious reconciliation aroused among the contemporary with the repulsions and sensitivities which, in France and abroad from France, translated into more or less witty epigrams. In London and Paris, correspondence was produced daily. Crete. The work of royalist agencies, these letters attacked the bishops who submitted to the wish of the Sovereign Pontiff, and we read in holding one of those newspapers: "One rather remarkable thing is that the four (bishops) who had broken away from their colleagues had been indicated by public voice as having to obey the mandate of the first Consul, from the very first moment Ion was informed of the arrival of the brief

376 LJVRE IL

A contemporary of that era, an esteemed writer for his virtues as well as for his political works religious and philosophical matters, Abbot Proyart recounts, in a previously unpublished letter, the marvelous effects produced by the head of the Church. On January 23, 1805, Abbot Proyart written to Princess Sophie of Hohenlohe:

"You know what we see, that Rome is in Paris. One cannot imagine the profound respect that... The presence spires in all places and to everything that approaches it of the Pope. The four former prelates are citizens of Boisgelin, of Cicé, of Noah and Osmond. Their friends say that they did not follow in this a matter driven by their conscience; we are willing to believe them. We will be very pleased to inform our readers shortly of their beginning in Frascati or at the National Institute; for we learn that these new citizens resolved to closely monitor their response (which, like As one might expect, he must stop in Paris, in order to enjoy himself more quickly. (the praise and rewards they deserve), and on Monday, September 28th December, the day immediately following the ten-day period granted by Bona-Parte, they went to Mr. Otto's at the same time to do their work civic duty, and to seek the good offices of the minister of their new sovereign. It is even added, but we do not guarantee it, that Mr. Otto graciously received these important recruits, and made them hoping that they would receive acceptance during the night of October 5th to 6th their submission, and that, in the following decade, his government reli-Gieux would send the brigantine Le Déserteur and the praise the ungrateful, to bring them back to France, them and the priests they will be able to solicit.

The news writers have given their opinions. In a book entitled: Political Memoirs and Diplomatic Correspondence of Joseph de Maistre (Paris, 4858), a book which, rather singularly, is published with the attachment of the Liberal government of Piedmont, some fragments of letters are found which this government is undoubtedly trying to use as a weapon. In one of these fragments, dated March 9, 1804, page 137, the Count of Maistre is said to have written from Saint Petersburg: "It appears, through reports undeniable, that there is great discontent in Paris. As the Pope gives rosaries, and since everything is fashionable in France, a fashion has been created in Paris. Rosaries. Every prostitute has her own. The French were in the month of January, pistachio-colored, which was pronounced "Pie se tache" (Magpie stains). People ma of His Holiness. It can be said of him precisely that the Seeing is a sermon. One cannot imagine an exterior more simple, more religious, more heavenly, and everyone is Okay, if we were to choose a vicar of Jesus Christ to an air of gentleness, serenity, and amiable cheerfulness, one would need sticking to Pius VII. We also know that his exterior is but a shadow of the inner self: a mortified life, prayers of at night, daily abstinence, etc. He also has some firmness; having learned that four Bishops had flattered themselves quite nicely done by the fellow, who indeed is only that, let it be said to his glory. But it is no less a very great public calamity than a man in a place and in an era that would demand a great man. "

These jokes, of rather dubious taste, often escape the more sincere and to the most respectful devotions. They do not irritate the Roman Court, and above all they never make it change its plan or attitude. Allow me, in support, to cite a personal example relating to such miscalculations.

In 1846, when I was finishing my History of the Society of Jesus, I asked Cardinal Bernetti to kindly provide me with certain documents provisions relating to the ordinances of June 16, 1828. These ordinances, brought back from Charles X by Liberalism, struck the Jesuits with a kind of prohibition and proscription within. Cardinal Bernetti, then Secretary of State to Pope Leo XII, had put an end to it, by a note remained famous, at the meetings and negotiations of the French Episcopate. To the request that I had taken the liberty of addressing to him, he replied by these terms on January 14, 1846:

"The Nuncio in Paris will give you, my dear friend, all the documents" that you asked me for, and more, because the Holy Father wanted to add some from his own reserve; but I am putting to this shipment a The point is that you will find a way to publish a letter of the Abbot of La Trappe, who, in wanting to attack me as favorite and cardinal-clerc, does me too great an honor, since he places me on the same line that my illustrious master and friend Cardinal Consalvi. This is not, you You can feel it clearly, neither through false humility nor pride do I desire that This letter should be made public. The good Trappist monk expressed his deep regret to me. and apologies; but as these epistolary furies are renewed every times when the Church does not believe it should serve or approve passions,

378 BOOK II.

because they had not retracted their statements, he told the Emperor that they would not appear at the coronation in his presence, and they had forbidden to appear there and ordered to choose between submission that which the Holy Father demanded, or deposition. Three signed willingly, the form he presented to them: the qua-

The third requested a special audience, which the Holy-Father granted it. He explained himself as he wished; the Pope told him He gave his reasons, which were very easy to give. The man did not He did not give up. Then the Holy Father raised his eyes and hands to heaven. Instantly the stubborn man falls at his feet, melting into interests or calculations unrelated to its purpose, it follows that our friends the Those who are most welcoming are, on occasion, the most vehemently opposed to us. Anger evaporates with the excitement of the moment, and goodness remains. The most submissive children of the Church often pull it with four horses to make her walk in their direction. She wants to go on foot, but in the her own, quite convinced that one day or another this meaning will be that of the gro-gnons, impatiens, and untimely returns. These returns arrive without us to be astonished; and you yourself will not be astonished when you receive my little prayer, which you will grant as that of your best and most "old friend."

Such was Cardinal Bernetti's request. His wish was granted, and at page 206 of the sixth volume of Y History of the Company (edition of 4846), the letter from Father Antoine, abbot of the Trappist monastery of Meilleraie, was where the cardinal secretary of state is quite badly treated. It was his revenge; This is now an explanation and an answer to many complaints sharpened in jokes, or taking the form of outrage.

"How much it would be desirable," the Trappist wrote to the Archbishop of Ama-sie, administrator of the diocese of Lyon, that all the lords should see as you the danger that is run, and the traps that are set for Religion and to The Episcopate! The gathering of all the bishops of France formed a mass so imposing, that it crushed all the so-called liberals; they had moreover, unanimously uttered a solemn word which seemed to be close all access to any concessions unworthy of their character and of Their principle: We cannot be posed; and behold, the machinations of the ministry, the the meddling of a petty lawyer, the chatter of a favorite, of a cardinal-cleric, which perhaps was won like the Caprara or the Consalvi, comes to sow alarm, unrest, and division.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 379

tears and begging his forgiveness. The door of the anti-The room opens, and the crowd inside witnesses the scene.

"Another time, as he entered the large ga-the series of paintings that follow his apartments and reigns from the Royal Bridge to the New Bridge, while that the crowd of spectators surrounding him asked him-As he gave his blessing, a great commotion arose further away. He inquires about what it is, and he learns that there is a threat a young madman to throw him out the window, because he was obs-He tends to keep his head covered. He walks straight towards him and he said to him with extreme kindness: "Sir, the blessing-

The actions of an old man have never harmed a young man man." The foolish, or the impious, instantly falls to his feet and accuses himself of madness.

"All the provinces of France, who came to the coronation by Members of parliament paid their respects to him and spoke in a very Roman Catholic, Protestant manner, despite the temporary eclipse, a work of terror and of Weakness, their hearts had always remained in Rome. Plu- gentlemen made professions of faith such as could have dictate them to the most zealous supporters of legal primacy the tradition of Peter's successors, and never the Chair papal grievances have not been avenged by so many mouths of the pla- heterodox attitudes of Febronius, Joseph and Eybel, etc. Even supposing that there were things to reduce these demonstrations compared to driving, always Is it edifying to see such unanimous testimony, a recognition also motivated by the purity of the faith. Without doubt that faith in works is dead, and that we We cannot pray enough that the works will be revitalized through faith. It is also a good thing that all of France is came to protest in front of the government that she is and wants to remain Catholic.

380 POUNDS

France, having recovered from the initial violence inflicted upon its religion, understood it that way; and, in negotiating the Con- Cordat, Bonaparte had shown himself to be even more profoundly polite- tick than faithful Christian. At the same time he translated in a single word his entire thought. Abbot Bernier, bishop of Orléans, in concert with Archchancellor Camba- Ceres and Fontanes, combined a journey that must provoke- that a large Catholic demonstration. This demonstration- This will prove that the Priesthood and the Empire embrace each other. sincerely in justice and peace. It is about doing to accompany the Pope, via Emperor F. military, then in the Lyon region and Provence. The idea first seduced Napoleon; but, after a few moments After some thought, suddenly changing his mind: "No, not, no "No," he replied. "The people would travel a league to see me." He would do thirty of them to be blessed by the Pope; that's not "What I want."

Pius VII was surrounded everywhere by tributes. These tributes The magicians did not alter his usual gentleness in any way, but They also leave intact the radiant feeling of dignity in his entire person. Baron Denon, conservative from the Louvre galleries, is responsible for monitoring the Souver- The Pontiff in the monuments he wishes to visit.

When the Pope was brought into the Tuileries Museum:
"Your Holiness," Denon said to him in a low voice, "will find Perhaps here are objects that will sadden his eyes.
"And what then?" asked Pius VII. "Paintings, paintings..." statues, monuments of ancient art, he added timidly-the conservative; they were once in Italy, what-
"Some even in the Vatican."

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 381

The Pope raises his eyes to heaven, and with a gentle air and prophetic resignation: "Victory," he said, "is slow-
He had led them to Italy, but victory deposed them.
"Here. Who knows where she'll take them one day?"

Barely eleven years had passed, and battalions of an-Glaswegians and Prussians, invading the Louvre museums, come, weapons in hand, to carry out their mission in this same palace
the papal prediction that resounded under its vaults.

The whole of France was moved by this image of the papacy conflating all parties into a single benediction and reconciling them all with a blessed smile Genitality. The Revolution, powerless to understand, more powerless to control this movement, she tried to throw a few stones on the triumphal way that the Visible head of the Church. The intruding bishops fought until-that at the last minute of sophistry and subterfuge. They they had to submit and admit their mistakes: violence
Since that was no longer appropriate, the schism resorted to malice.
of the school. He bargained for his obedience, grieved the heart of Pius VII, but could not extract any concessions.

The Emperor finally realized that the Pope reigned over souls, and that he left him only the power over the bodies. The Pope demanded nothing, but, in his entre-particular ties with Napoleon, he recalled the pro-masses said in half-spoken words or implied; and before to return to his beloved Rome, he wished to finish the Temporal affairs. The best part of the territory the pontifical patrimony had been dismembered from the patrimony of Saint Pierre; the legations were aggregated to a shadow of Italian republic, which will merge into a new kingdom annexed to the French Empire. The Pope requests the restitution of his provinces as a right and a duty.

382 BOOKS

The Emperor refused, while giving hope of compensation.
possible sations; but, amidst these refusals, inflexi-bleak at heart and full of filial condescension in

In terms of form, it's easy to see that illusions exist.
gigantic forces absorb his powerful faculties. Napoleon
He so rarely considers relinquishing his conquests that he constantly seeks them out.
to meditate on new things. His domination, like that Alexander dreamed of some unknown worlds:
Instead of granting the Pontiff's prayer, he is already courting the
the idea of making Rome the second city of the Empire.

The Pope was consulted on a proposed futur, either in Avignon or in Paris. He was given a glimpse the advantages that the Church would reap from such a combination. Pius VII simply smiled, as one smiles at impossible things; but these confidences, Having escaped from learned indiscretions, they disturb the King-Pontiff. He is frightened by the Emperor's ambition, he is frightened further fuels its warlike fervor. By all sorts of affectionate tenderness, he therefore seeks to
"to put the lion to sleep; but the lion cared little for to be rocked by an old man in the arms of his vic-past toires.

Already Emperor of the French and King of Italy, he destroyed like a toy, the Germanic body. To this old building, so imposing in its duration across the centuries, it substitutes
a confederation of the Rhine, of which he is the absolute master under the title of Protector. In the North as well as in the South, he decrees that such and such a sovereign house has ceased to reign. The royal families of the Two Sicilies, of Porto-gal, Tuscany, Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick and Es-
The pagnes are stripped of their hereditary states; the Hollande is a French province. He distributes all of this.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 383

as appanages or prefectures to his brothers and to his sisters. To renew the face of Europe as she sees fit, her armies are marching at a run from Lisbon to Berlin, stopping for a victory sometimes at Austerlitz and at Jena, sometimes at Eylau and at Friedland, from where they attend triumphant at the Tilsit meeting or at the conferences of Bayonne.

Napoleon is sufficient for everything; his voracious aptitude em-
He stirred everything up. He calmed passions, except for that of the military glory; he took it upon himself to lull the hatreds; he dealt with Rome and drew the Pope into the ca-hospital of the Empire. There he was, on October 30, 1806, as-Paris seems to be the great Sanhedrin of the Jews.

These Deicides, eternal outcasts whose wandering life is one of the most striking testimonies to the truth of Christ-Christianism, were subjected to a thousand persecutions, since From Vespasian to Voltaire. The Emperor had them pose questions; he awaits the answer. But the great San-Hédryn has a perfectly natural opportunity to be fair, he He seized it. They were still talking about the Pope's visit. and its kind tolerance. The great Sanhedrin, re-representing all the persecuted, knows that it is not This praise should be addressed only to Pius VII. Philosophy and history slandered the Chair of Pierre. They said that the weak and oppressed had never found protection with the common Father, and that very often the Jews were victims of the Apocalyptic Siege Stolician or of the Holy Office. The Jews finally have their say; a public expression of gratitude emerges from their assembly. Isaac-Samuel Avigdor, deputy for the Alps-Ma-Ritimes, delivers the following speech:

"The most famous Christian moralists have defended

384 BOOK II.

persecutions, professed tolerance, and preached chafraternal rite.

"Saint Athanasius, Book I, says: 'It is an execrable heresy to want to shoot by force, by blows, by the imprisonments, those who could not be convinced by the reason.

"Nothing is more contrary to Religion," said Saint Justin "Tin, martyr, book V, that constraint."

"Shall we persecute," said Saint Augustine, "those who Does God tolerate it?

Lactantius, in Book III, says on this subject: "Religion for-Religion is no longer the answer; we must persuade, not convince. to coerce; Religion cannot be commanded.

Saint Bernard said: "Advise, but do not force."

"Thus, since Christian morality teaches everywhere love of neighbor and brotherhood, ignorance and a habitual prejudice alone could have given rise to vexations and persecutions of which you have often been the victims times. This is so true that these sublime virtues of humanity and justice have frequently been put into practice by truly educated Christians, and especially by the worthy ministers of this pure morality that calms the steps-we are suggesting and insinuating virtues.

"It is as a result of these sacred principles of morality" that, at different times, the Roman Pontiffs have pro- They welcomed persecuted Jews into their states and expelled from various parts of Europe, and that the ec- Clerics from all countries have often defended them. in several states in this part of the world.

"Around the middle of the seventh century, Saint Gregory defended the Jews and protected them throughout the world Christian.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 385

"In the tenth century, the bishops of Spain opposed the greatest energy to the people who wanted the masses to create. Pope Alexander II wrote to these bishops a a letter full of congratulations, for the wise conduct they had insisted on this subject.

"In the eleventh century, the Jews, in very large numbers- in the dioceses of Uzès and Clermont, were then- well protected by the Bishops.

"Saint Bernard defended them in the twelfth century," from the fury of the Crusaders.

"Innocent II and Alexander III also protected them" element.

"In the thirteenth century, Gregory IX preserved them," both in England and in France and Spain, great misfortunes with which they were threatened; he defended, under under penalty of excommunication, to compel their con- science and to disrupt their celebrations.

"Clement V did more than protect them: he facilitated their lives." still the means of instruction.

Clement VI granted them asylum in Avignon, then that they were being persecuted throughout the rest of Europe.

"Around the middle of the same century, the Bishop of Speyer prevented the release that the debtors of the Jews demanded were forcibly removed, under the pretext of wear and tear so often repeated Renewed.

"In the following centuries, Nicholas II wrote to the Inqui- a situation to prevent him from forcing the Jews to embrace Christianity.

"Clement XIII calmed the concerns of the fathers of families" alarmed about the fate of their children, who were being torn away from wind from the breast of their own mothers.

"It would be easy to cite an infinite number of other actions"

I. 25

386 BOOK II.

charitable acts which the Israelites have performed at various times, the purpose of the duties of clergymen instructed in these matters men and those of their religion.

"Only a strong sense of humanity could have given, in all the past centuries of ignorance and barbarity, the courage that was needed to defend unfortunate men, barbarously abandoned to the mercy of the horrible hypothesis and fierce superstition.

"These virtuous men could not, however, at all At most, one can hope that their philanthropic courage will this sweet inner satisfaction that the works of charity fraternal ritual makes pure hearts feel.

"The people of Israel, always unhappy and almost always oppressed, never had the means or the opportunity to express his gratitude for so many benefits; gratitude all the sweeter to express, because it it owes it to selfless and doubly respectable men.

"For eighteen centuries, the circumstance in which we let's find out who is the only one who has come forward to do to know the feelings that permeate our hearts.

"This great and happy circumstance, which we owe to our august and immortal Emperor, is also the most suitable, the most beautiful, as well as the most glorious-looking, to express to philanthropists of all countries, and especially to the clergy, our deepest gratitude towards them and towards their predecessors.

"Let us hasten, gentlemen, to take advantage of this memorable era, and let us pay them this tribute of the recognition we owe them; faithful sounds resounding within this enclosure, the expression of all our gratitude; let us solemnly express our sincere thanks for the successive benefits they have

"It fulfilled the needs of the generations that came before us."

The assembly applauded this speech. It voted to im-pressure and insertion following the minutes of the February 5, 1807; then it adopted the decree that we reproduceduisons ':

"The deputies of the Empire of France and of the kingdom from Italy to the Hebrew Synod, decreed on March 30th, filled with gratitude for the successive blessings of the clergy
Christian, in past centuries, in favor of the Israelites from the various states of Europe;

"Full of gratitude for the welcome that various pontiffs (popes) and several other ecclesiastics have done at different times to the Israelites of various countries, then that barbarity, prejudice, and ignorance combined persecuted cut off and expelled Jews from within societies;

"They stop the expression of these feelings" recorded in today's minutes, so that it remains forever as an authentic testimony of the gratitude of the Israelites of this assembly for the benefits that the generations before them have receipts from clergymen of various European countries;

Furthermore, they stop at the fact that a copy of these sentiments will be sent to His Excellency the Minister of Religious Affairs.

The tolerance of the Roman Catholic Church was proclaimed by the organ of the Sanhedrin; at the same time, the Revolution, draping history in its irreligious lies, foments against the Apostolic See a new uprising of boucliers. Daunou and Grégoire, Dulaure and Sismondi, Lam-Bretchs and Volney take it upon themselves to evoke the ghost

1 Minutes of the sessions of the assembly of French professional deputies sant la religion juive, p. 169, etc.

25.

388 BOOK II.

of the Inquisition; they open the way in Llorente in the-
What will this Spanish priest enter, whose works are better known than apostasy. The Revolution felt that Emperor Napoleon is no longer the man of the Concord-dated 4801. His great fortune is already for him a great servitude. He has secret aspirations that...

inevitably lead to declaring war on everything that opposes his will. The intoxication of power has gone to him. at the head, and, later, when he is on the rock of On Saint Helena, he will witness this intoxication himself. will say: "One cannot lie down in the bed of Kings without "To gain madness there: I went mad there!"

According to the word of the Holy Scriptures, the warrior con- The queranter made the leaders of Judah like a burning brand that we place under the wood, like a torch among the straw, and he devoured all the peoples on the right and on the left surroundings. The Revolution is watching for the opportune moment. To provide an excuse or pretext in advance for imperial ambitions, it forces history to make itself the complicit in his self-serving calumnies. The Emperor exposed- He knows his crown and his life are at stake in the face of all perils; he wanted to reign in the Vatican as well as at the Escorial, at the Tuil- leries as well as in Potsdam. Wasn't it necessary, in order to accelerate- To reverse its fall, to resurrect the religious question? The Re- The revolution had preserved and maintained the army dissolving secret societies. She warmed up some Freemasons and Philadel members; she counted on them. more than one general officer as an auxiliary. She dared even organizing discreetly, within the administrative machinery trades, disaffection and mistrust.

To draw Napoleon into a quarrel with the Holy Roman Emperor Sitting is not a very difficult thing. At every step it appears an obstacle; each event brings a new tension- nelle. To imitate Charlemagne, Napoleon claimed to be by right and in fact the natural protector of the Church. Consequently- sequence 'he orders his troops to suddenly occupy Ancona, in order, he writes, "to put this place in safekeeping" to be defiled by the Greeks and the Muslims." His Brother Jerome contracted a marriage in America which... put aside the Emperor's plans; the Pope must break this Marriage, legal in the eyes of the Church. The Emperor is in war with all of Europe; he demands that his adversaries be enemies to the common Father. Neutral by po- sition and especially by the burden of his pastoral ministry', The Vicar of Jesus Christ cannot, he must not re- renounce all communication with the Catholics of different states; the Emperor makes it an obligation.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 389

He wrote to her on February 13, 1806: "All of Italy will be subject to my law. I will not touch in any way the independence- dance of the Holy See, I will even make him pay for the de- think that the movements of my army. But our conditions must be that Your Holy-Teté will have the same regard for me in the temporal realm.

that I bear for her spiritually, and that she will cease unnecessary consideration towards the heretical enemies of the Church, and towards powers that cannot do it no good. Your Holiness is sovereign of Rome, but I am its Emperor. All my enemies must be the his own. It is therefore not appropriate that any agent of the King of Sardinia, no English, Russian or Swede, resides in Rome or in your states, nor that any building appear-holding to these powers enters your ports. As chief of our Religion, I will always have for Your Holiness the filial deference that I showed her in all circumstances

390 BOOK II.

constants; but I am accountable to God, who has kindly agreed to use my arm to restore Religion;
And how can I, without groaning, see it compromised by the slowness of the Roman Curia, where nothing is ever finished, where for worldly interests, vain prerogatives of the Tiara, souls are allowed to perish, the true foundation of the Religion? Those who leave will answer for it before God.
Germany in anarchy; they will answer for it before
God, those who are so zealous in protecting ma-Protestant marriages, and want to force me to tie my family with Protestant princes; they will answer for it before God, those who delay the dispatch of my bulls bishops who are abandoning my dioceses to anarchy."

These provocations, under which the abuse of force
"He disguises himself rather poorly," the Pope replied on March 21st:

"Sire, let us lift the veil! You say that you do not-"
Don't worry about the independence of the Church, you say that we are the sovereign of Rome; and you say in the
at the same time that all of Italy will be subject to your law.
You are telling us that if we do what you
You don't want to, you won't change appearances: but if you understand that Rome, as part of Italy-lie, either under your law; if you only wish to preserve appearances, the temporal domain of the Church will be re-subjected to an absolutely subservient and servile condition, the souve-
The sovereignty and independence of the Holy See will be destroyed.
And can we remain silent? Can we, by a si-inence which would make us guilty of prevarication in our office before God, and would overwhelm us with shame concealing the announcement of the me- from all posterity sure of this nature?

"Your Majesty establishes in principle that she is the Emperor-

Father of Rome. We respond with apostolic frankness. I believe that the Sovereign Pontiff, who has been such for so long for many centuries no reigning prince has a similar seniority to his, the Pontiff, Having become sovereign of Rome, he neither recognizes nor has never recognized in its states a superior power to his own; that no Emperor has any right over Rome. You are immensely great, but you have been elected, consecrated, crowned, recognized as Emperor of the French and no, not of Rome. There is no Emperor of Rome; he cannot exist if we do not strip the Sovereign-rain Pontiff of the absolute domain and of the empire which he He practices alone in Rome.

These fragments of correspondence, exchanged between Pius VII and Napoleon clearly define the situation. The situation is complicated by a particular disagreement, which erupts in every affair between Cardinal Consalvi, secretary-State secretary, and Cardinal Fesch, French ambassador. One is an accomplished statesman, the other a priest narrow-minded, but honest, and which raises all a kind of irritating question to confuse them pleasure. Consalvi made the Concordat; Consalvi decided the Pope to crown the Emperor; Consalvi enjoyed himself in Rome and in the world of immense reputation. Napoleon the-time and does him the honor of fearing his talents. He has the ear of the Sovereign Pontiff and the trust of the Sacred College, – two things that don't always meet days together. – Fesch seems jealous of this brilliance and of this popularity. He must know that habit is the recognition of the elderly, which Consalvi is necessary to Pius VII, both as a friend and as a minister. Fesch persists in overthrowing the rival whom he thought he should grant to his vain preoccupations. Uncle of the Emperor, he is indignant, like his nephew, at finding a opposition to his desires.

392 BOOKS

Consalvi, it must have been, was accused of inspiring the Pope, the firmness of his resolutions and the serenity of his language. Consalvi had broken more than one spear with the First Consul; the Emperor did not forget him. It was for he was a dangerous man; the Cardinal's retreat was decided, but Fesch's preceded it. Fesch did not He didn't lend himself to all demands; he liked to resist even to the Emperor. To properly establish his new position—regarding the Holy See, the Emperor wants a obscure agent replaces as French minister to

The Pope, a prince of the Church honored by his lineage.
Baron Alquier succeeds Cardinal Fesch.

From the Oratory novitiate, Alquier had moved on to the bar—Reau. A Jansenist and a lawyer, he had two titles to be revolutionary; he was so with all the aggravations of Cowardice. Regnault (from Saint-Jean d'Angely), his friend, Alquier's portrait is described in these terms: "He is criticized "Great cowardice and a lot of laziness." He He adds to this report: "He's easily frightened, and in
"When the danger strikes, I doubt he'll keep his head."

At the Convention, during the trial of Louis XVI, the Doubt had not even been possible. Alquier was one of these numerous regicides of the worst kind, which fear incited them to crime. They claimed to be judges, and they had no Not the courage of justice. Alquier voted for the King's death.
whose innocence he recognized in his heart;
then Bonaparte, who would not have approved of such a cou—
These were worthy abandonments of virtue, but who used them at need, gave this coward the mission of frightening the

PE VII AND NAPOLEON. 393

Pope. Alquier was tasked with demanding the revocation of the car—Dinal Consalvi, who resigned from his position on June 17
1807. Cardinal Casoni, in his seventies, was appointed pro—
Secretary of State, as if to clearly indicate that the Pope reserved the position and title for the minister of his choice.

In this struggle that begins between an isolated Pontiff of all his advisors and the Emperor's unofficial agents, who will use his undeniable authority to exa—managing his desires and anticipating his orders, violence and cunning join forces. They combine their efforts to trap Pius VII.
When we fail, we blame him or accuse him of lacking dignity.
personal or to give in to nervous irritation.
detached from the Church's heritage, piece by piece,
the last provinces that constitute independence
The true, essential safeguard of the Holy See.
incessant passage of French troops through the Ro—inagne, — troops that are deliberately forgotten and not paid, — burdens the treasury and impoverishes the state as well as the parties—culiers. Benevento and Ponte-Gorvo are seized, to to make it the prerogative of Talleyrand and Bernadotte.
seeks from the Pope and the Sacred College every kind of squabbles. They want to keep one under guardianship, the others under Suspicion. Incessant skirmishes of words between—These concerns are being addressed. Napoleon formed the plan to be emperor of the West. He says the scepter weighs to the feeble hand of Pius VII, and that his head will have quite enough of a tiara to wear.

Alquier, with its arrogant or saccharine forms, was more the chargé d'affaires of the Revolution than the representative of Napoleonic France; and it is here the unfortunate nature of the situation, which can only tend to

394 BOOK II.

to worsen. Alquier made contact with some officers of the Papal Army and especially with the de-Magogues, who longed for the good old days when the Republic—
The Roman Republic granted them the right of life and death.
on their fellow citizens. These officers claimed to be indignant to be peaceful soldiers of the Pope at a time where a Caesar, such as Bonaparte, decreed victory. These tribunes, having lost even the modesty of servitude, complained of being governed by stifling priests systematically, they said, all the generous apirations.

To stimulate these bouts of warrior fever and give a body of secretly plotted betrayals, Alquier took treacherous measures. A division of the French army—
The French must, under the orders of General Miollis, do the February 2, 4808, its entry into the capital of the world
Christian. This division is going to Naples, assures 1— one officially; but Alquier is spreading the rumor quietly that it is destined to occupy Rome. A pretext for her would be necessary to legitimize or at least to to excuse such a blatant violation of territory.
Forged orders are being distributed in the barracks.
alleged orders will emanate from the Holy See. Accusations will be leveled against them.
Cardinal Pacca and Cardinal Consalvi will be there, as will...
The latter had already been implicated in Duphot's death.
Papal soldiers will fire on the French troops.
at the moment they seize the People's Gate.
The Pope is warned, the plot fails; but Pius VII, whose diplomacy tried to make a lamb, wakes up lion. The man naturally transforms into hero. On January 30, 4808, he gathered around him the Sacred College and the Prelature; then, vested in his cope

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 390

pontifical and seated on his throne, he commands to introduce—to escort Alquier, summoned to the Palace by a note from the Se-State creditor. Alquier presents himself, and the Pope...

These words are addressed to:

"You are one of those who voted for the death of the King of France. This heinous crime was bound to fill the the rest of your days and make you change your behavior in political events; it's quite the opposite that you did.

"You have attempted to compromise the Holy See,"
We ourselves and our faithful subjects, if divine mercy
She hadn't come to our aid. We know everything, you know-
You? We know everything, and we forgive you.

"Tell your sovereign that, trusting in his sacred words, we have embarked on a journey well arduous, for the sole purpose of forming a single Church, leaving the Holy See without its Head. He failed in every way;
But it wasn't us he broke his word to, it was farewell.

"Tell your sovereign that ascending this throne,
for us it's the same as trampling underfoot a floor. Tell him we are unshakeable. If He never wants us deported; he only needs to give an order. But let him know that we will not be more than just a simple Benedictine monk, Gregory Bar-Nabe Chiaramonti. Tell him that, in this case, the real
The Pope is elected, and he himself will proclaim it. (Hear-)
Are you ready? Go on!

Pius VII had uttered these words with an accent of A dignity that allowed no reply. He descended from the throne, and, followed by his court, he withdrew majestically, leaving the French ambassador so confused that he

396 BOOK II.

could never, adds the handwritten account, find the door to exit.

This scene, which has not yet been recounted, was,
like all great things, at once simple and sublime. It sums up the character of Pius VII; it shows What was his firmness? Alquier understood it only now.
then; but then it was too late. On February 2nd, the Fran-
The Italians entered Rome without a fight; they seized-rent of the Castel Sant'Angelo, of the main posts, of the printing companies and all public establishments. Such as to take possession not only of the city, but even the person of the head of the Church, the canons were robbed in front of the Quirinal Palace, his residence.

The Pope is a prisoner in his own palace; he has more than freedom from his pain. In order to give him back his An even more bitter situation: all the Cardinals are exiled. or Prelates who are presumed to be courageous enough to support his courage. Consalvi is being held in custody, and the isolation... The papal ceremony begins. His secretary the State resists, by its orders, all the abuses of detail. The prosecretary must relinquish his functions to a another. Cardinal Casoni is replaced by the cardinal Doria, then by Gabrielli. Gabrielli succeeds the cardinal Pacca.

The new minister is not one to be intimidated. He is intimidated by threats. He knows how to talk, he knows how to act. Affran- free from all illusion, because it is free from all self-interest, Pacca, in his austere modesty, displays a sober common sense and an intrepid spirit that never gives up hope. (Linked) from a close friendship with Consalvi, he, like him, ap- He highlighted the danger of the situation. Consalvi is sidelined; Pacca He deputized for Pius VII. The pro-secretary of state will be

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON/ 397

Prudent and resolute; orders are given to arrest him. The Pope he presents himself; he personally covers the suspected minister of loyalty. Without hope of living, without fear of dying, Pacca devoted himself. His devotion will be the glory of his name, for he truly belonged to the race of these privileged people through which the salvation of Israel is accomplished.

This struggle of a few old men against the oppressor Europe is taking on ever-greater proportions every hour tions. These old men, whitened by prayer and by the- study, they say like Saint Paul: "The weapons with the- The weapons we are fighting against are not those of the flesh." They have neither people nor army to oppose the invasion hoisting. One would think they were abandoned by God and the men; but they do not abandon themselves. They They have the courage of unanimous resolutions, and they do not fear They boast neither of death nor captivity. Victory has led Napoleon to the heart of Germany: the Au- empire Cheating is shaken. On May 47, 1809, a decree, dated from Schönbrunn Palace, suppresses the tempo- power The papal court. This decree declares Rome an imperial city and free. It will be promulgated on June 41; but the day before, Pius VII, by a notification to his beloved subjects and to All of Christendom protests against the usurpation of its States and against the precarious compensations by which

They want to humiliate the Holy See. This act is thus formulated:

"The dark designs of enemies of the Apostolic See! After the spoliation violent and unjust of the most beautiful and the most considerable portion of our domains, we see ourselves, under individual circumstances under false pretexts and with an even greater injustice,

1 Epist. B. Pauli, II Cor. x, 3.

398 BOOK IT

stripped of our natural sovereignty, to which is closely linked to our spiritual independence. In the middle of this persecution, we find solace in thought that we are not struck by such a grave disaster nor at because of no offense towards the Emperor or towards the France, which has always been the object of our tender and paternal affections such solitudes, nor for any view of world politics deaine, but only for not wanting to betray our duties and our conscience. Pleasing men and offending—Serving God is not permitted to any of those who profess the Re-Catholic religion, much less so to the one who belongs to it the leader and the interpreter. Obligated as we are, with regard to of God and the Church, to transmit intact all our rights, we protest against this new dispossession, and we declare it null and void: we reject with the most energetic and formal will any endowment that the Emperor of the French would have the intention to assign, either to us or to the members of Our Sacred College. We would cover ourselves in disgrace. in the eyes of the Church if we made our sub-assistance from the very hand of the one who took it from us. We abandon ourselves entirely to Providence and to the piety of the faithful, and we will be happy to finish in the deprivations the painful career of our sad days. We adore secrets with profound humility God's inscrutable secrets. We implore His mercy. on our subjects, which will always be our joy and our crown; and after having done so in these circumstances Painful, all that our duties demand, we we urge everyone to always preserve the Religion and the Faith, and to unite with us to conjure with groans—With words and tears, between the vestibule and the altar, Father

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 399

supreme enlightenment so that he would deign to change the con—"Theirs of our persecutors."

This notification was only the prelude to a measure much more resounding. In anticipation of eventualities that the the Emperor's character and the tendencies of the Revolution must make us understand, the Quum memoranda bubble has was drafted by Cardinal di Pietro and by the Father Fontana. This Bull does not directly affect Napoleon, but she fulminates anathema against the plunderers of the Apostolic Chair and against their adherents. Napoleon abuses his power to strip the chief of the Church; the head of the Church uses spiritual weapons to to repel the aggression. And again, at this supreme point of in the debate, he tries, through a thousand acts of courtesy, to prove to Napoleon believes that the wounds of an old friend are preferable. to the fraudulent caresses of a secret enemy.

During these years of inner turmoil and complicated calculations, Pius VII and the Sacred College were unborn, by the very force of circumstances, to admit to themselves that the most The greatest of all weaknesses is to fear too much appear weak. Faced with this conqueror who traverses the The world at a breakneck pace, the princes of the earth, silent Out of fear or servility, they hastened to desert their because; the Roman Court believes that it should not suffer Such prostration. She is rather raising a cry of alarm. what a challenge; this cry finds an echo in all the conscience. Napoleon wanted to wound the Papacy, he wounded himself. himself. He surrounded himself only with blind instruments. pushing obedience to the point of baseness; this obedience— His insanity leads him to acts he condemns, and yet... and he assumes responsibility before men.

On June 19th, the Emperor was still unaware of the bull of excommunication, and he writes to Murat: "I I informed you that my intention was that the that the affairs of Rome were conducted swiftly, and that one did not offered no resistance whatsoever. No sanctuary must be respected if one does not submit to my decree, and, under whatever pretext, one should not suffer no resistance. If the Pope, against the spirit of his state and the Gospel, preaches rebellion and wants to use the immunity of his house to have circulars printed Lares, we must stop him. The time for these scenes is over. Philip the Fair had Boniface VIII and Charles V arrested Clement VII was held in prison for a long time, and those people had does even less. A priest who preaches to the powerful temporal discord and war, instead of peace, abuses his power.

400 BOOK II.

This letter, which would weigh so heavily on Napoleon's destiny...
Leon, does not contain the formal order to seize vio-
the person of the Pope and to offer him as a spectacle to Europe as a resister to the Emperor's orders.
But we lived in a time when it was very difficult to
to meet men who are not afraid of displeasing to better serve. In those days, the survivors of The Revolution had admitted to themselves, with Tacitus*, "that a pou-
"Seeing in extremes is always poorly assured." In order to undermine even more so this power, their obsequiousness turns to perfidy. Napoleon speaks of arresting the Pope; his gene-Raux and his agents in Rome are plotting an ambush.
attempt a night attack on the Quirinal, an esca-
A burglary; then a gendarmerie general, named Radet, penetrates, with armed force, as far as the Supreme Pontiff.

1 Tacitus, Hist., 1. II, xcm.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 401

The abduction is complete; Pius VII and the Cardinal Pacca are prisoners. The Revolution said that night at the gates of the Quirinal, through the mouth of one of his henchmen who was leading the plot: "Here is the last Pope who
"If you pass under that gate, after him there will be no more."
The Revolution, which has always flattered itself with this chimera, takes the sovereign and his minister out of Rome, without to have even designated the place of their exile. There were fears that The anger of the Trasteveres; one would like it to be possible to deceive the piety of the people crowding around the captive. He is shuttled from Rome to Florence, from Florence to Genoa, from Genoa to Alexandria, from Alexandria to Grenoble.
It is a relic of the pontificate, wandering from city to city.
at the mercy of his jailers, and who everywhere awakens with the feelings of faith, the most painful impression.

Napoleon could and should punish his agents; their exa-
His overzealous management went beyond his will. He imagines that a retreat will compromise the ideal of its omnipotence. After secretly blaming him, he ratifies ostenbly the fait accompli. "I am angry," he wrote of Schœnbrunn, July 8, 1809, to the Minister of Police,
That they arrested the Pope: that's utter madness. It was necessary arrest Cardinal Pacca and leave the Pope alone.
Rome; but ultimately there is no remedy, which is It's done. I don't know what Prince Borghese will have done;
But my intention is that the Pope not enter France.
If it is still in the Genoa river, the best in-The right where it could be placed would be Savona; there is a fairly large house where he would be properly until we know what it should become. I don't I do not object, if his dementia ends, to his being renvowed in Rome. If he had entered France, make him retro-

I. 26

402 BOOK II.

grade on Savona and San Remo; have his correspondence. As for Cardinal Pacca, do it inclose at Fénestrelle, and let him know that if there is a Frenchman murdered as a result of his instigations, he will be The first one to pay with his head.

According to General Radet's testimony, the captive, whose dementia was only supposed to end with the Empire, he retained, in moments so full of anguish, the calm of his dignity and the kindness of his smile. To the peoples who give birth
They fell in his path and, prostrate in the dust,
They tearfully ask for his blessing, he gives it
The Christian's watchword was proclaimed aloud: "Courage and
"Prayer!" he cried; and the multitude, as they moved away, repeat with him these words, which are consolation and Hope. Finally, after aimless races and travels without direction, Pius VII arrives in Savona. We have it deprived of his advisors and friends; he has no commun-
It has no connection with either the outside or the inside. It is isolated,
He is sequestered, and is given neither ink nor paper;
to make his captivity harder, they prevent him
even to correspond with the Episcopate.

Christendom is orphaned, and yet the Pulpit Pierre will not be a widow. Plunged into solitude and Perhaps seeking her, the Pope neither asks nor accepts no distractions. To all the proposals that the au-
When imperial authorities submit to him, he always responds with These words of Tertullian: "I am free, I have no other master than the almighty, eternal God, who is also Caesar's master." And from his lips, which are the deposit-sites of science, and from his mouth from which fell the knowledge of the law, neither complaint nor wall-ripe. To have consistent conduct, one must start

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 403

of an invariable principle; Pius VII relies on the word of God himself. Consalvi had taught him, through his experiencerience, that in diplomacy as in business one must know to forget a lot. The Pope is admirably willing to this oversight; but, under no pretext, would Pius VII have considered to make it prevail at the expense of the Holy See.

The Emperor has the Sovereign Pontiff in his power, he
He also wants to hold the Sacred College under his control. In 1798,
The Revolution dispersed the Cardinals, and this dispersal
Their clumsy attempt at coordination allowed them to assemble in conclave.
Napoleon takes his views further. If death comes to him—
To raise Pius VII, all the princes of the Church must... allow themselves to be guided in the election by his imperial will.
He therefore forces them into exile in Paris and to raise, by the brilliance of Roman purple, the splendor of its festivals nuns. Grief in their hearts, the Cardinals obeyed to the instructions; but one day duty was seen as opposed to tion with her, and duty prevailed.

The Cardinals were gathered, or rather interned, in the capital of the Empire. Napoleon boasted of exercising power over they the authority of his power, and perhaps the prestige more dazzling than his genius. Consalvi arrives in turn, but Consalvi turned white before his time, for as Pliny the said of Trajan: "The gods seem to have made no prior to maturely whiten her hair, than to print on his brow more majestic." In his Memoirs, the Car-Dinal recounts the presentation of the exiles in these terms.
The one who issued the order of exile. The account of this hearing
The Napoleonic era is a page of history.

"We were," wrote Consalvi, "five Cardinals that the Cardinal Fesch presented, on that day, to the Emperor all Only five arrivals this week, namely: the 26.

404 BOOK II.

Cardinal di Pietro, who came with me, and the cardinals Pignatelli, Saluzzo and Despuig. Cardinal Fesch had placed them apart on one side in a semicircle; all the
The other cardinals were on the other side. Following them were the great ones.
of the Court, the Ministers, the Kings, the Princes, the Prin-Cesses and Queens, and other dignitaries. Behold, the Emperor—
The reur arrives. Cardinal Fesch steps forward and begins by introducing him first, who is Cardinal Pigna-telli. The five of us were lined up in order of pre-Minority of the cardinalate. To Fesch saying: "It is the cardinal Pignatelli," the Emperor replies: "Neapolitan," and he
He passes it by, without adding anything. Cardinal Fesch pre-
He sent the second one, saying: "Cardinal di Pietro."
The Emperor paused briefly and said to him, "You are in-Greased. I remember seeing you here with the Pope.

"On the occasion of my coronation," and he passes by. The Cardinal Fesch said, while presenting the third: "The cardinal Neapolitan," replied the Emperor, and he steps forward. Cardinal Fesch presents the fourth and says: "Cardinal Despuig. » "Spanish," replies the Emperor. And the Cardinal replied: "From Majorca," as if he were disowning his homeland.

"The Emperor passed by; when he reached me, he cried out" before Cardinal Fesch appointed me: "O cardinal Consalvi, how much weight you've lost! I wouldn't have thought you almost unrecognized." And speaking like that with a great air of kindness, he stops to wait for my answer. I then told him, as if to explain my weight loss: "Sire, the years are piling up. Ten have now passed." since I had the honor of greeting Your Majesty. "That's true," he replied, "it's been almost ten years since you..." You came for the Concordat. We did it in this same room; but what was its purpose? Everything has gone away. Smoke. Rome wanted to lose everything. We must admit it, I was wrong to oust you from the ministry. If you had continued in that position, things would not have been pushed that far.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 405

"That last sentence caused me so much pain that I couldn't..." I could hardly see anymore. However much I might have wished to be well received by Napoleon; I would never have dared to believe that he had come to this. If it would please me to hear it to publicly attest that he had been the cause of my eloi- At the ministry, I was struck by the fact that I heard him state that if I had stayed in that position, things wouldn't have gone that far. I was afraid that if I let this pass... an assertion left unsaid, so that it would not give rise to public scrutiny. to conclude that this was indeed the case and that I would have betrayed my duties, as was the natural consequence of it- turelle.

"Under the influence of this fear, I did not consult that my honor and the truth. Instead of showing me- I was very touched and grateful for his kindness and this confession. so extraordinary and so significant for a man of his character, admission made by accusing oneself of having been at fault. Moving away from the ministry, I found myself in the harsh necessity of responding to a most absolute assertion of its part by a most forceful and significant reply fictional. So I said to him, "Sire, if I had remained in this "If I had been there, I would have done my duty."

He stared at me, made no reply, and then Detaching himself from me, he began a long speech, going from right and left, in the semicircle that we form-miners, listing an infinite number of things against the con-
the Pope's and Rome's conduct for not having adhered to his wishes

406 BOOK II.

lontés, and having refused to enter into his system, things which are not to be reported here. After having spoken thus for quite some time, and being near me,
In his comings and goings, he stopped, then repeated a second time: "No, if you had stayed in your position, Things wouldn't have gone this far.

"Although it was quite sufficient to have contradicted him once
However, still driven by the same motives, I dared to do it again and reply: "Your Majesty Believe me, I would have done my duty.

"11 began to stare at me. Without replying--
Then, he detached himself from me and began to walk back and forth again.
continuing his speech, making the same complaints on Rome's conduct towards him, on what Rome no longer had those great men who once had illustrated; and then addressing Cardinal di Pietro, who was the first at the beginning of the semicircle, as I was at the other end, he said, for the third times: "If Cardinal Consalvi had remained Secretary of State, Things wouldn't have gone this far.

"When I heard him repeat those words a third-
For the umpteenth time, I won't mention my courage, but my little caution on this occasion and excessive zeal
My honor made me cross the line. I already had it
I was upset twice: he wasn't speaking to me then like...
Previously, it was quite far away. Nevertheless, at this During the rehearsal, I left my place and advanced to the-Near him, at the other end, I said to him: "Sire, I have
I have already stated to Your Majesty that if I had remained in this
"If I had been in that position, I would certainly have done my duty."

"To this third profession of faith, if I may thus
He began speaking, no longer able to contain himself, but staring fixedly at me,

PIUS VI! AND NAPOLEON. 407

He burst out with these words: "Oh! I repeat, indeed, I must would not have allowed you to sacrifice the spiritual to the tempporel. » In his mind, he was trying to convince himself that I would have agreed to his wishes rather than expose the interests of religion are at risk of being broken. with Rome. That said, he turned his shoulders at me; which made me He restored me to my place. Then he asked, in a few words, to the Cardinals who were on the other side, if they had He heard his speech. He then returned to the five of us, and standing close to Cardinal di Pietro, he said that the col- The Cardinals' council being almost complete in Paris, we had to start examining whether there was anything something to suggest or request for the smooth running of business of the Church. He added that we could meet in as a consequence, or all at once, or some of the principals principals among us. He explained shortly afterwards what he meant- done by the principals, they were the most versed in the theological questions, as was evident from the antithesis which he did by saying to Cardinal di Pietro, to whom he was addressing this discourse: "Grant that in this number there may be I Cardinal Consalvi, who, if he is ignorant of theology, like me he supposes, knows it well, is well versed in the science of poli- "tic." He concluded by requesting that the resolutions be handed over to him. tions through Cardinal Fesch, and he withdrew.

The marriage of Emperor Napoleon and Archduchess Princess Marie-Louise of Austria is declared. By rai- theological and moral sounds, which are not within the scope In this work, the Roman Catholic Church opposes divorce or to the repudiation of the Empress, a divorce that the officiality The diocese of Paris made the mistake of legalizing it. Since the day before From the coronation, Josephine is, before God as before the men, the legitimate wife of Napoleon Bonaparte. The Pope Pius VII, at the request of the Empress herself, on that day demanded that Religion sanction a union which was still only civil. Josephine's wish was granted; the Church does not want to, it cannot adhere to considerations tending toward nothing less than making re- to base the indissolu- on a whim or on political interest The holiness of marriage. The Pope is unable to raise their voices; the Sacred College will make its si- Lence. Gonsalvi acts as his interpreter: ... "We knew that there would be four invitations, the cardinal recounts in His unpublished memoirs on the marriage of the archduchess: the first one in Saint-Cloud; the Emperor was to present to the Empress, barely arrived, all the great bodies of the State; the second one still in Saint-Cloud, to attend the civil marriage; the third at the Tuileries, for the ma- religious marriage; the fourth also at the Tuileries, in order to to receive all the major bodies of the State, the sovereigns being on their throne. After much deliberation between We thirteen, it was agreed that we would not surrender not at the second and third invitations, which regard-they performed the marriage, that is to say neither to the marriage ecclesias-tick, for the aforementioned reason, nor to civil marriage, because that we did not deem appropriate for Cardinals of a-to authorize, through their cooperation, the new legislation which separates such an act from the nuptial blessing, as one he calls it, regardless of what that act itself gave rise to regard as legitimately broken the Previous link, which we didn't think.

408 BOOK IT

"We therefore decided not to intervene at the second nor at the third meeting. As for the first and the Fourth, we saw in it only an act of deference and respect, sheltered from the difficulties that arose from marriage:

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 109

It seemed to us that we could take this step near Napoleon and the archduchess without recognizing them to be born there as husband and wife. It was considered that he it was necessary to soften as much as possible what was harsh in the demonstration we were going to make against the Em-fear, in front of all of Europe, by not attending his marriage. It was necessary to try everything we we could, in order to prove to him that we were only refusing the impossible. Feelings were divided on the quathird point (and I was one of the stubborn ones to say no), by the fear of a public scene, as is customary to say. Which the Emperor's violent nature did not that we might have too much to foresee, after we had failed to second and third meetings. It was not the case even for the first time. The reasons for voting yes having also prevailed with respect to the first invitation, we concluded, by mutual agreement, not to divide ourselves in a circumstance where it was so important to be united and to to maintain our numbers in their entirety. The reason that the prevailing one was, in contrast to the one we just to indicate, that of appearing in the first and fourth
The meeting provided the Emperor with a means of passing, to less in public, regarding our absence from the other two, or as being due to accidental causes, or as having escaped him (and we thought he would act this way);
because it was in his interest not to cause a scene
such a delicate matter.

"We received all four invitations. We went" everyone was at Saint-Cloud on the evening of the first ceremony. Pen-while we waited in the main hall for the arrival of the two sovereigns, I had to withstand one of the most intense assaults.
vivid and which gave me a deathly sweat. We were all assembled: Kings, Cardinals, Princes of the Empire, the dignitaries ministers, when I found myself approached unexpectedly visited by the Minister of Police, Fouché, Duke of Otranto. I had met him on my first trip to Paris, and he had taken a great liking to me. I owed him a very noteworthy pardon granted to a person whom I had recommended him at the time. During my ministry, he had always made me greet the French who came in Rome; he spoke of me only with enthusiasm. In my arrival visit (the only one I paid him during the (I spent five months in Paris during this second trip), He gave me the most honorable and friendly welcome, spoke of all the difficulties that had occurred, in the attributing it to my departure from the State Secretariat. The deli- The caesura of my character had compelled me to answer him frankly (which he refused to admit) that he would have happened just as easily, because I had always been myself, and that I would always be of the opinion that one should not could do what was required.

"That evening, he took me by the hand and led me in a corner of the living room, and asked me if it was true that some Cardinals wanted to act foolishly, or rather, he continued, commit the enormous crime of not to intervene at the Emperor's wedding. As I did not wish- I would not expose any of my colleagues before the scheduled time, nor to enter into a discussion that would have become very embarrassing Reassuring, I delayed answering, not wanting to deny her the thing. He repeated his request insistently; then, taking my side with my usual frankness, I re- pondis that I could not tell him the number and the names of those, but he was speaking to one of them.

"He cried out that, to his great sorrow, he had heard

PIE & NAPOLEON. 4M

This very morning the Emperor declared that I was verified tablement, but that he had denied it to him, assuring him that he It was impossible that a man of my judgment, no imbued with the prejudices of my colleagues, he thought this way, especially in a matter where I saw the majority of the Sacred College (which showed me how well-informed he must have been) to act completely differently. He began to list the con- terrible sequences of the approach that we claim- what we were going to do, and how much we were going to cut ourselves off wrongs against the State, since this case was of interest to so many following the succession to the throne, the legitimacy of the marriage and children who would be born from it, and the tranquility of the Em-worse. He added that a similar act on our part throws-France would do it, otherwise now because of the fear of authority, at least later in endless turmoil.

11 developed these motifs, and, filled with talent as he is,
he brought me I couldn't say how many arguments diverses, also drawn from circumstances, and especially from this that we should not call marriage the act that we rewe were pushing as such, since marriage, he said, was already done in Vienna, and that everything now boils down to a A mere formality.

"But I had an answer to everything; I refuted each of his..."
arguments; and as for the consequences that I could not
To deny it, I told him that we were filled with sorrow, that
It wasn't our fault, since we had suggested

The way to avoid them is by not inviting all the Cardinaux; that unfortunately it had not been adopted, and that ultimately, as far as our personal interests were concerned-
In reality, this motive would not be powerful enough to make us betraying our duty. He replied with an infinite number of things.
useless to report, as were my answers. He finished

412 BOOK II.

saying that if my other colleagues didn't want to Surrendering would not, after all, be the greatest bad, although that was one; but as for me, it
It was otherwise. "You score too much," he continued; "you
You made the Concordat, you were prime minister;
You are so well-known and, he added, so highly regarded (although I did not deserve this esteem), that it is a terrible thing-It is unlikely that you will be among those absent. The Emperor in will be angrier than anything else. You weigh too much.
in the balance.

"He then began to beg me to attend the wedding."
ecclesiastical, which was the important thing; he repeated that it was not
It wouldn't be the greatest misfortune if I didn't appear not at the civil ceremony. I always stood firm, I thank him-ciai of this undeserved good opinion of a man of the judgment he gave me; I added that I had as much and perhaps more than all the others of what he called prejudices, and what I, more accurately, called de-see my condition; I conclude by assuring him that nothing would make me part with it. Seeing that the doors were being opened for Upon the entry of Their Majesties, he left me, advising me to think more clearly, and, even more importantly, to persuade my colleagues to attend at least the ecclesiastical wedding.
- "As for you," he finished, "I tell you, I am capable of coming to pick you up myself in my car

ture, that morning, rather than allowing your non-intervention, which would be the worst of all, no less for "The thing that is only for yourself." Thus ended this colloquium. which gave me, I repeat, a deadly sweat, and which I left no detail unknown to my twelve colleagues, who had been spectators along with the other Cardinals and the princes gathered in this hall.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 413

Then the Sovereigns entered; the Emperor held by the hand the new Empress, and he presented her successively the people. When it came to us: "Ah!" he cried, "here come the Cardinals!" And we passed. After slowly reviewing us all, he appointed us to the Imperial-ratrice one by one, adding their quality to some, which made him say of me: "He's the one who made the Concordat." No one spoke, but everyone bowed. The Emperor made this presentation with a full face of affability and courtesy. He wanted, as we know, to try to triumph, through this act of kindness, over our opposition, of which he was aware. This happened on March 31st, a Saturday, in the evening.

"The civil marriage took place on Sunday in Saint-Cloud." We did not appear there, thirteen of us, namely: the Cardinals Mattei, Pignatelli, Délia Somaglia, Litta, Ruffo-Scilla, Saluzzo, di Pietro, Gabrielli, Scotti, Brancadoro, Galeffi, Opizzoni, and I. Of the fourteen separated from us (except, I repeat, the almost dying and without concordat Caprara's birth and Cardinal Fesch, who intervened with the imperial and civil household of the court in its capacity as (Grand Almoner), eleven were present: the two Dorias, Spina, Caselli, Fabrice Ruffo, Cambacérès, Vincenti, Erskine, Roverella, and Maury. The other three who did not. The following were not present: Bayanne, Despuig and Dugnani, who excused themselves as sick; but the excuse health issues made them relevant to the Court and the public as members, not as opponents. Then came the Monday, when the ecclesiastical wedding took place at the Tuileries, with that immense pomp that history has described. saw the seats prepared for all the Cardinals; up to In the end, we did not lose hope of finding them present.

ili BOOK IT

for this act, at least, which was of the most keen interest the Court; but the thirteen did not appear. They removed from then the empty seats, so that they do not hit the the Emperor's eyes, when he arrived.

"It was Cardinal Fesch who performed the marriage. When the Emperor entered the chapel, his gaze first fell upon the place where the Cardinals. By only seeing the number indicated above, His face appeared so angry that all the onlookers... We thirteen clearly saw, we were completely eclipsed. We remained shut in, these two days, like victims destined for sacrifice. Taking care not to show ourselves to anyone at that time, that was the best we could do in the state of things, and without failing in any of our homework.

"Then came Tuesday, the day of the fourth invitation, where was to give the general presentation to the two Sovereigns seated on their thrones. We all went there, as he had agreed, and it's easy to imagine with what heart we were waiting in the great hall, where were Cardinals, Ministers, Bishops, Senate, Legislative Body, magistrates, ladies and all the other dignitaries of the Empire, the solemn moment of seeing the Emperor and being seen by him. Suddenly, after more than three hours in the anteroom, and when the Senate was brought into the Throne Room, the Legislative Body and the other bodies, to whom One gave the step on the Cardinals, an aide-de-camp arrives the Emperor with the order to the Cardinals who had accompanied wedding guests were told to leave immediately, because His Majesty did not want to receive them. The Emperor had, from the top of his throne, he called this officer, and had

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 4*5

This order was given. The aide-de-camp had barely stepped down the degrees of the throne, that the Emperor recalled him and told him to send back only Cardinals Opizzoni and Consalvi. But this officer, whether out of fear or embarrassment, did not understand. not well, and believed that, by excluding all thirteen, Napoleon wanted to humiliate those two in particular. He therefore notified the thirteen of the order, much to their astonishment. all the spectators. Some heard it, others saw this scene, which our red costumes made even more apparent. Publicly chased away, we returned. We turned to our homes.

The Cardinals attending the wedding had remained; they were then introduced. The presentation was done in passing one by one, slowly, and not stopping at the foot of the throne only to offer a profound greeting. Throughout the During their parade, the Emperor, standing, could not contain himself and said terrible things against the expelled Cardinals.

But almost all of his speech and his terrible invectives
They fell upon the only two, Opizzoni and me. He reprochait to the first his ingratitude for the archbishopric of Bologne and the cardinal's hat that he had procured for him.
What he was accusing me of was far more terrible, and for what was specious about it and for the consequences which I was threatened with. He said that he could perhaps par-give to everyone else, but not to me. The others, he added-
They were missed by me because of their theological prejudices;
But Consalvi doesn't have those prejudices. He offended me by political principles. He is my enemy. He wants revenge.
because I ousted him from the ministry. For that, he has wanted to set a trap for me in the most ingenious way.
that he was able to do, by preparing a pretext against my dynasty of illegitimacy to the succession to the throne, a pretext which my

416 BOOK II.

My enemies will not fail to take advantage of my death.
will have put an end to the fear that oppresses them.

"These are the colors he gave to an approach that I
I had done it only out of conscience and to fulfill my duty.
see like everyone else. You can easily feel how much This accusation was false in every respect. But he is
It was also easy to understand what they were exposing me to and what they were exposing n still senses similar ideas in a man who can everything he wants, and whose will is not restrained by no consideration. It was a miracle that having in his
In a fit of fury, the order was given to shoot three of the thirteen.
Opizzoni, myself, and a third person whose identity we were unable to determine name (it was probably Cardinal di Pietro), and having then, limited to myself alone, the thing did not happen.
It must be assumed that the supreme address of Minister Fou-
He managed to save my life.

"Nothing new on Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday, Around eight o'clock in the evening, the thirteen received, some at their lodgings, the others where they were staying, a ticket from Minister of Religious Affairs, summoning us for the nine hours, in order to receive the Emperor's orders through him.
We rushed from various directions, unaware of what was happening.
was going to communicate with us. Only, one of us who was bishop of a diocese in Italy, he had learned from the minister Aldini, a few hours earlier, whom the Emperor had wanted-milk his resignation from the bishopric he held in the kingdom from Italy. This was also ordered, through the minister's office.
cults, to a few others of the thirteen who had not not their bishoprics in the kingdom of Italy, but in the Roman states that became French. These resignations were timed to within an hour, under the influence of the overtaken, out of fear and under the threat of a state prison.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 417

They were timed with all the regularity that per-they themselves brought surprise and this sudden fear, that is to say, by submitting to the will of the Pope and se-long before he would accept or refuse them. That's how we saved the essence of the matter. The Pope did not accept it.
They therefore remained bishops of these dioceses, well that some were eliminated and joined to others bishoprics by imperial decree. I resume my story.

"All thirteen of them arrived at the Minister of Religious Affairs' residence," we were shown into his study, where was also the Minister of Police, Fouché, appearing there found by chance. We had barely entered when the mid-Minister Fouché, who was at the fireplace, whom I approached
To greet him, he said to me in a low voice: "I have announced, Your Eminence the Cardinal, that the consequences will be terrible things would happen: but what saddens me is seeing you,
"You, among the victims." I thanked him for this kindness.
the interest he took in me, and told him that I was Prepared for anything. His words made me understand that we had everything to fear. I asked him what he would be. "The Minister of Religious Affairs will inform you,"
"He's in charge of it," he replied.

"Indeed, we sat down, and this minister made us a long speech whose main point was to show us our wrong, the seriousness of our fault, its consequences if cruel for the peace of France, either now, or later. He added that we had missed our deto see, by not showing him our doubts and feelings ments, and that he would have cleared everything up. Making himself confident in us to show how wrong our opinion was, he emphasized mainly about the conspiracy formed between us and hidden carefully to our colleagues. After having much in-
I. ' 27

448 BOOK II.

Having relied on this alleged conspiracy, he eventually declared that this crime, prohibited and punished very severely by existing laws these circumstances placed him in the painful position of having to signify to us proudly following His Majesty's orders. They were limited to these three Points: 1° our property, whether ecclesiastical or private,
They were taken from us and placed under sequestration. We were completely stripped; 2° we were forbidden to do use of cardinal insignia and all marks of our dignity: His Majesty no longer considers us as cardinals; 3° His Majesty reserved the right to decide on our people. He let us understand that some of them we would be put on trial.

Most of them, who didn't know French, didn't understand. They did not take this speech seriously; they were reduced to doing it themselves. explained by their neighbor, if their neighbor could hear this language.

"The three or four who understood French (and I was among them) immediately replied that we wrongly accused that our conduct was imposed on us by our duty and certainly not for our pleasure; that if we hadn't opened up to him, we had. However, this was done with Cardinal Fesch, whom we found more suitable, as the Emperor's uncle, as our colleague, and as a non-ministerial channel, for don't to bring the matter into the hands of as little publicity as possible; that he was false that we had kept it a secret from our other colleagues legacies, with whom we had maintained a fair balance, by not hiding our point of view from them and by not seeking not singing to make them adopt it, precisely so that we did not accuse us of forming a party against the government government; that there was nothing more false than the the plot we were being criticized for; that this was truly a

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 419

a completely new way of plotting than informing (as we had done through Cardinal Fesch) that against whom we were being made to conspire; that this accusation—the stigmatizing label of rebellion was as unjust as it was strange. manages and is insulting to our dignity and character, and that we begged him to inform His Majesty that that was the only thing we cared about, being prepared for everything else.

"The minister of religious affairs, like the minister of police, seemed touched by these answers. It must be said that they showed themselves. They were both very angry about what was happening to us and very eager to be able to remedy this in some way, in order not to cause a stir. They confessed to us that they were open—that they wished it not only for us, but for the good of the Empire, not knowing how everything. This had to end. They wanted at least that we wouldn't... would not our decardinalization, feeling the impression fâ—The resulting problem everywhere. They added that if The Emperor knew the feelings we had expressed towards him, one might perhaps hope to to see it calm down. We replied that they only had to...

They insinuated to us that these reports of spoken words have little value, because they are assumed arranged through the intermediary, so as to be useful to this—he who is disgraced; then they asked us if we would have difficulty writing them ourselves to the Emperor. Our answer was that there were none, because That was the truth. They then asked us to acknowledge a another point; but we refused. Finally they suggested to us a letter content, where there was some good and bad, that is to say, certain things which repugnant They were aware of our delicacy. We declared to them that we

27.

420 BOOKS

we would take care of making this letter as they requested it—hated, as much as possible, with regard to all our de—to see, and that we would hand it over to them. They made us to note that the Emperor was leaving the following day for Saint-Quentin; that they were to see him the following morning—boast, which they couldn't avoid reporting to him what we had said at the instigation of his orders, that he there was no time to lose, and no delays was not allowed. We replied that we were meeting—Let us laugh, that same night, in the house of our dean of age, and that the following day, early in the morning, we would give them we would send this letter to the Emperor, to whom they would re—would put in by going to Saint-Cloud.

According to Cardinal Consalvi's account, this letter did not could not be handed over to the Emperor, and it was forbidden to Cardinals to put on their ordinary clothes. From there Then came the designation of Black Cardinals. On June 11, 1810, They are ordered to each go to a pe—small town in central France designated as the site of in—dullness. This exile within an exile isolated them from one another. others; he reduces them to incapacity and misery. Consalvi and Cardinal Brancadoro are sent to Reims. In the with the same memories of the great Roman diplomat, we will see what surveillance was exercised around these princes of the Church. A modest sum of two hundred fifty francs a month was offered to them by the government government; they all refused it.

"On the 10th of January 1811, thus speaks Consalvi, I received an unexpected visit, as did my companion in exile. a note from the sub-prefect of Reims in which he informed me—knew that "superior orders compelled him to call me" without delay to the sub-prefecture to provide him with information

information on the purpose of these orders. » Upon receipt Upon reading this note, my companion was seized with fear, because that he was unaware of the nature of the orders and opined that We introduced ourselves together. I thought differently-ment. As this post did not discuss a
 The invitation was addressed to both of them, it seemed appropriate to me for several reasons not to do it. But I offered it to him to go first, and I determined with him the means of inform him of the purpose of this call, upon leaving the house from the sub-prefect, so that he would go prepared in advance. And that not surreptitiously, as I usually do. I de-I asked God to assist me (several matters have occurred)
 recent events in Paris gave us cause to fear...
 (blow), and I left. The sub-prefect told me he had orders to ask me what sums I had received since my arrival in Reims for my interview, and by what means-intermediary, by post, or by stagecoach, or by by valets, or by people brought in specifically for this purpose, and From whom, and in what number, and in what manner. I told him
 I replied that I had never received a penny from anyone.
 - "But," he replied, "how do you manage to live?"
 the government having seized all your ecclesiastical property and assets?" I told him that my banker from Rome had not, in this circumstance, withdrawn from its correspondent in Paris (to whom he had recommended me)
 my departure from Rome) the order to provide me with money.
 The sum I received for going to Reims had been enough for me so far, and I did not hesitate to add that if
 If the banker in Rome had withdrawn his credit, I would have profit the offers from some friends who had opened me up their purses. The sub-prefect continued that, since I had not I haven't received anything from anyone since my arrival in Reims, there isn't

422 BOOK II.

There was no reason to ask me the other questions, that is-that is to say, in what quantity, from whom, in what manner, by Which way. Thus ended this honest hearing.
 For the sake of form: the sub-prefect having added no im-politeness, no harshness towards the harshness of the matter.

"The purpose of this government measure was the dissatisfaction felt, upon seeing several people charities unite and pool their resources to donate each month, the sums of-

1 The Sovereign Pontiffs Pius VI and Pius VII had made a touching duty to bury deep in their hearts the traces of their inexhaustible charity towards the bishops and priests proscribed by the Revolution. They had wanted the left hand to always ignore the munificence of the right hand. This discretion, so highly recommended by the Gospel, found in pious imitators among French Catholics, when the Pope and the Sacred Collé_e were in turn forced to live on alms. No anna-

The list could not reveal the mystery of this grateful generosity, which under the veil of anonymity, returns to the Roman Court, exiled and deprived of her possessions, what she did for the Clergy of France. Cardinal Consalvi himself-
The same guard over all these nobly unknown benefactors: a full silence. of dignity. One man alone did not believe he could subject himself to a delicate-
A countess who honored both the Holy See and the Gallican Church. Father Augustin Theiner (of the Oratory) spoke, and while considering making a bad work, which is quite typical of him, he also made a bad-Vaise action.

Thanks to his title as prefect of the Vatican secret archives, the Father Theiner, who possesses to the highest degree the art of populating the paradise for its readers, published in 1858 two large volumes, under the title of unpublished documents relating to religious affairs in France, 1790 to 1800, extracts from the Vatican secret archives. The official functions-
The Oratorian collector's expectations, if not tact, were to impose upon him a great deal of caution; the prefect of the secret archives only took into account that of the need that torments him annually. He had to put on two new volumes; by a misfortune quite frequent in
In his life as a writer, he simultaneously offends the Holy See and the Episcopate exile.

This compilation, sad in every respect, stirred up controversy in France. These were legitimate complaints, which should have been understood and acknowledged in Ro intended to support the Cardinals stripped of all their property and its income. I had never consented, and some other of the thirteen, to receive the pension monthly payment to this fund, for no other reason than to have to subsist modestly through the assistance I mentioned. I didn't want to unnecessarily burden these generous people and noble subscribers. My companion, who had always-days accepted the aid from the fund, was in a situation very different from mine. So as not to

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 423

This is not the place to explain them; but we believe we are in our right by asserting that this work was at least useless.

Father Theiner took the trouble to gather and coordinate the documents unpublished information relating to religious affairs in France. In its arms secret Vatican files, which have already played more than one dirty trick on the author of the History of the Pontificate of Clement XIV, this writer undoubtedly involved combating errors, correcting facts, and to give men and events the importance that is so legitimately due to them timely. With the help of the treasures entrusted to his care, nothing was more It's easy to shed new light on religious affairs. Father Theiner found a way to teach us only one thing: it's the

The way exile stirred things up. Among a thousand letters from the same insignificance, we will read a few at random, the shortest and the most interesting ones; and we reproduce them, while asking par-donation to the rightful owner of this advertisement.

Prince Ferdinand de Rohan to His Holiness Pius VI.

"Rome, July 3, 1795."

"Most Holy Father, *

"The Archbishop-Duke of Cambrai might wish not to remain all-days in Venice. When one is unhappy, it is in the nature of the man to desire to change his dwelling; consequently, he supposes His Holiness obliges him to allow him to live in his Eiats, on the side of Bologna, from the March of Ancona, especially in Pezzaro, where the air passes for to be very good; he has with him only a cleric and two servants, of whom
One is German and the other is based in Brabant. The Prince of Rohan, ar-Bishop-Duke of Cambrai, in making this request to the Most Holy Father, i%i BOOK II.

neither the most helpful nor their intermediaries can be compromised.
By admitting that he had received money, he sided with to say that he was unaware of how these charitable aids
The tables had been delivered to his home by an unknown hand.
The impossibility of the others, scattered in various places, where they will probably be asked the same questions in at the same time, gave the same answer and the
but the government's apparent aim, and which is to force us to bend our shoulders and ask-does not claim to be a burden on him; thank God, with economy, he can exist for a long time without bothering anyone.

The Bishop of Carcassonne to Monsignor Caleppi.

"Rome, August 7, 1794."

"Monsignor the Bishop of Carcassonne finishes the month of his rent on the 11th;
He would prefer not to do it again, because of the trouble he is in.
He begs Monsignor Caleppi to be so kind as to do for him to state if anything has been decided and agreed upon regarding the housing of the Trinité-du-Mont; if he knew what time he could be found at home;
He will have the honor of going to fetch him. He renews all his efforts to him.
"I beg his pardon for his importunity."

Liévêjue de Grasse to His Eminence the Cardinal Secretary of the state.

"Bologna, February 21, 1795.

"Your Grace,

"Will Your Eminence excuse me if I take the liberty of..."

to come and ask him for permission, so that a family of French emigrants could

Why doesn't she come to live in Bologna? She won't be a burden on anyone, and she won't asks for no kind of help; it is the family of Herculaïs, of Gre-noble, who is first cousin of the Archbishop of Auch;

It consists of the father, the mother, and four children: two boys lessons and two young ladies; the eldest boy is fifteen years old. Mr. de Bianchi, senator, married a niece of the prelate, who came with her to demand

It was I, as a relative of this archbishop, who took this step. Our

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 425

der grace, pr opt inopiam rerum omnium, make believe that this matter will not end like this, and that it will be able to have worrying and even disastrous consequences

"treuses."

Napoleon is at the height of his power. Everything about him smiles, victory as well as fatherhood; and, in his style sublime from birth, he likes to list all his for-favorable tunes. To the dazzled eyes of the whole world, this

The man seemed so happy that if his foot had

This sad position, Your Grace, puts us in the position of lending ourselves to needs of the unfortunate, and what the per-sounds that oblige us. Whatever side Your Eminence may take-

Nence, I will always be grateful for the kindnesses she showed me.

to have for me.

"I respectfully,"

"Your Grace,

"From Your Eminence,

"The most humble and most obedient servant,

"Fraivçois, Bishop of Grasse."

The Bishop of Vence to Monsignor Caleppi.

"Rome, July 4, 1792."

"The Bishop of Vence offers his heartfelt tribute to Monsignor Ca-

Leppi; he learned with genuine interest of his recovery from illness, and he would have gone to see him if he had been sure of being received.

Would it be indiscreet to ask him to lend him a sail from the
The late Cardinal Garampi, if there is anyone in his stables? It's for a two-week trip to Naples; the car would have to be only at Two wheels and two seats in the back. The Bishop of Vence would have had one.
take good care of it, and would have minor repairs done there if needed.
He asks for a frank answer to this, such as, "Your Excellency" Caleppi gives them and will always receive them from the Bishop of Vence, who assures him of his sincere and respectful attachment.

This is a specimen of the unpublished documents that Father Theiner considers useful to the religious affairs of France

426 BOOK II.

He trampled the asp, and the asp would have kissed his heel. From the height of
From his throne, he spreads a breath of renewal everywhere.
In his quiet moments, he admits to himself that nobody
I don't like despotism, not even those who serve it.
cowardice or self-interest; and yet he sinks deeper every day after day down this path, with no other way out than a catastrophe. He has a passion for the impossible. Believing that even the memory of the Church's mourning will be lost in the basking in the rays of his glory, the Emperor seems to be thinking that at eyes of Providence as in the eyes of Kings and People, often the justice of a cause lies in its success.
Nothing can resist him, and he strikes everything, because he fears nothing.
nothing. They improvise Senatus Consulta and Plebiscites who foresee, who anticipate his orders, in order to to punish them. One turns one's desires into laws of the State; he
He reigns, he commands, and never has obedience seemed more Easy. The world is at his feet, except for a few Cardinals.
relegated to the depths of the provinces. He chose this moment to to overcome the Pope and his Catholic resistance.

In his prison in Savona, Pius VII had condemned himself to not to act like a pontiff. He therefore refuses to grant the papal bulls of institution to the newly appointed Bishops by the Emperor of the French. This refusal was the conse-an inevitable consequence of captivity. The Pope is no longer so often rain; he's barely allowed to be a priest. He consistent with his position, by strengthening his thinking that one hundred years of injustice do not make one year of justice.
The Churches suffered from this widowhood, and the bull of excommunication, which, forbidden everywhere, finds itself everywhere means of being read and approved, raised questions irritating. These questions don't come out, and for good reason.
from the innermost circle of the family; but after having

They have troubled timid souls, they will restore hope to They inspire reflection in those extremist parties. They inspire reflection in those whose political principle is never to think.

This state of unease did not escape the sagacity of Napoleon. He feels led astray, and it pains him to postpone.
the good he dreamed of, only to let the evil he desired happen.
prevent. Unable to fight with the Church of ar-Having joined the army, he tries to negotiate on the ground of consultations. Unfortunately, he is addressing only a few.
of those Bishops who believe they gain everything by complying adapting to everything, and who, after imagining he had done Acts of moderation ultimately authorize betrayals.
the most distinguished. Fénelon had, in his time, seen similar prelates at work; he had painted them in disant (1): "Nothing weakens pastors so much as a timid-colored by vain pretexts of peace, that a uncertainty that makes the mind adrift in every wind of docspecious trine, finally that the considerations of a politick is often much more worldly than they think themselves. "

Matters in which conscience and duty priestly commitments naturally provoke insurmountable difficulties. Napoleon did not admit this word in his imperial vocabulary; he was forced to accept the thing. The prelates consulted were the cardinals Fesch and Maury, de Barrai, Archbishop of Tours, Canaveri, Bourlier, Mannay and Duvoisin, bishops of Vercelli, of É-Vreux, Trier, and Nantes. Father Fontana, general of the Barnabite order, and Abbot Emery, superior of Saint-Sulpice, were added to the consultative. The Emperor asks him questions, and he awaits his

1 Works of Fénelon, vol. XII, p. 375 (e.g., Versailles). <

428 BOOK II.

Answers. Answers are what they will always be.
in this case, muddled by complacency and sweetened by the sophistry of "these infinite minds, painted by Montaigne*, who find themselves ruined by their own strength and flexibility.

Embarrassed by their faith, but even more embarrassed by the demands of their master, it cost them to allow the oppression of the Pope or to give false credence to his virtues and to their rights; but, under the sun of favor, they experience-had a sad aversion to sacrificing themselves to persecution.
Their master summoned them to condemn them, they would not have wanted to go only to the role of Pilate. They evaded the questions-tions, they compromised with priestly honor. Nevertheless, of this set of palliatives, concessions and retic-

following these pronouncements, he produced a report in which the Bishops gave their opin-
They are attacking the Head of the Church. Father Fontana and Abbot Emery, who placed their hopes higher that the throne, alone had the courage of their convictions and the dignity of their conscience.

A report from Bishops chosen by the Emperor and n'offrant, only timid conclusions amidst the praise
Even the most exaggerated ones weren't enough for him. They had been used of his ambitious concerns to throw at him the
He found himself, against his will, embroiled in religious disputes.
the Pope's jailer, whose name was intertwined with the most beautiful Christian events in his life; at all costs he needed a solution. The prelates consulted did not formulate it;
they only indicated it through the circumlocutions of a theo-
The logic of courtiers. Napoleon thinks that a Council can to remedy everything, or at least that the Council will make it easier for him
The means of doing without the Holy See. More than once

1 Essays of Montaigne, vol. 111, p. 17.

PIE Vil AND NAPOLEON. 429

This project was already presented to him as a temptation to his genius, or perhaps the crowning achievement of fate.
he told him that the Church of the French Empire, assembled under His auspices and deliberating in the sight of his sword, will not dare never, and under no circumstances, make a decision that would not be authorized in advance. The Church does as the earth; it trembles at its sight. One can, without danger, to gather it in the Basilica of Notre-Dame.

The Pope did not suspend the march of the armies French lines then stretched from Madrid to Moscow: he did not further hinder the negotiations underway between the various courts. But, by refusing the canonical institutiondefying the appointed Bishops and rendering them null and void, by the
In fact, the powers that Napoleon bestowed upon vicars claiming to be capitulars, this prisoner arrests the government in its internal administration. Reduced in complete isolation, communicating only with those whom Napoleon sees fit to form a guard for him Rather than a court, Pius VII is an embarrassment to all.
moments; it is important to overcome one's obstinacy or an-to annihilate. The Church of the Empire could only agree, because The Emperor took it upon himself to dictate to him the means of his own salvation.
towards herself.

In order not to intimidate anyone, the Council's mission was circumscribed within a skillfully calculated circle. It is not allowed for the examination of the point in dispute. The Revolution, at that moment, he was content to breathe into the heart of Clergy, a simple demonstration of intentional revolt. nelle, the rest would come naturally afterwards.

Napoleon, who assumed or granted himself so many prerogatives, He convened a council; he formed it from the Bishops of his States. They all owe him their appointment, they all admire him or fear him, because he has come to not tolerate others feelings. These Evos are, in his eyes, nothing but a va- a group of prefects, something less administrative and more moral, watching, in his own way, for the salvation of the Em- worse. He has influence and power over them; he will exercise One and the other, according to his designs. He saw in action the deliberative assemblies; he knows that, always obsequious towards the prince who defies them, they will always insolent towards the one who fears them. He therefore does not take There's no point in even recommending obedience, given how much this The principle seems natural to him. With even more prestige that the praetor Caedicius, he had the right to shout at his soldiers: "Eo eundum est, unde redire non neesse est. » And his soldiers went there, without worrying about coming back. But the clergy did not manage the affairs of the Church at a brisk pace. Without fully appreciating his obedience, he did not did not sacrifice his principles to lying flattery.

430 BOOKS IT ~

Cardinal Fesch is the obligatory president of the Council. On Monday, June 17, 1811, the Gallican Synod assembled for the first time. The pomp of the ceremonies is almost... that as large as the crowd; then Etienne de Boulogne, Bishop of Troyes, appears in the pulpit of Notre-Dame. To his ninety-five colleagues gathered around him, He offers words of wisdom and courage. We believe- it would seem that his hands hold the balance between the Priesthood and the Empire, and that this balance, lacking in the glory, inclines of its own accord towards captivity. The speaker has He approached the fathers of the French Council, and he told them in magnificent language: "Whatever the outcome of your deliberations, whatever the party, that wisdom and in-the interests of our churches may suggest to us, but never us we will not abandon these immutable principles which bind us choir to Unity, to this cornerstone, to this key of the vault without which the entire building would collapse on its own. We will never detach ourselves from this first ring, without which all the others would take place and leave—would see more than confusion, anarchy, and ruin; never we will not forget all the respect we owe and of love to this Roman Church which gave birth to us Jesus Christ, who nourished us with the milk of his teaching; to this august Chair which the Fathers call the citadel of the truth, and to this supreme Head of the Episcopate, without which the entire Episcopate would destroy itself, and would not more than languishing like a branch detached from the trunk, or tossed about by the waves like a ship without a rudder Rudderless and pilotless. Yes, a few vicissitudes that... proves the Seat of Peter, regardless of the state and the condition of his august successor, always hold us—let us give to him through the bonds of respect and reverence subsidiary. This headquarters may be moved, it may not be destroyed; its splendor can be taken away, but it cannot not to diminish its strength. Wherever this Seat is, there all the others will gather; wherever this Seat is transported tera, there all Catholics will follow him, because par—Wherever it takes root, there will be the stem of the succession. the center of government and the sacred repository of traditions apostolic.

1 Unpublished Sermons and Speeches of Monseigneur de Boulogne, Bishop of Troyes (Paris, 1826), vol. III, p. 427.

"Such are our unchanging feelings that we pro—
Let us proclaim today to the face of the entire universe, to the face of all our Churches, which we are carrying at this moment the vows and whose faith we attest; in the presence of the saints Altars, and in the middle of this basilica where our fathers assembled

432 BOOK II.

Wheat crops were used more than once to cement the peace of the Church, and to appease troubles and disputes through their wisdom, Alas! too similar to those we are currently dealing with. today. I seem to hear them right now, it seems to me seems to see their venerable shadows appear in the middle from us, as if to tell us not to do anything that be worthy of them, who is not worthy of us, and not never deviate from the ancient path followed by our ancestors cerees.

No sooner had the speaker finished his speech than the Cardinal Fesch advances, mitre on his head, crosier in hand. hand. On both knees, facing the altar, he offers the ser—the following statement: "I recognize the Holy Church Catholic, Apostolic, Roman, Mother and Mistress of all the Churches; I promise and I swear a true obedience to the Roman Pontiff, successor of Saint Peter, Prince of the Apostles and Vicar of Jesus Christ.

It's a formula, a simple formula established by Pius IV in 1564, after the Council of Trent; but, in this circumstance, this formula has something so solemn and so touching, that it resembles an act of audacity. The crowd, which was deeply impressed, accepts it thus, and the Council, which must open new horizons to Gallicanism, finds itself swept away, from its beginning, even beyond his expectations. Some Bishops those who, when questioned or consulted separately, might have done with temporal power, an assault of flattery and mutual concessions; but, in the presence of God and of this august Pontiff suffering persecution, the Bishops those who shake off the dust of the courtyards, in order to get back up More Catholic than ever. The Pope was in chains. They hasten to swear allegiance to him. They were chosen to

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 433

to determine or restrict his spiritual power, they proclaim themselves above all harm.

This unexpected spectacle provoked reflections and unexpected connections; they did not escape Napoleon. The Emperor realizes that the moral outcome this first session dealt a fatal blow to the synod Gallican. His innermost sense gives him the final word, he However, he does not believe he should stop there.

This attitude is not lacking in independence. nor vigor, the revolutionary historians, who seek- they like to explain everything through political intrigue or by human calculations, wanted to see an opposition of- Guis e; they spoke of Bourbon hopes and of Secret vows. Party men first and foremost, These historians accused the old royalism of having conspired in the shadow of the altar; they reproached him for having made the priesthood a bulwark, in order to attack more Surely the Empire. If we look back at the times and the places, it will be easy to convince oneself that the Episcopate was hardly able to do anything for the Government imperial opposition, even wrapped in the Most respectful forms. Completely renewed by the Concordat or by death, the Episcopate had not having seen the glory days of the ancient monarchy: he did not... Only faults and misfortunes were born. Raised by Napoleon Leon, he regarded him as the arbiter of destinies Europe. Along with the whole of France, he bowed before this victorious, whose language as well as thought was days in motion. The Emperor did not say this then.

that he will say on the rock of Saint Helena: "The claims-dants, regardless of their personal worth or that of their claims, are always a great danger

I. 28

434 BOOK II.

in times of national crisis. I despised them too much.
I was wrong. I would still be on the throne if, in 1814, he
There had been no Bourbons.

In the shadow of his scepter, which protected the sanctuary,
The priests had found support and security. Their ambition did not go beyond that: and for those who know the Clergy, this beyond is as impassable as the Mythological Pillars of Hercules. The clergy lived little in the past; he needs the present and doesn't like to anticipating the future. We never see him increase his name-br of these courageous souls who, according to Tacitus, obscured
They cling to hope despite their fortune. Upon leaving of a crisis as appalling as the one that shook the the foundations of Christian society, the clergy tried to re-to constitute; but he was distressed, and not without reason, at the fact that he was to always encounter the Revolution face to face.

The Emperor killed her because of certain ideas contrary to his power or the tendencies of his mind; he resurrected her cited among his men. It seems that in the middle of this Europe, whose kingdoms he appropriated for life and the wills, he cannot get rid of a Revolution-lion who, by enduring his imperial whims, inflicted upon him its laws and its privileged few. Does he want, through a message, to... to address the Fathers of his Council? It is the pen of the ex-Oratorian Daunou, which he borrows, in order to give to this
The message had an aftertaste of Jansenist bitterness. In Rome as well as in Paris, under the Directory as well as under the Empire, Daunou proved himself an enemy of Catholicism and of the Holy See. The clergy therefore regards each other with complete distrust.
natural order against a natural order of things where the Revolution crowned, takes the defeated Revolution into its service in the facts, but still active in hatred.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 435

The men had passed away, but the mistakes survived.
Was it impossible for them to usher in a new era?
of persecution? Apostasy intervening to put in the Emperor's mouth, his anti-Catholic rages, it was the almost official exhumation of the civil church. Then from the prison in Savona where the Pope languished, from the dispersion or internment of the Sacred College at the At the fortress of Vincennes, the clergy could only see... new catastrophes, always caused by the same rage of disbelief.

The clergy, who hold the secret to the tumults of the soul, do not does not allow political opposition against governments established. He receives them from God as a reward or as punishment; then he only emerges from his usual reserve to make an act of faith. At this synod that is opening, when the The supreme pontiff is stripped of his states and held under the most rigorous sequestration, the act of faith towards the Church and devotion to the Roman See was more obligatory than ever. It is also a religious adherence and a protest. The Emperor was not mistaken; but within his councils he had old revolutionaries- naries that intoxicated him with his power and that strove to persuade him that after having tamed Europe, he would not He should not have to humiliate his diadem under the habit of a monk. These skillfully combined stimuli produced at the It had a certain effect over time. Pride did the rest, a lot more actively than the old parties and that this pre- tense resistance from the Clergy.

In order to exert at least moral pressure on the assembled Episcopate, and to make this con- train as far as Savona, the shadow of Jan- Gallican senesianism resurrecting a shadow of revolution.

28.

436 BOOK IT

The bitter and declamatory words that Daunou put in the Emperor's mouth were brought to the Con- cited by the two ministers of religion of France and Italy. These words, whose origin is known to the clergy, leave him Cold and impassive. The time for struggle has come on the the field of principles; the Clergy does not abandon the field of theological battle. He does not, above all, repudiate the the cause of the Pope, which is that of the Church and of what is right. To exert the full weight of his authority on the deliberations- rations, the Emperor ordered that his two ministers of cults, Bigot de Préameneu and Bovara, would attend the sessions, to the right and left of the presiding Cardinal. In order to better showcase his official intervention, He wants them to always be there, like the agents. and the witnesses of the secular government.

The uninstituted bishops are there as well. some have already received episcopal consecration previously pale; the others are merely appointed to a seat by the civil power. In the name of the Emperor, they all demand deliberative voice in the Council; Cardinal Maury second. Etienne de Boulogne declares that the presence in their dioceses of these non-instituted clergy is a scandal, and that this scandal would become intolerable-suitable, if they deliberated in an assembly which must pro- to announce their fate. Boulogne is the Emperor's chaplain-' reur; this title inspires him to be more daring in establishing the a true distinction between the two powers. The Council accepts the doctrine professed by the Bishop of Troyes; the Cardinal Maury, who raised the issue, adhered to it in murmuring.

A ray of courage hovered over that assembly. and of faith, that the propositions which appear least

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 437

The eligible candidates were unanimously acclaimed. We didn't... tended neither on the theories nor on the consequences of Gallicanism; doctrines were commented on and explained. by Bossuet. Some criticized its meaning, others its approved of the scope; but all agreed as soon as the image of the Supreme Pontificate was invoked. bowed before this spectacle worthy of holding one's gaze of God, the good man struggling with evil fortune.

A day came when the Council's address to the Emperor in response to the imperial message, the work of Jansenism. Suddenly Dessolles, Bishop of Chambéry and brother of the Marshal of France, rises; then, with a barely contained emotion: "We cannot, he exclaimed, "to deliberate under these sacred vaults, and to deliberate!" as members of the Church, when the common Father, the venerable head of the universal Church, is in the chains like the Apostle. I ask that the Council surrender en corps to the palace of Saint-Cloud, and that he demand The Emperor's freedom, the Pope's freedom. Then, and only then. Then, it will be possible to reach an agreement." At these words, a An electric shock grips the assembly. Tears flow from every eye; a single cry escapes. from all hearts and from every mouth: "Yes, yes, to Saint-Cloud!

It was responding to the message with the most effective approach. peremptorily Catholic; it was perhaps, by a sublime impulse, stirring in Napoleon's soul all the generous fibers. Bigot de Préameneu, the minister of the cults, was losing his mind; Cardinal Fesch accepted the proposal, when Duvoisin, Bishop of Nantes, whose A calmer Gallicanism yields little to pressure.

438 BOOK II.

proclaims the session closed. He was one of the secretaries-silenced members of the Council, he was therefore able to direct the president.

The session was adjourned; but he nonetheless survived. an immense event, an event that spread throughout the entire Empire, with incredible speed. The press was also The Senate and the Legislative Body remained silent. The press was silent. because at that time Napoleon rigorously applied the system to him which he elaborated on in a note to Fiévée, his correspondent secret dant l. But the Legislative Body, which had never Opposed, he deemed it appropriate to give a sign of life; he begged the Emperor to allow him to take charge of the cause of the Government. The Emperor smiled pityingly; nevertheless, Although deeply irritated, he did not deem it appropriate to dwell on such a brilliant resolution of the part of the Episcopate. For the first time he compromised with the difficulty.

The difficulty was indeed insurmountable. Napoleon, with with all its prestige, it can very well create kingdoms and to modify international laws according to its own convenience; but his authority stops short of the Catholic conscience- It is not possible for him to force his way out of this asylum. He had The Bishops were brought together in the hope that 'decisions' emanating from his initiative would be accepted by them with recognition; the Bishops, without worrying about beautiful- In the heat of imperial anger, they neither concealed their thoughts nor their wishes. They demand the Pope's freedom, or everything at least the honor of sharing his chains. We want that before

1 We read in this note from the Emperor, inserted in the 2nd volume, p. 114, From the Correspondence and Relations of Fiévée with Bonaparte, - 1802 to 1813 -: "Whenever unpleasant news reaches him government, it must not be published until such-certain of the truth that it should no longer be spoken, because it is con-naked from everyone.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 439

to proceed with its work the commission of the Synod de-clarifies the very competence of this Synod. By a majority of Nine to three, the commission affirms incompetence of the Assembly. Using theological expedients, one tries to get the Council to return to a principle that puts end of his mission, even before that mission was clarified-determinedly. The Council leaves it to time to to expose the school's subterfuges; then, master of He, because he is convinced, is waiting for the results of the delays. These results were not long in coming. produce.

The Church in France has regained its former splendor. She has before her eyes the captive Pope and the Sacred College in- He was haggard like a vagabond; the Church of France protests with respect, but she protests against this abuse of the strength. When more compliant voices stammer a few timid complaints about the bubble of excommunication, when they will suggest that the Pope had a better to make use of the wrath of the Church, he will rise to the mid- at the Synod an archbishop who, holding in hand the acts of the Council of Trent, he will exclaim: "I hear it said that a Pope does not have the right to excommunicate the sovereigns rains; therefore, condemn the church that established it in this way."

A long, shuddering burst of enthusiasm answers this cry of the heart, which is at the same time a demonstration Catholic.

These words by Charles-François d'Aviau du Bois de Sanzay, Archbishop of Bordeaux, were, as of need, the renewal and consecration of the The papal bull Quum memoranda. The Emperor confessed his powerlessness-sance; but it was not to be publicly acknowledged. D'Hirn, de Boulogne and de Broglie, Bishops of Tournai, from Troyes and Ghent, had been tasked with the report on competence; they were arrested during the night and con- The two prisoners were held at Vincennes. Napoleon did not want to subject the Archbishop of Bordeaux to the same fate.

440 BOOK II.

On that very day, July 10, 1811, the Council was dissolved by imperial decree.

Severe measures had been imposed on three Prelates. It was believed that they could intimidate others, and that by Taking them one by one with studied seductions, he did not It might not be impossible to bring them to a few concessions. After having spoken so much about Bossuet, we end- He knows how to forget the very words of the great Bishop: "Sometimes the judge, out of complacency, does to the man powerful the present of a sentence that both

"They regret it later."

Negotiations were taking place in Paris, between the prospect of the dungeon of Vincennes and the self-serving caresses of the Governor—The negotiation took place in the Savona prison. In order to... to persuade that the Pope is not absolutely captive and cut off from all free communication, five were sent to him Cardinals who are to assist him with their advice, during that a delegation from the dissolved Council will ask him to to sanction the weakening of papal authority. These Five Cardinals provided pledges of a cruel need of moderation, and one can say of them what the cardinal Pacca so ingeniously said of Roverella, their 'leader': "Aliquid humanum passus est." This something of human pushes them towards endless obsequiousness. Pie VII in experiences the backlash, and Roverella obtains or wrests a draft by Bref, which does not meet the requirements of the Emperor—neither the Pope's legitimate sensitivities nor those of the Pope.

This quarrel between priests, which Napoleon feigned to be mis-

PIE VII and Napoleon. 441

To take snuff after lifting it was not one of those things that one appeases through a victory or the conquest of a province. Badly started, even more poorly supported, she doesn't was bound to lead to a moral disaster, and that's the end of it. The Revolution awaits the Emperor. He will come, for then his prosperity is almost as dazzling as his mistakes. He opens the Russian campaign, and by a coincidence of which the British government alone the merit, the Pope, at that same time, is present—came when an English frigate was cruising in the waters of Savona.

Cardinal Bernetti recounts on this subject: "I was in exile in Reims, with my uncle Cardinal Brancadoro; young and active, I was employed on perilous missions, and Cardinal Consalvi deigned to show me some confidence. One day he said to me: "It would be very possible that I will need to send you to [someone] in a short time. England." Thereupon, His Eminence introduced me to the project formed by the English, in secret agreement with the Emperor—cheating. The Pope in Bonaparte's hands was a hostage whom it was important to remove, because, with the Pope dead, the conclave could only assemble with permission of the Emperor of the French. However, England did not want not to grant him that right, and Austria even less so. It was therefore agreed that arrangements would be made to guard a subordinate jailer of the Holy Father, for he had not With him were neither Cardinals, nor Prelates, nor devoted servants.

Everything was at Bonaparte's command. A French lady-French, wife of one of the principal administrators of country, almost providentially offered itself to do eva- behind the Pope. She reached him and warned him of this who was going to be tempted. She pointed out the signs that were to be made of the frigate and the means that the The Holy Father would find at his disposal at the time of the Done. The Holy Father and this lady were alone in the secret. The frigate cruised near Savona, but it did not make not the agreed signals.

442 BOOK II.

Later, when, through the various functions in which I I was sent to Rome and found myself in daily contact with the authorities. With Cardinal Gonsalvi, I reminded him of these circumstances from our exile, and he explained to me the thing he had learned during his trip to London, from the mouth of the Prince Regent. The plan to kidnap the Holy Father and He had indeed been arrested for taking him to Sicily or Malta during the Council of Paris. The Pope had agreed to it; but the British government got wind that its des- her breasts had not escaped Bonaparte's police; she was very keen to prepare and execute a counter-proposal. For fear of endangering the life of the Sovereign Pontiff or to further aggravate its situation and that of the Sacred College, England abandoned its plan; then, a few weeks then, as if to justify his caution, the Pope was removed from Savona and transferred to the castle of Fontainebleau.

"Such is," adds Cardinal Bernetti in one of his handwritten notes, the truth about the fact that the contem- porains have never been able to clarify, because the main Actors or witnesses have always believed, during their lifetime, that... to see remaining silent about an event that no longer "For them, it's of historical interest."

The transfer of Pius VII to Fontainebleau is explained; It would be pointless to go into details. Emperor Na- Poleon was unable to sign the orders which were so cruelly executed in his absence; the Revolution or

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 443

An excess of zeal allowed itself far too much leeway. frank.

Long days accumulated in this new pri-

his. Pius VII spent them between moral suffering and the physical pains to which his mind and body were subjected. Resigned to everything, and seeing no one near him only hostile faces by profession, the august old man he gradually felt the remaining strength that he had been transmitting gradually diminish the difference between Savona and the Alps had left him. When this gradual collapse was properly and duly documented— Stated, some Red Cardinals were allowed to come to impose their homage on him, or, to put it better, their advice. These Cardinals were not irreproachable in any respect. point of view.

Without betraying the Holy See, they had abandoned its interests; without violating their oath as princes of the Church, they had placed themselves in opposition to the common Father and the— The order of the Sacred College. Their trips to Fontainebleau did not could have had no other purpose than to sore the patience of the Pope, and to wait for an hour of weakness in order to dictate to him humiliating concessions. These Cardinals all had a a role predetermined. Some, arriving at the court of Pius VII, should, with the exaggerations of sanitary minutiae, if customary in Italy, worrying about his failing health and over— Everything inspired worry in him. The others painted for him the situation of the universal Church without a Head, without a Bishop— and soon without clergy. With tears easily Hypocrites, we feigned sympathy for misfortunes that were all too real. whose Roman See was threatened; there was talk of schism and separation. Pity coming to the aid of clever prayers, it was insinuated to the Pope that he alone, with a a simple act of compliance, was able to render to freedom all Cardinals and Prelates suffering in exile or prison for his cause.

444 BOOK II.

This work in the mines and undercutting, which a tireless perseverance continued amidst daily worries and even in the sleeplessness of nights; gave no hope results were imminent. They were multiplying around him. the reeds, so that he would only have a choice of weaknesses. Timidity was allied with deceit or lying. From the nervous candor of Pius VII's character, one can it was a weapon to gradually accustom him to the conditions which were declared essential to the salvation of the Church.

Isolation, which breaks even the most energetic spirits, had gradually affected the Sovereign Pontiff. A fever Slow, but continuous, it undermined this feeble body, unable to tolerate neither air nor the lightest food. In order to to overcome its last resistances, a final assault

It seemed indispensable: Napoleon himself took charge to deliver it.

The Emperor suffered a disaster as immense as his fortune. He was defeated even more by the elements than by men; he saw his armies buried in the snows of Russia or under the ice of the Berezina; but Back in Paris, he still hopes, through sheer genius, to break the spell. His allies are abandoning him one by one and big- the enemy ranks were splitting. His throne had toppled. during an hour under the individual conspiracy of General Malet. If he does not respond to so many adversities With a thunderbolt, the Emperor admits to himself that his prestige is destroyed. It must be regained at all costs. His Senate grants him all taxes in advance and all the conscriptions he demands; but to reassure In France, such servility is no longer enough.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 445

Calm must return to minds: Napoleon is running to Fontainebleau in order to subdue the Pope.

Blinded by success, this great despiser of death had come to want all land to bear all species of fruit. More than ever, it has this promptness of eyes that flitted everywhere, probing souls. With his gaze worried, he penetrates every face and every character- The Pope loved him very much; he still cherishes him. perhaps in memory of the suffering endured. Napoleon is in his arms; Napoleon calls him his father. The father... tenderness at the return of this child, who lavished the most marvelous faculties that God has given to a creature ture; then, from one tenderness to another, one manages to speak of a peace, which must finally cement a rap- closely desired by the entire Catholic Church.

It has been said and written that, in these brief interviews of At Fontainebleau, Napoleon had turned against the Pope. threats and sacrilegious violence. We even spoke of a scene where Pius VII, dragged by his hair, to- would have signed, under duress, milked on January 25, 1813. For the honor of humanity, these facts are absolutely False, and the Pope himself has always denied them. In order to to control this exhausted old man, whom no one thinks of to support courage, there was no need for anger or brutality. The Emperor's prestige, his promises, the displays of veneration with which he surrounded the captive and especially the sudden transition from prison to freedom, of the the Church's servitude to its liberation, rendered Urging and violence were useless. The Pope had had been prepared for a long time for the strange concessions demanded of him; he granted them, he signed them without almost He would discuss them. He placed only one restriction on it; it paralyzed in advance all these preliminaries of an impractical concordat-cable. He demanded the assent of the council of all the Car-assembled dinals. The Emperor had no reason to to oppose such a wish, and counting on exile or the Detention would have reduced resistance; he agreed. firmly convinced that the Sacred College would be located in the The same perplexities as the Pope. Napoleon, through an excess of confidence in his own genius, and Pius VII, through an excess Out of weakness, they had deceived each other. The word it remains up to events, that is to say, to God, and "when God wants, as Bossuet puts it, to show that a His work is entirely his own; he renders everything powerless. and in despair, then he acts.

446 BOOK IT

Providence is at work; let us watch it do so.

The Sacred College is free. Consalvi, Pacca, di Pietro, Litta, Gabriel, Mattei and a few other exiles, are at feet of the Sovereign Pontiff. The rooster crowed; the success-Pierre's brother accuses himself of having given in to guilty suggestions. management: "These Cardinals," he exclaimed, "have led us astray." at the table and had us sign. Then, with his eyes Extinguished, tears of repentance flow, those beautiful tears. which Virgil speaks of: Lacrimoec decorae. In his deses-pear, which makes him say: "I will die mad like Clément XIV, » there is so much dejection and intrepidity in the times, that the Cardinals no longer hesitate to offer him the the only solution to the situation.

Some tentative advice may have tarnished things for a moment the splendor of his reign and his imprisonment, it is necessary that the Pope rises more dignified than ever. Pacca, the Minister of days of mourning, and Consalvi, the Secretary of State of the years of prosperity, Consalvi, who has resumed his duties, the en-

1. Panegyric of Saint Andrew. Complete Works of Bossuet.

\\\\\\\\\\\\K\\\\\\\\>^>s\\\\n\\\\\\\\\\\\NV>C v *
» . v.\\V>. >\\W

CARDINAL PACCA

They send their warmest regards. Di Pietro speaks as a consummate theologian. His unyielding words betray the ineffable pride of probity, giving to mercy itself even the austere tones of justice.

The forces of soul and body have returned to evil. Happy Pontiff with the Sacred College, for having good advisors, it's the same thing as being vigorous by himself. The Cardinal of his favorites told him that, to be covered by a passing cloud, the sun is not a cloud. Consalvi's word struck him. After so much sustained battles for the Church, the prisoner feels that a public testimony of repentance is necessary. It offers solemn expiation: he performs it in full serenity unity of his conscience. We will therefore see again that he is not In the long run, there is no policy more clumsy than political skillful ones' tic.

Napoleon, absorbed in plans and schemes from his latest campaigns, he had the extracted document published to the Pontiff. He knows that this act is null and void in principle. and flawed in form; but a measure is needed which—conch shell to soothe religious irritations, serving as an amenity to political hatred and discontent general. The measure was taken by him; he is not concerned more of the denouement. At Fontainebleau, Pius VII did not pass There is no such thing as quick condemnation of the mistake made. It is out of his honor and duty to retract. In the presence of the Cardinals, who had been secretly assembled, he has rehabilitated himself; he demands that the rehabilitation be as well notorious for the fault. It is therefore decided that the Holy Father will first write to the Emperor a reasoned revocation of the deed signed between them on January 25, 1813. Then this letter will be entrusted in its original form to the Sacred College, which will have the right to disseminate it in due time and place, according to the needs of the Church—

BOOK U.

The Pope addressed the Emperor in these terms:

“Sire, however painful the confession may be to our hearts that we are going to do for Your Majesty, whatever trouble that This confession might cause her, in herself, the fear of judgments of God, including our old age and decline The health aspects bring us closer together every day. Vantage, must make us superior to all considerations human, and to make us despise the terrible anxieties which we are currently facing.

"Commanded by our duties, with this sincerity," this frankness which suits our dignity and our character, we declare to Your Majesty that, since the January 25th, the day we affixed our signatures to the articles keys which were to serve as the basis for the final treaty of which there is mentioned, the greatest remorse and the most vivid Repentance has ceaselessly tormented our soul, which cannot to find neither peace nor rest.

"We recognized it immediately, and a continual and pro-
The foundation of meditation makes us feel more and more each day.
the mistake we allowed ourselves to be led into,
either through disputes arising in the affairs of the Church,
or also by the desire to please Your Majesty.

"Only one thought slightly tempered our affliction:"
It was the hope of remedying the situation through the act of accommodation.
definitive, to the harm we had just done to the Church in subscribing to these articles. But what was our pro-deep pain when, to our great surprise, and despite as we had agreed with Your Majesty, we
I wanted to publish these same articles under the title of Concordat keys, which were only the basis of a future arrangement!

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 449

Moaning bitterly and from the bottom of our hearts on the oc-scandal caused to the Church by the publication of the aforementioned articles, fully convinced of the necessity of to repair it, if we could refrain from doing so for the moment to express our feelings and make our re-
These claims were made solely out of caution.
to avoid any haste in such a matter capital.

"Knowing that in a few days we would have the joy at seeing the Sacred College, our natural council, gathered around us, we wanted to wait for him to
to help us with its insights and then take a decisive step mination, not on what we recognize as obligated to make reparation for what we had done, because God
we are witnessing the resolution we had taken from the first moment, but of course the choice of the best method to adopt for the execution of this same resolution.

"We didn't think we could find a better one."
compatible with the respect we have for Your Your Majesty, that of addressing us to Your Majesty herself-even, and to write him this letter. It was in the presence of God, to whom we will soon be obliged to give an account of the use of the power entrusted to us, as vicar of Jesus Christ, for the government of the Church, that We declare, in all apostolic sincerity, that our conscience irrevocably opposes the execution of various articles contained in the document of January 25th. We let us acknowledge with pain and confusion that this would not be not to build up, but to destroy, that we would do use of our authority, if we had the misfortune to execute—cut what we imprudently promised, not by no ill intent, as God has shown us

I. 29

450 BOOK II.

witness, but through sheer weakness and like ashes and dust.

"We will address Your Majesty, with regard to this written and signed by us, the same words as our His predecessor Pascal II addressed a brief to Henry V, in favor of which he had also made a concession which rightly stirred the remorse of his conscience. We will tell you with him: Our conscience recognizes—Knowing our writing is evil, we confess it to being evil, and With the Lord's help, we desire that it be broken Absolutely, so that no damage results for the Church nor any harm to our souls.

"We acknowledge that some of the aforementioned articles are likely to be amended by a new drafting, by means of some modifications and changes; but we recognize at the same time that others are essentially bad, contrary to justice, to the government of the Church that Jesus Christ himself—has even established that they are therefore unenforceable. and must be completely abolished

"However, we cannot hide that our conscience still reproaches us for not having done mention, in the aforementioned articles, of our rights over the Church rights, rights that our ministry and the sermons attributed to our exaltation at the Pontificate oblige us—to maintain, to claim and to preserve, and, Certainly, the letter that Your Majesty sent us does not sufficiently remedy this oversight our duties.

"For these reasons and others no less serious, concerning—including both the aforementioned articles and those we have not not spoken of, and in particular Article 5 of the treaty of 25 January four, reasons that would be too lengthy to explain here, it is

It is obvious that our inflexible duties forbid us from doing so.
Absolutely the execution.

"If we fully understand the strength of the stipulations-tions, we also know that, when they are found in opposition to divine institutions and our duties, we are forced to yield to the empire of an obligation-tion of a higher order, which forbids us from carrying it out and renders them unlawful.

"While yielding to the cry of our conscience, which we orders that this declaration be made to Your Majesty, we we hasten to inform him that we desire-we will ardently strive to reach a challenging accommodation nitive, whose fundamental bases are in harmony with our duties.

"It is with these sentiments that we can assure Your Majesty (as soon as he comes to our attention) knowing that she consents to what we have explained to her in our letter with a paternal trust and a apostolic freedom) of our eagerness to take all necessary measures to proceed with the conclusion-sion of a final arrangement, so fervently desired. We
We will not doubt then that this measure will remedy the numerous evils to which the Church is prey, evils who so often forced us to send our re-displays at the foot of the throne, and that she finally an end to the disputes that, in recent years, have been for us the object of so much pain and so just demands. That is the goal to which we must reach a final agreement, unless betraying the duties of our ministry.

29.

452 BOOK II.

"We beseech Your Majesty to accept the result"
from our reflections with the same outpouring of heart as We have explained them to her. We beg her, through the en-the gifts of Jesus Christ, to console our hearts, which do not desires nothing more than to reach a reconciliation which was always the object of our wishes. We implore her to con-to astound what glory will reflect upon her, the valuable advantages that the conclusion will bring to its States

sion of a definitive settlement, guaranteeing a genuine peace for the Church, and worthy of being maintained by our successors.

"We address our most fervent prayers to God, so that that he may deign to bestow upon Your Majesty the abundance of His heavenly blessings.

Pacca, di Pietro and Consalvi wrote with the Pope this document, which bears the mark, so to speak, vi- It boasts of the diverse genius of the three Cardinals. It is dated from March 24; on that very day, the Pope, after having addressed it officially and directly to the Emperor, the communi- than individually to each member of the Sacred College. The time for weakness was over, the time for courageous women had arrived. The resolutions begin. The Sovereign Pontiff decides therefore, to take a step before the Cardinals which... would almost be an act of apology, if it weren't for the ma- demonstration of supernatural boldness. Pius VII wrote to Napoleon that the act of Fontainebleau is radically no one: he desires that the Sacred College hear from his own He silenced these confessions. He communicated his speech to them. mysteriously, and as it were from voice to voice. This speech concludes as follows:

"Blessed be the Lord who has not taken his mercy. It is he who mortifies and gives life. He has well

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 453

wanted to humiliate us through a salutary confusion. At the same time he supported us with his all-powerful hand- health, by giving us the timely support to fulfill our duties in this difficult circumstance. It is up to us, then. either humiliation, which we readily accept for the good of our soul! To Him be, today and in all "The centuries, the exaltation, the honor, and the glory!"

He who so dignifiedly redeemed an hour of af- failure, in four years of the harshest prison, he, too, deserved to share in the exaltation, the honor and glory. Moral energy lent him physical vigor, and he calmly awaited the effects of his protest which coldly halves the imminence of the danger considered.

The danger no longer came from the Emperor. Cornered by victory after victory, and soon forced to defend his footing set foot on French soil, invaded by a countless coalition, The Emperor conveyed to the Pope his wish to enter into accommodation. Great ladies like the marquise

Anne de Brignole, prelates such as Cardinal Maury and Fallot de Beaumont, Bishop of Piacenza, arrive at Fontainebleau to prepare minds to accept certain certain proposals. The Emperor renounces the territory of Rome, he ceded the property as far as Perugia. Every day brings about a new march of the allied armies; each day presents a new combination for adjusting the Church affairs. It seems that remorse weighs upon the Napoleon's conscience, and that before seeing the world If it had escaped his grasp, the warrior would have been happy. for having made peace with the Apostolic See.

This peace vanished, like all the others, in at the same time as the victory. The Revolution pushed him against the Church, he feels struck to the heart by the blow dealt to The Chair of Peter. He invokes peace, he whose life It was just a fight, and Europe doesn't listen to its ambassadors. sadists. Europe disdains his prayers, or makes one of them diplomatic maneuvering; but the Pope, ever the father, replies: "We have never been, we will never be the enemy of the Emperor. Even if it were our desire, the Religion would not allow it. Nevertheless, we do not we can only deal in Rome, because only in Rome We are free and truly Pope.

454 BOOK II.

On January 23, 1814, Pius VII was freed from his chains; He leaves Fontainebleau to return to his states. April 4, seventy-one days later, the quietest disasters end abruptly the most resounding-Health, a modern-day military epic. The Emperor Napoleon, abandoned by all and abandoning himself, This marks his downfall. He abdicates the imperial crown. in this same palace of Fontainebleau, a silent witness to the the pains and captivity of Pope Pius VII

Following the beautiful image of Saint Augustine: "The lion was defeated in fighting, the lamb conquered in suffering frant. »

Amidst the events that unfolded with Due to such speed, it was not possible for us to substitute- "To kill the controversy in history. We were unable to respond." in a few words to the writers who, taking Mr. Thiers as a model, they strive to distort the facts and the characters, in order to ultimately prevail to the Revolution on the Church. Mr. Thiers is the head of this a school that is half philosophical, half Gallican, which has nothing

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 455

He learned, but he who has forgotten everything; let us therefore study what the way in which he judges men and things.

Writers have their destinies, just like books.

Mr. Thiers, who, through his oratorical or constitutional actions—through her works, she contributed so much to po—popularizing the name of Bonaparte, one must admit, in the

The secret of his thought, that the destiny of some writers
Vainness sometimes becomes a providential punishment. Court—

An unwitting participant in success, he applauded all violence which triumphs, and, in his case, it is less the effect of a con—serious violence that a game of his exuberant proven—çales, sacrificing duty to a passing enthusiasm.

His first book, History of the French Revolution, presents itself as a dusty battlefield and bloody, where everything is left to chance, which is then deified victory, and where man struggles in a pro— night founded against the stupid laws of fate. A lucid mind, but skeptical, his imagination mobile amidst his in—Affected concerns, Mr. Thiers may never have had bad intentions: he has revealed more than once evil instincts. He only experienced passion in brief moments.
of the truth; and that's at most if, recounting intolerable things
In excess, it allows the reticence of his pen to envelop
the happy crime of a belated blame.

Like so many others, Mr. Thiers had his days of constitutional popularity and its small semester of parliamentary glory. Placing himself as much as possible on the
At the front of the stage, he showed us some people—raised swimming patterns, monsters or prodigies, marvels of baseness or miracles of heroism; but he has constantly tried to forget that the cruelest injustice in history is to adopt it for herself and to make others consider it

456 BOOK IT

Success as the touchstone of merit. "It is
"It is rare," said Quintilian, "for someone to have enough self-respect."
It was through this lack of respect that Mr. Thiers sinned.
formerly, in his apology for the Revolution; it was through there that with a singular intrepidity of good opinion of He himself still errs in his History of the Consulate and of the Empire.

Without having this Atlas constitution, which Milton requires truly superior men, Mr. Thiers could to be impartial and not to be unfair. He would have It cost so little to get out of this rut! Instead of always trying to smooth things over, it was his so easy not to fall into the alternative of charging the persecuted of imaginary wrongs and to invoke in favor the persecutor benefits from mitigating circumstances. There is in the position of this writer, devoted to the imperialism through his works and riveted to the chain of the representative through its ambition, a deep-seated disenchantment that the Reading Machiavelli could raise the proportions to the point of tions of remorse. Machiavelli indeed said: "It was necessary to redoubt the name of Caesar, who had destroyed his enemies with such glory, and established a monarchy in Rome. nothing favorable could be expected from him or his supporters "Convenient to freedom."

Mr. Thiers never had the perspicacity of the great Florentine politics; however, what he once attempted against Louis XIII and the victims of the Revolution, Mr. Thiers I'm still trying it today with less harsh forms. The revolutions he did not make inspired him to a kind of self-doubt, and a relative naiveté who, in place of ancient fatalism, substitute a 1 Works of Machiavelli. Discourses on Titus-Live, Book I.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 457

providence and a cult that the historian molds to his liking. In this last work, the Revolution, his mother, did it more circumspect in words, but no less unjust in the ratings.

Thus, the Sovereign Pontiff Pius VII had to, by condescendence, by detachment from worldly goods, by love of peace above all, offer no resistance to Napoleon's covetousness. The Pope, abducted from his capital, dragged from exile to exile between two gendarmes like a repeat offender, was perhaps not entirely He acted within his rights by refusing to comply with the decrees. confiscation of the patrimony of Saint-Pierre; but to A sure thing, according to Mr. Thiers, the Cardinals, who, on the traces of Consalvi, Pacca, di Pietro, Litta and French bishops fought or endured the persecution for the honor of the Church and for independence The dance of the Roman Siege set a bad example of stubbornness. They were all guilty of ignorance or ingenuity in both substance and form. Instruments docile, they refused to listen to the lessons that, from At the height of his glory, Napoleon allowed the former Oratorian Daunou addressed them under his imperial cover.

Mr. Thiers strikes them all with a severe censure, but little motivated.

Like Seneca, he is never quick to admire and to exclaim: "I honor these great names and do not hear them never pronounce it without feeling greater: Ego illos veneror et tantis nominibus semper assurgo. » Seneca He said this; the revolutionary idea will never have any momentum. Same.

From 1809 to 1814, he met priests,

1 Seuec. Epist. 64.

$15 BOOK II.

Bishops and Cardinals, the most learned and the most in-hctic, which, to a perfect degree, did not to silence the voice of their conscience, when an imperious desire-Seeing their command to speak. Mr. Thiers, who of the most From the bottom to the top, by making the opposition to the principles of order and salvation, accuses all these priests, Bishops and Cardinals, whether hypocritical or obstinate,
as if devotion and courage were too contareligious, even within the Church. Then, without ever authorizing his pen to invoke an excuse in favor of those who read-
They speak out for the law, he incriminates them or he slanders them, he condemns their actions or their character. Mr. Thiers, who, at the time of the revolutions of 1830 and 1848, was always admirable in his personal precautions, he seems to be making himself the considered audacity of others a living reproach, and he does not tolerates martyrdom only in the ballot box of parliamentary votes silence. However, this is not entirely a reason to that it absolves prudence or fear. It stigmatizes energy, but he allows himself to blame fear, when,
As an exception, she seizes a bishop or a car-faithful to duty. It is therefore neither recklessness nor the fear which are at issue before the historian of the Revolution
The solution is loyalty to the Holy See.

Some excerpts from History of the Consulate and the Empire will make Mr. Thiers and his spirit of denial better known.
gement, when the name of Rome appears in his writing.

Cardinal Spina "was the believer and even more eager that believer. Constantly asking his for money at court, his most ardent wish was to make her rich and prodigal, as in the old days.

The marriage of the Archduchess of Austria to the Em-

1 History of the Consulate and the Empire, vol. III, p. 241.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. m

Percur will be celebrated at the Louvre. Mr. Thiers puts in The Sacred College scene. We have the unreleased version of Cardinal Consalvi; let us see that of the revolutionary historian-naire. He tells the story:

"Napoleon, whose eye took in everything, had noticed^ during the wedding ceremony, the red dresses, like He called them, but not all of them were present. – Count-them, he had said to a prelate of his chapel; and having obtained the certainty that thirteen out of twenty-eight were missing, he-he cried out in a low voice, with a violence of which he was Not the master: – Fools! They're always the same! ostensibly submissive, secretly rebellious!... but they They'll see what it costs to outwit me with my power! – He had barely left the ceremony when he sent word to of him the Minister of Police, and had ordered an arrest the thirteen Cardinals, to strip them of the purple (from which they were later known as Cardinals) blacks), to disperse them into different provinces, to to keep them in custody, and to detain not only their ecclesiastical revenues, but their personal property.

"We could not respond with more violence to a more imprudent and more reprehensible opposition. In the number of the thirteen Cardinals included the cardinal Oppizoni, whom Napoleon, despite many clouds rumors spread about the private life of this prince of the Church, had Appointed Archbishop of Bologna, Cardinal and Senator.

These thirteen Cardinals, who are neither overtly submissive, nor secretly factious, and that their contemporaries-Rains and posterity were never tempted to take For fools, this is the elite of the Sacred College, the glory of the Church and perhaps the most complete gathering of men

1 History of the Cumulative and Empire, f. Xll, p. 00 tl Gl.

460 BOOK II.

of talent, wit, and fortitude. Cardinal Con-Salvi named them all in his memoirs.

The Gallican Church is not treated much better than the Roman Catholic Church as soon as it does not adhere without observing following orders that Mr. Thiers himself allows not to approve. The writer sometimes contradicts himself.

But he never retracts. Thus we read:

"The Pope, transported to Savona, was a prisoner there, and..."
stubbornly refused to fulfill the duties of the Chair apostolic. There was no schism, as in the the final days of the Revolution, when the divided clergy... targeting the faithful, he took revenge by disrupting the state of persecutions he had endured. The clergy at this
The era was united, tranquil, submissive, celebrating everywhere the
The cult, in the same way, ignored or pretended to ignore the Bull of Excommunication issued against Napoleon, bla-generally understands the Pope's having resorted to this extremity, and having thus exposed himself, or to reveal the faiwounds with his spiritual weapons, or to shake a gou-government which, despite its faults, was regarded as still necessary for the salvation of all.

On page 58, the French clergy was submissive, and he generally blamed the Pope for having fulminated the excommunication. But on page 66, this submissive clergy, which generally blames the Pope, who is in disabling in accordance with the imperial will, and he follows to the letter the advice from the Seat of Peter. It was Mr. Thiers himselfeven he who admits it in these terms: "Formerly the Bishops Those appointed were sometimes elected capitular vicars, and thus took immediate possession of their seats.
Napoleon, unable to obtain the sending of the Bulls such

1 History of the Consulate and the Empire, vol. XII, pp. 58 and 66.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 461

that he desired them, had wanted the subjects named by were invested with the title of capitular vicars, but he had encountered almost everywhere the most vivid re-assistance. The chapters had generally elected their administration interim governor before appointment by the Emperor of the new bishops. They therefore alleged the election already done so as not to do a second one, or else, when They were bolder; they dared to argue that this way
the procedure was merely a roundabout way of cancelling the canonical institution belonging to the Pope, and denied that the rules of the Church permitted to refer matters to the Bishops those appointed with the status of capitular vicars.

"True or not, the doctrine suited them, because they..."
it was soon realized that by cooperating with the administration provisional of the Churches, they were to the Pope the means the more certain of stopping Napoleon in his march. But the
The means was dangerous, because stopping a man like

Napoleon was not easy, and, to achieve this, interrupt-
The worship itself was not very pious. In vain
a few enlightened priests, remembering that Henry VIII had been able, for shameful reasons, to expel from the Church Catholic, one of the world's largest nations, they said that Napoleon, far more powerful than Henri VIH, supported by very different motives, confessed-wounds, could cause greater harm to faith than the English monarch, especially in an indifferent century, much more to fear than a hostile century. But the instigators of the clerical opposition, blinded by their passions, were little concerned about the danger of Religion, and had brought the theater of this war to Paris itself perilous.

Mr. Thiers, who invented the democratic maxim: "The

462 BOOK II.

"A king reigns but does not govern," a maxim from which he dispenses quite generously the Empire and the Emperor, Mr. Thiers is as unfair to the French clergy as it is to the Roman clergy. He therefore writes:

"Mr. d'Aviau, Archbishop of Bordeaux, clergyman" respectable, but very unenlightened, and taking no taking care to hide the indignation that he felt captivity of the Holy Father.

"Messrs. de Broglie and de Boulogne 2, both passed"
from enthusiasm for the first Consul to hatred imprudent against the Emperor.

"Mr. d'Hirn, Bishop of Tournai, an Alsatian by nature" relaxed and violent opinions 3. »

The only Bishops whose virtues the writer celebrates, the talent and moderation, always in the name of a God of peace, it is the prelates who, like Cardinal Maury and the Abbot of Pradt, find themselves in an inextricable situation cable through their fault; it is from Barraï, Archbishop of Tours, Duvoisin, Bishop of Nantes, constantly ready to advising the Pope to relinquish the rights of the Church.
From the depths of his tomb, the old episcopate addresses, by the Pierre de Blois's mouth, a completely different lesson to his successors: "Do not be envious," he teaches them⁴, to these Bishops, who, like mute dogs, powerless to bark,
lull the prince's conscience with cowardly flattery.
tions. Nothing is more pleasing to God than bishops, than the profession of truth. Therefore, do not be afraid.
to expose your life for her.

1 History of the Consulate and the Fifth Empire, vol. XIII, p. 146.

2 Ibidem, t. XIII, p. 4 52.

3 Ibidem, t. XIII, p. 4 59.

4 Epist., c. xu, p. 175.

PIE Vil RI NAPOLEON. f*ft

Such opinions are not worthy of Mr. Thiers; because there are people who only advise this that they believe they can imitate. However, the praise that The historian grants them in detail, but he does not ratify them in their together. He also paints a rather unflattering picture of the Council: "There wasn't one," he said, looking as if he were there regretting his parliamentary absence, there was no between all these prelates, a man capable of taking over this an irritated and disunited assembly, to rally them around a A wise decision, to finally bring her back to reason: that was therefore a chaos of questioning, reproaches, accusations- reciprocal actions.

The turn of the Supreme Head of the Church has finally arrived. Rome is invaded by the imperial armies; and witness to this violation of all principles and all promises, Mr. Thiers writes²: "The Pope, having left the Vatican for the Quirinal, had shut himself up in this last palace as in a fortress, and had given rise to scenes equally deplorable for the oppressive power as for the Oppressed power. General Miollis, condemned to a role of the most ungrateful, for which he was not made, because this in- The restless soldier was as cultured in mind as he was firm General Miollis tried in vain, with his heart to soften his mission. Pius VII, indignant to the highest degree as pontiff of the violence perpetrated against the Church, outraged as a prince by Napoleon's ingratitude, that he had gone to be crowned in Paris, could no longer contain the sen- the symptoms to which he was prey, and which, without diminishing the tender and religious interest he deserved, made him to lose some of one's dignity.

1 Consulate and Empire, t. XIII, p. 170.

2 Ibidem, t. XI, p. 300.

464 BOOKS

Pius VII in chains lost, according to Mr. Thiers, a part of his dignity. He will soon no longer have the intelligence and the ability to appreciate; the historian thus confirms his sayings 1: "The unfortunate Pius VII, who, with many es- took hold, however, he did not possess the full force of reason born- necessary to return to the fundamental principles upon which rests on the dual investiture of pastors by the power temporal and spiritual power.

Mr. Thiers has judged the Pontiff; he will paint him at Fontai- Nebleau with the members of the Sacred College, returned exile or state prisons. The act of January 25, 1813a was torn from the bitterness and languor of captivity vité. The natural advisors of the Sovereign Pontiff, the Cardinals, among whom, before the signing, he invokes and pro- claim the right to refuse or sanction, are with Mr. Thiers, ever the revolutionary artist, did so in these terms the painting of a papal interior 2:

"It was easy to foresee that as soon as the council- The Pope's ordinary ministers would have returned to him. they would try to torture his mind, in him reproaching the document he had signed, by showing him the serious consequences, especially the lack of tact, at the on the eve of a war that might not turn out in the best- Napoleon's reign. Indeed, barely had the Black Cardinals had they been admitted to Fontainebleau, that one saw the spirit of the Pope, so cheerful, so content for a few days, rede- to come sad and gloomy. Cardinals di Pietro and others pointed out to him that he had very imprudently abolished the temporal power of the papacy, operated consequently of his own authority a huge revolution in the E-

1 Consulate and Empire, t. XIII, p. 429.

2 Ibidem, t. XV, p. 304 and 305.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 465

church, abandoned the heritage of Saint-Pierre, which does not It did not belong to him, and that was unnecessary, Napoleon being on the verge of dying; that he had been deceived about the situation in Europe, and that such an act was surprising, if not torn off, should not bind it. In short, they tried to to inspire in him a thousand terrors, a thousand remorse, and to draw for him of the state of things a picture such as the most passion only violent could suggest it, a picture which, unfortunately- fortunately, it was soon to be found to be true due to the fault of Napoleon, but that every wise man, in the mo- He would have judged it false, or at least greatly exaggerated, because, Although shaken in the eyes of the world, the French Empire- This still filled his enemies with a profound terror.

We have seen the Revolution change the course of history to the whims of Mr. Thiers; we still have a greater duty difficult to fill out. It's about showing Mr. Thiers in-Core more malicious than ill-informed.

In the warning placed at the beginning of the twelfth volume, this writer, who so humbly bestows so much pride-their lessons, is expressed thus: "The fear of alleging An inaccurate fact fills me with a kind of confusion. I I will have no rest until I have discovered the proof
the object of my doubts; I look for it everywhere
She can be, and I only stop when I have her found.

By admitting these fine pro-
Despite the tests, it will nevertheless be necessary to conclude that Mr. Thiers
He didn't know everything or didn't say everything. He claims to have read and having meditated on the numerous correspondences relating to the reign of Napoleon I, and in this History of the Con-sulat and of the Empire^ where the most insignificant details occupied-

I. 30

4bô BOOK II.

can all have a large place, the letter of Pius VII to the Emperorreur, dated Fontainebleau March 24, 1813, this letter in which the Sovereign Pontiff so vigorously repudiates the so-called Concordat of 1813 is neither cited nor paraphrasing. The historian doesn't even allow himself to do so.
the most indirect allusion. It was received by the Emperorreur; it was widespread at that time; it had all Types of advertising in both worlds. Mr. Thiers
He alone does not know it, and, without fear of filling himself with this sort of confusion that he would experience by alleging a Inaccurate fact, Mr. Thiers goes further. He first pretended to ignoring Pius VII's letter, he now denies it outright.
implicitly!

"Pius VII," he said, "returning to a system of subtlety which was not his, but his advisors', was far from declare that he wanted to renounce the Concordat of Fontainebleau, and retract his signature, but he seemed to indicate that, as things stood, the execution of this treaty had not nothing urgent, and pretended to be dozing more than custom in his peaceful retirement. Only the person-active swimming by the Church party was taking place in Fontainebleau frequent trips. The impetuous Napoleon nearly got himself into trouble.
to carry, and to spoil with a gleam the skill of his approach-

He lies with the Holy Father. But, better advised, he Borna was able to take advantage of its benefits. The Pope having signed the Concordat publicly, freely, Napoleon had not no reason to keep it secret. In truth, he had pro-decided not to make it public until after the communication which was to be done to the cardinals; but the bad faith shown towards him, the delay in to make this communication to the cardinals, who were 1 History of the Consulate and the Fifth Empire, vol. XV, p. 387.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 467

all gathered in Paris, the denials of many people Church officials, assuring some that the Concordat did not exist, the others that he had been extorted by violence, don-finally granted Napoleon the right to publish it. Consequently Consequently, he had it inserted in the Bulletin of Laws, as a law of the State to receive its execution from this in-Sertion.

When the Revolution poses its writings in front of the Church
no matter how eloquent or cautiously hostile, this is the language she inspires in them; such are the feelings-elements of truth and justice that she charges them with propager. It is not the memory of a great man that it wants to absolve or defend; the great men of the Napoleon's size doesn't suit him at all. But Napoleon, ce-susceptible to suggestions foreign to his instincts political, had the misfortune of allowing himself to be drawn into persecutions unworthy of his glory. People imagined that he had formed a plan to destroy the Ark of the Covenant Christian, and to separate France from the Roman See. This a project which, in the Emperor's mind, never existed that, in its chimerical state, brings the Revolution to him entirely to forgive. The Revolution blessed him for having thought of schism; Mr. Thiers hastens to accuse the Apostolic Court-
The lique and the French clergy for having opposed it. The action is double, the result will be the same.

Emperor Napoleon went into exile, and as it will always be easy to condemn what falls, the ou-Tragedy, coming from all sides at once, descended upon the glorious outlaw. Everyone had their little piece of indignation.
tion to throw at him. The fierce republicans of the previous day, transformed into dignitaries of the Empire, they improvised the courtiers of the House of Bourbon, or rather they Immovable bodyguards of fortune. Everyone cries out—rent with Juvenal:

Dum jacet in ripa, calcemus Cæsaris hostem.

The Caesar was simply the one who was going to reign.
because the common people only understand the outcomes.

At the same time, on May 24, 1814, Pope Pius VII, under an Italian sun that seems to have become even more radiant to illuminate the Pastor's triumphant march,
She returned to her Rome, trembling with joy. That she
It was a beautiful celebration, with an entire people rushing towards the
the road, strewn with flowers, that the Souver— was to travel Holy Pontiff! He had announced his deliverance to the Romans, and "the desire he felt to hold them close to his heart, as well as after a long and painful pilgrimage
a tender father cradles well-children in his arms loved ones].

In order to respond to this touching speech by the old—
With his crowned bacon, all of Rome rushed to meet him.
with palm fronds and banners. Removing the splen—car where he weeps and blesses, all of Rome carried in triumph through the ancient sacred ways, who, even in the time of his victorious Consuls of world? had never witnessed demonstrations identical. All ranks, all sexes, all ages, confused on the road to Ponte-Molle, make the same cry: Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord!
said those three hundred thousand voices of the Catholic people.
Through its priests, the Church, which has suffered so much of her long widowhood, repeats to the echoes of the seven mountains the.
Peaceful Hosannah.

1 Proclamation of Pius VII to the Romans, May 4, 1844.

PIE Vil and Napoleon. 469

Pius VII truly deserved to be blessed, for never was a man
No one better than him will come in the name of the Lord. He has He shows himself generous in rewarding his dedications by towards loyalty. Treachery calls for punishment, it is lavish with grace. The successor of Peter, overwhelmed with torments of the body and anxieties of the mind, a—
He did it only once before the law; he atoned for his mistake.
by forgiving the wrongdoing of others. To those who have sin against the Church or against him, and who rush begging for mercy, he replies: "And we, believe—you that we do not also have some fault on our part Blame? Let's forget everything together, everything that has happened.

pass. "

The Pope has forgotten everything except the misfortune. It was then Napoleon's family is a victim of this. This family wanders at the mercy of events, less treacherous than the men. She is pursued on land and sea; her yesterday's courtiers become his persecutors more relentless the next day. Old age, middle age and childhood, they find no refuge in the midst of this Europe, only yesterday on its knees before them. He is in the the destiny of papal Rome to be the refuge of greatness fallen. The Pope, who, by forgiving everyone does not pardon himself, remembers that hospitality is the first duty of a Pontiff. He orders that the doors be opened to two leaves, all the gates of the eternal city before
The Bonapartes were outlawed because he knew that the tree did not
She never refuses her shade to the woodcutter. The old mother of the Emperor, Cardinal Fesch, his uncle, -his brothers, his sisters and their children, condemned to the torture of Hope, like all outcasts, finally finds near the Apostolic Chair a shelter to rest their

470 BOOK II.

head. They will remain there, honored and peaceful, in the middle of this Sacred College, which will make it a duty of conscience and out of courtesy not to remember.

Napoleon, exiled in the precarious imperial residence on the island d'Elbe, wanted to try his luck one last time with weapons.
Betrayed by fortune at Waterloo, the Emperor convinces himself that the English government will consider it an honor to
to show as much generosity in hospitality as the Holy See.
Struck by ostracism, like Themistocles, he wrote of Ro-Chefort, July 3, 1815, that he comes to sit at the hearth of the British people. England, which gathers in its within the refugee community of all countries, and which covers with its pavilion, the attacks that several are planning there, refused the hospitality requested. England deported the general Buonaparte in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean.

When, chained to that fatal rock of Saint Helena,
the Prometheus of history, having the government britannic for vulture, dictated to his companions of de-hope brings back memories of his marvelous epic, it is tou-days with words of affection and respect that he stops in the name of the prisoner of Savona and Fontainebleau.
"Pius VII," he said, "is truly a lamb, absolutely a good man, a truly good man, whom I...

time, which I love very much, and which loves me back a little, I'm sure of it.

And Napoleon was not mistaken. The kings he so loved—defeated, like the princes he favored, they met at congresses. At the one in Aachen, They all adhered to the memorandum drafted by Russia. And they unanimously said: "The war waged against Napoleon Bonaparte and the results that followed consequences have never had any personality for object. It is the power of the French Revolution, centered on an individual who used it to enslave the nations under the yoke of injustice, which the allies have fought and which they fortunately managed to destroy. By proclaiming, in March 1811, that they would never make peace either with him or with no individual from his family, the entire scaffolding of the universal suffrage was collapsing, and Europe saw in this immense ruins the beginning of its own rebuilding—Napoleon Bonaparte, before the Battle of Waterloo, was a formidable rebel; after the defeat, a vagabond, whose fortune had betrayed his plans; in Rochefort, a fugitive who, upon arrival at the Île d'Oléron, was subject to the justice system of Europe.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 471

Governmental Europe, whose Revolutions sometimes modify the judgments of such a strange manner had nothing to say, nothing to do on behalf of the captive. of Saint Helena. Its name was dedicated to insult, and the diplomatic notes were indistinguishable in the same evil-diction with history, poetry, journalism, caricature painting and the novel.

At the same time, a writer died in Italy... famous. Count Alexandre Verri, author of the Natte romana had also been swept away by the torrent of reactions. With her soul burning with energy, but full out of integrity, he had written a book entitled: Lotta dell'Impero eol Sacerdozio fra Napoleone Bonaparte e Pio VII. This was, in diminutive form, the famous pamphlet by Chateaubriand: Of Bonaparte and the Bourbons. Only faith It replaced anger. Before publishing the book, the Count Gabriel Verri, his son, felt obliged to submit the manuscript to the Pope.

In a very personal letter, addressed by the cardinal Consalvi to the Duchess of Devonshire, under the date of June 3, 1818, we learn the reasons that led to the suspension of the publication of this book. "The Holy Father," writes the cardinal, after my second business hearing, had the kindness to have me called again; then he said to me, "We were given an account by Cardinal Galeffi and by di Gregorio from the manuscript that Count Verri gave you was tasked with presenting this to us. This manuscript contains admirable passages and a few minor errors almost insignificant. But arrange things in such a way that he would not see the light of day. Napoleon is unhappy. very unfortunate. We have forgotten his wrongs, the Church does not He must never forget his services. He did favors for this. It sits where perhaps no one else, in his position, would have He had the courage to undertake it. We will not be ingrat. This book could go to Saint Helena, and the English would be careful to put it right in front of Napoleon's eyes—Leon, by informing him that I had authorized its publication. Knowing that this unfortunate man would suffer because of us is already almost that it's torture, especially when he asks us a priest to reconcile with God. We do not want, we cannot, we must not participate in any way in The suffering he endures; on the contrary, we desire the most from the depths of our hearts, that we lighten them and that we... make life sweeter. When you write to your friend Prince Regent, ask him for this favor in my name. and tell Count Verri's son to keep in his archive this work, absolutely useless to the glory of papal eternal.

"I am copying you, Madam Duchess, word for word,"
the Holy Father's verbatim words, before trans-

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 473

I am pleased to inform you of this.
to offer the first look. An offensive return of Bonaparte in Europe Rope is now impossible. Isn't it time...? to ease his captivity and to lessen the anger of this tune which Must there be such painful bitterness? I will, in My next letter to the Prince Regent, to speak to him from the heart opened in the name of the Most Holy Father; but my friend, as The Pope is doing me the favor of calling him, is hardly free to its movements. I will nevertheless try to fill in
I do my best to follow the order and especially the wishes of the Holy Father.
Be kind enough to assist me, and perhaps arrive—
"Will we see something good happen?"

The diplomatic corps are present. They are all writing.
two on the same object: we now know the diverse feelings that drive them. Napoleon was among them.
well convinced, because at the beginning of this same
In 1818, he spontaneously asked the Pope to pray for him send a priest. The storm has passed over his brow, and It is felled like those old oaks destroyed by hurricanes litter the earth. All that remains for him is a miserable suffering-Veraine and sovereign mercy. The captive, prey
He is subjected to all kinds of torture, and he sees himself perishing in detail. It seems then to say with Montaigne: "Having arrived at this last
As for death and us, there is nothing left but pretense;
We must speak French, we must show what is good and clean at the bottom of the pot.

The Emperor showed it very sincerely, very Christiannement; then he died with blessings and regrets of the Pontiff who had loved him so much. The Revolution had strived to portray Napoleon as a persecutor of the Church. To his
At the last moment, the Church is there to prove to him that if 1 Essays of Montaigne, book I, p. 94.

474 BOOK II.

Kings and peoples have abandoned her, she who cannot not to stop the implacable fury of men, opens always at least to repentance and faith the treasure of Divine grace. The revolutionary idea, through its tributaries or by its derivatives, made use of the passions of the Ema pervert to mislead her. The Emperor is no more; she will now attempt, using a fictional constitutionnelle, to abuse her fame to deliver a new assault on the social order and the Roman See.

The struggle orchestrated by the Revolution between the two
The struggle for power had been long. The Church emerged victorious.
and Peter's boat had just entered the harbor. Se-the beautiful image of Saint John Chrysostom, "the waves had not toppled the rock. Those who rushed to Its summit would fall back in foam at its feet. But In every respect, there were problems that needed fixing and wounds to heal. The Revolution has passed its level on this papal land, where the government and the institutions tions must be as exceptional as the promise upon which God builds his Church. Ecclesiastic establishments Siastics, pious or scholarly foundations, congregations, colleges, hospices, courts, spiritual administration or temporal, everything has been abolished or transformed. From. new-old laws have tried to change customs and alter the characters. From the quintessential Catholic city, we have attempted to make one of those vulgar capitals, where the preoc-commercial and industrial associations would have the pre-First step. The exile of the Pope, the dispersal of the Sacred College and of the Prelature, served these projects admirably.

To get the Romans to deny what the historian protests Jean de Müller so openly confessed that this was the vow

1 Homel. De exilio, t. II, p. 501.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 475

The most tenacious form of demagoguery. Jean de Müller had written: "Without the Popes, Rome would no longer exist." Gregory, Alexander and Innocent built a dam against the torrent which threatened the whole earth. Their paternal hands lifted the hierarchy, and alongside it the freedom of all States. » It was necessary to refute this truth that proclaim all the stories impartial. The occupation of Rome and the destruction of the ecclesiastical hierarchy These were the means that were used to influence the People.

This attempt at secularization had little success. The people were no more inclined than the clergy to see Rome as... to come, from the capital of the Christian world, the second city of the French Empire. By losing the Pope, Rome felt that it annihilated itself, and that after having renounced its As a Christian title, she could perfectly well, following new wars, falling from the rank of second city of the Empire and end up being nothing more than an Italian city or German third-rate. Rome had therefore resisted these hypothetical magnitudes, which the weakening pro-The gradual decline in its population made it very unattractive.

Where everyone claims at least a small share of the eternity "promised to the Chair of Peter, the days and the Years don't count any more than minutes in a century. We live off the past and the future; we don't concern ourselves with the present only to exalt the one and utilize the other. The Sacred College, born of the people, instinctively repudiates all intemperings of enthusiasm with coldness, all the innovations tions which elsewhere pursue men, such as the glory of a shadow.

Clergy and People were not subject to any empiricism of the au- of a kind; they did not lend themselves to any liberating seduction. a slowdown in progress. We had seen them give way in the past under the material violence, but this state of moral prostration

476 BOOK II.

fat rather a calculation of the will than an abandonment of the intelligence. They had never believed in the lowering of the Holy See. The Church was to rise again, stronger. Strong of such hope, much more than of dissimulation, "this ugly but necessary virtue" of which Madame de Motteville in her Memoirs, Clergy and People they let themselves drift peacefully with the current that their hand was secretly directing. Also accustomed to the big things that, in the face of defections and catastrophes, they find themselves. They naturally rise to the occasion. Everyone hastened to get to work to facilitate the work of recomposition.

Prouder of its glorious ruins than of a victory, The Church, with wise deliberation, prescribed the remedies to evil. It was on the Society of Jesus that the Revolution, still in the egg of Jansenism, of Philosophism and of secular Gallicanism, directed its first blows; It belongs to the Society of Jesus, abolished by Clement XIV, that Pius VII was addressing. A Pope who had only freedom Its weaknesses forced a religious society, too holy and celebrated, to descend to the tomb before her time marked by Providence. Like the son of the widow of Naïm, this Society was lying in its coffin, and the Revolution was vigilant to ensure that no one approached it. On the day of social reparations, Pius VII did not want to condemn the Church to perpetual injustice. He approaches from this premature coffin; he pronounces the word of resurrection: "Stand up, I order you," he said to the Society of Jesus, through its bull Sollicitudo omnium ecclesiarum. The Society of Jesus hears this word; she marches towards new victories, and on the breach of

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 477

Despite all the devotion, she remains the target of all the enemies from the Chair of Peter.

The Bull Sollicitudo, which re-established the Society of Jesus, is dated August 7, 1814. On the 15th of the same month, the other Religious orders are reinstated in their rights. They had seen the Society of Jesus die before, that's what she who precedes them into a new existence. Pius VII provided for the internal needs of the Roman Catholic Church in reconstituting the clergy; he will now institute Bishops in the Catholic world, in order to prepare it for new battles.

Other, more temporary, but equally contributing treatments the splendor of the Apostolic See, were a concern still the soul of the Pontiff. The war had stripped him of the the richest portion of Saint-Pierre's heritage; it was of the honor and duty of the Papacy to return to its domains so often conquered and always faithful in the masses. By order of the Sovereign, Cardinal Consalvi had to get in touch with the Kings and the plenipotentiaries—members of the European coalition.

As he looked away, the Cardinal was quite convinced that he should not stray from the heart of Pius VII. In this move—social restoration movement, where the principles are beautifully less contested than the peoples, Consalvi did not pre—neither to demand territorial annexations, nor to have a say in the balance of European interests. He has mission to say and prove that everything that is done for the repose of the Church and for the strengthening of the Religion The gion is made for the salvation of the Empires. The justice of the men must complete what the prudence of the embassy—The pontifical duel will have begun.

Less than eighteen months ago, the brilliant prince of

478 BOOK II.

The Church, exiled in Reims, appeared before an obscure sub-prefect to report on means of subsistence that piety so discreetly made available to Black Cardinals. Today Consalvi reappears in the Tuileries in all the splendor of purple. He possesses the confidence of his master; he will win the friendship of kings and the esteem of their principal ministers. Received in Paris with the tributes due to his rank and renown, he leaves Louis XVIII to visit the Prince Regent in London who showed a keen desire to confer with him the most dear interests of society.

The misfortunes of Pius VII made him almost as popular as her goodness. The seductive charm attached to the no one from the Cardinal minister contributes at least as much that the depth of his political views contributed to his fame his name. Consalvi is in London, in the middle of this city where the effigy of the Pope is burned every year in a Protestant auto-da-fé, and where the members of the Sacred College are outlaws by right. Surrounded by this aristocracy so proud of her titles, her power, her fortune and of her religious prejudices, to which she pays so much credit Consalvi, dressed in his official costume, was enjoying his privileges. finally shows those English eyes what a Cardinal. The Prince Regent saw it, he heard it. The Prince The regent proclaimed himself his friend. The plenipotentiaries of the Great Britain has been ordered "to support and promote all the requests that the Cardinal will present to the congress

Vienna, because all these demands will be justified.

This is how the British government

He speaks at this time of the Roman Church. In the intimate and familiar conversations that George IV provoked Consalvi, seemingly with pleasure, explained the position of the

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 479

Pope and the obstacles of all kinds that must be encountered to the restitution of the three Legations, and that of Benevento and of Ponte-Corvo. Out of respect for the master, out of affection for the servant, the Prince Regent takes it upon himself to smooth things over. difficulties; he even makes a vow, strange thing! to cooperate on the note that Consalvi was currently drafting. This diplomatic note, in which are very clearly established the claims of the Holy See, is written in French by a Cardinal, Secretary of State to the Pope, with the collaboration Birth of a king of England. It bears the date of London, June 23, 1814, as if Consalvi had wished, to take solemn possession of friendship, so to speak. which was honored by the monarch of Great Britain.

Having arrived in Vienna under these auspicious circumstances, Consalvi took part in the famous transactions that formed pen- for so long the public law of Europe. Surrounded tributes, and reporting them with respectful delicacy to the Pontiff, whose chargé d'affaires he is, the Cardinal, initiated into the mysterious combinations of all, but asking for Rome only what Rome strictly owed

1 This friendship does not weaken with time or separation.

George IV insisted on always maintaining a very familiar correspondence followed by a meeting with the Cardinal. One day, in order to offer him a souvenir worthy From both of them, the King of England had the idea of having them manufactured in the most magnificent fabric possible, dyed scarlet, which he desired. Giovannino, the Cardinal's valet, was a friend of the Cardinal. was won; he undertook to clothe his master in the British purple- Indian, without Consalvi being able to notice the change. The Cardinal, Indeed, always preoccupied or distracted, he did not notice the substitution. and he appeared at a papal chapel covered in this radiant robe. The audience- Three cardinals surrounded him to compliment him. Consalvi, many Less amazed than they were, but more surprised, he withdrew at that very moment. and then he learns of the small conspiracy organized against his modesty by the King of England. The scarlet robe was presented by Consalvi to a poor church of the Roman Agro.

480 POUNDS

to claim, an exceptional place was made in Congress

tional. This sharing of souls, this distribution of territories which he witnesses, this struggle of interests rivals, whose adventures he enjoys following, give gradually, a truly authoritative character was acquired. ciliary. Great talents were pleading or waving of great causes. Prince Metternich, the Prince of Hardenberg, the Duke of Wellington or Lord Castlereagh, Prince Talleyrand and Count Nesselrode, discuss— They were creating a new code for nations. They were stirring up the Europe from the tips of their feathers, and Europe, weary of twenty years of disastrous wars, allowed himself to be put in a regulated cut, because she felt such a need to re— pos, that all peace, even bought at the price of regretta— For him, these sacrifices seemed like happiness.

In the Treaty of Tolentino, Rome had ceded the Legations to the French Republic. Austria had seized it. rée, then Napoleon had taken them back. Consalvi asks that these fertile provinces return to the Holy See, of which they constitute the richest appanage. The Revolution at this Vienna congress, he only had a very timid voice. She therefore only opposed restitution through ater— half-hearted or partial refusals, when a letter from the Prince regent to Emperor Alexander of Russia decided the question. It was a time of miracles performed by genius diplomatic resources. The Cardinal appealed to the resources of his own, and the head of the Anglican Church improvises as a lawyer of the Catholic Church to the head of the Russian Church.

“My Prince Regent,” wrote Cardinal Consalvi the November 4–9, works wonders; the restitution is de— conceived in principle, and accepted by Emperor Alexander. The foundation is laid, we will regain possession of our

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 481

dear provinces, and we will owe them to a very good competition unexpected. The same will be true, at least I hope so, for other prerogatives, less profitable from the point of view territorial advantages, but also essential to the dignity of the Holy See. The effacement of the Church has been too much It has been considerable lately. It needs to recover. firstly by the brilliance of his virtues and talents; but he The princes of the earth must also lend themselves to a rise which is becoming a social necessity.

These words from the Cardinal foreshadow a serious ne— negotiation. He had been struck by the prevailing confusion. within the Diplomatic Corps. Five powers were involved. and dictated the law to the secondary monarchies. But the The question of precedence, often debated in Congress, had never been resolved—it even threatened to escalate—to see later the difficulties that everyone anticipated. Consalvi is determined to make Lord Wellington. The practical common sense of the ambassador general admirably grasped the Cardinal's thought. Wellington he was not a great man, he was, in all the accounts, a great Englishman understood the meaning of the word. He understood that the diplomatic preeminence would always be contested at its countries by France, Austria, Prussia and Russia; it So accept, salva fide, as he said, smiling at Consalvi, the proposal submitted to him by the Cardinal. There Establishing precedence was a bone of contention. disputed right once sparked bloody wars; it indeed to settle the dispute at the moment when all the The powers recognize the need for lasting peace. Consalvi prepared the Duke of Wellington so well that the Britain's representative believes he has found he himself had the means to reconcile everything. "Well!" he exclaimed

I. 31

482 BOOK II.

Lord Wellington, that the Pope's Nuncios be by right and in all the courts the presidents-born of the Corps diplomatic.

It was the Cardinal's idea, put forward, adopted, and considered. as its own by the government whose tendencies should have been most naturally opposed to this idea. Offered in private diplomatic circles in the form of an honorable transaction for all, it was not seriously opposed by no power. Prussia alone showed a few stirrings of opposition, which soon fell away before the loyal support of Emperor Alexander. "To From a religious point of view, he told Cardinal Consalvi, The Pope is the head of the largest Christian community. Look, that exists. From a political point of view, it's neutral. by right. If I had the honor of meeting him in a conference of Sovereigns, I would not want any other pre-President that the Holy Father; my ambassadors will do for "His nuncios, what I would be proud to do for him."

The right of precedence, the negotiation of which had been so skillfully arranged, was granted to all the apothecary Nuncios Stoics. They had the upper hand in all the courts, like This practice had been in place since time immemorial, and when the Cardinal Consalvi returned to Rome after such a journey triumphantly fruitful, the Pope, embracing it, could to apply to him these words from the Holy Scriptures: "The love— A faithful messenger is to the one who sent him what is to the the freshness of the snow during the harvest: it gives the May his master rest in peace.

The master relied on the servant; never served—
The author did not display so many fortunate faculties to render to the Roman Catholic Church the brilliance that the Revolution had striven for It was time to tarnish. The hour of repairs had struck for the Kings.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 483

as well as for the Peoples. With tireless perseverance—France, Consalvi is busy developing in the states of pont-public welfare. An enlightened amateur of beautiful things.
arts, full of courtesy and magnificence, he surrounded the Apostolic See of all the illustrious. He was the friend of Canova, Thorwaldsen and Gamuccini; the confidant and Niebuhr's volunteer censor, a historical diplomat;
the protector of the aging Cimarosa and Rossini at his dawn. In traversing all these ridiculous revolutions or odious, which followed one another in disbelief, Rome has saw the prestige of its name gradually diminish. Europe remained Catholic, but she no longer believes in the possibility of the kind of a Leo X.

Consalvi was delighted to crown the forehead of Pius VII of this last halo. The bronze and the marble further popularized the arts in this Athens of the Catholicism. Huge public works were undertaken and successfully completed. Splendid celebrations marked the pre-the presence of Emperors and Kings, coming, like the southe rulers of Austria and Prussia, to honor, in his capital tale, the Pontiff whose misfortunes were one of his glories of humanity.

Beautiful years passed amidst joys and tribulations inseparable from the Pontificate. France of the pre-
The First Consul had taken a decisive step towards Rome; France
The Bourbons did not remain behind in this demonstration.
Catholic tradition. The Concordat of 1801 was a first.
A sign of reconciliation; the Concordat of 1817 puts the seal to this great act which Bonaparte and Consalvi had laid the foundations. When the Count of Blacas was charged by King Louis XVIII to represent France at the Holy-
The Duke of Richelieu, President of the Council of the Middle Ages, was seated there.

484 BOOK II.

nisters, gave the new ambassador instructions
in which we notice the following passage:

"The ambassador will be careful not to make any mention of it." of the Concordat, and not to give the court any indication of Rome, where the Government is requesting his revocation. On this delicate point, it is necessary to be careful not to offend the sensibilities of Holy See, not to appear to have any fault to reproach him for, and spare him any appearance of contradiction. His The aim had undoubtedly been to save the de- break with Religion and the Church, and His Majesty appreciates as she should have been in the difficult position she was then in the Holy See; but she also sees that the provisions taken in such different, such stormy circumstances for the Church of France, no longer apply, in its position current tion, and what might be suitable for the Saving it from shipwreck would no longer be enough for its regeneration.

On this point, the Pope was of the same opinion as the Governor French government. The vows of the Priesthood and the Em- worse things were soon accomplished; but then the Revolution, who had humbly bowed his head before the Concordat in 1801, he boldly raised it opposite that of 1817. She saw monarchist and religious ideas to take on new momentum in France, Spain, and Italy and in Germany. These ideas, nurtured by a cruel ex- experience, were developing all over the world. The Re- Evolution took it upon itself to stop this movement of minds. Through the voice of some old Jansenists, like the former Oratorian Tabaraud, Count Grégoire, the a- lawyer Lanjuinais and the abbot of Pradt, she attacked this Con- cordat, which renewed that of Francis I and Leo X. The Revolution was stripped of its right to act arbitrarily; She used her freedom to win him back.

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 485

The end of this long and turbulent Pontificate was calm on the surface. Pius VII appeared happy with the happiness of others; but, in his personal humility- Born into a Benedictine monk, he never forgot that he was Pope. It was to Cardinal Consalvi that he delegated the task temporal to make him remember it. By his munificence and by the brilliance of his genius, the Cardinal, which the salons of the Eu- rope, nicknamed the Siren of Rome, was worthy of a similar external burden. He supported it by bringing together at- around the throne an elite of superior intellects who, from Gastiglioni to Bernetti, from Fontana to Lambruschini, from Capaccini to Mai, from Buttaoni to Barlolucci, became In turn, students and friends of Consalvi, the heirs of his fame and the continuators of his policies. Most They had the reputation, they all deserved it.

Pius VII had reigned for twenty-three years. He died,

August 20, 1823, full of days, riches, and honors
neurs.

The last words that had escaped his lips
Bonaparte's dying words had been: "Head... armed,"
as if, even in his agony, the warrior's thought was still wandering amidst the battlefields and had Everything for a victory. The final words that fell-from the mouth of the Pontiff were: "Savona and Fontai-Nebleau. Was this a final regret to atone for an act of weakness, or rather a sublime pardon granted in The arms of death to the persecutor by the persecuted? That's it.
the secret of Providence; but these two men, who,
from 1800 to 1815, they personified the struggle between the Revolution
The Church and the Church, obviously ended up like the Linia.
struggle itself.

Napoleon died in exile and full of faith; Pius VII paid tribute to

486 BOOK II.

God, His beautiful soul, praying for the enemies of the Siege
Roman, whose downfall he had witnessed and softened.

Five months later, on January 24, 1824, Cardinal Con-Salvi, who no longer governed, but who, in his retirement, fully enjoyed all the consideration attached to Power in office expires in turn. Like Saul and Jonathan, the father and the son, the Pope and his minister
They weren't even separated in death. At the Vatican, at Windsor, the Tuileries, Potsdam and the winter Calais |
In St. Petersburg, there were tears to honor the memory of... memory of him who, in the heart of the People, still lives on,
in Rome, the great Cardinal, because he was always the champion of the Church.

Life has only a few minutes to remember
of death, so quick is it to disappear itself;
Let's follow the course of events.

Part of France and returning there at indeterminate times mined, in order to replenish its strength in the native air, the
The revolution then spread around the world. During his reign, Emperor Napoleon crushed her beneath his sword; she finally raises his head. After attacking all the principals cipes, she feels the need to concentrate the war against the Church and to scatter it if necessary. This war, supported-naked by the same men, however, no longer proceeds by the same means. The Republic is nothing but a bad-
I am going to dream, the Empire an odyssey of immortal disasters;
But the Revolution remains standing, as if to offer a guaranteed to the interests and passions it aroused.

The Revolution was defeated by the Church, the Revolution
He turned his defeat into victory. This was the work, or rather the unforeseen crime of statesmen, moderates and conciliators men by profession. These statesmen, making a name for themselves and

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON. 487

The main advantage is not belonging to any firm opinion.
and devoting themselves to lucrative jobs under all regimes, resemble those lagoons between two rivers, which are not Neither land nor water, but simply quicksand.

Secret societies condescend to this need for povariety at all costs, the incurable disease of orators, of poets and ministers. They create factories of great citizens; they resemble constitutions; then, across all European markets, they proceed with the re-revolutionary mount. We will then see them open school of parliamentary hypocrisy and philosophical incredulity, and teach just anyone to interpret in his favor
His oath and the laws. Tacitus, who digs into evil, he had said: "In the past, these vices were vices, but
"The vices of the past are the morals of today."

The Revolution considers it an honor to confirm this judge-
She doesn't believe in magnanimity and in good feelings that only at the last minute and so forth
She said it out of desperation. She's playing the magistrate.
consciences; she declares herself the sworn arbiter of principles weights and morals. In order to lull them to sleep on a duty rulers and the ruled, it endows them with all the civic virtues are certainly lacking in all the talents.

The Revolution had lost fifteen years; it will...
We'll be back in an hour.

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

NOTE FOR PAGE 170

FROM THE FIRST VOLUME.

We have reproduced on this page an octave of the Gerusalemma conquistata; and, since the opportunity* presents itself, we
We will first allow ourselves an erratum. In the seventh verse, this

It is not manco that should be read, but moneo. This erratum ad-
Having said that, we feel we must provide an explanation about the octave.
of the Cup.

Admirers of the great poet of the Crusades all know the changes that, in the last years of his life, he made to submit to his works. In an edition of the Jerusalem Con-quistata, published in Venice, in-24, in 1627, this octave is found deferred to canto XXI. Tasso did not alter either of them.
meaning, neither thought, nor especially prophetic inspiration; nothingness less, he so obviously altered this curious passage that he
It is important to cite it, so as to leave no doubt in the spirits.

The 76th stanza, page 577 of the Venice edition, is thus designed:

La Franeaia, ador. a hor da Natura, and d'Arle, Squallida garlic hor vedrassi in man?o negro;
Ne d'empio oltraggio inviolata parte,
Do not loco dal feiror rimaso integro:
Vedova la Corona; cftl:tte e sparta
The suet fortune; e'l Regno oppre?so, el rgro,
E di stirpe real perco?so, e trunco
He is more beautiful; e fulminato il trunco.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CONTENTS

IN VOLUME ONE.

– «^5(

BOOK ONE.

PIUS VI AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Europe in 1775. – A portrait of that era. – Anarchy in people's minds.
before getting to the facts. – Voltaire and his century. – The Church and the Philosophy. – Means employed to overthrow the Roman Siege. – The Jansenism and its doctrines. – Its secret alliance with the Philosophers and The unbelievers. – The Jansenists, revolutionaries by instinct. – Their struggle against the Church and against thrones. – Impossible morality they preach to combat the common precepts of Religion. – Jesuits and Jansos-Nists. – Ecclesiastical Gallicanism and Secular Gallicanism. – Difference which exists between the Gallican clergy and the bar. – Origin of Gallicanism.

– Cardinal du Perron and Bossuet. – Louis XIV and Pope Alexander VIII.

– The parliaments make the maxims of the Gallican Church into a code of insurrection– Rection. – Jansenism in Holland creates Josephism in Austria.

Emperor Joseph II and his ecclesiastical reforms. – Portrait of this prince. – His tendencies and his goal. – Upheavals brought about in Germany Magne by the laws enacted against the freedom of the Church. – Election of Pius VI. – His portrait. – Situation of the Roman clergy. – Jubilee of 1775.

– The Pope's Journey to Vienna. – The Prince of Kaunitz. – The Revolutions of Brabant – The Emperor begs the Pope to intervene with the Catholics Belgians. – The Pope yields to his prayer. – Death of Joseph II. – Scipio Ricci, Bishop of Pistoia. – Synod of Pistoia and Italian lawyers. – Conference of Ems. – Pacca, nuncio to Cologne. – Pius VI and Louis XVI. – Causes of the French Revolution. – The National Assembly and the major Principles of 1789. – The Church facing the Revolution. – Mirabeau and his contemporaries. – The God of peace and social progress. – In what way
The people are being deceived through revolutionary means. – Thiers, Louis Blanc and Michelet. – Pitt and Burke. – Spoliation of the clergy. – The Jansenists and the Lawyers draft the Civil Constitution of the Clergy. – Examination of this constitution. – Camus and Abbé Grégoire. – Parallel between the cruelties of

I. 32

490 TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Inquisition and revolutionary tolerance. – Pius VI supporting Louis XVI and the French episcopate in their struggles. – Persecutions against the Church. –
A tableau of the Terror. – The kings of Europe and the Pope in the presence of The scaffold of January 21st. – Apathy on the part of some, courage on the part of others.
to propose to the Pope that he lead a crusade against the Revolution.

– The Directory and the Roman Catholic Church. – Bonaparte's first campaigns
In Italy. – The victorious general refuses to march against Rome. – Death by Duphot. – The Roman Republic is resurrected by the French Directory French. – The former Oratorian Daunou and the Calvinist Haller. – Pius VI, prisoner of the Revolution. – Triumphant journey of the captive through Italy and the France. – His death. – Situation in Rome under the Republic. – Pius VI will be the last pope. 1 to 226

BOOK IT

PIUS VII AND NAPOLEON.

The Sacred College, dispersed, is unable to reunite. – Alliance
of Russia, England, Austria and Turkey against the Re-
French public. – Souwarow's campaign in Italy – Conclave at Venice. – Manuscript of Cardinal Consalvi. – Election of Pius VII. – The Marquis Ghisleri, envoy from Austria. – His confidential mission to the
Pope. – Consalvi, Secretary of State. – Portrait of Pius VII. – His return to

Rome as told by Cardinal Consalvi. – Battle of Marengo. – Bonaparte understands that a return to religious principles is necessary. – His pre-First openings in Rome. – The Revolution retreats before the first Consul, and changes tactics. – First negotiations relating to the Concordat.

– The First Consul wants to deal directly in Paris with Cardinal Consalvi. – Bonaparte and Consalvi. – The Cardinal's account of these negotiations. – Signing of the Concordat. – The Constitutional Church formed into a club. – The policies of this party. – Its lies and doctrines. – Abbé Grégoire and the French Church. – The intruder Varnerey and teaching by the Saints Fathers. – The Pope, condemned to omnipotence, forces the French bishops to resign from their seats. – The French episcopate and Abbot Bernier. – If-Religious destruction in Europe at the time of the Concordat. – Joy of France Upon the reopening of the churches, Napoleon had himself proclaimed emperor. Negotiations with Rome for the coronation. – Pius VII in Paris. – Meeting of the Grand Sanhedrin. – He declares that the Jews have never been persecuted by Rome. – Napoleon and Pius VII. – The regicide Alquier, ambassador of France near the Holy See. – Alquier's maneuvers. – Address that the Pope addresses him. – Bonaparte seizes the Papal States. – Excommunication issued against the Emperor. – Pius VII prisoner. – The cardinals in Paris. – Interview between the Emperor and Cardinal Consalvi. – Account of the cardinal. – Bonaparte's marriage. – Red cardinals and black cardinals. – Exile of the black cardinals. – Consalvi at Reims. – The Council of Paris. – Protest of the council demanding the Pope's freedom. – Attitude of the French clergy in the face of Napoleon. – Etienne de Boulogne and François d'Aviau. – Pius VII in Savona. – The English want to abduct him. – Account by Cardinal Bernetti. – The Pope's translation to Fontainebleau.

CONTAINED IN VOLUME ONE. 491

Pius VII, isolated, signs the so-called Concordat of Fontainebleau. – Pacca, di Pietro and Consalvi. – Letter from Pius VII to Bonaparte. – Secret address from Pius VII to the cardinals. – Annulment of this Concordat. – Mr. Thiers and his History of the Consulate and the Fifth Empire. – Pius VII is released. Fall of the Empire. 3. – Return of the Pope to Rome. – The Pope and Monarchic reaction to Napoleon's captivity. – Restoration of the Church. – The Cardinal Consalvi in London. – The Prince Regent and Consalvi. – Consalvi at Congress of Vienna. – Death of Pius VI. – New attitude of the Revolution opposite the church. 227 to 487

END OF THE TABLE OF VOLUME 1.

L^e^J

>-^

&

You

- rn;.r

web-

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY

3 1197 21064 1053

-jh*. • -VV

French

English

Full text of " La Francmasonry, Synagogue De Satan Monsenhor Léon Meurin, 1893 "

See other formats

MEURIN

THERE
FREEMASONRY,

Synagogue
of Satan

THERE

FREEMASONRY

SATAN'S SYNAGOGUE

BY

Mr. Léon Meurin, SJ

ARCHBISHOP OF PORT LOUIS

I'm wondering what you suffer and how much you
You are poor; nevertheless, you are rich.
are enslaved by those who call themselves Jews, and do not
They are not: they are the Synagogue of Satan.
"Eradicate yourself from what you have to suffer."

(Apocalypse, ch. 11, v. 9.)

PARIS

VICTOR RETAUX AND SONS, BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

82, RUE BONAPARTE, 82
1893

Reproduction and translation rights reserved.

THERE

FREEMASONRY

SATAN'S SYNAGOGUE

PARIS

D. DUMOULIN PRINTING AND Cr

5, rue des Grands-Auguetins, 5

Page 44, line 3, read:

86, 181, 353,
357, 359.
364.

29,

ERRATA

a void.

and by the Grand Orator.
: triplicity,

The 7th Sephirah.

The 6th Sephirah

The Sephirah,

The 49th Sephirah.

TABLE

INTRODUCTION

1. The Masonic number thirty-three encountered in the an-ancient pagan religions ,
2. The number thirty-three in Freemasonry, . . . , ,
3. The number eleven in Jewish Kabbalah, , . . .
The number eleven in Masonic decorations...
5. Jewish Kabbalah, the dogmatic basis of Freemasonry.
6. Paganism incorporated into Jewish Kabbalah,
7. Satan in paganism. de ee to
8. The Jews in the fallen Order of the Templars ahu aenema er
9. Chain of hatreds and mysteries of Freemasonry

Pie en ae aeae a E e A h aee oa aaa 0

-EN EOC to

BOOK ONE

MASONIC DOGMATICS

CHAPTER ONE

THE KABBALISTIC ENSOPH THE MASONIC PRIMARY CAUSE

1. The dogmas of Freemasonry hidden in its decorations and its emblems. 4... 13
2. The Triangle and the Three Points, NE of the Great Architect of the Universe and Man, $ naaa - TE
3. The sacred books of the Jews and the knowledge of the holy Trinity Milé a anaE À.
4. The general tradition of the pagans and the primitive knowledge of the Holy Trinity. ,.. + « 17
5. The sacred books of the ancient Persians and the knowledge of the Holy Trinity... .. ss... + + 19
6. The infinite substance, neglected by the ancient Persians, . . . 24
7. The Infinite Being among ancient peoples, , ,.. 28

TABLE

8. The Ensoph of Jewish Kabbalah, the infinite essence, the First Cause of Freemasonry, « « « . « + + « « + . 2
9. Fraudulent Transition from Ensoph to the Kabbalistic Crown-

Modis ss yen nat ea wna de tms su 00

10. Fundamental error of all pantheism. 31

41. Purpose of pantheism. s.. + es... 34

42. True Idea of Infinity. a. ,,,,,. ,,,,,,..... 34%

n pros of the Kabbalistic Crown. 35

The doctrine of creation ex nihilo, the only reasonable and true... oe ua baha a to © a se 0 aao

45. The Kabbalistic error revived in the modern pandeo. 38

16. The Ensoph as Void or Absolute Nothingness, , , ,, 42

7. The Ensoph as the absolute fullness of being. 45

18. T'Ensoph in Masonic emblems. 46

CHAPTER 11

THE UPPER SEPHIROTH

AND THE HOLY TRINITY

4. Emanation of the ten Sephiroth... 48

2. The ten Sephiroth in the Magonian settings. 52

3. Anomalies in the Higher Sephiroth... 53

4. The truth about the Holy Trinity 54

5. The Great Architect of the Universe... . 57

6. The Great Architect of the Universe, who is other than the Creator of the sky and light. sewers aaaa 08

CHAPTER 11

THE MALKHUTII KETHER, THE CROWN OF THE KINGDOM

4. Origin of the Sephiroth Couroxxe and Rovauue , , , , . , . 64%

2. Political application of Kethee-Malkuth, . , . .. , 65

CHAPTER IV

THE LOWER SEPHIROTITES AND THE SEVEN ANGELS

4. The Seven Ameschaspentas, or Archangels of the Persians. 69

2. The Archangel Ahura Mazda and the Kabbalistic Crown, . , . 70

3. A Revolution in the Kabbalistic Heaven and the Fall of the Angels, 74

4. The seven Sephiroth in Masonic decorations, , 72

5. The Seven Angels in Holy Scripture. . . . Sté « y! 2

6. The Seven Augers and the Number Eleven in Brahminism... 74

TABLE

- 7. The number Eleven and the seven Angels in Buddhism, . 75
- 8. The number Eleven and the seven Angels among the Assyro-Babylo-
DiS 5 to to to 8 to 6th ne & & 8 6th res aeeesss 78

CHAPTER V

THE FOUR WORLDS OF THE KABBALAH

- 4. The world of emanations, . . . ss . . . - enso ss 29
- 2. The world of creation. , RE 80
- 3. The world of training, . . e... . . . su se M
- &. The world of manufacturing.. . . asas 82
- 5. The four worlds in Masonic settings... . . . 84

CHAPTER VI

EARTH MAN

- 4. The Kabbalistic Ilomme, an emanation of the Sephiroth... 85
- 2. Deification of man in Freemasonry 86
- 3. Appreciation of the deification of man . . . , 86
- &. Practical and political purpose of Kabbalah.. , 89
- 5. The Jew, the Man par excellence, p. . . , 90

CHAPTER VI

PSYCHOLOGICAL ORIGIN OF KABBALAH

- 4. The best possible world... : + 91
- 2. The best possible creatures and their downfall. , 93
- 3. The true God-Man, archetype of deified men., , , , 94
- 4. God's true chosen people.,....., 95
- 5. The Jewish idea of God's chosen people... 96
- 6. Naturalization by the Jews of the chosen man and people of

Said; "o to 5 Ge to nm to sue mn ee esse W

- 7. The idea of man and the chosen people in Freemasonry. 101

CHAPTER VII

HERMES TRISMEGISTUS AND THE JEWISH KABBALAH

1. Jewish Origin of Hermetic Philosophy, , 103
2. Hermetic Unity and the Kabbalistic Ensoph. 104
3. The number Eleven and the primordial Man of Hermetic philosophy
- leagues at 5th 2nd under dis sé same ge 00 = 105
- h. Appreciation of the philosophy of Hermes Trismegistus. . . . 106

TABLE

5. Hermeticism and Freemasonry 406
6. The occult author of the Hermetic doctrine. o% s » 407
7. The deification of man, the avowed goal of Hermetic Gnosis. 410

CHAPTER IX

Gnosticism and Jewish Kabbalah

4. The numbers Eleven and Thirty-three in the Gnosticism. . . . 112
2. The Gnostic Bythos and the Knbbalistic Husoph. , . 112
3. The Gnostic Nous and the Kabbalistic Kether... 143
- &. Gnosticism and the Holy Trinity, a... . 114
5. The revolution in the Gnostic heaven. 115
6. The Kabbalistic Khokhma and the Gnostic Akhamoth 117
7. The Architect of the Universe in Gnosticism 4118
8. Gnosticism in Masonic Emblems, , 121
9. Purpose of Gnosticism. asoa « 122

CHAPTER X

THE OPJIIITES AND THE JEWISH KABBALAH

1. Jewish origin of the Ophites sect. . , . , . « 123
2. The number Thirty-Three in the doctrine of the Ophites... 124
3. The demonolatry of the Ophiles in Freemasonry... 128
- h. Assessment of the ophist-Masonic doctrines.. . . . 132

CHAPTER XI

MANICHEISM AND JEWISH KABBALAH

1. Jewish origin of Manichaeism. The number Eleven. . , , . . 134
2. The five celestial regions of the Manicheans and the Blazing Star

Freemasons, es, o... netaa 197
3. Ormazd and Ahriman of the Persians, the Brazen Serpent and Adonai Freemasons, ss sses occoron enone. 141

4. The Virgin of Light of the Manicheans and the marriage of the Franks Masons, sea names + a 146

5. Latest developments in Kabbalistic sects. 150

6. The Jew in all Kabbulistic sects. . , , . e . . 154

TABLE

BOOK It

THE KNIGHTS OF THE KABBALISTIC JEWS

CHAPTER ONE

THE FALLEN TEMPLARS

1. The Kilwinning Lodge and Kabbalistic Zero, 161

2. The Baphomet of the Templars and the Freemasons... 162

3. The Guilt of the Templars sers sssex: es 107

#. The Knights Templar and the Masonic Kadosh... , 170

CHAPTER II

THE OTHER MASONIC KNIGHTS

4. The Knights Hospitaller of Saint John of Jerusalem, Rhodes

CE Malle. ss to a of of this ms Se 8 © ee to of this 174

2. The Knights of the East or of the Sword, and the Princes of Jerusalem

SAM to E of de ne to E dés ra ue mue o 2175

9; The Knights of the East and West. . sss , . .« . . 176

4. The Elected Knights of the Nine, the Fifteen, and the Sublime Knights-bind Elected. «eee eee ee + « « 177

5. The Knights of the Rosy Cross, , 178

6. The Prussian Knights or the Nuachites, , , . e... . 182

BOOK It

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

4. Jews teaching in Freemasonry. 182

2. The Jews led Freemasonry. , . . . « . , . .	184
3. Type of laws either against or for the Jews	186
4. The Maccabees, the last true Jewish Knights,	187
5. The Jews fallen through deicide.	188
6. Freemasons working for fallen Jews,	489
7. Corruption of the idea of the Messiah by the Jews.	192
8. Influence of Jews in Masonic Lodges	194
9. Complaints of Freemasons regarding Jewish preponderance in the Lodges... sus. es. ee +	197
10. The Presidents of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree, not the real ones Chefs... sue ee n'a .	203
The so-called Holy Trinity, the true unknown Leaders...	204

TABLE

42. Residence of the Unknown Leaders of the Jews and Freemasons pearl, to to ee » #6 6 0 0 to © se + eocena +	206
13. Residence of the Supreme Chiefs of Freemasonry...	209

BOOK IV

LUCIFER IN FREEMAKING

1. The Kabbalah, the main source of black magic, . , . . .	211
2. The Kabbalah leading Freemasons to demonolatry, 213
3. Appearances of Satan in the Lodges +	218
4. Jewish Kabbalah and Modern Spiritism. ,	227

BOOK V

THE LEGEND'S MEANING IS TENFOLDED

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS

4. The multitude of veils used to conceal the true mystery of the freemasonry e. 4th century...	231
2. Symbolic form of the Masonic legend, ,	233
3. Historical truth about the Masonic narrative. . . . ,	248
4. Physical interpretation of the Mavonic novel,	250
5. Ethical value of the story of Hiram secs o	255
6. Templar meaning of the tragedy of Hiram	256

7. Political importance of the Masonic tale. , . . , ,	257
8. Jewish Significance of the Drama of Adoniram,	260
9. Philosophical concept of the Masonic fable. . . . , . .	263
10. Theological meaning of the story of Eblis and Hiram.	264
11. Kabbalistic Idea of the Masonic Myth	266
12. Diabolical Explanation of the Masonic Parable	271
13. The Two Standards	276

BOOK VI

INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

OF THE ANCIENT SCOTTISH RITUAL ACCEPTED

CHAPTER ONE

DIVISION OF 33 DEGREES INTO THREE ELEVENs

1. The feigned divisions of the 33 degrees., . . a. . . . ,. «e	279
2. The true division of the 33 degrees into three eleven's,	284

TABLE

CHAPTER II

INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES

FIRST ELEVEN

4. The 10th Sephirah. The Kingdom. – The Apprentice,	290
2. The 9th Sephirah. The Foundation. – The Companion. , . .	301
3. The 8th Sephirah. Glory. – The Master.	303
á. The 70th Sephirah. Strength. – The Master seeret, . . . , . .	309
5. The 69th Sephirah. Beauty, – The Master has appeared,	318
6. The 5th Sephirah. Mercy. – The Intimate Secretary, . .	318
7. The 4th Sephirah. Justice – The Provost and Judge.	321
8. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. – The Superintendent of Buildings.	323
9. The 2nd Sephirah. Wisdom. – The Chosen Master of the Nine. . .	328
10. The 1st Sephirah. The Crown. – The Illustrious Chosen One of the Fifteen.	332
11. The Ensoph. – The Illustrious Knight Elect	335

SECOND FORTUNE

12. The 10th Sephirah. The Kingdom.—The Great Master Architect. 339
13. The 9th Sephirot, Za Base.— The Royal Ark, , . . . , . 342
14. The 8th Sephirah. Glory, — The Great Scotsman of the Vault
BCEG; to tow es to on te #6 to 6 to ve. — J47
15. The 7th Sephirah, The Force.— lc Chavaliord' Ortentundel ipic: 353
16. The 6th Sephirah. Beauty. — The Jerusalem Prayer. . . 357
17. The 5th Sephirah. Ze Mercy. — The Knight of the East and of the West, TERTE sereen + + 359
18. The 4th Sephirah, Justice. — The Rosicrucian. , . 364
49. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. — The High Priest of the Jerusalem celestial ltm. ss se se ae ss = +» 069 20. The 2nd Sephirah. Wisdom. — The Great Patriarch, Venerable ad vilam... sg Ste at 5 sg sa so... 373
21. The 1st Sephirah. I, a Erurunse, — The Prussian Knight Noa-
CMe sa ds ee de à à 6 8 y 5 6 0 à ss ss + « 375
22. The Ensoph. — The Prince of Lebanon, Royal Axe. 37:
THIRD ELITE
23. The 10th Sephirah. The Kingdom. — The Head of the Tabernacle, . 384
24. The 9th Sephirah. The Base. — The Prince of Tabernacles . . . 383
25. The 8th Sephirah. Za Glory. — The Knight of the Serpeni of Ai-rain, es ee ee siwa . e... 387
26. The 7th Sephirah. Strength. The finance of Kiasi . . . « . 391
27. The 6th Sephirah. Beauty. — The Sovereign Commander of the Temple. . . , . . . és see te eus... o 395
28. The 5th Sephirah. Visericord. —The Knight of the Sun, Prince Follower s to s to ne to to his to 6th sn ne vs ss « this 397

TABLE

29. The 4th Sephirah. Za Justice. — The Great Scotsman of Saint-André... ss. ses. sus ess... 400
30. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. — The Kadosh or Great Chosen One Chevalier Kadosh. , , , , , 403
81. The 2nd Sephirah. Wisdom,— The Inquisitor, Inspector, Commander two... ss. eus re ms s sx se 40
32. The First Sephirah. The Crown.— The Prince of the Royal Secret. 417
33. The Ensoph. — The Sovereign Grand Inspector General, . , 432

CHAPTER HI

SUMMARY AND COMPLETE INTERPRETATION

OF THE 33 DEGNÉS

4. Official philosophical interpretation The a. 442
2. Official political and religious interpretation... hhh
8. Jewish Interpretation. . e . . . , 445

h. Luciferian interpretation, . . a.. 347

CHAPTER IV

Freemasonry: A Religious Sect

4. The religious dogmas of that Seele., . : , , , « . , . 150
2. The First Three Sacraments of the Sect... a. , , , . . 150
3. The four other Sacraments and the Sacrifice of the World. 453
- &. The Tabernacle of the Synagogue of Satan has... 455
5. The Masonic Hierarchy and its Pope 456

CHAPTER V

Freemasonry: A Political State. 460

CONCLUSION

4. The Synagogue of Satan in Universal History, 462
2. Governments, s. ss os osa , , , . . A64
- D Los AaS a dd de à eu Due à a E dm 4 m4 ue ©.. 465
- k. The Protestants. o. o..., . . , . . . + ". 466
5. The Catholics. Es A Ve de A Br ce de D à 467
6. The Sovereign Pontile.. lua aeaa. 469
- Addition...,....., dE © Me He to ee to of the AJI
- Plates . ., 4... 4... .., e... 173

Alphabetical index, . . snau, TEETER 535

FREEMASONRY

SATAN'S SYNAGOGUE

"All our Masonic sisters are impenetrable—cleverly hidden beneath symbols, " (Official 33rd degree ensign.)

INTRODUCTION

4. The Masonic number thirty-three encountered in the ancient pagan religions,

The degrees of Freemasonry are, everyone
He knows, there are thirty-three of them.

However, by studying the Vedas of the Indians, we have encountered the following text:

"O Gods, who are eleven in number in heaven;
who are eleven in number on the earth, and who, in eleven, dwell gloriously in the midst of the air,
May our sacrifice be pleasing to you.

The Atharva-Veda teaches that thirty-three spirits
(trayas-trinschad devah) are contained in Prajapati (Brahme) as its members.

The Zend-Avesta, sacred book of the ancient Persians, con-holds the following piece:

"May the three Amschaspands (Archangels) and
"May Ormazd be victorious and pure!"

We read similarly in Yaçna I, v. 33: "J'in-quickly, and I honor all the lords of purity: the thirty-three closer around Havani (the East),

1. Rig-Veda, Adhyaya, u. Anuvaka, xx. Sukta, 1v, v. 11,
2. Kordah-Avesta, in.

2 INTRODUCTION

the purest ones, whom Ahura-Mazda (Ormazd) instructed and that Zarathustra (Zoroaster) foretold.

This mysterious number thirty-three, which we do not
We could find no explanation anywhere, we seemedblait indicated among the mysteries of pagan antiquity and Freemasonry, a connection that deserved to be studied, and even promised the discovery of the most hidden secrets of this shadowy society.

We were not mistaken.

2. The number thirty-three in Freemasonry,

The first eleven degrees of Freemasonry,
As we will see later, they are intended to transform
The Profane as a true Man, in the Masonic sense;

the second series, from the 12th to the 22nd degree, must devote the Jewish Pontiff; and the third series, from the 23rd to 33rd degree, must constitute the Pontiff, Jewish King or Emperor-Kabbalistic dreamer.

The secret leaders of Freemasonry, the Jews, were very circumspect in the gradual revelation of the organization of their secret society.

To give an example, we will cite France, which, in 1722, only knew the first three degrees, in which, let's say it right away, there is however a tale—The entire Masonic doctrine was already present in embryonic form. In 1738, They dared to double this number; in 1758, it was increased to two times eleven, plus the first three degrees of the third series of eleven, that is to say, in total, twenty-five degrees. The last eight degrees that were still missing from The perfect system was only added in 1802. after the shadowy work of the lodges had brought the fruits on which we had counted, having made cou—to lay down human blood in torrents.

Paul Rosen, formerly a Freemason of the 33rd and last degree, gives the description of the opening of the sessions of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree. He said:

INTRODUCTION 3

"A Supreme Council must be composed of nine Sovereign Grand Inspectors General at least, and Thirty-three at most. Nine, because that number, being the last of the simple numbers, indicates the end of all things; thirty-three, because it's in Charleston, at 33° north latitude, that the first Supreme Council was formed on May 31, 1801, under the presidency of Isaac Long, appointed Inspector General by Moses Cohen, who held his rank from Spitzer, Hayes, Franken and Morin. The latter held it since August 27, 1762. of the Prince of Rohan and nine other Freemasons of the Rite of Perfection, who had charged him with establishing in all the parts of the world the Powerful and Sublime Mason-Nonsense.

Masonic authorities, such as Findel? and Clavel, declare that the Jew Morin only had a patent for the establishment of twenty-five degrees, and that the publication of the last eight degrees does not go back beyond 1801. This is said to confuse overly Curious: the Masonic system absolutely requires thirty-three degrees.

In the Master's Catechism, according to the French Rite—
In this case, we read: "The General Assembly, meeting annually in session and invested with legislative power Latif establishes the law that governs us and regulates interests commons of the institution. In his absence, a commission—sion, designated by the name of the Council of the Order, com—

1. Satan and Co. Tournai, 1888, p. 219.

2. Geschichte der Freimaurerei. Leipzig, 1870, p. 847: Die Ordens—Lüge des schottischen Ritas der 33 Grade. History of Freemasonry nerie: The Lie of the Order regarding the Scottish Rite of 33 degrees.

3. Picturesque History of Freemasonry, 3rd ed., 1844, p. 400.

4. Léo Taxil, The Three-Point Brothers. 2 vols., p. 126.

4 INTRODUCTION

composed of thirty-three members elected by the Assembly
"Generally, it manages day-to-day affairs."

The mysteries of Freemasonry are, for the most of them, hidden beneath legends, emblems, and decorations, sacred words, etc...

The "Dark Room", through which the must pass recipient of the Rose-Croix degree, is enlightened by thirty-three lights, carried on three candlesticks at Eleven branches!

The Rite of Misraïim (from Egypt) has 33 degrees symbolic, 33 philosophical degrees, 11 mystical degrees ticks and 13 Kabbalistic degrees.

For the moment, it suffices to observe, in this rite, the repetition of the number 33, the number 11, etc., which leads us further into the mysteries, the profession openness of Jewish Kabbalah.

3. The number eleven in Jewish Kabbalah.

With the Kabbalah having been mentioned, our attention has focused on this philosophical doctrine of the heterodox Jews rhodoxes.

There, we again encountered the number eleven, and With him lies the key to Masonic mysteries. It suffices for us. for the moment to note that the Ensoph (the Infinite) is the source of which, according to the doctrine of the Kabbalah, from eternity to eternity, stems all that has existed, exiles, and will exist. From it emanate, first of all in this place, a Triad: the Crown, Wisdom, and Intelli- agency, called the higher Sephiroth (numbers), and Secondly, seven other Sephiroth who, with the three higher, constitute Primordial Man (Adam) Kadmon). The Ensoph and the ten Sephiroth compose

1. Léo Taxil, The Mysteries of Freemasonry, p. 279.

INTRODUCTION 9

"In the sky" the famous number eleven which repeats itself in the realm of spirits, "in the midst of the air," thus than in the material world, "on earth", completing thus the number thirty-three.

Kabbalists place great importance on numbers, especially... all to that of eleven. A fragment inserted in the Zohar (Light), their main book, is titled Zdra raba, that is to say the Great Assembly, because it contains the speeches addressed by Simon-ben-Jochai to all his disciples ciples, gathered ten in number; the master representing Thus the Ensoph is in the midst of the ten Sephiroth!

4. The number eleven in Masonic decorations.

To make sure we had entered the the true path that leads to the most intimate mysteries of Freemasonry, we only needed to discover in the Masonic decorations of the Ensoph with the ten Sephiroth, the Crown at their head.

In the "Great Constitutions" of the Scottish Rite, Article 66 contains the description of the decoration at which members of the Grand Lodge Cen- are entitled to traile:

"They wear a wide, white moiré cord across their necks." ten to eleven centimeters long, adorned with a five-centimeter gold cord millimeters on each side; on the tip is a rosette of scarlet color. A jewel is suspended from this cord.

formed of three interlaced triangles, surmounted by a crown. This piece of jewelry is made of gold or gold-plated material.

The three interlaced triangles represent the nine Sephiroth emanating from the Crown, which surmounts him and completes the number ten.

The white cord, ten centimeters wide, represents

1. Franck, Kabbalah, p. 126, note.

6 INTRODUCTION

the same ten Sephiroth. It is said: ten to eleven centimeters. to have something to tie the edge.

The gold border, half a centimeter on each side, completes the number eleven centimeters; it represents the Ensoph (the Infinite) which embraces all of creation, or, to speak more correctly, the entire emanation by which he revealed himself to be.

The rosette on the tip of the cord represents the thought, or rather the fruitful action of the Infinite, by which He revealed himself in the universe.

The cord worn by the "Masters", 3rd degree, is blue. moiré, eleven centimeters wide; that of the "Masters "Secrets," 4th degree, is also blue, but edged in black. and eleven centimeters wide.

The difference in colors at 4° and 33° degrees indicates Another idea: it is only at the 33rd degree that one arrives at to obtain what, in the 4th degree, we still mourn as lost.

At the 29th degree, there are 7 signs, 3 instances of touching and 1 general touch, signifying the 7 Sephiroth lower, the 3 upper and the Ensoph. Eleven in total.

The Chamber of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree ecos- The church is illuminated by eleven lights: a five-light candelabra branches in the east, another with three branches in the west tooth, a third with a branch to the north and a quadriem with two branches in the south. Besides the number mystick of eleven, there we will find the date of the year 5312 (era Jewish) or 1312 (Christian era), the year of the abolition of the Order of the Templars.

The battery of the same 33rd degree is made by eleven strokes:

first 5, then 3, 1 ct 2; which means the same things that the eleven lights.

In these two symbols, the lights and the battery, we see brought together the three fundamental mysteries of Freemasonry:

INTRODUCTION 7

1. The mystery of the fallen Order of the Templars, which hidden behind the lower ranks of the secret society: Here is the year 1312, crying out for vengeance;

2. The mystery of the fallen Synagogue, which is hiding behind the secret society of Freemasonry in-
Title: This is the Jewish era;

3. The mystery of the fallen angel, who is hiding behind the ten Sephiroth, that is to say the divine Trinity and "the seven angels who are always before the throne of God: That's the number eleven.

Three hatreds conspired against the Lord and his Christ!

5. Jewish Kabbalah, the dogmatic basis of Freemasonry.

The information cited was sufficient for us to consider as just our hypothesis that the Jewish Kabbalah is the philosophical basis and the key to Freemasonry-nonsense.

This discovery inspired the idea for this essay.
Will it serve to open the eyes of these thousands of francs? non-Jewish masons who do not see the slavery to which The Pharisees, the Jews of the Kabbalah, have reduced them, and in which they hold them captive by mys-secrets that they don't reveal to them even to the 33rd degree?

Will we find there the subjugation of Christian peoples? hold and their political authorities under the domination Jews?

6. Paganism incorporated into Jewish Kabbalah.

This is not the Orthodox synagogue, nor the true doc-

the trine of Moses, inspired by God himself, which the Kab-Modern ballistae represent; it is paganism of which some sectarian Jews were imbued, during the

4. Revelation, ch. 1, v. 4. – Tobit, ch, xit, v. 15.

8 INTRODUCTION

Babylonian captivity. One only has to study the doctrine of Jewish Kabbalah and to compare it with the doctrines philosophical ideas of the most ancient civilized peoples, In-Greeks, Persians, Babylonians, Assyrians, Egyptians, Greeks and others, to ensure that everywhere it is taught the same pantheistic system of emanation: Everywhere
we find a certain eternal principle from which emanate a first triad, and, after it, the whole universe, no not by creation, but by substantial emanation.

We are forced to admit it, between Kabbalah philosophy
Ballistics and ancient paganism, there is a connection intimate, which is difficult to explain in any other way that by the inspiration of the same author, that is to say of the enemy of humankind, the Spirit of Lies.

7. Satan in paganism,

In the course of this short essay we will highlight the skill with which this inspirer of the ancients pagan doctrines succeeded in separating, firstly, the idea of the three divine persons, known in antiquity with varying degrees of precision, from the idea of their subs-common and inseparable stance, by representing them
as if emanating from a more or less distant past,
of this common essence; and then, to introduce itself himself in the Trinity, by supplanting either the pre-first, that is, the third person, in order to obtain, from a
In one way or another, on the part of men, the adolescent-divine ration which he sought by saying:

“I will ascend to heaven, I will establish my throne above-above the stars of God; I will sit upon the mountain of the alliance alongside the north wind, I will place myself at-above the highest clouds, and I will be like to the Most High.

1. Isaiah, 14, v. 13.

INTRODUCTION 9

That's where we discover the poisoned source of the errors and supernatural hatreds that fill the ancient and modern paganism, as well as the soul of the Jew of the Kabbalah and the follower of Freemasonry, an indescribable rage against God and against everyone those who believe in God.

8. The Jews in the fallen Order of the Templars,

Usurper of divine honors, in giving as one of the persons of the Holy Trinity, the Prince Darkness has managed to hide itself within ancient mysteries. pagans, based on the pantheistic error. Through them he leads man to unheard-of debauchery and to a scene Lératesse, not backing down from the appalling attack of to dethrone divine majesty.

This evil spirit has managed to penetrate pagan dens, with its criminal doctrine, in the spirit of a certain class of the Jewish people held captive in Babylon. Lifford with its new followers, known for their tenacity extraordinary in their race, he was able to move the world. and he stirs it again. If the Pharisees did not hesitate to crucify Christ, they will also not hesitate to per- to protect Christians whose spiritual faith is opposed to direct sition with their temporal expectations.

Let us pass over in silence the times of the Gnostics and the great persecutions of the early centuries, in the- which Jews play as important a role as o- gods, and let us stop in the Middle Ages.

The Templars were corrupted in Palestine. In In their secret meetings, they renounced Christ, and – This is always the consequence – they indulged in the debauchery.

We no longer need to prove here what the Deschamps, The Pachtlers and so many others have perfectly established on

10 INTRODUCTION

Irrefutable evidence. The fallen Order of the Templars, firstly through its doctrines and practices, secondly through the remains of its scattered members, served as a point starting point for what is now called Freemasonry bullshit.

The 30th degree, the rank of Knight Templar, is, in union with the 18th degree, the Rose-Croix grade, the es- the very essence of Freemasonry. The other degrees they only serve to prepare them and hide them from view "profane" and inept and unworthy brothers trust.

9. Chain of hatreds and mysteries of the Freemason.

The points indicated should serve as an introduction. tion to this short treatise, to show at first glance to reader the chain of mysterious hatreds con- centered in Freemasonry for the continuation and the fulfillment of the work of the Antichrist: "for the mystery of iniquity is already at work".

If we have managed to put our finger on the worm- leader of humanity, men more competent than we may hasten to follow us completely They will reveal what we can only touch upon.

Once completed, our work would become, all at once, a book of universal history, a treatise on theology and philosophy, and an exhibition on black magic.

Let us search, and we will find in history, the Freemasonry; in Freemasonry, the Order fallen from the Templars; in both sets, the Syna- Kabbalistic gogue; in all three sets, the an- ancient pagan mysteries, and finally, in all of this, Satan himself- even.

4. Thessalonians, chapter 11, verse 7.

INTRODUCTION 11

The fallen angel seduced the ancient peoples with his false doctrines; paganism seduced the Jew hypocritical and obstinate; the Jew has seduced and corrupted the Gold- religious leader of the Templars, and still deceives today today the great credulous mass of Freemasons.

Having seized the treasures and civil power of this world, the Jew wages a fierce, merciless war and without respite, to the Church of Jesus Christ and to all those who refuse to bend the knee before him and his calf gold.

To encircle the Jew's brow with the royal diadem and put Beneath his feet lies the kingdom of the world, that is the true goal of Freemasonry.

We cling to the hope of bringing back by this work some of the misguided minds, but we we have no hope of persuading the generation perverse that hides beneath the thirty-three folds of secrets Masonic, and even beyond; for that one could not She was convinced by reason; she never gave in. than due to force majeure. It will probably be rejected. by an uprising due to popular exasperation, or perhaps through the defection and disgust of those themselves that she managed to subjugate and enslave through illicit oaths, which are still quite common today superstitious to believe honest and valid.

The current power of the leaders of Freemasonry seems to be coming to an end; but it will not end without a An absolutely unprecedented tragedy.

"Unmask Freemasonry," said Leo XIII, "That is to defeat her." Having been laid bare, every upright mind and Every honest heart will detach itself from it, and by that very fact She will fall, annihilated and reviled.

BOOK ONE

MASONIC DOGMATICS

CHAPTER ONE.

THE KABBALISTIC ENSOPH

THE MASONIC PRIMARY CAUSE

1. The dogmas of Freemasonry hidden within its trappings and its emblems.

The dogmas of Freemasonry are those of the Kabbalah. Jewish bale, and in particular, from the Zohar book.

This fact is not acknowledged in any Masonic document. This is one of the great secrets that the Jews have managed to keep for themselves. We discovered it by tracing the number eleven.

"To formally prohibit knowledge of his mysteries to the common people, the teaching of Masonic doctrine—nique is veiled, in each of its thirty-three degrees, under three sets and seven conventional emblems, » which are derived from the invisible supreme authority of Freemasonry nonsense, like the three higher Sephiroth and the seven lower ones emanate from the inscrutable Ensoph of the Kabbalah.

"The sets are:"

"1° The Apron; 2° the Cord, and 3° the Jewel.

"The conventional emblems are:"

"4° The Battery; 5° The Order; 6° The Sign; 7° The Password; 8° The Touch; 9° The Sacred Word, and 10° The Masonic Age; to which is added, in several grades, the March to enter the workshop.

It is here, then, that we will discover the fundamental dogmas

4. Paul Rosen, Satan and Co., p. 248.

14 MASONIC DOGMATICS

mental concepts of the great Jewish Kabbalah incorporated into the Freemasonry,

2. The Triangle and the Three Points, symbols of the Great Architect of the universe and of man,

Of all Masonic emblems, the most salient is the Triangle, either in lines or in points.

According to Kabbalistic Freemasonry, the equilateral triangle is an emblem of the infinite and eternal Trinity of which man is a finite and temporal emanation.

Since a line contains an infinite number of points, this that one point is on a line, three points in the shape of a triangle the sound is a triangle.

The three points represent a limited and individual form. dual of Infinite Being which is represented by the triangle in lines.

The dots that Freemasons add to their names are a profession of faith; they express their belief by this means to the fundamental dogma, and, let's face it, a fundamentally flawed one, of their Order, that man is an individual emanation of the divinity, and therefore, divine itself: implicitly they They are guilty of an audacious deification of man.

The famous triangular hat of the revolutionaries of 1789, adopted by Napoleon, might it not be an indication of This doctrine? We know it, even today, in Pargot In Freemasonry, the hat is called a triangle.

The triangle first raises the question of whether the error of the pagan gods, repeated in Freemasonry Nonsense, does not presuppose knowledge of the true Tri-divine unity, including pagan trinities and the Kabbalistic trinity-ticks would only be counterfeit.

3. The sacred books of the Jews and their knowledge of the Holy Trinity.

The oldest of all the books, the Pentateuch of Moses gives striking indications that the trinity of persons sonnes en Dieu was known from the earliest times.

Masonic Dogmatics 45

Indeed, we read in Genesis that before creating God said to man, "Let us make man in our image and resemblance; and that after the fall of Adam and Eve, God He also said: "Behold, Adam has become like one of us."

It is impossible to suppose that, in speaking thus, God used the majestic plural in the manner of princes; for although the second and third person sc They are sometimes honorifically referred to in the plural, Never, in all of antiquity, did a person speak of it She herself did not use the plural. Similarly, one cannot to suppose that God, speaking in the plural, addressed himself to the angels; for man was not created in the image and likeness of the angels. resemblance of angels. It therefore remains that the only conclusion, that by speaking thus, Dieu wanted to reveal the plurality the equality of people in his divinity.

The eighteenth chapter of Genesis recounts that: "the Lord appeared one day to Abraham in the valley of Mambré. Abraham looked up, and three men appeared. near him... And he prostrated himself on the ground and said: Lord, If I have found favor in your eyes, do not pass the house of your servant." Meditating on these words, Saint Augustine exclaimed: "He saw three of them, and didn't name them!" Lords (plural), but Lord (singular); because that the Trinity is indeed composed of three persons, but there is no that there is only one Lord God.

Let us add to this testimony the beautiful words of Bossuet which lucidly highlight the divinity of Wisdom so much praised by Solomon, and of the Spirit of God by which the Prophets have spoken. In the Gospel mystery that... teaches that God is one and indivisible, and all at once Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, "there," said the Eagle of Meaux, "we are offered the incomprehensible depths of Being divine, the ineffable grandeur of its unity and riches infinite of this nature, even more fertile within outside, capable of communicating with each other, without division,

4. Contra Maximum, Ill, this. xxvi.

16: Masonic Dogmatics

to three equal people. That explains the mysteries. which were wrapped and as if sealed in the old Scriptures. We hear the secret of this word: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and the Trinity, marked in the the creation of man, this is expressly declared in its regeneration (through baptism in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit). We learn what this is. Wisdom conceived, according to Solomon, "before all times, "in the bosom of Wisdom", Wisdom that makes all its deeds, and by whom all his works are ordered. We know "That it was she whom David saw conceived before the dawn?" "And the New Testament teaches us that it is the Verb (Hebrew: Memra), the inner speech of Wisdom, the eternal thought, which is always within him, and by whom Everything has been done.

"Thus we answer the mysterious question which is proposed in Proverbs: "Tell me the name of the Father, and I will tell you the name of his Son, if you know it."

"For we know that this name of God, so mysterious and so hidden is the name of the Father, understood in this profound sense.

who causes him to be conceived in eternity; Father of a Son equal to Him; and that the name of his Son is the name of the Word, the Word that he eternally engenders by contemplating himself, which is the perfect expression of His truth, His image, His Son unique, the brilliance of its clarity and the imprint of its substance.

"With the Father and the Son, we also know the Holy Spirit, love for one and for the other, and their eternal union. It is this Spirit who makes the prophets, and who is in to reveal to them God's guidance and the signs of the future; Spirit of whom it is written: The Lord sent me and his Spirit', which is distinct from the Seilord, and who is also the Lord himself, since he en-

4. Prov., seen, 22,
2. Ps. «1x, 3.

8. Prov., xxx, 4.
4. llebr., 1, 3.

5. Isaiah, 18:16.

Masonic Dogmatics 47

see the prophets, and let him reveal to them future things.

"This Spirit who speaks to the prophets and who speaks through the prophets, is united to the Father and the Son, and intervenes with them in the consecration of the new man. Thus the Father, the Son and Holy Spirit, one God in three persons, shown more obscurely to our Fathers, is clearly revealed in the New Alliance.

"Having learned of such a profound mystery, and astonished by its profound incomprehensible foundry, we cover our front face God with the Seraphim whom Isaiah saw, and we worship with "Them, the One who is thrice holy."

The texts of the Old Testament so eloquently explain quasted by Bossuet, as, moreover, by the unanimity of Theologians prove that the mystery of the Holy Trinity was known to the Israelites, not in a distinct way and clear, we admit, but still sufficiently intelligible to elevated minds.

Those who are versed in the most ancient books of Jews know that very frequently one finds the mention there of the three who are called Jehovah, Memra or Shekhinah (Word or habitation of God) and Auakh hakkadosch or Esch (Holy Spirit or Fire)?

They are called the three members, three degrees, three subsistence, three sides, three endings, three persons. These writers say that Memra or Shekhinah emanates from Jehovah, and Ruach hakkadosch of Jehovah through Memra.

Finally, we know the verdict of the (true) Kabbalists: "The Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Spirit is 'God, three in unity, and one in the trinity.'

4. The general tradition of the pagans and primitive knowledge of the Holy Trinity.

Without entering into a discussion about the antiquity of the Rig-

4. Bossuet, Discourse on Universal History, IX, ch. xx,
 2. Deuteronomy, verse 36.
 8. Josh. Hooke, Tractatus de vera religione. V. Migne, Theol, Curs, compl., III, p, 369.
- 2

18 MASONIC DOGMATICS

Vedas, Gathas of the Zend Avesta, Assyrian tablets, hieroglyphic and cuneiform inscriptions, etc., we let us consider it historically safe and indisputable that the ancient civilized nations that have perpetuated their Religious beliefs did not receive these ideas from Moses or of some later Jewish prophet.

Everything suggests that all nations, the gentle ones like the Jews, have, with the exception of Orthodox Jews, drew their religious doctrines from the same source, and the have gradually changed under the influence of climate, of their customs, their history, their individual qualities duals, and, we do not hesitate to say it, under the influence demons.

This common source must be sought at the ark of Noah, where humankind was not yet divided by the nor by its dispersion across the face of the earth.

This is the only hypothesis that can explain the identity of a number of supernatural truths that we find among all ancient peoples, under radically different names different.

The trinity in the divinity, that is a primitive dogma of the humankind.

The Indians of the Vedic period worshipped their Va-Runna, Indra and Agni; those of the Brahmanic period their Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva;

The Persians their Akura (He who is), Mazda (the Sagesse) et Atars (the Fire);

The inhabitants of Egypt, their Piah (masculine), Rah (feminine) et Iar; later named Isis, Osiris et Horus;

Thebes its Ammon, Mut and Khons;

The Assyro-Babylonians, their Bin (firmament), Samas, (sun) and Sin (moon); as well as their Assur, Bel and Hda, the dicux of heaven, earth and hell;

The Chinese have their Tien (sky), Yang (masculine) and Yn (female);

The Phoenicians their Bant, Kolpia and Mot;

MASONIC DOGMATICS 49

The Germans have their Alfader, Wodan and Thor;

The Accadians have Anna, Hea and Mulga (Sky, Earth and Hell);

The Romans had their Jupiter, Neptune and Pluto;

The Greeks had their Zeus, Poseidon and Hephaestus, etc., etc...

We do not guarantee the complete accuracy of this Enumeration: the ancient religions are still far from being included.

Modern philology, with its great results, is almost entirely between the mins of paid professors led by Masonic governments, and consequently those imbued with anti-Christian prejudices, who did not do not allow us to see the great figures of Olympus pagan in the light of the reported primitive revelation in the Pentateuch. But the day is not far off when faith the revelation will shed abundant light on the paganism; and each idol will have its well-defined place in the grand gallery of counterfeits of truth.

Let us try, however, to give an example, by speaking in particular aspect of the Zoroastrian religion, which, in our view, has the merit of having preserved the original tradition with more of purity than all other religions. It is in contact
It was with this religion that Jewish Kabbalah originated.

Babylonef.

5. The sacred books of the ancient Persians and the knowledge of the Holy Trinity,

Like the Persian Trinity, we have named Ahura Mazda and Atars.

Ormazd and Ahrimane are usually cited as the
The good and the bad God of the ancient Persians. That's a mistake.
Manichean. Ormazd is the only Dieu recognized and adored by the ancient Persians, as well as by the modern Persians exist—
So much so in Bombay. Ahrimane is hated and detested there.
like Satan.

4. Ragon, Philosophical Course of Initiations, p. 24. Frank, the Kabbalah, p. 293.

20 Masonic Dogmatics

The ancient name of Ormazd is Ahura-Mazda. Ahura corresponds to the Sanskrit word Asura, and means, according to its root, as (to be), the Being par excellence, He who is. Mazda means the Great Wisdom.

These names are found in the oldest Gathas.
(hymns), almost always separated from one another, one without the other, Mazda placed sometimes before, sometimes after Ahura; and, what is more curious, Ahuramazda is named several times in the dual at the lieu of the singular or the plural eli. In the Gatha, xxviii, v. 3, Mazda and Ahura are joined by the dual; pao is the dual of the second person pronoun in the oblique case. Hence it is quite obvious that Mazda and Ahuras were, in antiquity, considered as two different different people.

Ahura corresponds to the Asura of the Indians, the Father of Heaven; Mazda has always been recognized for its wisdom.
as an essential emanation of God. Solomon speaks of it in this sense, as we have just seen, and Minerva, the

The goddess of Wisdom emerged, according to the fable, fully armed.
from the brain of his father Jupiter.

The Parsis are accused of being fire worshippers. They are They are rightly defending it, if by fire we mean the fire that burns.
in our homes; but wrongly, if by fire one understands the divine
"Fire, son of Ahura Mazda." The Zend-Avestu distinguishes five different fires: the ordinary fire; the one that is fueled with sandalwood and continuously maintained in the Fire temples; the one that burned in the first and most famous Persian temple: the one that burns in the regions of spirits; and finally the atars berezi-cavo, which is found in the presence of Ahura Mazda, who is always referred to as the Son of Ahura-Mazda, emanating from them, and to whom sacrifices are offered facts and praise, to obtain intelligence, of holiness, eloquence, courage, education, and

1. Haug, Essays, Gatha, xxvur, 3: Jé vao Masda Ahura pairigagai vohu manangha: a I approach you both, Mazda Ahura, with a good spirit." See also Yaçna, xuix, 4.

Masonic Dogmatics 24

Energy! This Fire corresponds to the Agni of the Indians, the God-
Fire born from the bowels of Asura?

These three persons, Ahura (the Being), Mazda (Wisdom) and Atars (the Divine Fire), respond to Jehovah, to Wisdom and to the Fire (Esh) of the Old Testament, and are found in The Holy Trinity, which Christianity worships. This truth revealed must therefore have been known to Noah's children, who passed it on to their descendants. With this single assumption which appears to be well-founded, we can explain
This verse from the sacred book of the Persians is otherwise inexplicable:
"Praise be to you, Akura-Mazda, before all
"The creatures!"

We are on the trail of the Freemason's triangle.
nerie and its sacred word Sapientia, which we will encounter
many times in the settings of lodges and Freemasons.

6. The infinite substance, neglected by the ancient Persians.

Upon observing Ahrimane's disapproval and hatred of the
In addition to the ancient Persians, we could have added two important remarks.

The first is that the cousins of the Persians, the Indians, have, over time, allowed Satan to identify himself with their Fire God.

The philosophy of the Brahmins taught that, from the heart of the eternal essence, called Brahme, in the neuter gender, emanated a trinity of persons; and she attributed to Brahma the creation, preservation to Vishnu, and transformation to Sioa The worship of all beings and the universe. The adoration of Shiva, the regenerator quickly developed into the abominable The cult of the phallus, which we will find raw and naked, with the Indo-Persian-Kabbalistic doctrine, within Freemasonry riety, and especially in his adopted lodges.

Listen to the teaching that the recipient receives in

4. Yagna, LXI
2. Cf. Haug, Essays, p. 269.
3. Khordeh-Avesta, seen. Qarset Nyayis, v, 1.

22 MASONIC DOGMATICS

The 33rd degree: "Primitive religions envisioned the First cause under the threefold aspect of creation, of the destruction and preservation... Catholicism invented one God the Father, creator, one God the Son, preserver; a God the Father who conceived of creation, and a God the Son who thinks about the preservation of the universe; but he forgot to to give a president to destruction, in his dissection of The primary cause; of the President of destruction he made The Prince of Darkness, the Demon!

Forgot to admit Satan into the Holy Trinity! It's a audacious blasphemy.

The other point is that there is a very important gap-aunt in the theology of the ancient Persians: one almost completely forgotten the eternal and infinite primordial essence, which human reason, however, rightly places at the head of everything that exists, and, according to logical order, even before the trinity of persons.

Although we find in Ormazd the demiurge of other ancient religions, we still see no celestial figure in Persian Olympus, which corresponds to the En-soph of Kabbalah, to fatum, bythos, Koilon or coelum, cte... of other nations, to the essence that constitutes the inexhaustible fund-sand and infinity of all that exists in the sky and on the earth.

A hypothesis that gives the Persian Ensoph the name of Ahu, and this is not without merit, is based on the ancient Honovar prayer, which modern Parsis recite hundreds of times a day, without understanding it.

Even European scientists disagree. on the meaning of this prayer. It is composed of the most ancient Bactrian style, it contains, in three sentences, twenty and one word. Of the four terms found there, the two The first two, Ahura and Mazda, are well known; the third, Ratu, means, according to Professor Spicgel (Vispered, I, v. 1, note), chief, master, lord, but never the Lord God;

1. P, Rosen, Satan and Ci, p. 287.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 23

the fourth, Ahu, appearing to be an ancient form of Ahura is usually translated as "Lord". But, as it is unlikely that the same Lord would be found referred to in such a short prayer by two different names, by Ahu and by Ahura; and as in the name of Ahu it is found opposed the name Ratus, and that the Ratus are among the of thirty-three; the opinion seems very acceptable, that Aku is relative to Ahura what Brahme (neutral) is to Brahma (masculine), that is, Ahu, like 'Brahme, infinite and undeveloped essence (apyakt), and Akura, as Brahma, Your infinite, developed Being (pyakt). Ahu and Ahura correspond then to the Ensoph and the Crown of Kabbalah.

This hypothesis, if it is as correct as it is well-founded on convincing reasons, would explain the Honovar prayer, would bring Persian doctrine into full harmony with the religions of neighboring peoples, and would help us understand the transmission of the pantheistic ideas of the Persians and of other pagan peoples, to those among the Jews who, after the great captivity, they no longer wanted to leave Babylon, the land from their exile.

Moreover, it is certain that the Talmud was composed at this time. at the time in Babylon itself; which would confirm the opinion almost universal, that this is also where we must look for the origin of the Kabbalah.

Kabbalistic doctrine is therefore essentially nothing more than the paganism in rabbinic form; and Masonic doctrine, which is essentially Kabbalistic, is nothing other than the ancient paganism revived, hidden under a rabbinical cloak and placed at the service of the Jewish nation.

7. The Infinite Being among ancient peoples.

The idea of the Infinite Being, the source of all that exists, has developed among the ancient nations at almost equal pace. The proof is that it is, fundamentally, identical everywhere in His fundamental error. It's no longer the trinity of people in the unity of substance, but it is the Infinite, the Absolute,

24 MASONIC DOGMATICS

Eternity, incomprehensible, unintelligible, empty immensity and without any form, of which the three persons are no longer than temporal emanations; instead of being, like the Revelation and reason will it, subsistence, the subjects, the co-eternal and co-infinite possessors of this substance commune.

According to paganism, the primordial Being, who is in the same Time, Non-being differentiates itself and reveals itself only after a certain time, by emanating from its inner void—laughing at the three deities that the pagans worshipped.

There is a certain separation everywhere in paganism. divine persons of divine substance. Everywhere, a Kronos (Time) mutilates his father Ouranos (the eternal Sky).

The President of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree allows us to—will put an end to developing his teaching on the Pre— Cause first, since he refuses to do so, Ini-même, by citing the Rig—Veda of the Indians.

The President said: "There is a First Cause which Man and creation are effects. As we limit and we limit our hopes to this world, we will not go further in the study of the First Cause. Religion For Freemasons, the Masonic religious creed is the affirmative affirmation that there is a First Cause, of which Man and the universe are the effects, side of which the human soul is a spark, immortal like her!

Here is the development of this doctrine
Indian:

The tenth chapter (Anupaca) of the tenth book (Mandala) of the Rig—Veda begins with two hymns recounting the origin of the universe, emerging from the bosom of Brahme, which is the First Cause of Kabbalah and Freemasonry. We read there:

"Then there was neither Being nor Non-Being; neither a world, nor a sky, nor anything above it; there was nothing, anywhere, for the enjoyment of anyone; nor neither enveloping nor enveloped; nor deep and dangerous water-

1. Paul Rosen, Satan and Co., p. 292,

Masonic Dogmatics 25

reuse; there was neither death nor immortality; nor distinction between day and night. But Tat (That, the eternal Supreme Being) breathed without aspiration, alone with Swadha (or Maya: Love, Desire), that which remains within him. Outside of him, Nothing existed of all that has been since.

"Darkness was there; for it enveloped this uni- towards whom he himself was still a formless mass of water; but this mass, covered in its dark envelope, was finally determined by the power of contemplation.

"First the desire was formed in his mind: and it became the primitive productive seed, which the Sage, in recognizing it- born of intelligence in his heart, distinguishes in the Non-Being as the limit of Being.

"Did this ray of light from these creative acts spread to Middle? Or top? Or bottom?

"This productive seed immediately became intelligence" and matter. Who knows exactly who in this world declares- Where did this creation come from and why?

"The gods came after the production of this world; who then can know where it came from, and where this a diverse world originated, and if it subsists in itself or not in itself?

"What is this soul? Is it that by which man sees?" hears, etc...? Is it the heart, the mind, the perception, the Memory, etc...? All these things are just miscellaneous names for design. But this soul which consists in The faculty of understanding, it is Brahma, it is Indra. She is Prajapati, the Lord of creatures; these gods are She. Similarly, the first five elements: earth, air, ether, skin and light and their compounds (horses, oxen, men, elephants), everything that lives and walks or flies, and everything that is immutable (plants, trees), all of that is the eye of intelligence. Everything is founded on intelligence; the

The world is the eye of intelligence, and intelligence is its Foundation. Intelligence is Brahme, the Great.

The Freemasons may already understand what signifies the decoration of their 28th degree: the white cord

26 MASONIC DOGMATICS

The moiré is worn as a sautoir; it has an embroidered eye at the tip.
The pendant, hanging from the cord, is a gold triangle in the middle.
of which is an eye.

We will find the same intelligence in all three Higher Sephiroth of Jewish Kabbalah.

The Rigveda, the Upanishads, the Bhagavad Gita, and finally all dogmatic sources recognized as such by The Brahmins teach the same doctrine. We have not
There is absolutely no need to multiply the evidence.

The passage from the Infinite to the finite has been for all religions pagan genies, the stumbling block they have He stumbled and failed. But what deserves our attention before everything, and what seems to indicate the identity of the Master, who in gave the same false solution everywhere, it's this har-prodigious mona among the various mythologies, when he
The goal is to determine the first cause of the entire universe and the passage from the Infinite to the finite world.

Mr. George Smith published a volume which contains a a very important new page in the Chaldean Genesis, con-confirming what we have just stated.

One of the twelve tablets found describes the origin of All that is: here are the fifteen lines that remain:

1. When above the sky did not yet have a name;
2. When below the earth did not yet have a name;
3. And the abyss had not yet opened its arms,
4. The chaos of the waters (Tiamat) gave birth to chaone of them,
5. And the mountains were gathered in one place. Then
6. No tree had yet grown, no flower had had blossomed even further,

7. None of the discs had been born yet,
8. None of them was called by name; there was no order among these.
9. Then the great dicux were made,
10. Then Lakmu and Lakamu were born,
1. The Chaldean account of Genesis.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 27

11. And they grew up...
12. The gods Assur and Kissur were then born...
13. A great many days and a long time passed.
14. The god Anu.....

The rest is lost.

The same doctrine is also found in mythology Egyptian. Amoun is the unknown Father of all beings. Immediately below it are two principles of opposite nature, which no finite being could understand. Kneph, who represents intelligence or spirit, and Athor, who represents matter, the unrevealed darkness. From the The first one's mouth opens the world, and between him and the world The soul of the world, the genius of Fire, Ptah, comes to be placed, who Its symbol and immediate agent is the sun.

This is the primordial trinity.

What is the meaning of the fable of Ouranos and Kronos, and the Are these myths identical to those of other pagan religions? According to For them, the Father represents incomprehensible, infinite Eternity. and immutable; it must have been mutilated by its Son, Time, understandable, complete, and progressing, so that the human mind—hand, struck and dazzled by a strange, bold imagination and moving, allowing the Master teacher to do the Divinity fraudulently crossing the impassable abyss which exists between infinite eternity and finite time, and so on to lower God to the level of his creatures, or to elevate the creatures elevated to the rank of Divinity! This irrational leap and deceptive once accomplished, and the human mind transferred from the idea of infinity on a finite terrain, the rest of the myth ends without doing too much violence to reason and to the logically, – and the pantheistic lie is established!

8. The Ensoph of Jewish Kabbalah, the infinite essence, the First Cause of Freemasonry.

Jewish Kabbalah teaches about the First Cause, in

1. Review of Historical Questions, April 1, 1876, p. 557.

28 MASONIC DOGMATICS

the study of which the President of the Supreme Council of 33rd degree refuses entry, the following:

"Before producing the Universe, or anything else in it outside of itself, before having assumed any form and imposed no measure on its infinitude, the Ensoph (the Infinite: (en=without, soph=limit) was completely ignored by himself, and, even more so, other beings, who did not exist not yet; he had neither wisdom, nor power, nor goodness, nor no other attribute; for an attribute presupposes a distinction, and, consequently, a limit. This must be understood, The text says, above all creatures and all attributes. Now, when one has been these things, there is no longer any attribute, neither image nor figure: what remains is like the sea, for the waters of the sea are, by themselves, without bounded and formless; but when they spread over the earth, then they produce an image (Hebrew: demion), and allow us to make this calculation. The source of the waters from the sea and the jet that comes out of it to spread onto the ground, make two. Then a huge basin forms, like when a great depth is excavated; this basin is occupied. cut off by the limes flowing from the spring; it is the sea itself-even and must be counted as the third. Now this immense depth is divided into seven channels which are like so many long vessels through which escapes Sea water. The spring, the current, the sea, and the seven The channels together form the number dir. That's how The Cause of causes (the Ensoph) produced the ten Sephiroth (numbers). The Crown (on the triple triangle of the jewel) members of the Grand Central Lodge), this is the source from which springs an endless light, and from this comes the name of In-finished, In Soph (without end), to designate the supreme Cause; because in this state it has neither form nor shape; there is no so there's no way to understand it, no way to to know it; it is in this sense that it was said: "Do not meditate

"Not on something that's too high above the roof."

1. Ecclesiastes, ch. an, v. 2.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 29

"Then a vase forms, as narrow as a point,"
that the letter ' (Yod), but into which however penetrates Divine light: it is the source of Wisdom, it is the Wisdom itself, by virtue of which the Supreme Cause
he calls himself the God Sagef.

Here is one of the questions posed, to the 33rd degree,
By the President. To the Captain of the Guards:

"What do you think when you first enter the Supreme Council?

Answer. – The symbolic word of the First Cause, emitting rays through three interlaced triangles of which
The peaks bore the letters of the word Sapientia.

Question: What does this emblem mean?

Answer. – May Supreme Wisdom preside over the work of the Supreme Council and illuminates it with its rays.

Upon receiving an Apprentice, 1st grade, the recipient, blindfolded, he stands before the Venerable, who, in singular Christian baptism, asks his godfather, Brother
First Warden: "What do you request for him?"

Answer. – Light.

The Venerable. – Let there be light!

Then he strikes three times. On the third, the Master of ceremonies tear the headband off the recipient, and, at
At the same moment, the Brother who had put the lyco- lamp to his mouth
The wind blows strongly and produces a bright light.

The Captain of the Guards' response, which we have just received to hear, is the lycopodium of the 33rd degree.

The Jews even give to the followers of the 33rd degree
Explanations invented to confuse them.

The true Kabbalistic explanation of the emblem in question, of the three interlaced triangles bearing the nine

The letters of the word Sapientia on their nine points, is that the divine light emanating from the Ensoph through the Crown, which is hidden here, passes over Wisdom to shine so brightly within her than through her in the other eight sephirot.

4. Ad. Franck, Kabbalah, p. 129.

30 MASONIC DOGMATICS

9. Fraudulent transition from Ensoph to the Kabbalistic Crown.

Let us now consider the text of the Kabbalah,
As given above, the passage from the Infinite to the finite. If the Couronne, Wisdom and Intelligence are the source, the current
And the sea, we ask where the source comes from, since
In Infinity, there is no form? The source is a form.
and the Kabbalah teaches that the Crown is not the Ensoph.
Let us therefore examine the development of Ensoph up to this point.
that it was revealed in the Crown, which is the Source.

The quoted text says nothing on this subject; but it offers to the man's gaze dazzled the sea and the fountain emerging from a source formed by the Infinite, just like Freemasonry Stupidity makes its followers look at the clubmoss. The man must absolutely be fascinated by a gripping work of fiction, in order to that "he should not go any further in the study of the Pre-Cause
"first," as the President said to the candidate of the 33rd degree.

So how does Ensoph manage to reveal itself in the Crown? We demand a philosophical explanation.
rational, without fable or figure.

The given text says: "Then a vase also forms narrowed to a point, like the letter yod, but in which However, divine light penetrates.

Another text says: "Before Dicu had appeared, when all things were still hidden within him, he was the least known among all the unknowns. In this state, he has no other name than the one expressed by the question.

"It began by forming an imperceptible point: it was his own thought; then he began to build with his thought a mysterious and holy form; finally, he covered it with a Rich and dazzling clothing: we are talking about the Universe whose name necessarily centers on the name of God.

Every serious philosopher will ask: What does this mean?

A vase so tightly closed as a point? What does it mean: "It com-threatened to form an imperceptible point, which was its own

4, Franck, p. 131.

Masonic Dogmatics 31

thought? What does it mean: "A spring formed?" This could be neither a material vessel, nor a mathematical point-tick, nor a source of water. – That was his thought! The Ensoph So he began to think. If for all eternity he hadn't thought, how could he have started to think, since in
In eternity there is neither succession, nor first, nor then.
No past, no future?

Think about it, blindfolded Freemason brothers!

Can Jewish philosophy satisfy your intellect?
agency?

In Brahme, it was desire that first took shape, in Ensoph is about thought.

Reason asks: How could the Infinite have thought without intelligence, since Intelligence is only the third of Higher Sephiroth? How can one desire without will? This
It is not intelligence that emanates from thought, but pen-
It is the power that emanates from intelligence, and it is not the will which stems from desire, but desire which stems from will.
Is it with this reversal of the existing psychological order-both between intelligence and thought, and between the will
And the desire, that paganism begin in its philosophy?
What audacity on the part of the Kabbalistic Jews to offer such a
An anti-rational doctrine for men who know how to think!

What blindness from serious men who allow themselves to be banished to turn their eyes away from their bodies to better dazzle their eyes intellectual by the kabbalistic lycopodium!

10. Fundamental error of all pantheism.

Besides this gross error against logic and psycho-
In logy, there is the original sin inherent in every pantheistic system, that Freemasons must blindly and implicitly to admit, if they want to deserve the name of Freemasons.

In all these systems, it's the passage from the Infinite to the finite which presents to the serious thinker the appearance of a maneuver fraudulent.

Solomon, a great authority invoked by the Freemasons,

32 MASONIC DOGMATICS

said to God: "You regulate all things by number, Weights and measures.

It's in the number, in the measure, and in the weight that we must seek the difference between the Infinite and the finite; because In God, there is neither number, nor weight, nor measure. In the Infinite these categories are elevated above themselves, and are lost in a higher unit.

Let us explain this fundamental truth, since "the league of heretics (said Pope Innocent III in a sermon) against the Albigensians) must be destroyed by an investigation faithful; for the Lord does not desire the death of the sinner, but let him repent and live."

There is no currently infinite number; what we Let us conceive of an infinite number as an indefinite magnitude. or the endless series of numbers.

Any number, however large or small, can be increased, multiplied, decreased, and divided; but no division the unit's sion could not reduce it to zero, nor could any multiplication. Application: Raise to infinity. Between any current number and the infinitely large number, as well as between the number one to its infinitely small fraction, there is an absolute distance—infinite and insurmountable.

To bridge this gap between a current number and the an infinitely large number, one must resort to a number of a superior nature, which contains within itself all the possible numbers. This is the divine number: it is the infinite One. — that's the unit of Dieu.

Similarly, to bridge the infinite distance between a the current number and the infinitely small number, you have to have resorting to the annihilation of all numbers: to zero, to nothingness.

Let us demonstrate these truths, and force the President of the South to... First Council of the 33rd degree, to "go further in the study" of the First Cause." A little "light" will do him no harm. doubt of good.

1, Wis, 11, 21.

Masonic Dogmatics 33

A mathematical point has no extension; it cannot to be neither divided nor enlarged. Between two points, placed at a distance, it is therefore impossible to place successively a sufficient number of points to form a line. The possible number of points between two points is infinite; and infinity can never be counted by successive numbers. If you want to combine the currently infinite number of these points, have recourse to something superior, to the line. The line encompasses through the infinite number of all points in one go possible between its two limits.

A currently infinite number, which we would arrive at by addition or multiplication is obviously an impossibility to assert its existence would be no less unreasonable than to make a mathematical point of a certain length, or a mathematical line of a certain width, or a mathematical surface of a certain thickness.

This is so clear and obvious that one immediately sees the falsity of the following assertion: the number of grains of sand, stars, atoms is currently infinite; infinite the number of minutes, years, periods or evolutions that the world must have gone through or undergone, assuming that it has existed for all eternity.

The consequence of this reasoning, so lucid and so simple is this: it is absolutely false, illogical and unreasonable. capable of asserting that the past evolutions of the universe are in infinite numbers; that matter, subject to successions of time, exists from all eternity; –finally, that all that can be measured, counted and weighed, eternal constant, in the sense strict in this sense.

If we do not want to be unreasonable, nor let ourselves to dazzle with some sophistic Iycopode, let us declare firmly: the prior eternity of the universe is a absurd fable; the Kabbalistic doctrine concerning the Ensoph who began to think, and that of the Vedas concerning Brahme, who began to desire, breaks eternity within him giving a past and a future; they are therefore anti-rational inventions, deceptions, the purpose of which is visible, if one is willing to examine and judge the consequences.

11. Purpose of pantheism.

The separation that we want to establish between substance and The divine trinity aims to introduce, with the emanation of The trinity, that of the entire universe. It is first and foremost negation. of the eternity of the divine Trinity; then comes the negation of creation ex nihilo, of this only reasonable solution the fundamental question about the origin of a governed world with number, weight and measure; it is the negation of difference-essential connection between God and the universe; it is the abuse of the Creator at the level of his creature or the deification of the creature, in particular, of man; it is finally a ma- a diabolical work seeking to detach men from Dieu, repeating this deceptive assurance to them: "You will be like the gods!; » so that they might lose their souls for all eternity; in short, it's a satanic cabal.

12. True idea of Infinity.

If we want to understand eternity past, we You shouldn't count successive periods and rules of a an infinite number, which is impossible; but to gather, in the mind, all possible periods, both past and future- res, in a single moment, as if we wanted to shrink a line through a single point that would represent the entire line. We will then have a moment of a higher order, called eternity; an immutable instant, in which the past, the The present and the future meet and exist together.

Time is a succession of transitional moments;
Eternity is a simultaneous permanence of all mo- possible ments.

Time is a series of moments in a succession continuous; eternity is a mere instant in a per- eternal mansion.

4. Genesis, 1x, 5.

Time is a moment in motion; eternity is a moment of rest.

"Time," said Boethius, "is a fluid now; eternity" nity, a stable now.

Time is the past, present, and future of the universe. created with the universe; eternity is the permanent presence of God.

Time is birth, life, and death; eternity is permanent life, without birth and without death.

Time is a certain imitation or created participation, partial, successive, and transitory of life; eternity, according to Boethius, is the complete, simultaneous, and perfect possession of endless life.

Time belongs to the created universe; eternity to God alone.

Time is created, Eternity is uncreated—it is God himself.

The same reasoning applies to space, and the conclusion— The situation is this: Space is created, Immensity is uncreated, — She is God himself.

13. Emanation of the Kabbalistic Crown.

The Ensoph, in order to reveal itself, began to form a point imperceptible, like a Hebrew yod, it is the first Sephirah, the Crown.

This is the fundamental lie of Jewish Kabbalah and of Freemasonry, the root cause of their entire system.

The Ensoph is not the eternal Being: it is not God. Anyone who wants to become a Freemason must renounce their religion and to the true God!

The Hebrew yod represents thought in Kabbalah creator, or rather trainer, of the Ensoph, produced after a certain period, and consequently after a period limited, temporal and finite.

The Scottish Rite confers, at the 12th degree, the rank of Grand Master

4. Franck, p. 130,

36 Masonic Dogmatics

Master Architect, a jewel that is "a square of metal in medal shape (world figure): on one of the faces four semicircles are engraved (the equator and a meridian intersecting) before seven stars (the seven Sephiroth inferior-ricures), having at the center a triangle (the three Sephiroth higher) containing the letter A1".

The letter A signifies, like the Hebrew yod, the Architect. of the Universe, Jehovah or the Demiurge, the Shaper of the world.

The Great Master Architects are very likely unaware of this. They implicitly refuse to wear this medal. Dicu, the Creator of heaven and earth.

This work is not a philosophical study, otherwise we would enter here into a consideration of pagan fables- born on the passage from the Infinite to the finite; they are all equally anti-rational than those of the Jewish Kabbalah and Freemasonry-fuck.

15. The doctrine of creation ex nihilo, the only reasonable one ct vraic.

If one claims that the reported difficulty of a passage
The rational from the Infinite to the finite is likewise found in the documentation.
The trine of creation ex nihilo is a mistake; for according to This doctrine, it is not the divine essence that passes from from infinity to finitude, from eternity to time; the world is not drawn from the divine substance by some emanation, the making him equal to God, but he was created from nothing, and by Consequently, he is in no way of the same essence as God.

To shape a world from pre-existing matter, unc
Finite power is enough. To create a world of nothingness, a Infinite power is required. The greater the power,
The less material it requires to form something thing. The power of the Lord is infinitely great;
Therefore, it only requires one material to create this world.

infinitely small, that is to say, nothing, the void. To form what-that which is created from nothingness.

4. Léo Taxil, II, p. 340.

Masonic Dogmatics 37

It is true that: ex nihilo nihil fit. But in creation there not only is there the nikilum, nothingness; there is also the Almighty, and it is not true to say that with nothingness
It is the Almighty, nothing can be done; it is wrong to say: Ex nihilo nihil fit a Deo.

Furthermore, nothingness is not the matter that the Almighty-sant would have used it to form the universe: he is only the starting point of the work created by divine power.

God alone can create. Creation requires power.
infinite.

And if you ask why God didn't create the moon-Towards earlier? I reply that he did indeed create it earlier and at the same time later; because the sooner the better Late moments are but a single instant in eternity. Time
It began with the world.

And what did God do before creating the world?

Answer. – There was no before: this before coincides, in eternity, with the afterlife. The world was created at the com-beginning.

But before the creation of the world, wasn't there a Infinite time?

No, there was no time; infinite time is a absurdity, and this indefinite time, that we imagine Before creation, it is pure fiction.

But what is the transition from eternity to time, from immensity to space, from infinity to the finite, from divinity to the creature?

This is not any change in God himself.
Likewise, it is not an emanation, a diminution, a de-development, an evolution from within God; but It is the beginning of what did not exist. This transsition, this leap, this passage from the infinitely small to the world of The extension means this: there is no change except in the creature, emerging from nothingness and pure possibility, to begin to exist in reality. Eternity, the immensity, infinity, omnipotence have remained immutable as always!

38 MASONIC DOGMATICS

In the dogma of creation there is no contradiction—no nonsense, as in all pantheistic doctrines theistic without exception; there is no derogation from the divine majesty, as in Jewish Kabbalah, nor any superstition, as in the idolatrous worship of the "Arch-Tect of the Universe," which the Freemasons cover themselves with pables, — hopefully, unintentionally.

45. The Kabbalistic error revived in pantheism modern.

The pantheistic error, suggested by the Angel's malice fallen to the ancient peoples and to a number of the enemies of Abraham's chosen race, never ceased to re-spread throughout the world, almost always under the cover of an inviolable secret. We are keeping silent about the doctrines of the various pagan religions in antiquity, and let us only allude to the discussion among the Pharisees and Our Lord, in which Jesus Christ, the Word of God, by whom all things were created, is named, in contrast to the Kabbalistic ideas of the Pharisees: "The Principle": Principium qui et loquor vobis. We only want allude to the beginning of the Gospel of Saint John, written obviously against the false doctrine of philosophy Jewish, who had already begun to corrupt the ideas of some Christians, and to sow the seeds of the formidable heresy of the Gnostics, precursors of the Illuminati.

Saint John opposes the Kabbalistic system of the emanation the simple truth, saying: "In the beginning was (not: after a long time, a request from Ensof) the Word; and the Word was with God, and the Word was Dicu (and not any decrease in light) and the divine splendor of God). He was at the beginning—Lying (that is, from all eternity) in God."

Let us also leave the narration of the story to other writers. of Jewish Kabbalah, from its origin in Babylon and its influence on hermetic philosophy, on the Gnostic sects ticks, on the Templars in Palestine and on various sects of the Middle Ages; let us simply note that Spinoza, son of Portuguese Jews, after studying the Talmud and the Kubbale, and after being excommunicated in 1655 by the

The Orthodox synagogue in Amsterdam laid the foundations of modern pantheism, now taught by almost everyone professors appointed to universities by the government Masonic principles.

According to Spinoza, there is only one substance, which is develops in the universe. Spinoza is the father of pantheism.
modern.

In 1720, a Latin book was published in Cosmopole (London):
Pantheisticon, written by Jean Toland, printed shortly copies that were never put on sale. This book proves that, from its reformation in 1717, Freemasonry
Eric inscribed, in private, pantheism.

The author reduces all of Freemasonry to the pantheism of Spinoza. On page 42, he says: "The Brothers maintain, in the absolute meaning, not only freedom of thought, but more action, but rejecting all license.
They are the most implacable enemies of all tyrants.
Most of them reside in Paris, Venice, and Holheath, and some even in the city of Rome; but they are abundant mainly and more so than in any other instead, in London: there, they established, so to speak, their headquarters and like the citadel of their sect... It is clear that I don't want to allude to the Royal English Society, neither to the French Academy, nor to any other public society republic... After their banquets, they dismiss their servants, because they are laypeople and ignorant; they close
So, the doors should be done properly, according to ancient custom.
and converse about various topics. » Page 78:
"The Pantheisms may have to accuse themselves of having a dual doctrine, one exoteric, that is to say external or popular, and the other esoteric, that is to say internal or philosophical, and to reveal this secret philosophy alone-

40 Masonic Dogmatics

He lies to friends of recognized kindness and prudence. But who Can anyone doubt that they are acting wisely? No reli-

no sect likes to be contradicted. The vul-Gaire believes that everything comes to him from heaven (revealed by Dicu). He is Therefore, it is necessary that something else be in the heart and in the secret meetings, and something else in the street and in the Public speeches. This is a common practice among the ancients and among modern people. These, in truth, while condemning Such dissimulation is something that is often exploited.
 often. » Page 81: «So we see, in this way the Pantheists live safely amidst so many dangers.
 Page 40: "Nothing is lost in the universe: things
 They only change place. Therefore, although the
 The creation of nothingness is not accepted by the Xabbalists Hebrews, nor by other philosophers, one can nevertheless to say that all things are created, in the sense that they move in such a way as to move away from the infinity already past and to approaching the future infinitely. And since the number of Movement is eternal, like the number of things that happen
 They move, yet there is no movement nor any something that is eternal, each thing being made anew
 "ct partant crée."

Here is the Kabbalah named and cited with unity and fidelity by-Done. Jean Toland, born in Ireland, apostate Catholic, protesting a defector, and finally an infidel of the worst kind, wrote This book is for Freemasons. The title of this book was inspired by... wind quoted incorrectly. Here is how it is on the original and unique edition, which has become very rare: Pan-theisticon; sive formula societatis Socraticiæ in tres particu-
 las divisa, quæ Pantheistarum sive sodalium continet mores and axiomata, nomen et philosophiam, libertatem et non fallen-tem legem neque fallendam.

Præmittitur de antiquis et novis eruditorum sodalitatibus and of Universo infinito et æterno diatriba. Subjugation of duplici Pantheistarum philosophia sequenda et de viri optimi and ornatissimi idea, dissertatiuncula. Cosmopolitan. MDCCXX.
 In French: "Pantheism, or the rule of the Socratic Society-

MASONIC DOGMATICS 4i

that, divided into three parts, containing the customs and the doctrines, trends and philosophy, freedom and law incapable of making a mistake or being deceived by the Pantheists or Members. Preceded by a study on the former and modern societies of learned men, and on infinity and the eternity of the universe. Followed by a dissertation on the double a way of following the philosophy of the Pantheists, and on The virtuous and perfect man. Cosmopole. 1720.

"The perfect man" is the one that Freemasonry produces.

in its first eleven degrees.

Let us now turn to the philosophy of the coryphaei of the modern pantheism, and we will see that they have not done, for In other words, to copy the main principles of Jewish Kabbalah.

It was to be expected that Masonic governments—niques, ultimately guided by the Jews, are betting on the chairs of philosophy, in all their universities, of the Freemasons teaching Masonic doctrine, that is to say Kabbalah, veiled under formulas and principles more or less unreasonable and illogical, such as we find them—
vons chez les Fichte, les Schelling, les Hegel, les Cousin and among all the other seducers of school children.

The Hindus, as we have seen, inscribed: "Then There was neither Being nor Non-Being, neither a world nor a heaven.
nor anything above him, nor enveloping or enclosing him developed, neither death nor immortality: but Cera (Tat) breathed without aspiration, alone with Swadha (Desire), which subsists in
The desire was formed in him: and it became the seed
The primitive productive that the sage distinguishes in Non-Being like the bond of Being.

This deceitful and outrageous fiction is an affront to human reason.
Maine is repeated in the Jewish Kabbalah: "Before having produced the Universe, before having taken on any form and imposed no measure on its infinity, the Ensoph was ignored
Of himself, he had neither wisdom, nor power, nor kindness, nor any other attribute. So he began by forming a
"It was an imperceptible point; it was his own thought."

"By the very fact that God, withdrawn into himself, distinguishes himself

42 MASONIC DOGMATICS

of all that is finite, limited, or determined; by that very fact
We cannot yet say what it is, we designate it by a word that signifies nothing or Non-Being (Ayin).

The same sophism, which destroys the idea of God in its germ, is faithfully copied by pantheistic professors which we have just been talking about.

Schelling already repeated this, saying: "The eternal One has, from
For all eternity, the desire to beget itself: this desire is the first ray of the will, the will itself! God, begets—
'drant in himself', speaking to himself his own desire, poses his "Intelligence, its light!" What an abyss of false notions!

Hegel, even bolder than Schelling, returned to language. The former apogee of pantheism: "Originally, before the creation of nature and finite spirit, God without envelope is in itself, since it is indifference or identity absolute of Being and Non-Being. This Dicu prior to world has none of the positive attributes that belong to the A contemporary God, for he is thought identical with herself, not knowing herself.

"The absolute manifests itself as spirit, passing from being to becoming: he becomes himself, he realizes himself! It is not that after having settled outside of himself, in nature, that, revenant sur le lui, it acquires consciousness and becomes spirit, self-nascent as a spirit."

These are the Kabbalistic follies, these sacrilegious falsehoods, that youth must study and learn like the real Wisdom! The Kabbalistic Jews, who know the last of it. word, they couldn't care less about this elevated, scientific, philosophical, sublime, of those young minds which, in degrading their reason, they foolishly make business of these Jews.

16. The Ensoph as Void or Absolute Nothingness.

It was a truly diabolical trick to separate the essence infinite number of persons, necessarily subsisting in it in an absolutely inseparable way. Human reason-

4. Franck, p. 138.

Masonic Dogmatics 43

Maine is surprised and dazzled by this false thought How bold, and easily it gives way to the imagination, whose perpetrator of this gigantic fraud can now to play without difficulty, to introduce himself into the holy Trinity and being "like the Most High".

It's only the first step that's difficult; we've done it.

Before appreciating this fundamental doctrine of philosophy Sophie, a Jewish woman, let us note the various, no less mystical, titles. that pompous one of which the Kabbalah designates the First Cause.

The Ensoph is the Occult of the occult. (Temir miccol temérim), "Unnamed", "The Mystery of Mysteries", "the Cause of causes" (Illath ha illot), "the Ancient of the an-

"ancients", "the Old Man of Days" (Attik Yomim), the "All", the. "Non-Being", the "Nothingness", the "Nothingness", etc. It is represented—represented by an empty circle which must be the origin of the ten Sephiroth. Although he himself is not one of the numbers, It assigns value to numbers. Arabic, influenced by Hebrew calls the zero safar, and designates it by a circle, which, like the Infinite of the Kabbalah, is without beginning, endless, and empty within. The English word cifre, The French word "chiffre" and the German word "siffer" are derived from it!

1. Let us be permitted to put forward here a fairly plausible hypothesis—similar. According to Kabbalah, the ten Sephiroth (numbers) are emanated from the Ensoph (the Infinite, represented by a circle without beginnings) cement and without end). Each Sephirah (number) emanates from the previous one. The inventor of the numerals called Arabic numerals, probably a disciple Hermes Trismegistus took as his figure of the Ensoph a circle, the zero; for the figure of the first Sephirah, the Crown, nicknamed The long face, a long line, that's the number 4. He then added, for each of the other numbers, another similar line, up to number 9; he completed the list of the ten Sephiroth, or numbers, in joining bearing the sign of the Ensoph in the first Sephirah, forming the number 10, conclusion of the first ten, and so on for each new decade. To rediscover this idea, we only need to dismember (for example, using matchsticks) the Arabic numerals as follows:

0 3 & 5

oit hygg

44 MASONIC DOGMATICS

The Ensoph and the ten Sephiroth together constitute the mystical number eleven.

Philosophically, the infinite Being is not in a void, but, On the contrary, the fullness of Being. The Kabbalah, in deponing bearing the idea of the being of all real forms, has not retained than the abstract idea of existence without any substance. She confuses, like Hegel after him, the being that designates existence and being which designates essence or substance. (Esse evistentiæ et esse essentielle.) We cannot admit that the same thing, in the same respect, is and is not not at the same time. To violate this principle of logic is to To renounce reason itself. If by being the Kabbalah and Ilégel hear the experience, it is absurd to say that the First Cause, the Ænsoph, exists at the same time and does not exist; if they understand the substance or essence, it is also It is absurd to say that the First Cause, the Ensoph, is a substance at the same time is not unc.

They give a double meaning to the word "to be" when they affirm that the First Cause is at the same time Being and Non-Being. According to this, it is Being because it exists, and the Non-Being because it is empty of all substantial form. "We understand by the Non-Liter, says the Sefer Jetzirah, that which one does not conceive neither by its cause nor by its essence; it is, in a word, the cause of causes; it is that which we call the "Non-primitive Liter, because it predates the universe!"

By ignoring the infinity of all substantial form, there remains in our mind, which performs this operation of abstraction, The idea of existence. Existence without any substance It is therefore merely a pure abstraction that does not exist anywhere. except in the mind of one who disregards. She therefore could not have existed before there was an to be substantial and intelligent. It is therefore false that the Ensoph, the absolute primordial Being, this infinite void, was the First The cause of all that exists.

It is through this sophism, by playing on the word "éfre," that the

4. Franck, p. 160.

Masonic Dogmatics 45

Kabbalah, both the old and the new, was able to establish a basis philosophical.

In truth, understood as a simple and purely Existential Abstract, the Ensoph is absolutely nothing, /e Nothing or the Void absolute, incapable of desire, of revealing itself, etc... The Kabbalah bale has therefore neither reason nor logic in asserting this.

17. The Ensoph as the absolute fullness of being.

The true infinite Being, as sensible philosophers understand, is not the absolute Void of all essence, but the absolute fullness of Being; all possible realities their possibilities are included in their infinitely perfect degree. That's Dicu's real idea. It is obtained, not by doing—without the substantial qualities of created beings disappearing, but by removing all boundaries, all limits; thus The idea of substance also belongs to the creature and to the Creator, but in an essentially different way.

In this way, the infinite Being is infinitely great and absolute.
simple lupossible affections to an eminent and infinite degree. This being The absolute, by virtue of its infinity, is incapable of being divided by producing from within itself Sephiroth more or less limited, like rays of primordial light, or like rivers from a primeval source, which gradually diminish and decrease in proportion to their distance, for to eventually die out and dry up completely.

Furthermore, in the truly infinite Being, Intelligence and
The Will exists from all eternity, not in a state latent not yet developed, but in their perfection and Complete, infinite, and immutably active energies. If Therefore, Jewish or Hegelian Kabbalah wants to consider the Ensoph, not as an empty zero, that is to say as the pure Abstract existence of any substance, but rather common the fullness of all possible Substance, it must be explainedphilosophically speaking: he needs arguments drawn from the reason, and not just images of the sea or of light, which is not infinite; it must show us-

46 Masonic Dogmatics

to say that it is not against the very nature of the Infinite to detach any part of its substance, to do to spring from its scythe a single drop or a tiny spark, however small it may be, without implicitly affirming the composition-tion of the Infinite, without maintaining that through its emanations this Infinity is neither diminished in itself, nor augmented in other ways.
of him, neither divided in his being, nor multiplied by new Beings! Let her explain to us how the emanated forms,
The Sephiroth, if they remain in the within PEnsoph, forms in itself, and that they do not cease to be divine if they leave its interior.

There is no philosophical answer to these questions.
simply placing them is enough to overturn all pan- systems theistic and kabbalistic.

The idea of God is the infinite fullness of all perceptions.
possible fections. The idea of the Kabbalistic Ensoph is or Absolute emptiness, infinite nothingness, a perfect zero, or a Being infinite and divisible, which is a clear contradiction. God is the Supreme Being; the Ensoph is a purely abstraction mental, an imaginary idol, foolishly worshipped by the Kabbalistic Jews and Freemasons as a Cause

First.

18. The Ensoph in Masonic emblems.

In the Scottish Rite, the following is not often used: circle as a symbol of Ensoph, because this "Cause First," the Unknown of unknowns, is not likely of adoration. But in the Misraïm rite we find it quite frequently in the sets. This last rite, fonciè-Rement and almost exclusively Jewish, represents the Kabbalah more clearly and more completely than other rites. At its 18th degree, the jewel is a triangle within a circle. signifying the three higher Sephiroth contained in The Ensoph. At the 25th degree, the circle is contained within a triangle, indicating the doctrine that the Ensoph, although being nothing of all that is, is nevertheless found in everything that exists, and first of all, in the three Sephiroth higher. In the same direction, the circle is, at the 26th degree, in a double triangle, and, at the 27th degree, in a triple triangle.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 47

The Scottish Rite uses a circle divided into four parts. A compass open at 90 degrees and encompassing a quarter of The graduated circle is the jewel of the Perfect Master, at the 5th degree. We will see further that Ensoph developed in four worlds. The material universe, to which we belong, in is one. This world is therefore, so to speak, a quarter of The Ensoph revealed. In its entirety, the Ensoph is represented by a perfect circle that has neither beginning nor end. Each of the four worlds inspired by him is a quarter of it. It's absurd, but that's the real explanation for this quarter of circle.

CHAPTER II

THE HIGHER SEPIRTOTH AND THE HOLY TRINITY

4. Emanation of the ten Sephiroth. (See plates A and B.)

Before giving an overview of Kabbalistic doctrine Regarding the ten Sephiroth emanating from the Ensoph, as many If they are of interest to Freemasonry, we place them here in their anthropological order. The three Sephiroth

Superior or intellectual heads represent the head of man paramount; the following three, or moral ones, are its two arms and chest; the other three, or physical ones, are the middle of the body and both legs, and the tenth is placed under his paws!

The numbers are named:

2, 7, 40 ct 11: the Middle Column.

3, 5 ct 8: the Column of Grace.

4, 6 ct 9: your Pillar of Justice.

5, 6 and 7: the Holy King.

8, 9 and 10: the Matron or the Reindeer.

Through the union of the Holy King with the Matron, the universe is begotten; and by the union of the Matron with the Holy King, the Individual beings are ultimately returned to the divine and confused with its essence.

These exits and returns of beings are another form from the Indian doctrine of Vedanta: "The wise man considers Brahmin as the source of all beings. As Para-
The gnée emits and resumes its thread, like plants emerging from
The earth and its inhabitants return to it, thus the universe comes from the Unalterable and goes back in.

We find the terms of Indian philosophy of much superior to those of Jewish Kabbalah, although the doctrine is essentially the same.

1. Encyclopedia Britannica: "Cabalah". – Frank, p. 149.

Masonic Dogmatics 49

For example, from this lewd representation that we have seen, says Vedanta, in entirely philosophical terms phrases: "This universe is indeed Brahme, for it emerges from Breathe into him and return to him. So adore him.

The social life of the Indians is based on the same idea of Purush, Primordial Man or Brahma.

From the state of Brahma came the Brahmins, the caste priests and sages; from his shoulders, the Kshatriyas, the caste kings and warriors; from its entrails, the Vaishyas, the caste merchants; and from his feet, the Sudras, the caste of workers and farmers.

We will see the Masonic Kschatriyas of the 30th degree, the Knights Kadosh (saints), follow immediately, for the to protect, the Jewish Brahmins of the upper Triad of 31°, 32° and 33° degrees.

To fully understand the nature of the Architect of the University-towards which the Freemasons bend the knee, and who succeeded in supplanting the true God in their minds Living, the Creator of heaven and earth, we must consider what Jewish Kabbalah means by the emanation of the ten Sephiroth, and by the Sephiroth themselves.

We have already seen that, according to the Kabbalah, the Ensoph, the In-finished, is above everything, even above what is to be and think.

He is the universe; but the universe is not him. In this state unlimited, it could not be understood by the intellect, nor be pro-stated by words. As such it was, in a certain meaning, Ayin (Non-Being).

In order to be known and understood, Ensoph needed to to become active and creative. However, the act of creation implies an intention, a desire, a thought and an action, and therefore, properties or qualities belonging, as the affirms Kabbalah, to a finite or limited being; moreover, the impar-The fact that the creature's circumscribed nature excludes the idea that it is the direct work of the infinite and the perfect. Therefore, Ensoph was to become a creator through several-several intermediate beings, that is to say, the ten Sephiroth, emanating from him like rays from a source of light.

4

50 Masonic Dogmatics

The desire to become manifest and known, and partaïnt, the idea of creation (emanation) is co-eternal with the inscrutable divinity. The first manifestation of this primordial desire is called the first Sephirakh, the Crown, a subs-spiritual tension that existed from all eternity in the Ensoph, and which contains within itself zeuf other Sephiroth.

The ten Sephiroth constitute among themselves and with the Ensoph a strict unit, ct represent the same being under different-rents aspects.

Their names are:

1. Crown.

Intellectual triad. 2. Wisdom.

3. Intelligence.

4. Love, Grace, Grandeur or

Mercy.

5. Justice or Rigor,

6. Beauty.

7. Strength or Triumph.

Physical triad... {8. Splendor or Glory.

9. Base or Foundation, and

10. Kingdom or Shekhinah (Pre-

Moral triad.

sense).

Here are the Hebrew terms for the ten Sephiroth.

1. Kether. 6. Tiphereth.

2. Khokhma. 7. Netzakh.

3. Binah. 8. Hod.

4. Chesed. 9. Jesod.

5. Din. 10. Malkuth.

However, when the Unknown of unknowns assumed a form, he produced all things in both male and female forms female, without whom nothing could continue in its existence in another form.

However, the first Sephirah, the Crown, is such-very close to the esoteric unit, the Ensoph, which it appears often become confused with him; and on the other hand, she is truly distinct and different. It is also called: "I am," "Jehovah," and the "Holy Elder," the Ensoph being "the Elder of elders".

Masonic Dogmatics 51

Opposite the "Oldest of the Ancients," the light of "PAn-" "Cien" is darkness.

Wisdom, the second Sephirah, when it proceeded from the "Saint Ancien", emanated as male and female (androgynous, hermaphrodite), because developed Wisdom is Intelligence, the third Sephirah. Thus were obtained the male and the female: Wisdom, the father, and Intelligence, the mother, of from the union of which the other pairs of Sephiroth emanated by degrees

These first three Sephiroth, the Crown, Wisdom and Intelligence constitutes the first Triad of the decade Sephirotic. It is the divine head of the archetypal Man, primordial and celestial (Adam Kadmon).

From the union of the second and third Sephiroth Two opposing principles arise: Greece, a masculine principle linen, and Justice, a feminine principle.

These two principles form the arms of Arche- Man type; the first gives life, the second death. They unite-feels in the common center of Beauty, which is the chest by Adam Kadmon. These three principles form the second The Triad of Primordial Man, which represents his qualities moral qualities, like the first of his intellectual qualities, and The third is his physical qualities.

From the second union emanate the masculine Sephirah, the Strength, and the feminine, Splendor, constituting the two Adam Kadmon's legs and engendering the ninth Sephiroth Ah, the Base or the Foundation, the sap and the moccle, the power-the process of generation and growth in nature. From this perspective, Adam Kadmon is called Sabaoth (armies). This Triad is also called the Natura naiurans (the Nature which engenders), the physical world being the Natura naturata (Nature generated).

1. Zohar, 1x, 290.

52 MASONIC DOGMATICS

The tenth and final Sephirah, the Kingdom, designates the unity, harmony and domination of the three classes of attributes previous goals.

2. The ten Sephiroth in Masonic decorations.

After this exposition of Kabbalistic doctrine, he did not

It is not difficult for us to give the meaning of the most a large part of the decorations and Masonic emblems.

In the Matire grade, the 3rd degree of the Scottish Rite, the The jewel is a triangle; the rank of Private Secretary, 6th degree of-gré, it is a triple right angle or three interlaced triangles; on the medal of the Grand Master Architect, 12th degree, you you will find seven stars, the seven Sephiroth iuféricures, having in the center a triangle containing the letter A: the three Sephiroth Roth Higher Education and the University Architecture.

Within Masonic triangles, one finds either a Yod Hebrew, or an S, or an eye. It's the same Triad, ren-closing the symbols of the three main Sephiroth: 1° of the Crown, which, as Great Architect of the Universe, takes the name of Jehovah; 2° of Wisdom, and 3° of Intellect-ligence, whose eye sees everything.

The representation of two interlaced triangles is full-explained by the union of the Holy King with the Matron, that is to say, by the great fundamental and sovereign principle-immoral aspect of Kabbalah, that the existence of all beings, both spiritual and material, are dukes in union with one male principle with a female principle. We are in this situation. morally safe, of all the Christians deceived by this the ongin of the Kubbalistic synagogue, Freemasonry, he There are only a very small number who are aware of it. less of a worldly thing than adorning oneself with Masonic trappings, they are simultaneously guilty of the most terrible blas-phemes against Dicu and his holy Trinity, and of the custom of emblems whose lubricity is such that we cannot- We will provide the explanation here.

1. Léo Taxil, p. 240.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 53

8. Anomalies in the upper Sephiroth.

The Kabbalah is very explicit in stating that the ten Sephiroth-Roth are the main attributes of Dicuf.

Now, it is clear that Intelligence, Wisdom, Grace, the Justice, Beauty, and Glory can be understood like divine attributes; but what escapes our The understanding is that the Crown, the Triumph, the Foundation- The Kingdom is not of this nature. God is neither a crown of any king, nor a kingdom under a no king, nor the Triumph of any triumphant general—

nor finally a foundation of any building whatsoever.
So what do the Sephiroth named as such refer to?

Furthermore, intelligence is not the result or effect of the Wisdom, but on the contrary, the faculty whose development Perfection leads to Wisdom. Why then this reversal?
of the natural psychological order?

Thirdly, it is a generally accepted doctrine and Surely, the first person of the Holy Trinity begets
the second, the Word or Wisdom, through its intelligence;
as the human mind produces words through its intellect—human agency. The first of the three higher Sephiroth Intelligence should therefore be the key. Why supplant it with The Crown?

Fourth, Grace or Love, which is produced by the will, and constitutes everywhere the third person of the Trinity, why does it have to be placed in fourth place?
instead of the third one? If we absolutely have to put the Cou-ring between the three divine persons and the Ensoph, for—what to send back Grace among the lower Sephiroth, ct
Not admitting four higher Sephiroth?

We wouldn't have asked these questions if we had dealing with some pagan people. But Jews con-quoting their holy Scriptures, as frequent quotations
If the actions prove it, do they deserve the apologies that every man

4. Franck, p. 128.

54 MASONIC DOGMATICS

would readily grant to pagans lacking: the assistance
Rebuke of the prophets instructed by the Spirit of God?

Freemasons have no idea about Kabbalah doctrines.
ballistics; they are taught them through unintelligible emblems eligible, but they don't know the key. The Jewish leaders Freemasons are careful not to put their blindfolded followers on the trail of the Kabbalah.

&, The truth about the Holy Trinity.

Let's tell them, to give their intelligences the real light, which in divinity there is and cannot be no separation between nature and divine persons. People in Dicu can only be relationships subsisting in the divine essence; they are therefore nothing-divisible or separable elements of the essence.

Without the three subsistences already mentioned, there can be no to have divine substance or essence, as without the divine essence or substance there can be no divine persons. The separation made by Jewish Kabbalah between Person which only develops after the desire to manifest itself, and the successive manifestations of divinity, is a fatal and critical error. It must have been made in a but fundamentally perverse.

Yes, there are eternal processions in substance divine, which in itself can only be one of a kind absolute and infinite unity. This divine unity does not enter into ordinary numbers, because it is a unit of a order superior to everything that is subject to number, to weight and to measure. The number One in the divine substance does not It is not counted as the number one followed by two.

The eternal processions in the very heart of nature divine are not its effects, as Arius asserted; nor mutations of the same person, as Sabellius said and say the Swedenborgians; because they are not not processions outside of the divine nature, but of spiritual processions within the substance eternal, similar, but infinitely superior to the pro-

MASONIC DOGMATICS 55

transfer of our thought, word or wisdom produced from our intelligence, and to the procession of our procession of love of our will.

In God the procession of the inner word is called the Word or the Son. The latter name is as just as the former. first, because generation signifies the origin of a being living product of a living principle, according to the similarity of its nature. Now, the Word is a conception of the intellect-gence; it is also the likeness of the thing it represents; and it is of the same nature as that from which it proceeds; therefore the Word proceeds from its principle according to the mode of generation, a completely spiritual generation. For For this reason, God can and should be called: God the Father and his Word: God the Son.

Besides the procession through the immanent action of God's intelligence exists, as in the human mind,

a second procession through the immanent action of the vo-Lonté: it is divine Love.

Love does not proceed, like the Word, according to its simi-litude with the beloved thing, but according to the inclination of the love-love is directed towards the beloved. Therefore, love does not proceed by generation, but by spiration. That is Why, in God, is the love of the Father and the Son also called the Holy Spirit, who proceeds from the Father and the Son as if from a single principle. The eternal object of the Word is the truth of the divine essence; that of Love, the goodness of this same essence. In the inner life of spiritual beings tucls,—and God is the spiritual Being par excellence,—there is no only two actions, that of intelligence and that of the will Therefore, in God there are only two processions, the gene-the ration of the Word and the spiration of Love.

Therefore, there are only three divine persons in Dicu: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. These three persons-the souls possess in common a divine substance indivisible; therefore, they are not three gods, but one.
God.

The Word or the Son is also called Wisdom, although

56 MASONIC DOGMATICS

wisdom be, like strength, justice, beauty, the mercy and all the other essential properties, common to the three divine persons. It is especially in the Old Testament that the name Wisdom is appropriate to Verb of Dicu, by which all was created. The Jews kabba-
The clerics were well acquainted with the Book of Wisdom, written by Solomon. And, remarkably, the ancient Persians, to the philosophy from which the Jews borrowed the great lines of their doctrine to Judaize it in their Kabbalah, also recognized Wisdom (Mazda) as a per-divine sound that merged with their Jehovah (Ahura) in a single Divinity, Ahuwra-Mazda or Ormazd, from which Fire (Atars) proceeds.

There is a whole book to be written on Wisdom, the Word,
the Logos, who transforms into the goddess Pallas Athene or Minerva, and other similar figures from Olympus, ancient peoples. The Jews of Kabbalah did not invent the idea on which this great figure is based; they followed divine revelation and the general belief of antiquity, according to which personal Wisdom is an emanation direct and immediate from the first divine principle.

We therefore believe we are right in recognizing in the three Sephiroth: Intelligence, Wisdom and the Grace, a memory, albeit corrupted, of the three divine ones people known in the Old Testament by the names of Jehovah, Wisdom and Holy Spirit or Fire, and among the Persians under the names of Akura, Mazda and Atars.

Other divine attributes, such as justice, beauty, etc. are common to all three people and cannot constitute—kill new people.

The division of the Sephiroth, between superiors in number of three, and inferior to the number of sepi, is another an indication of the knowledge possessed by the authors of the Kabbalah had of the divine Trinity and of the seven angels whose Sacred books are also mentioned.

4. Tobit, ch. xm, v. 15.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 57

5. The Great Architect of the Universe.

The Masonic equilateral triangle, without further addition, represents the Great Architect of the Universe of France Freemasonry. It is the Crown with its Wisdom and its Intelligence.

Jewish Kabbalah, always rich in imagery to captivate the human mind contains a passage that allows us to to conclude once again that his doctrine is derived from phi-Indian philosophy, through the intermediary of philosophy Persian, as its sacred number of thirty-three has already noted.

In the third part of the Zohar (fol. 2881), we Let's read:

"The Ancient One, whose name be hallowed (the Xether, the Crown), exists with three heads that form a single alone; and this head is the highest thing among high things. And because the Ancient One, whose name is blessed, is represented by the number three, all the others lights that illuminate us with their rays are also included in the number three.

The famous Trimurti in the island's underground temple Elephanta, in the port of Bombay, represents the head gigantic Brahme, with the three heads of Brahma, Vischnu and Shiva. The doctrine is the same, why the symbols Wouldn't the boles be the same?

Did Dante know this Trimurti? Did he study Ja Kabbalah, which began to be known by non-Jews in his century?

How striking is his description of Lucifer! three faces! "The monarch," he writes, "who reigns over the empire eternal anxieties, appeared from the middle of his chest, outside the frozen pond; and I am no more Tall beside a giant, only giants beside his arms: So what must be the height of his entire waistline? If he has

1. Franck, p. 141.

58 Masonic Dogmatics

It was once as beautiful as it is now hideous, ever since it He dared to raise his proud face against his Creator, he is not It's no wonder he became the source of all evil.

"Oh! How utterly astonished I was when I saw three faces. On his head, one frontal, red as blood, the others, joined to her, emerging from the milieu of each shoulder meeting at his high proud brow. The face at the right one appeared blackish, and the other, on the left, of the colour of those who live on the banks of the Nile f. » Lucifer has always been called the sigil of Dicu. Unable to succeed in becoming like the Most High, he made it his caricature. Let the Freemasons not blame us if we tell them that, like their "Great Architect of "The Universe" is the monkey of Dicu the Creator, thus the franc-Freemasonry, which is essentially his work, is a the image of the Church, which is the work of the Son of God. The Consideration of the thirty-three degrees proves the accuracy of that remark.

6. The Great Architect of the Universe, who is other than the Creator of heaven and earth.

The intimate connection between the doctrine of Kabbalah and of paganism, and consequently, of Freemasonry with the old pantheistic errors, is proof certain that the Great Architect of the Universe, worshipped by the Freemasons, is by no means the God of Christians, who has created the universe from nothingness.

We are not repeating the countless proofs of Eckert, Claudio Jannet, Deschamps, Pachtler, Léo Taxil, and other valiant champions of Christianity; we limit ourselves here to demonstrating the perfidy with which we tried, and unfortunately managed to mislead the large number of Freemasons, during the famous discussion, within Freemasonry, on the necessity of the belief in a personal Dicu.

1. Dante, canto xxxrv del Inferno.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 59

As we know, the vast majority of English Freemasons, despite their enrollment in Freemasonry, it is still attached to the Christianity of the High Anglican Church, and believes in one God, Creator of heaven and earth.

A statement from the Masonic authorities, stipulating that, to be received as a Freemason, it was not required Believing in the personality of God would have sown confusion. in English lodges it seriously compromised existence of Freemasonry in England.

One of the fine qualities of the English character is goodness sense, which is not easily offended by ideas metaphysics that transgress the laws of reason.

The question of Dicu's personality, or, to speak Masonic jargon, from the "Great Architect of the Universe", was submitted to the Congress of Lausanne in September 1875.

The Scottish delegate, F. Mackerscy, after having attended the first preliminary meeting of one of the Committees, left Lausanne, and published in a circular, on behalf of the Council Scottish, that the Congress had not expressed its belief in a personal dictionary.

This statement presented a great danger; it could to intimidate the good and tractable mass of Freemasons ordinary people, who have never bothered to raise the Masonic blindfold over their eyes, and are nothingless useful to the lodge. It was therefore necessary to oppose it with another statement, which, while safeguarding the true documentation A pantheistic Masonic trinity would suffice to appease the consciousness by confounding intelligence.

The Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors Generals of the 33rd degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite of the Freemasonry for England, Wales and the dependencies of Great Britain, therefore sent, on May 26 1876, to the authorities subordinate to it, a Cir-dated cular from Golden-Squarc No. 33. (Note the number 33 and the golden square, which signify the supreme position in the world restored to golden freedom.) It was signed by the two delegates of the said Supreme Council to the Congress of

60 MASONIC DOGMATICS

Lausanne. In this Circular which is before us, it it is said: "If the Scottish delegate had stayed until the end of at the Conference, he would not have dared to issue the declaration untenable that Congress had not expressed its belief in a personal God, because the point on which the Congress he most strongly insisted on, was to establish, as a principle absolute and fundamental of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of thirty-three degrees, the belief in /a personality of God as the Author, the Creator, the Supreme Creator, the
The Great Architect of the Universe, the Supreme Being.

While this Circular skillfully avoided "superstition-tion" of Christian Freemasons, by naming the Supreme Being recognized by Freemasonry, "the Creator" of Funitowards, she no less skillfully safeguarded the true document-Masonic trine, explaining the expression "the Creator"
by adding the words "/e Supreme Creator", which imply a gradation in the office of creating, and existence of inferior creators or architects, subordinate to Su-First or Great Architect of the Universe. To create here means organize.

The Crown, the first of the Sephiroth, is not the only one "Architect of the Universe," she is only the "Great One," but under his impetus and direction, Wisdom (masculine) and intelligence (feminine); mercy (masculine) and Justice (feminine); as well as Strength (masculine) and Glory (feminine); where, to summarize these inferior architects-laughing, the Holy King and the Matron, they too, built to build and perfect the three worlds outside of the World of emanations or sephiric.

If our deduction is not erroneous, and if the Crown is the fallen Angel, he is indeed a personal Being; he is the Supreme Creator of the Universe, the first organizer, or rather disorganizing of the world.

The document cited by Conlinne states: "Members (of Congress) hoped that with the given definition, no one could—would become a member of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite I know without believing in a personal Dicu, and that we would distance ourselves

Masonic Dogmatics 61

free thinkers, unlike the practices of some other corporations; these, by receiving them into their ranks, reveal a tendency to become purely materialistic.

Here again, the weakness of those who believe is being exploited. still in one God, Creator of heaven and earth, and in At the same time, the Kabbalistic doctrine of the Lodge, by making a distinction between pure free thought—materialistic ment ct that which, alongside eternal matter, admits a Spirit, as indeed the Kabbalah admits it.

The evidence from the Circular for these claims follows. which, as we can see, are essentially ambiguous and clearly ambiguous. The first is the testimony of one of the delegates present fords. This one "solemnly declares that one of the The Congress's main goal was to prove to the world through its manifesto, that the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of the ma-Çonnerie would never admit into its ranks anyone who He wouldn't believe in God as a personal Dicu, the Creator, the Author and Ruler of all things, the Jehovah."

This evidence has the same value as the statement already made. We have already seen it, and we will see it again, the Kabbalah gives the name "Jehovah" to his Great Architect of The Universe, to Lucifer.

The second piece of evidence is taken from the eighth paragraph of The Declaration of Masonic Principles: "Freemasonry posits as a principle that the Supreme Creator has given to man, as the most precious possession, etc.

And this memoir ends with the exclamation: "If these words do not do not refer to the one and only Dicu, who is above all, and who is a personal God, no language can describe him TO DO. "

This evidence confirms the distinction already made between the Supreme Creator and the inferior creators.

If the Council had been sincere, wouldn't it have done better? simply saying: God who drew the Universe from Nothing? This addition would have completely put an end to this Unfair ambiguity. The spirit of lies and hypocrisy.

is so deeply rooted in Freemasonry that men, in all other respects very honorable, do not do not believe it is beneath their dignity to resort to ambiguities that an impartial eye perceives at first glance. More The more we move forward, the more we rediscover the same spirit. false and deceitful, inspired by Freemasonry by the one who "is a liar and the father of lies."

62 MASONIC DOGMATICS

Finally, the best proof that we truly appreciate it these ambiguous statements from the Masonic authorities, this This will be done: following the Lausanne Congress, the Council of Grand Orient of France, in a meeting held in 1877, eliminates from its Masonic constitution the assertion of the existence of God, a condition hitherto necessary for admission of candidates. In 1878, the Grand Lodge of An-England takes the following resolution, in which one re-immediately encounters the same ambiguity: she declares that, "regarding the belief in the existence of the Great Architect of the Universe as one of the principles on which the Freemasonry is based on it, we cannot allow that we express a formal negation of this principle, and we "We cannot recognize those who deny it."

The Grand Lodge would have been better off saying nothing, because It was not about the existence of a Great Architect, but of God who brought the Universe into being from nothing. However The ambiguity was successful.

We went even further. The Grand Orient of France having sent a communication to the Grand Lodge of England, in which he denies "that the Great Western France, by reviewing the terms of the articles of its constitution, wished to profess atheism and "Materialism," the Grand Lodge of England intervened the Prince of Wales, its visible leader, who in no way bound the indescribable chiefs. She and he made her reply in these terms by the Secretary of the Grand Lodge: "Belief in Dicu is the first principle of all true Freemasonry; this This principle is not recognized by the Grand Orient of France;

4, Saint John, wine, 44,

he cannot ask his Grand Lodge to revoke his decision
sion and to participate in the destruction of what the English masons had, from time immemorial, considered as the first and essential condition of our existence Masonici. »

We could multiply the testimonies of the followers even of the masonry to show, which moreover
We will see later how the Brothers are graduallyformed, from religious indifference in the degrees inferior, even to the anti-Christianity of the Rosicrucians 18th degree, to the perfect pantheism of religious philosophy Jews in the highest degrees, and finally to Luciferianism. The Masonic light, promised to the candidates of lodges, ends in the darkness of Kabbalah theosophy-
The Scottish delegate to the Con-
Lausanne sandstone, Brother Mackersey, had perfectly Reason: the Great Architect of the Universe of Freemasonry Nerie is not God the Creator worshipped by Christians and by all sensible men. Freemasonry is covered-guilty of the crime of idolatry and Satanism.

1. Weekly Register, Feb. 21, 1885.

CHAPTER III

KETHER-MALKHUTIT, THE CROWN OF THE KINGDOM

4. Origin of the Sephiroth Counxxxx and Roraumx,

But where does the Crown that we see interpolated come from?
between Ensophist and Wisdom, between eternal substance and
The three divine persons?

To delve deeper into this important issue, we have consulted the Hebrew Bible. Now, in the book of Esther we We found the Aether-Alalkhuth. King Ahasuerus asked that was brought before him and before the princes of the kingdom, Queen Vashti with her royal diadem. The queen refused.
Then the beautiful Jewish woman Esther was chosen in place of Vashti.
besotted and dethroned. She was crowned by Ahasuerus himselfeven the royal diadem taken from Vashti, and Mordecai, his uncle, was honored and decorated with the royal diadem that he lost Haman for wanting to eradicate the entire Jewish race.

In these passages, the royal diadem is named Kether-Malkhuth.

After the fall of Queen Vashti, after that of the first Minister Haman, and after the elevation of the Jewish Esther to throne, after the elevation of the Jew Mordecai to the first in the kingdom of King Ahasuerus, the extremist Jews—their enemies, the thirteenth and fourteenth of the month of Adar; they instituted a perpetual festival which was to be celebrated on the fourteenth and the fifteenth of the month of Adar. Here we are, tracing the origins of the first and the Tenth Sephiroth Kerzher and Malkhuth: The Ancient Man IT'S THE JUTR, THE CROWN ON HIS HEAD, THE KINGDOM HAS HIS Pigps. Isn't that one of the greatest mysteries of the Kabbalah? Won't we find the penultimate secret there? of Freemasonry 1?

4. See plate B.

Masonic Dogmatics 65

2. Political application of Kether–Malkuth.

After writing these lines, we met in Mr. Drumont's book, Testament of an Anti-Semite, p. 142, The following confirmation of our presentation:

In the Archives Israëélites of October 16, 1890, the Jew Singer directly addresses Mr. de Bismarck and tells him without further ado, preamble: "I ask you to reread the magnificent—the famous Book of Esther, where you will find the typical story of Haman and Mordecai. Haman, the all-powerful minister, It is you, My Lord; Ahasuerus is William, and Mar-Dochée, that's German socialism, inaugurated by the Jews Lassalle and Marx, and continued by my namesake and coreligionist Singer. You wanted to belittle and annihilate Mordecai, and it is you, the great chancellor, who are "I became his victim!"

What recklessness on the part of that Jew Singer! He calls the world's attention on this book of Esther where her coreligionist Mordechai, crowned with Kether–Malkuth, including the Rosicrucians of the 18th degree, these obedient knights Jews wear the image at the top of their jewelry on their loyal breasts!

"The fear of the power of the Jews," says the holy Writer turei, had generally seized all peoples. The Jews therefore inflicted a great slaughter on their enemies; and in the By massacring them, they returned the evil that they had inflicted upon themselves.

prepared to do it.

In Susa itself, they killed five hundred men, without count the ten sons of Haman.

King Ahasuerus was immediately informed of the number of those who had been killed in Susa.

"The king said to Queen Esther: How great, do you think-- You, must be the carnage that the Jews are doing in all the provinces? What more do you want, and what do you want--
"What more can I order you?" -- The queen replied: "I suppose--"

4. Esther, ch. 1x.

66 MASONIC DOGMATICS

the king is forced to order that the Jews have the power to do again tomorrow in Susa what they did today, and that the ten sons of Haman be hanged. The king commanded that This was done, and immediately the edict was posted in Susa, and the Ten sons of Haman were hanged; and the next day, the Jews killed another three hundred men in Susa: And in
In all the provinces, they held their enemies in such great strength
the number that seventy-five thousand men were enveloped
"They were caught up in this carnage."

This supplication from the beautiful Jewish woman reveals everything to us.
cruel nature of her race when she has victory in her hands.
Woe to the peoples to whom the Jews have surrendered!
masters!

This is how the Jews understand David's words:
"Dicu's praises will always be on their lips,"
They will have double-edged swords in their hands.
to take revenge on the nations and punish the peoples, to bind their kings by chaining them to the peaks, and the great ones among them
"cux, by putting them in irons!"

The festival they call Purim, on February 14th, is celebrated by the Jews.
celebrate in memory of their deliverance from tyranny of Haman, through the courage of Esther and Mordecai. "The Jews then pledged to rob all the Christians they could-- wind, mainly the children. In this night, they have none
They immutable only one by pretending to kill Haman. And while that the body of the sacrificed child is suspended, they make moqueric around, pretending to do it in Aman. With the blood Having gathered, the rabbi makes certain loaves of bread kneaded with honey, from triangular shape, intended not for Jews, but for nux

Christian friends, »

"Jews give to their own children when they reach the age
"A crown as a sign of strength for thirteen-year-olds?"

The Crown on his head and the Kingdom at his feet, that's it the ideal of the Jew, practically and persistently pursued

4. Psalm 99.

2. Henri Desportes, The Mystery of Blood, p. 311.

3. Ibidem, p. 258.

Masonic Dogmatics 67

since Jehovah chose Abraham's descendants as his people of choice.

Adam Kadmon, the primordial Man, is the archetype of Jew. The Jew is the quintessential man.

All the well-known phraseology about Man and the Hu-Manita, their deliverance, their freedom, their rights, etc.
must first come from the Jews; then, by communication, affiliates of the Jews, that is to say, the freemasons; for it is only in Freemasonry that one forms Man, it is only at the eleventh degree that man becomes perfect, so as to be able to answer the question:
"Are you the Sublime Chosen Knight?"

Answer: – My name is Emmarek, a true man in every way occasional. »

Emmarek, in Hebrew, means: I am purified.

"Apart from the Jewish people and Judaized individuals..."
Masonic mysteries, there are no true men, the Other nations are merely a variety of animals.

It is the doctrine of the Talmud which, for the Jew, is the theo-Moral logic, like its sister, Kabbalah, is theology dogmatic.

But as we have already said, if the Freemasons are deceived by the Jews, the Jews are deceived by the enemy of the human race.

Do we not see the tempter hidden beneath this "diadem"?
royal » Kether-Malkuth, as formerly in the form of 'snake?

The apple of Paradise is transformed into a crown.

Do we not hear the words of the tempter, repeated?
later to Jesus, showing him all the kingdoms of world and their glory: "All these things I give to you—
"Nerai, if you prostrate yourself and adore me?"

The Jew did not respond, like Jesus: "Get away, Sa—

4, Paul Rosen, p. 251.

2. Talmud. V. Pontigny, The Jew according to the Talmud, p. 105.

3. S. Matthew, ch. 1v, v. 8, 9.

68 Masonic Dogmatics

tan, for it is written: "You shall worship the Lord your God and You will serve only him!

We'll see: they really love Lucifer in the dressing rooms.
Masonic. Jews are free to worship the royal diadem.
like their golden calf: Satan, under the name of Xether, has taken place above the Holy Trinity.

4. S. Mathicu, ch, 1v, v. 10.

CHAPTER IV

THE LOWER SEPHIROTH AND THE SEVEN ANGELS

1. The seven Ameschaspentas or Archangels of the Persians.

The Kabbalists borrowed the first principles of their philosophy. We have already found in the great figures of Ahura, Mazda and Atars the remi-birth of the Holy Divine Trinity, known, although more or less disfigured, among all ancient civilized peoples.

This Supreme Trinity, we have recognized it in the In-intelligence, Wisdom, and the Greece of the Kabbalah which constitute kill the three Sephiroth immediately following the Crown.

Will we find the other seven Sephiroth and the seven Stars of Masonic jewelry among the Persians? It appears in to be like that.

The seven Ameschaspentas, blessed immortals, known to the Avesta, they are!

1° Ahuramazda (in Zend: Ormazd), the name of the supreme God, and at the same time that of the first archangel, of the representing God in the spiritual world. He is also ap-Pele Spenta-mainyus, the benevolent spirit. His opponent is Anglo-mainyus (Ahrimane), the evil spirit, Satan.

2 Vohu-mano (Bahman), the good spirit, which inspires the good thoughts, words, and actions. His opponent is Ako-Mano, the evil spirit.

3° Ascha-vahista (Ardibihist), the genius of truth, of light and benign fire. His opponent, Andra, appears to represent melancholy.

4° Kschatra-vairya (Scharevar), the genius of combat, of victory and supreme domination, which has as its adversary Saurpa, perhaps the spirit of weakness.

5° Spenta-Armaïti (Spendarmat), the good goddess, the ideal

4. See plate C.

70 Masonic Dogmatics

of feminine goodness and beauty. Her opponent, Naong-Hathi is the spirit of pride.

6 Haurvetat (Khordat), the genius of health and strength. His opponent, Taric, represents disease.

7° Amretat (Amerdat), the genius of life and immortality. His opponent, Zaric, is the genius of death.

We do not believe we are doing violence to either the Kabbalah or the Zend-Avesta, by suggesting, however with a certain reserve, that there is a connection between:

The Sephiroth and the Ameschaspentas,

Justice and Vohu-mano,

Beauty and Spenta-Armaïti,

The Triumph or the Strength of Ilaurvetat,

Glory to Majesty and Asha-vahista,

The Foundation and Amretat,

And the Royalty and Kschatra-vairya.

It would be too long to go into detail about this question.
interesting tion.

2. The Archangel Ahuramazda and the Kabbalistic Crown.

If these comparisons are as well-founded as they are true—of the similar ones, only the Crown and the archangel would remain Ahuramazda, whose identity is yet to be confirmed: the Crown at the head of the higher Sephiroth, and Ahuramazda at the head of the seven Persian archangels.

The striking resemblance of the other figures, both super-higher than lower, of Persian mythology with the Series the higher and lower phiroth of Jewish Kabbalah, we seems a very strong argument for admitting the identity of Archangel Ahura Mazda and the Sephirah Xether. In this In this case, the elevation in the Kabbalah of the first of the inferior spirits laughs above the divine higher Trinity, would provide a new proof of the fulfillment of Lucifer's boast—Ericenne: "I will ascend to Heaven, I will establish my throne on—above the stars of Dicu, I will place myself above the

4. See plates A and C.

Masonic Dogmatics 71

highest clouds, and I will be like the Most High—High. "

One could say that among the Persians as well, the first archangel arrogated divine honors to himself by naming himself of the same name as the Most High, if the figure truly dia-Ahrimane's bolique did not pose an obstacle to cctte assumption.

3. A revolution in the Kabbalistic heaven and a fall angels.

An absolutely extraordinary confirmation of the intrusion of Lucifer in divinity, appears to be presented in the doc-bizarre trine of the Kabbalah, concerning a kind of revolution in the invisible world of divine emanation?, who would have took place before the formation of the present world.

This idea, foreign to the doctrine of the Sephiroth, announces a fall and a rehabilitation within the very sphere of divine attributes, a creation that failed, because God had not gone down with her to stay there, an emaa spontaneous nation of its own substance, tumultuous and disorderly.

Such an emanation is incomprehensible and even ab-surde, if we admit that Infinite Wisdom is its source;
but it becomes explainable and perfectly rational if one there seeks the belief of all ancient peoples, and sur-everything about the Persians, on the revolution of the fallen angels and on the archangel Lucifer became Satan. Far from having taken place between the three upper Sephiroth, this tumultuous fall and disorderly has been accomplished, according to universal belief saddle of antiquity, in the middle of the lower Sephiroth, who, in fact, are only substitutes for the seven es-created, known by other religions, as well as by the Old and New Testaments.

The Kabbalah places Samael at the head of Hell, of the Kingdom of the Darkness and Chaos of the Bible.

4. Isaiah, ch. xrv.

2. Frauck, The Kabbalah, p. 153.

72 MASONIC DOGMATICS

"The Seven Tabernacles, or Hell proper, offer, in our view, within a systematic framework, all the de-
the moral disorders of the world and all the torments that come from them
the rest.' (See plate B.)

4. The seven Sephiroth in Masonic decorations.

In Masonic symbols, the number seven is
This is found quite often. Let's give a few examples:

At the 47th degree, the jewel is a heptagon; on one of the
on the faces, in each of the corners, are engraved the letters
B.. D... S.. Po. I. Ge. F+., meaning: Beauty, Divinity, Wisdom, Power, Honor, Glory, Strength, the names of seven Sephiroth. In the center is a silver lamb, lying down on a book bearing seven seals, each seal marked from one of the letters above.

Christians will be outraged by this blasphemous travesty. ephemeral of one of the most cherished symbols of their books sacred?

We have already mentioned the seven stars in front of a triangle on the jewel of the 12th degree.

Another complete symbol is the eleven signs and attumachements that are found in the 29th degree. In this grade, there are seven signs, three touches, and one genitive touchal, meaning the seven lower Sephiroth, the three higher ones ricures, ct J'Ensoph.

The Pelican, a highly sought-after symbol of Freemasonry-rie, taken from Christianity, is found in the 18th degree, and signifies the Ensoph itself; the three jets of blood which cou-slow of his breast, pierced by himself, are the three Sephiroth upper Roth; seven small pelicans represent the seven Inferior Sephiroth?, exits from the upper Triad.

At the 17th degree, a seven-step march is also performed. in heptagon, and in the grade of Kadosh, 30th degree, one

1. Franck, p. 169,
2. Apocal., ch. v, v. 1.
3. Carlile, Manual of free-masonry, p. 296.

Masonic Dogmatics 73

gives himself the philosophical kiss which consists of seven em-stirring on seven areas of the face.

5. The Seven Angels in Holy Scripture.

What is the meaning, in Kabbalistic doctrine, of the seven Se-Are they inferior phiroth? Are they a reminiscence of what Does Scripture know?

The driver of young Tobias, upon revealing himself, said: "I I am the Angel Raphael, one of the seven who always "present before the Lord?"

And Saint John writes to the seven churches which are in Asia: "The Grace and peace be with you through Him who is, who was, and will be, and by the seven spirits who are before his throne, »

The passage from the Book of Tobit is proof for the antiquity of the doctrine concerning the seven Angels. We do not Let's not make a rash judgment by saying that it's a truths contained in the preserved original revelation together with the idea of the divine Trinity, in all the ancient peoples.

In Solomon's Temple, the seven-branched candelabrum ches was the symbol not only of the planets, but also of the core of the seven Angels recognized in the Old Testament.

(See plate G.)

The Kabbalah, having originated in the time of the Babylonian captivity, perhaps borrowed this idea from Seven Angels not only from the Old Testament, but also from the custom of the Persian kings, who, according to the book of Esther (1:14), always had around their throne the seven principal lords of the Persians and the Medes. These princes never lost sight of the king; they had coutume to sit first after him. However, add-Let us tell you, in this the kings of the Persians imitated the heaven of their

1. Léo Taxil, les Frères .r., II, 270.
2. Tobit, 11th, 15.
3. Revelation 1:4.

74 MASONIC DOGMATICS

God: the king being, in his majesty, an image of the divine
The majesty of Ahura-Mazda surrounded by the seven Ameschaspentas.

Raphael speaks to Tobias about the seven spirits who are always before the throne of Dicu. Tobias was taken prisoner by the Assyrians long before the establishment of the kingdom of the Persians, during the time of Shalmaneser. However, we do not know not that the Assyrians also had the custom of placing Seven princes before their king's throne. The origin of the document... The Persian trilogy of the seven archangels is therefore lost in antiquity. She was known even before the separation of the Indians. Persians, long before Zoroastro, who appears to have lived roughly a thousand years before Christ, during the time of the king Solomon.

Without getting into research that would distract us

Regarding the purpose of this study, we dare say, it is sufficient—has demonstrated that neither the Kabbalists nor the Freemasons. They did not invent the number of the seven Spirits who play a significant role in their mysteries, which they do not understand probably neither the origin nor the broad scope.

6. The Seven Angels and the Number Eleven in Brahmanism.

See plates D and E.
yez p

The Eternal One known in the religion of the Indians as Brahme's neutral tones correspond perfectly to the Ensoph. From Kabbalah to the Bythos of Gnosis. Brahma, Vishnu, Siva represent the Holy Trinity.

Alongside these deities, the early Vedic period they call the Adytias, the sons of Aditi, a goddess representing so much the infinity. Adi, in Sanskrit, means the beginning. The Adityas are therefore deities corresponding to the Sephiroth. lower realms of the Kabbalah, and at the Auges of the Holy Writing.

There are twelve Adityas if we include Brahme and the Trinity, and without them only eight or seven. Aditi had indeed eight sons; but as she approached the higher gods, she he came with only seven, having rejected the eighth, Mart-Tanda,

MASONIC DOGMATICS 75

The Sun. These seven Adityas are the seven Sephiroth of the Persians. or the seven Angels of Holy Scripture. This is how the The Vedas recognized "eleven gods in the sky." The sky is the first of the Tri-Loka or Tri-Bhuvana, "the three worlds", Srarga, Bhoumi, Patala: Heaven, Earth and Hell. At the head of the second world is Mert-Tanda, the Sun, the son rejected by Aditi and named in the second Aditya world par excellence. He presides over the Firmament and together with the eight Vasus and the two Aswins, they comprise the "eleven Gods on earth." By his unique position, this Aditya by excellence corresponds to the Metairon of the Kabbalah.

Siva, the Transformer, has a dual character; as As a reformer, he is good, and corresponds to the Holy Spirit of Holy Scripture; as Destroyer, he is a terrible God, corresponding to our Satan. As such, he is called Roudra, the Howler, and lives, with his ten Howler sons, the Patala, hell. The eleven Roudras are "the eleven gods at "mid-air."

Tri-Dasa, three times ten, thirty, is the round number for the "thirty-three" deities: the 12 Adityas, the 8 Vasus, the 2 Aswins and the 11 Roudrasi.

The Indians were very attached to the number eleven. The body of Brahma-Prajapati, Lord of Creatures, is composed of ten members, making eleven Prajapatis with him. The ten Prajapatis or Rischis, Sages, are probably the ten Patriarchs from whom humankind descended. Their names can be found on our plate E.

Vishnu was also supposed to have his retinue of ten. There are ten avatars, incarnations of this god, which we indicate on 'the same board.

7. The number Eleven and the seven Angels in Buddhism.
(See plate F.)

Buddhism recognizes Adi- as the first Being Buddha, the supreme Sage, and at his side eternal matter

1. Dowson, Classical Dictionary of Hindu Mythology.

76 MASONIC DOGMATICS

nelle. Metempsychosis is its general law. The path to traversed by all beings is matter up to nir-pana. The inhabitants of the visible universe are divided into six paths: 1. the inhabitants of hell; 2. the animals; 3. the Pretahs or famished demons, tormented by hunger and the thirst, dwelling at the bottom of the sea, among men in the forests, in human form or in the form of animals; 4° the Asuras or Genies, by the sea or in the escarpments of Mount Souméroü, the Olympus of Buddhism. These first four classes are what are called the four bad conditions; 5° men; 6° the Devas or dicux, living on the four floors of Mount Souméroü.

To these six classes, we must add the Nagas or dragons, the Garondas or marvelous birds, the Aënnaras and beautiful-suddenly other beings who are, like all the previous ones, subjected to ascending or descending metempsychosis following Their merit is not deserved.

The series of... begins on the fourth floor of the Souméroü.
six superimposed heavens, which constitute the World of Desires, their inhabitants still being subject to lust.

In the first heaven dwell four dicux who preside over the four parts of the world; the second is called the heaven of thirty-three, because Indra stays there, with as many of characters, who, like him, had risen to power through their virtues, of the human condition to that of the Devas; the third is called the heaven of Yama, because this god resides there with other people like him; in the fourth, called the Abode of Joy, the five senses cease to exert their influence; it is there that purified beings, having reached the degree of buddhisattva, which precedes absolute perfection, come to live while waiting for the moment to descend to earth in the capacity of Buddha, Sage; in the fifth heaven, of the conversion, desires, born from the five atoms or principles of sense-sation, are converted into purely intellectual pleasures; at sixth, finally, is Lord Iswara, who helps the conversion of others, also called the King of the genies of the dead.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 77

All beings of these four highest heavens residing within ethereal matter.

Above the six heavens of the World of Desires, begins a second series of superimposed circles, which constitute the World of Shapes and Colors, whose inhabitants are still subject to one of the conditions of material existence rielle, the shape or the color. We count eighteen degrees of superimposed floors in this world of forms, according to the degrees of moral and intellectual perfection of his habits so much.

The World Without Forms, composed of four super-circles, follows.
settled, whose inhabitants are distinguished by attributes even more elevated. Those of the first dwell in the ether; those of the second reside in knowledge; those of the third-
the sixth reside in annihilation; and those of the fourth, above which there is nothing more, also free from conditions of localized knowledge, and of annihilation-ment, which does not admit of a locality, are designated by a Sanskrit expression which literally means neither thoughts nor Non-thinkers. It is this final degree that is called Nirvana.
the supreme goal of the Buddhist's desires and hopes. Obtain-
To reach Nirvana is to transcend the scale of beings and vicissitudes.

situations of existence; it is to be totally free from links of the body, of successive migrations, and so to speak, of self-awareness; it is extreme quietism to the absolute, to the impossible, to annihilation'.

A Buddhist book recounts the legend of King Rawma who fathered thirty-two sons. These thirty-two princes they married their thirty-two cousins, and each had Thirty-two children?

This legend surely has connections to the doctrine of the Sefer-Jezirak (Book of Formation), the oldest Kabbalistic book, the first proposition of which is this: "It is with the thirty-two marvelous ways of the Sa-

1. Migne, Dictionary of World Religions.
2. Migne, The Sacred Books of the Pagans, 11, p. 478.

78 Masonic Dogmatics

I believe that the world was created by the Eternal, the Lord armies, the God of Israel, the living God, the all- God powerful, the supreme God who dwells in eternity, whose "Name is sublime and holy."

With the Lord himself, this number is 33.

We only need to have found meme in Buddhism the number eleven, still bearing the seal of the double men-pagan dream: the separation of the Trinity or of the persons divine unity of their essence, and the essential identity of the creature with the Creator.

8. The number Eleven and the seven Angels among the Assyro-Babylonians.

{See plate G.;

The religion of the Assyrians and Babylonians has suffered too much changes so that we can make it here the des-inscription. Let us be content with the inscription on the obelisk of Salmanasar II. She puts Assur, Asura of the Indians ct Ahura of the Persians, at the head of all the great deities, of which there are twelve.

Of this number of thirteen deities, we believe we must eliminate the last two, which are the only ones that carry the character feminine: Beltis, the wife of Bel, the star, the daughter of Sin. They are pure abstractions, and their worship does not go back not in the early centuries of this religion.

Just as Assur corresponds to Ahura, Anu corresponds to Ahu, and Bel and Hea to the other two higher Sephiroth or intellectual; Bin, Sin and Samas, to the three Sephiroth morals; Merodakh, Nergal and Ninip, Sephiroth of the physical order; and finally, Nusku, the Bearer of the Scepter of Gold, to the last Sephirah, Malkuth, the Kingdom.

Freemasonry can boast of having inherited from all the idols of ancient paganism!

1. Franck, Kabbalah, p. 56.

CHAPTER V

THE FOUR WORLDS OF THE KABBALAH

1. The world of emanations.

Kabbalah has more than one Achilles' heel.

The Zohar places great emphasis on its assertion that the ten Sephiroth are not creatures of the Ensoph, which would constitute a decrease in its strength. They do, he said, strict unity, both among themselves and with Ensoph, and represent only different aspects of the same Being; like the different rays of the same light, appear-visible signs of health are merely the different manifestations of the same light. For this reason, they all take part to the perfections of the Ensoph.

As emanations of the Infinite, the Sephiroth are therefore infinite and perfect like Infinity; and yet they consist. They are the first finite things. They are infinite and perfect when Ensoph imparts its fullness to them, finished and imperfect when this fullness is taken away from them!

To believe in this impossible duality, one must abandon the rules of logic and to lull oneself into the illusion of a divine plenitude, simultaneously finite and infinite.

Obviously, if this fullness is infinite, it must be absolutely indivisible; therefore, when it is removed, if to— However, it can be removed; absolutely nothing will remain. Since it is not composed of parts, it cannot be withdrawn partly, and to be left partly.

The conjunction of the Sephiroth, or, to speak in the language From the Zohar, the union of the Holy King and the Matron produced The Universe according to their own image. If these two characters are infinite beings, the child of their union must be equal-infinite element. However, the Universe is not infinite. We must therefore, we observe a new contradiction.

The Zohar distinguishes four worlds: the first world is the world of emanations (Olam Asiluth); the second, that of creation (Olam Beriah); the third, that of the formation (Olam Yezirah); and the fourth, that of the fabrication-cation (Olam Asiah).

80 MASONIC DOGMATICS

The world of emanations is that of the ten Sephiroth, represented by ten concentric circles, Ensoph being their central point. As we have just demonstrated, this The world is a hybrid being, sometimes finite, sometimes infinite.

2. The world of creation.

The world of Briatics, or creation, is inferior to that emanations, because it does not emanate directly from the Ensoph, but through the intermediary of the Holy King and the Matron. This world, also called Throne, to be at a greater distance from Ensoph, is endowed with powers more limited and more circumscribed than the celestial Sephiroth. The celestials are called the Pavilion of the Ensoph, and are of a less brilliant light than the point or the Corona, but "being still too dazzling to be looked at, the Pavillon in turn spread outwards, and this extension The sion served as his clothing. That's how everything is done by a movement that always descends; it is thus, finally, that The universe was formed.

The terms Papillon and Vêtement are taken from points 2 and 3. Verses from the psalm cut: "Lord, my Dicu, you have Your magnificence was brilliantly revealed. You clothed yourself in Testimonials of beauty: the light surrounds you like a fart. Spreading the sky like a pavilion, you give him "Give the limestone for vaults."

Any reasonable person immediately understands that such gradual degradation, possible for light and for everything that which is finite constitutes an absurdity for the Infinite.

The briutic world is formed by a sculptor, the angel Metatron, called by this Greek name because he is immediately beneath the throne of God, and constitutes the garment-

4. Franck, The Kabbalah, p. 160.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 81

The ment of the Shaddat (Almighty). As we have already said, by unique position it corresponds exactly to the Mart-Tanda of the Vedic peoples.

One of the passwords for the rank of Sovereign Prince of Royal Secret is Shaddai. This Sovereign Prince is called to veil and protect the Almighty from the Freemason-nothing. It's like his clothes. For that reason, he occupies the 32nd degree, acting as Metatron to the Masonic King-nique which sits at the 33rd degree supreme.

It is the Metatron who, according to Kabbalah, governs the visible world and maintains unity, harmony and movement. He has under his command myriads of subjects from the Yesiratic world.

It is unnecessary to demonstrate how much all this. The doctrine is arbitrary.

8. The world of training.

From Metatrôue descends the Yesiratie world, that is to say of the formation or contraction, of which the Sephiroth are even further removed from the Eusoph, and consequently even less luminous than those of the British world.

However, they are still free of matter. That's the abode of angels, wrapped in luminous garments, who assume visible forms when they show themselves, to men.

These myriad angels are divided into ten categories, obviously in honor of the ten Sephiroth. Each of the Angels are assigned to a part of the universe from which they draw their name.

Having only Mr. Franck's work at our disposal, It is impossible for us to guarantee the accuracy of the list-ratio and coordination of the ten categories of angels subordinates arranged under this Metatron whom we present on our table A. With all due reservations, we Let us assume the following order to be plausible:

4, Frank, p. 168, – Zohar, 1, 42.

82 Masonic Dogmatics

Metatron represents, in the world of Spirits, the En-soph;

Ouriel, the angel of Light, and Nouriel, the angel of Fire, the Sephiroth of Wisdom and Understanding;

Racmiel, the angel of Mercy, the Sephirah of Greece or Mercy;

Zadkiel, the angel of Justice, the Sephirah Justice;

Nogah, Pange of the planet Venus, the Sephirah Beauty;

Meodim, Yange of the planet Mars, the Sephirah Triumph;

Tahariël, Yange of Purity, the Sephirah of Glory;

Paduël, Pange of Deliverance, the Sephirah Base or Foundation;

Rasziël, the angel of Secrets, ct Yotsem haschammaiïm, the substances of the sky, seem to represent the Sephiroth Xether ct Malkhuth, the Crown and the Kingdom.

We invite scientists to correct this hypothesis, if...
y a licu.

&. The world of manufacturing.

From this world of formation finally emerged the world of matter-riel made, of which the ten Sephiroth are composed at average of the more exaggerated elements of previous worlds, and consist of a material substance, limited by space, perceptible to the senses in a multiplicity of forms. This world is subject to changes and corruptions. continuous tions.

Note here that this doctrine is a corruption of the 6th verse.

excerpt from the psalm. David says: "You have founded the earth on its stability. » The Hebrew word for found is iasad; Hence the name Aesod, which we have already noted to be the name of the ninth Sephirah, Foundation or Base. Jewish philosophy therefore views the material world as a natural production of the Divine Being, like a procreation of its coarser elements generated from it by the union of the Holy King and the Matronc, which will serve as a model to the procreation of the bodies of men and animals.

Kubbalists were shameless enough to attribute to the divinity, such animality. {They really needed it for cover their monstrous doctrine which emanates matter of the divine substance. This divine substance, how So, does she come down from Ensoph to reach the Base?

MASONIC DOGMATICS 83

The Ensoph being too pure and luminous to be able to contain within it matter and any germ of corruption, and creation ex nihilo being considered by the Kabbalah as impossible, here's how philosophy Jewish woman explains the origin of the substance:

"From the Spirit comes a girl who identifies with him in the supreme thought. This voice is, in essence, nothing other than water, air and fire, the East, the South and the West and all the forces of nature; but all these elements and all these forces merge into one thing: in this pear that comes from the Spirit'.

"This voice having emerged from the 'Cause of causes', which is also called the primordial Non-being (Ayin Kadmon), it is "True, in that sense, that the world was produced from nothing!"

Obviously, if the pure light of the Ensoph and the Couronne can change into a physical pitch, or produce it one, and if this voice is nothing other than matter, we can easily prove that the material is derived from the sub-divine intervention. The difficulty, however, is very great to make men who like to think that understand that these metamorphoses of infinite and divine light into one voice, and from this divine voice in water, air, and fire, These are not fantasies designed to deceive fools. but philosophical deductions worthy of thinkers serious.

This is the intellectual nourishment that satiates the so-called free thinkers, pantheists and Freemasons lessons, all dupes of the Kabbalistic philosophy of the Jews.

Our A-frame showcases the manufacturing world, which has no explanation is needed, since it is implicitly content within the World of Creation.

1. Franck, The Kabbalah, p. 160,

84 MASONIC DOGMATICS

5. The four worlds in Masonic settings.

Do they understand, the Great Master Architects of 12th degree, the four semicircles engraved on their medal? And do they believe in the existence of the Sephiroth, the Metatron, and of the ten categories of angels? If they don't believe in it, then why-

Why do they adorn themselves with their decorations?

And the Princes of the Tabernacle, of the 24th degree, what an idea They make themselves out of the small golden globe surmounted by a double triangle, encircled by rays, with the word Jehovah in the center? Do they know this meaning, that "the Great Architect of the Universe" created our globe through the union of the "King Saint and Matron? Do they know that through love of these two celestial figures, represented at the 29th degree by a Croër de Saint-André, the light rays of the En-soph have been propagated and changed into a pitch which, at its core, Was it simply the matter from which this globe is composed? If they do they know, can they in good conscience wear this jewel on their left hip, and thereby profess that they believe in these follies pagan practices that the Jews are the first to mock?

Similarly, the Knights Kadosh, the Inquisitors, Ins-Spectators, Commanders, and the Sovereign Princes of the Royal Secret, these initiates of the 30th, 31st and 32nd degrees, understand-they believe that the four worlds owe their existence, according to the Kabbalah, at the fourfold union of the sephiratic principles males and females, each union represented by a Greek tan, and the four of you arranged around the mystical "point", forming So, the Teutonic Cross? They certainly don't fail to wear it. this cross embroidered on their cords or on the bib of their Masonic aprons, like gold jewelry. They are made of by that very fact they are considered continuators of the old cult the filthy phallus. The Jews of the Kabbalah have it for them enscinigné ainsi, ct cux, ils fais ablinement plus qu' ceux They order them to do it! Blind obedience is the most great Masonic virtue. It is a profound obedience Blindly insane... even beyond the 33rd and final degree!

CHAPTER VI

EARTH MAN

4. The Kabbalistic Man, an emanation of the Sephiroth.

According to Kabbalistic doctrine, earthly man is An image of the celestial man. (See plate B.)

The human soul is composed of three elements: 1° of a spirit (nischmah), emanation of the intellectual triad of 1. 2. A dme (ruakh), an emanation of the moral triad, and 3° of a vital spirit (nephesh), emanation of the physical triad. The human body is composed of two elements: 1° of its model form called by the Kab-modern ballistae, the individual principle, and by the necro-modern mantras, the perispirit, which descends with the soul during its incarnation and constitutes the individual principle, and 2° of its physical part.

The body contains the vital spirit and the forces of interre-
The veins, bones, and flesh form the material part, and the skin is like the firmament and a
A tunic that covers everything?

The mind illuminates the soul; the soul imposes its law on the vital spirit.
and the vital spirit acts upon the body. During sleep, the soul ascends to heaven to report on his day.

The "model form" of the body, which descended with the spirit in this world to be incorporated into a pre- body adorned by human generation, goes back after the death of body with spirit in heaven, where she is presented by the Matron to the Holy King. If the spirit is not worthy to return
In the divinity from which he originated, he is forced to transmigrate.
in another body, either human or animal, to undergo a new test, and so on until he is

- 4. Franck, p. 176,
- 2. Franck, pp. 173-191.

86 MASONIC DOGMATICS

Completely purified. Finally, beyond the grave, among the different degrees of existence, also called the seven tabernacles, there is one, designated under the title of "Saint of the saints," where all souls will reunite with the soul supreme and complement each other. There, everything enters into unity and perfection; everything merges in a single thought, which extends over the universe and the rem-completely folded... In this state, the creature cannot To distinguish them from the Creator: the same thought illuminates them, the same will animates them; the soul as well as God commands them universe, and what it ordains, God the exegete,

2. The deification of man in Freemasonry.

The Kabbalistic doctrine on human nature does not it is hardly represented by emblems; we find it again-vons without any veil in the teaching of the franc-masonry.

"This is the entirety of the secret teachings of the Chiefs." supreme principles of Freemasonry... Recognizing the existence of a The First Cause, of which man and creation are effects, ct of which human SME is a spark, immortal as She. "

"The works of the 5th degree – Perfect Master – aim to to demonstrate that man, being finite, could not escape nature, its most hidden secrets, nor create science and the arts, if its intelligence were not an emanation direct from the First Cause.

This is the basic indoctrination carried out by the Great Minister. State and Grand Orator of the Supreme Council to the recipient-Area of the 33rd degree?

3. Appreciation of the deification of man,

Note that the teaching of the "Great Minister" "of the State" is hardly philosophical; for in the first place, all direct emanation of Peter who is infinite, and consequently

- 4. Franck, p. 189,
- 2. Paul Rosen, Satan and Cio, p. 253 and 293.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 87

indivisible, can only be an equally infinite emanation

within its substance, and therefore only one a relationship subsisting in infinite substance. An emanation-tion outside of its substance implies a limit, a divisibility, a composition, of which the infinite Being could not to be capable, as everyone knows.

Secondly, the reason given to prove that the intel-Human intelligence is a direct emanation of the Infinite.
futile in every respect; for it is not true that, for to understand the secrets of nature or to create the
In the sciences and the arts, human intelligence must necessarily... to be a direct emanation of the Infinite. An intelligence-agency created by God, brought into existence by his all-powerful divine power, by its very nature, is endowed firstly of a created light, capable of penetrating through the accidents of things down to their substances, and second-demented by an intellectual eye, capable of seeing what the Rational light presents it to him in full view. This process psychological, which is called hearing and understanding, does not requires no more than these two created faculties, light and the intellectual eye.

Thirdly, if human intelligence was an em-
As a direct nation of God, it would be like God himself.
knowing all things and incapable of making a mistake, what she is not.

Should we call this perverse doctrine the deification of Man or Dicu's anthropomorphism? The Kabbalists formed their divinity according to human nature, notwithstanding both the doctrine of their Bible which teaches that, on the contrary, Man was formed in the image and likeness of God.

It is agreed among all philosophers that the goal of
All philosophy aims to satisfy the human mind on the subject Big questions: What is man? What are Its origin and purpose? What is the nature of the world?
What is God?

A philosophy that provides satisfactory answers to these questions, without offending the first rational truths-

88 MASONIC DOGMATICS

new and self-evident, without contradicting themselves even without relying on gratuitous assumptions, is a a sound and true philosophy, worthy of being adopted by all intelligent man.

Kabbalistic philosophy does not fulfill these conditions.

as for his doctrine on divinity.

She was no happier explaining what man. The tripartite division of the soul is a very frequent error. She wants to refute it so that we will take care of it again. destroys the unity of the soul. The threefold source of these three powers-sessions, sought in the three triads of the archetypal Ilomme, is a completely unfounded hypothesis, The divinity of human intelligence, duke at its substantial origin of Divine Wisdom is an absurdity, because with the divine-The integrity of this part of our soul would be given in the same time, its eternity, its omniscience, and all the attributes divine, which are inseparable from the divine substance.

There are no sparks coming out of Infinity. Infinity is not not a limited fire from which sparks can escape. This a burst of sparks from a sea overflowing with fire, and their final absorption, or a relapse, in the illi- furnace The notions of divinity are pure figments of the imagination. Our souls are neither fire nor sparks; and Dicu is neither a Neither sea nor fire. The image used to promote this false doctrine, is neither a logical deduction nor an argument-philosophical ment. Likewise, the final confusion of souls with the Ensoph takes away their personality and any idea of A well-deserved reward. The number of souls who emerged from the En-Soph, since all eternity has passed, is the number of souls returned in its second state, would be two infinite numbers, which is also absurd. The deification of intelligence human is the height of his pride, and his subjection to The error, attributing it to ill will, is an insult to the divinity.

Finally, all this doctrine on the origin and destiny of man, must inevitably lead to demoralization of humankind and to the eternal loss of souls.

Masonic Dogmatics 89

The Jewish philosophy of Kabbalah is false in every respect. intellectual relationships, and fundamentally bad and disastrous-hollow in every moral respect.

Based on Persian philosophy, it is infinitely inferior in moral terms. The love of truth the path of purity, the hatred of Satan Ahriman and all evil spirits, inscribed on every page of the Zend-Avesta, They are absolutely lacking in Kabbalah.

Obviously, the goal of Kabbalah was not to enlighten nor to improve the morals of his followers.

&. Practical and political purpose of Kabbalah.

The spirit of Kabbalah corresponds entirely to its pre-first principle, Kether-Malkuth, and to the goal of the Talmud Babylonian. Kabbalah is the dogma of heterodox Jews, The Talmud, their morality and canon law. The Talmud and the Kabbalah are twin children of the political spirit of the Jewish people, considered as a separate people, mixed with all the nations of the world, without ever merging with them; that is the supreme leadership of this strange people, as known Even today, the civilized world.

How to explain, philosophically, the Kether-Evil-khuth, the Royal Crown, which, split into Crown and Kingdom, embraces the other Sephiroth as the first Was this the last one among them? Neither the crown nor the kingdom are divine attributes.

Is Kabbalah truly a Jewish cabal? Is it secretly written and disseminated with the aim of placing On the Jew's head is the crown, and under his feet the kingdom of the Universe? Is that the purpose for which it is written in the Kabbalah states that the "Crown, the Kether, is the principle of principles with which all diadems are adorned and which form all "The crowns"?

The goal of Freemasonry is universal domination. saddle, and Freemasonry is a Jewish institution.

Freemasonry, steeped in Kabbalistic philosophy Is it not established to be the instrument of the Jewish people?

90 Masonic Dogmatics

If that is not the case, let them explain it to us more clearly. their philosophical reasons, like those of the Kabbalah, the presence, in the Sephiroth, of Kether-Malkuth, of this royal diadem that sparkled on the head of the beautiful Jewish woman Esther and her uncle Mordecai.

The place that the representatives of the Jews in the kingdom of Darius, son of Hystaspes, that is the ideal glorious, which seems to have inspired the philosophy of the Kabbalah.

And if the Jew Mordecai, adorned with his Aether-Malkuth, and receiving the homage of all the Persian people, is a typical character continued in the history of the Jews of Every time, what brilliant light does not shine upon the Kabbalah and Freemasonry, and their importance Ethnopolitics! The archetypal Man, Man par excellence—Lence, the model for all men, is the Jew!

5. The Jew, the Man par excellence.

Carlile, a Masonic authority, gives the following definition: boasts of the name Jew: "The original meaning of the name and of the The distinction of a Jew was that of a wise and perfect man out of devotion to science. The word has the same meaning that Jehovah; literally, it is the God of Man, the The Holy Spirit, or the Spirit inspired by man.

Is the term "prairi" or "perfect" the same as "prairi" or "perfect" man? Jewish? The eleventh degree of the Rite of Perfection and of the Rite brought to America by the Jew Stephen Morin, did not carry not yet the title of Sublime or Luster Knight Elect, but of "Illustrious Elect, Chief of the Twelve Tribes" or "Illustrious Knight of the twelve tribes." Now, the tribe of Judah was at the head of the twelve tribes; the perfect man is therefore the Jew. Richard Carlile's definition is Masonically ortho—doxc.

4. Carlile, Manual of Freemasonry, p. 171.

CHAPTER VII

PSYCHOLOGICAL ORIGIN OF KABBALAH

4. The best possible world.

What, then, is the origin of this unbridled pride which leads Jews to call themselves Humanity par excellence, and each Jew a true Man, above all other creation—human nature? We have no doubt: it is the mystery of Fallen Lucifer, repeated in the fallen people of God.

It is difficult to make this mystery understandable to those who do not have an exact idea of the supernatural destiny that God, the Creator, had given to his intelligent creatures, both angelic and human.

If the unbelievers do not accept what we are going to

In other words, they will at least find a clear, coherent explanation there. rente ct intelligible from the most intimate source of this phen- the extraordinary figure that the Jew represents in history universal, as well as in the most secret springs of Freemasonry.

Divine wisdom, having wanted to create the best world possible, created a world of intelligent beings, capable of to understand His divine Majesty, to love His infinite Goodness, and to enjoy with him his eternal Beatitude. Now, to enjoy a well-deserved, infinitely better than enjoying a good undeserved. Merit has a moral value that no one possesses Not a fortune.

It was therefore better to give creatures free will intelligent, so that they might merit cel- happiness light.

However, free will implies the possibility of transgression. and consequently of moral evil, of sin. Nevertheless, it It was worthwhile to allow evil in this way, rather than not conferring it. to intelligent beings free will. By rendering sin

92 Masonic Dogmatics

It's possible, but God doesn't create it; sin always remains. the work of the creature who abuses its free will.

But Dicu's glory being infinite, and unable to be completely represented by no created being and therefore necessarily of a limited and infinitely distant nature From Dicu, these intelligent beings could not yet constitute- to kill an absolutely perfect world, nor the best world possible. The best possible creature is according to its nature. intrinsically impossible.

Divine Wisdom, however, was able to bridge this gap. and build a bridge across the necessarily gaping abyss between The creature and the Creator. This link, bringing the finite closer to The Infinite is sanctifying grace, or "the Charity of God." poured into our hearts by the Holy Spirit who has been "Given!" Through charity, we have "received the spirit of adoption." tion in which we cry out: Abba, Father. Indeed, PEs- he himself testifies to our spirit, that we We are children of God. But if we are children, we are also heirs of Dicu? » From this adoption of en- God's followers, it logically follows that one must distinguish a dual purpose or vocation of man: the natural purpose and the purpose supernatural.

We have absolutely nothing in our nature that... gives the right to the inheritance of heaven; just like a son of The people have no right to the king's inheritance.

It is likewise impossible that, through our good deeds... natural acts we deserved this divine inheritance; for no act something of finite value cannot merit an infinite reward.
No. Now, the sanctifying grace, poured into our hearts by "The Spirit who dwells in us?", morally joins our actions. Through this union of two cooperating elements, our good deeds take on a dual nature, of the na-human nature and divine nature; because of the first

4. Rom., v, 5.
2. Ibid., seen, 15-17,
3. Ibid., 11.

Masonic Dogmatics 93

we deserve a reward, it's because of the second one Merit acquires infinite value. Heavenly glory responds in full justice to this human-divine merit.

This is the best possible world. Faced with infinite value.
of sanctifying grace every measure of imperfection in the nature of the creature disappears, and the least of men can gain as much heavenly glory as the most perfect of angels. God was in no way obliged to destine man to the supernatural end, which is heaven. In doing so, He has given us showed immense kindness that we had never experienced before.
Well deserved.

A king can thus adopt one of his subjects by giving him, to him and his posterity, the princely dignity, under the condition-tion to serve him loyally. Neither this subject nor his children could claim in no way any right or dignity with its princely honors and pleasures.

Princely dignity is what we have called the divine grace, by which we are children and heirs-third of Dieu.

2. The best possible creatures and their downfall.

Certainly, if the subject who became a prince, of whom we have just
By speaking, he was guilty of treason against his king.
As a benefactor, the king would not be acting unjustly by inflicting the the punishment he deserves, and by sending him away from his royal palace, him and his entire family, which would thus be reduced to its first condition of simple subject. Even the children of this

Those who were outraged would not have participated in their father's crime. Nevertheless, they would suffer the consequences, and would be deprived, along with him, and because of him, of princely dignity.

This is original sin; it essentially consists of
This is because we are born without the original sanctifying grace. that we should have, but that our first father has lost to himself and to all his posterity. Nothing of more just than this deprivation of original sanctifying grace manure, which was not owed to us. This loss entails with it is the deprivation of the heavenly inheritance, to which we have not no rights.

94 MASONIC DOGMATICS

3. The true Dicu-Man, archetype of deified men.

The sin of our first parents, having been committed at the following a temptation suggested by Satan, was not judged by Dicu with the same rigor as the sin of Satan, which was the result of his own will without any seduction. The misery-God's mercy, as infinite as his justice, has found the way to save the man with his consent, and to return him to his first celestial destiny, all while satisfying to the extreme rigor of justice.

Like our supernatural acts, stemming from a double source, of human will and divine grace, are deserving of a reward of infinite value; thus a expiatory sacrifice, offered to divine justice by a person bearing a dual nature, the divine of all eternity-nity, and the human, by assuming, over time, a body and a human soul, was capable of defying demands of justice as well as divine mercy.

This is the ultimate reason for the incarnation of the Son of God. Like Ilomme and God, he offered himself to his Father in holocaustic to redeem fallen humanity.

Like Ilomme, he could be the representative and the A substitute for humankind, by dying on the cross; and Like God, he could give his sacrifice a value infinite. In this way he could recover, in our name, paradise lost, and restoring the merciful intention of God's way of thinking about us. These truths, so simple, and yet so simple. Such sublime and comforting times form the basis of the Revealed religion. The Son of Dicu made man and victorious of death, is the archetype of all those who believed in him: "Through his sacrifice, he became for all those who..." "They obey, the cause of eternal salvation!"

4. Hebrews, v, 9.

Masonic Dogmatics 95

4. God's true chosen people.

To introduce the Savior of the world into the world, and to prove its mission and its divine authority, Wisdom God chose a people and destined them to be the custodians of His will. of the promise made to humankind to send them a Redeemer. Through this people, God wanted to re- to confirm and clarify by means of miracles and new pro- Pheasures, this precious promise. This chosen people was to bear in itself and in its temporal realm, the image and the figure of the future Messiah and King of the people of Dicu, as well as the symbol- bole, the type and the anticipation of the true people of God, resonance- Bound to his Creator by the Redeemer's sacrifice. The future King and his Kingdom, Christ and his Church, had to be conceived and understood in the sense of a king and a spiritual kingdom tuels, because they themselves could have no other mission and destiny than to be in this world the earthly type, the temporal beginning and mystical anticipation, but real, of the eternal Royalty and Kingdom. This achievement the final outcome of all the figures and prophecies was to be established in heaven, under the eternal scepter of the same Redeemer divine, who by his precious blood would have acquired the Kether- Heavenly Malkuth, under whom the glorious people will rejoice chosen by God.

In this future celestial Kingdom, it was to be fulfilled, and to be accomplished... will fulfill the primary purpose for which God created the world. There, for all eternity, will exist the best creation possible: countless angelic creatures ct hu- Maines, endowed with intelligence and free will, know- seeing God "by seeing the light in his light!", and con- tempering the divine essence and its infinite beauty: children adopted children of God, like him, "because they will see him "as it is?" and "face to face?", the magnet of their own

4. Psalm 35:10.

2, 1Jean, m, 2.
8. Cor., xur, 12.

96 Masonic Dogmatics

will and embracing him forever "trembling with a
"Ineffable and glorified joy!"

5. The Jewish idea of God's chosen people,

Let us note here the radical error of the heterodox Jews.
They did not understand the spiritual meaning of all the prophecies.
tics ct figures of the alliance that Dicu had made with their nation. They imagined that the promised King would be a king earthly, his Kingdom a kingdom of this world, and the Kether-Malkhut, a crown similar to those of kings human emotions. For them, the promised King had to be The King of all nations, his Kingdom was to extend throughout the earth, his royal diadem contains all the royal diadems, which would be nothing more than an outflow of it, a partial emanation. Thus, in his hope, the Jew would be the supreme temporal master of the universe, and all the predictions of his prophets coming true in their material sense. If we want to appreciate hope and the claim of this people, unique in humankind, Let us read some passages from the Old Testament in its sense.

Moses, having summoned all the people of Israel, said to him:
"Listen, Israel... You are a holy and consecrated people To the Signer Your Dicu. The Signer Your Dicu has chosen ones, so that you might be his people and particular among all the peoples that are on earth. This it is not because you surpass in number all the nations, whom the Lord has united with and chosen for him, since on the contrary, you are fewer in number than all other peoples. But it is because the Lord loved you, and kept the oath he had sworn to your ancestors, by bringing you out of Egypt by his hand all-powerful, by redeeming you from this period of servitude and by rescuing you from the hands of Pharaoh, king of Egypt. You Therefore you will know that the Lord your God is himself the Dicu strong and faithful who keeps his covenant and his mercy-

1. I Petr., 1, 8.

a rope for a thousand generations towards those who love it 1."

"Why did the nations (goyim) tremble? And why Have the people plotted vain schemes? The kings of the lands rose up and the princes united against the Lord and against his Christ. Let us break their bonds and reject—Take yourselves far from us, their yoke. Ask me, and I will give you the nations for your inheritance, and for your possession the Earth's boundaries 2.

"Sit at my right hand until I make your enemies, the footstool of your feet. The Lord will bring forth from Zion, the scepter of your power: rule in the midst of your enemies. The Lord is at your right hand; he has broken the kings on the day of his wrath. He will judge among the nations, he will complete the ruins: he will crush on the earth the heads of a large number 3.

"Arise, Jerusalem, receive the light, for behold
Your light has come, and the glory of the Lord has been revealed.
rising up against you, yes, darkness will cover the earth, and a
A dark night will envelop the peoples; but the Lord will will rise up over you and you will see his glory burst forth in the midst of YOU.

"The nations will walk in your light, and Kings, to the splendor that will rise upon you! Lift up your eyes and look around you, at everyone you see Assembled here come for you; your sons will come from good far away and your daughters will come to you from all sides.

"Then you will see and you will be in an abundance of joy, your heart will be amazed and overflowing with joy.
even, when you are filled with the riches of the sea, and that all the great ones among the nations will come give yourself. You will be flooded by a crowd of cha-meaux, by the camels of Midian and Ephah.

"They will all come from Saba to bring you gold and..."
Incense. The children of foreigners will build your walls,

4. Deuteronomy, chapter 7, 6, 9.
2. Ps. 1.
3. Ps. cx.

and their kings will serve you, because I have struck with indignation, and that I have shown you mercy by reconciling with you. Your doors will always be Once open, they will not be closed day or night, so that... You bring the riches of the nations and may they bring you their kings. For the people and the kingdom that will not be yours

They who are subjugated will perish, and I will make these nations one dreadful desert... The children of those who had humiliated people will come to prostrate themselves before you; and all those Those who once criticized you will now adore the traces of your footsteps. You will suckle the milk of nations, you will be nourished at the breast kings... I will give you gold in bronze, argent instead of iron, bronze instead of wood, and iron to A place of stones... All people will be a righteous people; They will possess the earth forever, because they will scribble the shoots that I have planted, the works that my hand has made to give me glory... I am the Lord, and it is I who would suddenly create these wonders, when time in will have come.

Read these prophetic words, understand them literally, and terrestrial, and you have the solution to the riddle, the explanation From the feverish activity, you have the new pes Jors. They are believe the people destined by Jehovah to rule over all The nations. The riches of the earth belong to them, and the crowns of kings should only be emanations tions, dependencies of their Xether-Malkuth.

6. Naturalization by the Jews of the chosen man and people of God.

In their blindness, the Jews do not see and do not want-slow not to see all that leads to giving to the quoted texts, of which we could multiply the number a hundredfold, an interpretation-spiritual union. For example, in the first text cited from In the second psalm, there is the verse: "The Lord said to me: You are my son; today I have begotten you. These words are addressed to the one who is called the Christ of

1. Isaiah, chapter 1,

Masonic Dogmatics 99

Lord. Therefore, the context must be explained in such a way that to be in harmony with this verse. But David could not say of her own person that she was the son of the Lord

"Brought" by him today. The verb jalad means properly to give birth, to engender, and not to create. The eye pro-David's prophetic vision therefore had in mind the future Messiah whom he sings in many of his psalms.

Dicu's son is in reality begotten by God the Father in eternity. The word "today" confirms this interpretation. Gesis, because in eternity there is neither past nor future, It is a perpetually permanent "today". The Jewish interpretation of this text in its natural sense is therefore incompatible with the verse which is its context.

Similarly, the other text, taken from the psalm 100, must absolutely- This can be interpreted as the future Messiah, and by no means as the king. of the Jewish people. The divine Savior himself proves it by asking the Jews: "How can one say that Christ is David's son, since David himself expresses himself in this way in the book of Psalms: "The Lord said to my Sei- "Lord: Sit at my right until I do "The footstool of your enemies?" If then David He calls him Lord, how can he be his son?

If the Jews had studied the holy books and Having given faith in divine revelation, they would have understood the words of their prophet Isaiah: "God himself will come and "He will save you." – "A virgin will conceive and give birth" a son who will be called Emmanuel? (God with us); for a A little child is born to us, and a son is given to us; and he will be called the 'Admirable,' the Counselor, Dizo, the Strong, the Father of the next century, the Prince of Peace.

"A shoot will spring from the stump of Jesse, and a flower will blossom will spring forth from its root, and the spirit of the Lord will rest upon it. Jewish.

4. Isaiah, 35:4.

2. Isale, seen, 14.

8. Isaiah, 1x, 6.

4. Isaiah, 10:1, 2.

100 Masonic Dogmatics

Of all these texts and a quantity of other similar ones, The Jews could and should have concluded that the promised Messiah must have been both God and Man; like Dicu, He would be the Lord of David, and as a man, the son of David.

Eufin, in the truly grandiose and imposing text that we quoted in the third section, there are passages from- which they should have concluded that the great promises listed by the prophet related to the spiritual Jerusalem ritual, at the holy Church of the Savior. For he said to him, "Your Children from afar will bring you their money and gold, etc. They will consecrate it in the name of the Lord your God and of the holy of Israel which has glorified you," that is to say, of the Messiah Jesus-Christ. "All those who denigrate you will worship the traces From your steps they will call you the city of the Lord, Zion. of the holy one of Israel.

They should have lifted their eyes from the spiritual Jerusalem even higher, to the heavenly Jerusalem, for the prophet adds: "You will no longer have the sun to light your way." during the day, and the moonlight will no longer shine for you; but the Lord himself will become your light eternal et Dicis scra your glory. Your sun does not set- It won't hurt, and your Monday will no longer suffer from a decrease. because the Lord will be your eternal torch, and the "Your days of tears will be over."

Or we see it, by his unbelief, by his ambition and his Greed, the Jew failed to recognize the spiritual, supernatural character and divine of the promised Messiah and of his kingdom. He dared- cleverly substituted himself for the Messiah and made of his nation, the kingdom of God.

Jesus Christ, as God-Man, is the model and the arch-archetype of saved men: but the Kabbalistic Jew considers the archetypal man as an emanation of his Ensoph, et constitutes itself, to the exclusion of others

1. Isaiah, 60, 9, 14,
2. Isaiah, zx, 19, 20.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 401

men, a direct emanation of this celestial man. He denies the divinity of the Son of David who is God and Man, and He affirms his own divinity and calls himself Ilomme and God!

By thus perverting the entire divine revelation, the Jew superstitiously applies all the great prophecies these are the promises made to Christ and to his Church.

Let us consider the immense power that a revealed idea, majes-killer and ravishing, but distorted and naturalized, must have about a people who have been steeped in it for thousands of years, and holds to it with a tenacity and obstinacy that is more than pro-Digestible. For the Jew, the idea of universal domination it became like his religion; it took root in his In spirit, she is as if petrified and indestructible.

7. The idea of the chosen man and people in Freemasonry,

The tripartition in the thirty-three degrees of the franc-Freemasonry is already familiar to us. The Kabbalistic doctrine brings the light down from above to the smallest details. degree of the universe by eleven figures in each of the three worlds. Freemasonry will raise its followers, from outer darkness of the profane, up to the very summit of its Masonic light through three times eleven degrees. The first Part of its mysteries must shape Man, or the Jew, the second, the Pontiff, and third, the Kabbalistic Sovereign-tick.

The uninitiated are Judaized there; they first become Jews. through adoption and participation, then Pontiffs and finally Sovereigns. It is through Freemasonry that the A Jew, who is one by race and birth, will rule over all the universe, the Kether on his brow and the Afalkhuth of the world to her feet.

This is his future. Jehovah promised it to him, and Jehovah is faithful to the alliance with his chosen people!

Men must therefore become elected through participation tion.

102 Masonic Dogmatics

The last triad of the first eleven degrees perfects man, so that he becomes one of the chosen ones, that is to say a member of the Jewish people.

The 9th, 10th and 11th degrees of Freemasonry are the the ranks of Elect of the Nine, Elect of the Fifteen and Illustrious Knight Elected.

It is true, these elected officials will be made to swear to avenge the death of Grand Master and to assemble the defending knights Jews; but the dangers of revenge are not a price too high for the honor of Ireland called by the Jews a Pure, perfect, and chosen men! Therefore, they have the advantage of

to wear a dagger as a decoration: the Chosen One of the Nine, a dagger with a silver blade and gold hilt; the Chosen One of Fifteen, a gold dagger with a silver blade, and a Che- chandelier Valier Élu, a dagger or short sword with a gold hilt and silver blade.

In the second series of eleven, we find at the 14th degree the grade of Grand Elect, perfect and Sublime Mason, called Thus the Great Scotsman of the Sacred Vault. The touch- The elements of this degree are similar to those of the 11th degree. vow made by our Knight Elect for his own person hiss, is renewed by the Great Chosen One perfect for the people true, that is to say, Judaized. Finally, in the third series of eleven, the 30th degree is that of the Grand Elect Knight Kadosh. Among the Jews, he is the quintessential Knight who swears Hatred and vengeance against Kings and Pontiffs for the death of Jacques Bourguignon, the last Grand Master of the Templars Molay.

This strange mixture of fallen chivalry, all self-absorbed feelings of hatred and revenge with a hierarchy Theosophy, based on Kabbalah, a philosophical doctrine of the fallen Synagogue, will later lead us to the consi- Deposition of the second essential element of Freemasonry, the abolished religious order of the Templars.

CHAPTER VIII

HERMES TRISMEGISTUS AND THE JEWISH KABBALAH

1. Jewish origin of Hermetic philosophy.

Like the morality of the Talmud, the dogma of the Kabbalah was kept secret by the Jews with care and fear which at the same time reveal a great human prudence and the bad faith of a criminal conscience. Politics The Jews have always been inclined to conform, in their attitude towards other nations and in their domestic conduct, to the principles and rules contained in these two books; They never made them known to non-Jews, nor even to those Jews whose discretion was not up to standard the immense importance that secrecy held in view of the security and civil existence of the entire nation.

Making the Talmud and Kabbalah accessible to everyone world, it is to deprive the Jews of the secret of their astonishing strength- Nantes in the midst of the nations and, with him, perhaps, this force itself.

The influence of these two hidden forces has taken hold and continues to do so. will always be felt wherever there is a need to increase the wealth or the power of the Jews, or to harm those they consider it an abominable sect, that is to say the religion of Jesus Christ. f

Egypt appears to be the first to have been endowed with a supposedly patriotic philosophy, but in reality derived of the Kabbalah.

The main author, not to say the authors, of the philosophical treatises known as the Hermes Trismegistus, or "Mercury thrice great," was a follower of Kabbalah, and for this reason, probably a Jew of Alexandria.

Isaac Casaubon, who died in 1614, expressed this opinion.

We do not have historical data to confirm this.

104 Masonic Dogmatics

this assertion, but the content of Hermetic philosophy—The tick will prove it beyond a shadow of a doubt.

The fraud by which this Jew presents his so-called revelations divine tions in the mouth of the ancient Egyptian deity—Hermes, and his son Thoth or Tat, is too crude not to simply mention it.

2. Hermetic Unity and Kabbalistic Ensoph. (See plate G.)

Hermes, wanting to give his son Tat the image of Dicu, as far as we can imagine, it says: "Unity, principle and root of all things, exists in everything as principle and root. There is nothing without principle; the principle derives from nothing but itself, since everything derives from He is his own principle, since he has none. others.

"Unity, which is the principle, contains all numbers," and is contained by none; she engenders them all, she is not "Generated by no other!"

"There is a Creator and a Master of this entire universe." space, number, and measurement could not be preserved without a creator. Order cannot be established without a place and a measure; therefore, a master is needed, O my son. Give to Dicu the name that suits him best, call him the father of all things; ear it is unique, ct its proper function is to be a father, if you want me to use a harsh expression- Die, its essence is to engender and create. And like nothing cannot exist without a creator, and thus it itself would not exist not if he did not create without ceasing... M is what is and what is not No, for what is, he has manifested; what is not, he has revealed. It holds within itself... It has no body and has many bodies, or rather all bodies; for there is nothing that is not He, and all things are him alone. That is why he has all names;

s

4, IV. The Crater or the Monad. Hermes Trismegistus to his son Tat. Translation by Louis M  nard, Paris, Didier et Cie, 1867, p. 34.

Masonic Dogmatics 105

because he is the only father and that is why he has no name, for he is the father of all.

"Everything is a part of God, therefore God is everything."
By creating everything, he creates himself without ever stopping; for his activity has no end, and just as God is without limits, his creafion has neither beginning nor end?. »

These quotations are sufficient to demonstrate the system of em-pantheistic nations, and the identity of Hermetic Unity with the Kabbalistic Ensoph.

3. The number eleven and the primordial Man of philosophy hermetic.

The higher triad emanating from Unity is called Intelligence, the Word and the God Fire or the Spirit.

Hermes, to leave him the name he arrogated to himself for to deceive the Egyptians, restored the ancient trinity, which the Kabbalah had to pervert it in order to introduce Kether, the Couronne, on the Jew's head. He became more in harmony with the Bible.

"Intelligence, the male and female God, who is life and the light, engendered by the Word (Logos) another intellect-creative agency, the God of Fire and of the Spirit (Pneuma), who in turn formed Seven Ministers, enveloping in their circles the sensible world and the governing by what we "What is Destiny called?"

"The Unit rationally contains the Decade, and the Decade contains the Unit.

Here is the number eleven of Hermetic philosophy: the Unity which is the source of the divine Triad, of intelligence, of the Word and the Spirit, the latter being, in turn, the Trainer of the Seven Ministers.

4. V. The invisible God is very apparent. Zhidem, p. 37.

2. Ibid., p. 291.

3. Poimandres, Zbidem, p. 6.

4, XIMI. On recognition. Jhidem, p. 100.

106 Masonic Dogmatics

4. Appreciation of the philosophy of Ilermes Trismegistus,

The Jews of Alexandria seem to have wanted to exclude the Dangerous Sephiroth of the Crown and Royalty (intro-) led by the Jews of Babylon into their archetypal Man, not out of love for the truth, but solely for the sake of directing it political tion of the Jewish people.

The hermetic system restores the biblical holy trinity known to the Jews, but perverts the true doctrine revealed in introducing a distinction: that between Unity and Trinity, and by suggesting that the Universe emanates from the divine substance. This false doctrine was enough for them to prepare minds. from the Egyptians to the intellectual domination of the Jews, and to prevent the spread of Christian doctrine in their country.

There is no proof of the existence of hermetic books in a time before Christ. On the contrary, the precision with which they proclaim the mystery of the Holy Trinity, and their fertility by procreating the various systems of the formidable heretic gnostic, are proofs that their origin is due to the perspicacity of the Jews, who wanted by this system- the idea of perverting Christian doctrine from its very inception, and thus saving Jewish influence in the intellectual sphere agency, and, by that very fact, in the government of the world, at least in that of Egypt.

What Hermetic philosophy meant to Egypt

In its time, other systems were expected to become so for other countries and other times.

5. Hermeticism and Freemasonry.

We see no hermetic mysteries whatsoever represented in the free-spirited world, either by symbols, passwords, sweet words, or other veils of their doctrine, as we have seen with regard to the mysteries of the Kabbalah.

Hermeticism was specifically intended for Egypt; it adapted to his beliefs and flattered his national passions.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 107

Brother Ragon attaches to the hermetic philosophy of Pal-Chemistry, like magic in Kabbalah. In this, there is no Completely wrong.

To the question, "What is the most perfect number?" it The answer is: The number 10, because it contains the unit which has everything, and zero, symbol of matter and Chaos, from which everything originated; therefore, it includes in its figure the created and uncreated, the beginning and the end, power and Strength, life, and nothingness.

"Ordo ab Chao" is the motto of the Supreme Council of 33rd and final degree. This is still the Kabbalistic doctrine.

Paul Rosen? said that the idea of hermetic grades and The kabbalistic goal of the 22nd and 28th degrees is to establish the reign of rationalism and to affirm the absolute impossibility of the mi-scrapes. Our exhibition proves that all of Freemasonry is based on Kabbalistic and Hermetic doctrines which are essentially identical.

6. The occult author of the hermetic doctrine.

We concluded above that, if the Jew He deceives the world with Kabbalah, and is, in turn, deceived. by Satan, who seeks only the ruin of souls through his elevation, in the minds of mortals, above God. The

The name by which he is honored is of no importance to him, provided that we honor him and not worship the true God. In the In Kabbalah, it is called Kether; in Hermetic doctrine He takes the name of Intelligence and Poimandres. (From the Greek, Pastor of men.)

With incredible audacity and brazenness, this angel
The fallen man places himself at the head of this entire Alexandrian philosophy.

The beginning of the first book, named Poimandres, shows us all the trappings of Satan and the terrifying impression—the strange thing that his appearance always does to the soul of the one which he visits in a diabolical ecstasy. Hermes writes: "I

1. Masonic orthodoxy, followed by occult Freemasonry and hermetic initiation. Paris, Dentu, 1853.
- 2, Paul Rosen, Satan and Cio, p. 199.

108 Masonic Dogmatics

I was reflecting one day on beings; my thoughts hovered in the heights, and all my bodily sensations were numb, as in the heavy sleep that follows satiety. excesses or fatigue.

"It seemed to me that an immense being, without limits, determined—mined, called me by my name and said to me: "What do you want
"Hearing and seeing, what do you want to learn and know?"

"— Who are you then?" I replied.

"— I know what you desire, and I am with you everywhere."

"— I want," I replied, "to be instructed about beings, com—
"prove their nature and know Dicu.

"—Roçois, think of everything you want to know, me
"He said, 'I will instruct him.'"

"At these words, his appearance changed and immediately your face was discovered in a moment, and I witnessed an indescribable spectacle. Everything became a soft and pleasant light that charmed my sight. Soon after, terrifying darkness descended horrible things, sinuous in shape; I thought I saw these darkness turning into some kind of damp nature and cloudy, exhaling smoke like fire and a sort of a mournful noise. Then came an inarticulate cry that seemed—
The pitch of light shone forth! A holy word descended from light upon nature, and a pure fire leaped forth from nature humid towards the heights; it was subtle, penetrating and in same active time.

"And the air, by its lightness, followed the fluid of the earth and From the water, it rose up to the fire, from which it seemed to be suspended. The earth and the water remained mingled, without anyone being able to see one through the other, and received the impulse of speech that we would expect to come out of the superior fluid.

"Have you understood," Poimandres said to me, "what this means?"
" vision?

"– I'll learn it," I replied.

"–This light," he said, "is me, Intelligence, your "God, who precedes the moist nature emerging from the darkness. The "Luminous word (the Word) which emanates from Intelligence,
"He is Dicu's son."

MASONIC DOGMATICS 109

"– What do you mean?" I replied.

"– Learn it, that which in you sees and hears, is the Word,"
"The word of the Lord; intelligence is God the Father. They do not
"They are not separated from one another, for union is their life."

"– Thank you," I replied.

"–Understand the light," he said, "and know it."

"At these words, he looked me straight in the face for a long time, and I I trembled at the sight of him.

It is difficult to miss the diabolical trick in this story.
a lique that usurps the throne of the Most High, and claims to be the principle of the Word of God.

Psellas, a learned Byzantine writer who died around 1079, said in his work On the Action of Demons, concerning this Poiman- Drès, who calls himself God the Father: "This sorcerer seems to have strong He was well acquainted with Holy Scripture; that's where he started. to explain the creation of the world. He was not afraid of something- times to copy the very expressions of Moses, as in this phrase: "Grow in increase and multiply in "multitude," which he clearly borrowed from the narrative mosaic.

"It's not difficult to see what Poimandres was all about."
of the Greeks; he is the one whom we call the Prince of the world or someone from his family. For, says Basil, the Devil is a thief, he plunders our traditions, not to divert the their own impiety, but to color and embellish their false piety through true words and thoughts and thus render it "Pleasant and acceptable to the majority."

The same stratagem is still practiced by the French Freemasonry. The words: truth, liberty, fraternity, equality, virtue, homeland, benevolence, etc... have a completely different meaning- cation in the mouth of a Freemason than in that of a layperson or in a dictionary.

Pius IX very aptly said: "We must give to give words their true meaning."

110 Masonic Dogmatics

7. The deification of man, the avowed goal of gnosis hermetic.

The goal is indeed to drag man into his eternal abyss. towards which all of Satan's efforts are directed. The means is always- days or pride, or avarice, or lust. He proposes It is always up to man to become like the Most High. The human soul, says Hermes, is of divine origin and incarnate. for a time, must return to the divine light through Gnosis, knowledge or science.

The vise was lowered by the seven ministers, also called the Seven Princes of Harmony, or the Seven Governors of world, she must go back up through cux.

"O intelligence," said Hermes, "enlighten me further on the The way in which the ascent is made. First, said Poimandres, the dissolution of the material body delivers its elements to metamorphoses; the visible form disappears; the character, losing his strength, he is delivered to the demon; the senses return to their respective sources and merge into energies (of the world). Passions and desires return to the na- irrational ture; what remains thus rises through the har- monie, abandoning to the first zone the power of to grow and to decline; secondly, the industry of evil and The cunning, now powerless; in the third, the illusion of desires; in the fourth, the vanity of the commandment; in the fifth, impious arrogance and reckless audacity; to the sixth, attachment to riches; and seventh, the insidious lies. And thus stripped of all the works verses of harmony, he arrives in the eighth zone, not gar- while its own power, and sings with the beings of hymns in honor of the father. Those who are there rejoice—

He senses his presence; and, having become like him, he hears the melodious voice of the powers that are above the eighth nature and who sing the praises of God. And Then they go up in order to the father, and give themselves over to him.
to the powers, they are born in God; such is the ultimate good of Those who possess Gnosis: to become God.

Masonic Dogmatics 3

It's always the same lie from the one who is being lied to.
from the beginning, and wanted to be like the Most High—High!

Shouldn't Freemasons reflect on this?
to say that the truth cannot be found where the tail of the old
Why is the snake showing itself so recklessly?

What a fraudulent consolation that is found by means of which Hermes bewitches his son Tat: "Do you not know that "You have become God, son of the One, as have I?"

And he ended the dialogue by showing once again where Then came the false wisdom of Gnosis: "Learn from
I, my son, celebrate the silence of virtue, without revealing to no one the regeneration that I transmitted to you, for fear that we are regarded as devils 1. »

The prince of darkness still hates the light, and gang
the eyes of his followers.

- 4, From the Renaissance, p. 101.
2. Ibid., p. 104.

CHAPTER IX

Gnosticism and Jewish Kabbalah

4. The numbers Eleven and Thirty-three in Gnosticism.

Jewish Kabbalists could not allow Christianity the idea of establishing oneself in the world, without waging war on it relentless, like the persecution they inflicted on Jesus Christ himself same. This war was, on the terrain of doctrine, the Gnosticism.

In order to better understand the most perfect system of Gnosticism, inspired by their Kabbalah and elaborated by the-Valentinian, research, we add to this chapter one of-sin of this doctrine which will highlight the essential identity and the accidental difference existing on the one hand between the Jewish Kabbalah and Gnosticism, and on the other hand between Gnosticism and Christianity. It will result that Gnosticism-Christianity is simply Kabbalized Christianity.

(See plate H.)

Originally drawn by Rhenanus, this drawing was added by Pamélius, in his edition of Tertullian's works, In 1616, in the book against the Valentinians. We have given a slightly different form to facilitate intelligence to the Freemasons who will recognize it in their decorations.

Gnosticism contains all the elements of Jewish Kabbalah. The numbers Eleven and Thirty-three, the three spheres, the separation made between the Divinity and the various people, the Triune Kingdom, the seven angels, the revolution in the heaven, and especially both sexes, male and female, attributed to the Aeons, noi gnostic of the Sephirotk kabbalistics, which means eternal beings.

2. The Gnostic Bythos and the Kabbalistic Ensoph.

According to the Gnostics, there are in the Universe

Pi Li

MASONIC DOGMATICS 113

different floors according to the dignity of the beings who inhabit them. In the most sublime height, there remains Depth. Bythos, a name that is entirely unsuitable for the one who occupies it the highest place. He is the Infinite, the Immense, the Eternal, The Invisible, the Incomprehensible, just like the Ensoph.

The idea is the same; the name is changed to give the change: that is to say, Kabbalah in place of Christianity.

More substantial than Kabbalah, Gnosticism gives to His Supreme Being has a spouse. Why shouldn't he? since the other aeons enjoy theirs? But where the Where else can we find it, if not within ourselves?

If the Ensoph can generate the Crown of itself and Thus, by becoming hermaphroditic, the Bythos can also, in this same quality, to engender Sigé, the Silence, a being feminine. As Depth is in contradiction with its Silence, of a certain kind, is elevated. However, Bythos makes his daughter his wife; she is the one who will be the mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother of the celestial eons, revered, in their original settings, by Freemasons. This couple divine engendered, in the depths of silence, two beings children, one male and the other female. The Gnostics have always insisted that their doctrine was kept in the deeper silence. In this, they and their successors, the Freemasons are very religious: they imitate their God supreme and his wife in a perfect manner.

We will not repeat here the observations made on the separation between the Infinite and the divine persons. The refusal of the teaching of Kabbalistic doctrine is also that of Gnosticism.

3. The Gnostic Nous and the Kabbalistic Kether,

The son of Bythos and Sigé is called Nous, the intelligent Spirit gent.

He is exactly like his father and in every way equal. He alone can understand the immense incomprehensibility of his father's greatness. Just like Kether by comparison-port to the Kabbalistic Ensoph, and Intelligence vis-à-vis

8

114 Masonic Dogmatics

The Hermetic Unity, the We, is also called the Father of everything, for he answers, as we have demonstrated, to God the Father, whom true Israelites and Christians worship, to the first divine person, separated from the divine substance vinc, referred to here as Depth.

If Xether, the Crown, has been replaced in philosophy Hermetic Sophie, through intelligence, Gnosis followed Her-Trismegistus. The Jews had no political reasons questions regarding nascent Christianity; this is only the religious hatred they felt for him; they therefore had no other one reason to substitute the first person of the Trinité la Couronne sur la tête de l'Homme archetype du Jude. They knew very well that the Father begot the Word through the intelligence, of a purely spiritual generation, and, by Consequently, without the ugliness of a female being; for they teach-

They conveyed this truth very well through the mouth of Poiman-very.

4. Gnosticism and the Holy Trinity.

In their hatred of the nascent Church, the Jews served a different purpose than those they used in ancient Persia and in Egypt. The heretical poison had to dissolve the doctrine on the Holy Trinity and on the No one from Jesus Christ. We find first the Father in the 3rd aeon, God the Word in the 5th, and God the Holy-Spirit in the 32nd; but how degraded, dissected and Made to look ridiculous!

God the Father, under the name of Us, Intelligence, receives
For woman Aletheia, the Truth; with her he begets the Logos,
The Word, who is married to Zoë, the Vic! Of Us alone, without the intervention of his spouse, the last one is conceived
a couple of celestial aeons, Christos, the Christ, and his consort Pneuma-hagion, the Holy Spirit become woman! And the Misraïmite Freemasons imagine that the Jews their
They are the most sublime of all philosophies!

Hermeticism, notwithstanding all the perversity of its documentation
trine, shows in its triad: Intelligence, Word and God

Masonic Dogmatics 415

Fire, a little more decency; but Gnosis, science supposedly par excellence, an outrage that is both reason and good sense, decency and modesty.

The Divinity and the Trinity having received companions, for-ment with others the divine Ogdoad, Iluithine, represented in the 90th degree of the Rite of Misraïm by a square in a four-pointed star.

But the Word and Life first engendered the Antropos and the Ecclesia, Man and the Church, and then five couples of aeons, and Man and the Church begat six of them. These Eleven couples with their divine companions bear the name-a series of aeons from eight to thirty. The thirtieth aeon is Sophia, the Wisdom, which plays such a large role in all these systems
Jews and in Masonic decorations.

5. The revolution in the Gnostic sky.

What follows is the story of the strange uprising in the sky, of which The Kabbalah has already spoken to us. It is repeated in the Plegnostic Romance.

It seems that the inspirer of these two philosophical systems—piques played its part.

We, Intelligence, alone know the incomprehensible Bythos, the common Father of all, desired and attempted to do it to know other aeons; but his mother Sige, the Silence, She forbade him to do so. It was the same lady who, according to Tertullian, He also urged his dear heretics to remain silent. profound. Nevertheless, a great desire to know the Father Supreme was kindled in the hearts of the aeons, and a revolution was about to burst; when the youngest of Sophia, Wisdom, vanquished by curiosity, was aeons. Envy towards You, who alone enjoyed the Father, came out of your place. without her husband Teletos, the Perfect, and tried to delve deeper Depth.

But she had attempted the impossible; she was on the verge

1. Adversus Valentinianos, this. 1x.

116 Masonic Dogmatics

she would have fainted if Horos hadn't intervened to calm her down. and put her back in her place.

This Horos, the Limit, is a wondrous being. Formed by Bythos himself, he is found outside the Plerema, the Heaven superior or Olympus of the Gnostic aeons.

The concept of infinity is an absurdity. But let's leave it at that. As for serious reflections: nobody needs them here.

Sophia, brought back to her senses by Horos, repented of the the passion that had consumed her, was returned to her husband.

But, through this passion, poor Wisdom had conceived and gave birth to a formless and abominable being, which the guardian Horos took care to reject the Pleroma he was infecting, in the Kenoma, the Fumicr of the Pleroma; it is formless Matter, because the male principle had not contributed to its generation.

It should come as no surprise that this divine Wisdom could have to be a masculine woman, an aphroditism, since her great-grandfather was a female man, a hermaphrodite, who had given birth to Sige, his daughter and his wife.

Note that this entire tragicomedy was invented for to dazzle, like the Masonic lycopodium, human reason, so that she doesn't notice the fatal somersault of Infinity in the end, accomplished by the birth of a horrible abortion of the bosom of divine Wisdom!

With tranquility restored to the Pléroma, We hastened to procreate another sigiya, or pair of aeons, to prevent a repeat of the revolution, thankfully tamed. This couple is Christos, Christ, and Pneuma Hagion, the Holy Spirit, as we have already said.

This is a most atrocious blasphemy. If the Pneuma Hagion is female and Christos's companion is a detestable thought; if it is masculine, the idea is Twice as horrible.

The task of these two aeons was to instruct and appease the eleven pairs of ignorant and seditious aeons.

We have now reached thirty-two aeons. There is a missing part... one core to perfect the kabbalistic-gnostic system.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 117

The aeons satisfied with the instruction received from Christ and the Holy Spirit, united to give Us a sign of Their gratitude. They resolved to form the most perfect aeon, by giving him what each person held most dear.

This is the origin of the 33rd and final aeon, called Jesus Soter. Jesus the Savior.

Jesus is all that male aeons are, and he possesses everything what female aeons are. We only have to look at the list on our board.

So this is the Kabbalistic number of onse: the eight

First and main ones with the three most important placed at the end, and the number Thirty-three, by adding the twenty-two aeons stemming from the Word and Man. The tripartite—The calculation of this number is as obvious as that of the thirty-three degrees of Freemasonry.

However, we ask who, among the Freemasons who wear the jewelry representing these "fables and genealogy—"Gies without a term t," does he still believe that today? And if they don't They don't believe, so why are they being duped by the Jews?

6. The Kabbalistic Khokhma and the Gnostic Akhamoth.

The abortion of Wisdom, driven from the Pleroma and cast out into the Kenoma, the Dung Heap or the Pleroma Evacuation, received the Akhamoth's name, the Wisdoms?

Akhamoth, a corruption of Khakhemoth in Hebrew, is the plural of Khokhma, Wisdom (vp 50). The suggested idea by this plural is that infinite Wisdom decomposes into the finished product, like a line in its individual points; the Wisdoms are offspring of Wisdom.

The second act of the Valentinian tragedy is thus unfolding. outside of the Pleroma, in the Epicurean void, supposedly There must be a void where God is not present. We must not Counting the errors of the Gnostics would never end!

The exiled Akhamoth was desolate, alone outside the

4. 1 Timothy, 1, 4,
2. Psalm xuv, 3. "My mouth will speak wisdom."

118 Masonic Dogmatics

Pleroma, she had neither form nor face; she was a thing Abortive and defective. Moved with pity, the higher gods decided Féon Christos to descend with the Pneuma Hagion to give Akhakamoth a form derived from its sub-rebuke, but not of his science.

Then were formed: passions that Akhamoth had inherited from her wise mother, the material substance; from her conversion, the animal substance; and in addition to a small nest egg spiritual, which his mother had bequeathed to him, the spiritual substance. Her tears became the streams and the sea; her laughter, in Seeing Christ, she gave birth to light!

The aeon Christos tired of his existence outside the Pleroma, returned with the Pneuma [lagion and sent a another paraclete, Jesus Soter, the 33rd and last of the aeons, with the entire band of satellite angels, who had been formed with him through all the celestial aeons.

Akhamoth admired the beauty of the angels and fell in love with them. and gave birth to the spiritual substance according to their image.

This is the origin of the three substances: the material, the animal-male and spiritual, stemming from passions, from conversion and from the imagination of the abortion Akhamoth!

One immediately recognizes the three triangles of the ar- man
The Kabbalah archetype: the intellectual, the moral, and the physical.

7. The Architect of the Universe in Gnosticism.

Akhamoth having formed with the named helpers the three elementary substances, fills the third circle, called the Sabbaton or Septenary, because of the seven heavens that it contains.

She began by creating various creatures. The pre-
The first creature is the One whom we, Christians, worship. as the one true God, the Creator of heaven and earth, the Demiurge. She formed him from animal substance, being incapable of forming spiritual beings, because the spiritual was not consubstantial with him.

The Freemasons, "Perfect Masters" of the 5th degree, who
Those who still believe in God will be deeply shocked to learn to assume that this God they pray to is not found, on their apron, that in the third and last of the three circles concentric, in the middle of which is a square stone (the world) bearing the letter J (Jehovah)i.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 119

The "Great Architect of the Universe," if he is our Dicu, is nothing more than an animal creature, a runt born of Wisdom, rebellious to his grandfather Us.

Christian Freemasons, we urge you to study the mysteries of your secret society, and you are terrified to learn that it is nothing but a gigantic tax and blasphemous of the fallen Synagogue.

How long will you remain under the dishonorable yoke of Jews?

From this blind and unconscious Demiurge, led by Akhamoth, all visible things were formed; on his side right animate things, and consequently, it is the Demiurge; on his left side inanimate things, and from this Chief, he is the Demiurge. He is a new Hermaphrodite or Aphrodithermes, also called Aetropater, mother-father, and King.

This Demiurge then formed the universe as depicted on our plate H, by the third globe below the Kenoma.

Below his throne he established seven heavens or angels.

Note the repetition, outside of the Pleroma, of the The Kabbalistic number eleven. Akhamoth, elusive like Zythos, formed with the three elemental substances emanating from it, a Tetrad or quaternity, from which emanates the Sabbaton or the seven-part formation which, with the Tetrad, constitutes the number eleven of the universe.

It would be pointless for us to follow Valentinian in his absurd fables about the origin of each of the earthly things very that we know. Ovid's Metamorphoses are much more spiritual and interesting.

Let us say, however, that one of the creatures of the Demiurge is Diabolos, the Devil, into whom entered, unbeknownst to his forma-

1. Léo Taxil, II, p. 433.

120 MASONIC DOGMATICS.

teur, a spark of the spiritual substance which, we As we have seen, this had not been communicated by Akhamoth to his creature, the demiurge Jehovah. The Devil is called the Kosmocrator, the Prince of the world. By his spiritual nature, he is superior to Jehovah. Here is a new way of to become "like the Most High!"

The Spiritist Society will be grateful to us for having taught them- They acknowledge the noble origin of their dicu, which is superior to that Christians.

The earth we inhabit is located in the middle of the se- thirtieth heaven. Every man is a small stone in it, brutish, when he is still "rude, ignorant and uneducated", cubic ct, when it is "polished and civilized" according to the ideas Masonic.

The animal soul of man comes from the Architect of the Universe, and his spiritual soul, the soul of Akhamoth.

The human body is not formed from the earth that we know, but of an invisible, fluid and capable matter to be melted and molded.

No one will be able to say where it comes from, where it exists, or what it is. This philosophical fluid, the source of the "perispirit" of spiritualists modern, unless we say that it comes "from the Pituite and spittle of Wisdom?" that the Freemasons love it.

We omit the atrocious blasphemies that Gnosis inscribed on Our Lord Jesus Christ and his holy Mother, the Virgin Mary. Jewish hatred is concentrated there in a way completely brutal. We are loath to report them.

At the end of the world, the body of man, which is nothing but... matter will be annihilated. Likewise, the souls of the hylics, who are of a disposition all material, the souls of the psychics, of the psychics - men Chiques, by nature of an animal disposition, will rise in the Demiurge's heaven, unless they convert

1. Léo Taxil, I, 421; Yew, 43.
2. "Rien n'est nouveau sous le soleil!" Ecclesiastes 1:10
3. Tertullian, c. xxrv.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 121

to the doctrine of the secret sect of the Gnostics who all chosen souls. The pneumatikoi, the spiritual men, have entirely spiritual souls that ascend into the Plérôme of Bythos, the Depth, where they will become the wives of Angels who are not yet married!

And so ends the comedy!

Alas! we have many reasons to fear that these poor, deluded souls do not descend into the bythos, the depths of hell, where they will continue to be the slaves of fallen language.

Thus will the tragedy end!

8. Gnosticism in Masonic emblems,

It would be tedious to traverse the ninety degrees of the Misraïm rite (Egypt). Let it suffice to say here that in the highest grade, that of the Sovereign Grand Master Absolutely, the password is Sophia, the Greek word for Sapientia or Wisdom. We have seen the ridiculous role that this goddess plays a role in Gnosticism.

Freemasons should say: Happy incontinence of this feminine aeon which is the true cause of our existence!

At the Sophia Licu, the 90° can also say /sis, to what Fon responds Osiris! This alternative demonstrates the identity essential to Gnosticism and Hermeticism, and proves that Freemasonry hides its mysteries under different guises. forms which all serve to express the same idea.

The hieroglyphic sign of the same 90° degree misraïmic is a triple circle enclosing a four-pointed star, having at its center a square containing a radiating Delta with The Hebrew ZOD in the middle. The three circles symbolize the three spheres: the Pleroma, the Kenoma, and the Sabbaton; the star The four-pointed star and the square are the symbols of the Ogdoad sacred; the triangle represents the last three aeons, and the Tod (Hebrew) the Demiurge Jehovah, the "Great Architect" of the Universe."

4. Leo Taxil, II, 404.

122 Masonic Dogmatics

9. Purpose of Gnosticism.

It is clear that Gnosticism was Kabbalah. Jewish woman adapted for a special purpose: to infiltrate the nascent Christianity to destroy it.

Crushing the infamous heresy of the Nazarene has always been the most ardent and hateful desire of the fallen Jews. Saint Paul, in his defending himself against the Jews before Governor Felix, he said: "I confess before you that, according to the sect they call-Slow heresy, I serve my Father and my God." Like their Fathers had torn the body of Jesus Christ with their bloody whips, thus the Jews of the first centuries have marked, by Gnosis, to tear his person to shreds and its divine nature, by dividing them among these imaginary beings that they created for this purpose and named male aeons and feminine.

Having failed on the first attempt in this diabolic, notwithstanding the alliance of their Synagogue with the-
Despite the resistance, they persevered with incredible tenacity in attacking Christian dogma constantly creates new sects.
daughters of the Kabbalah; and they ended up associating the venom dis-
the solvent of their Kabbalistic doctrine, cunning and violence human passions: they created Freemasonry, the alliance of the fallen Synagogue with a fallen Order of religious chivalry.

To the hatred of Satan and the Jew was added that of the Apostate.
"A triple bond is hard to break?" Hell, the Synagogue-goguc ct the Apostasy, allied together against the Lord and his Christ, that's the history of the world for centuries and centuries.

- 4. Acts, XXIV, 14,
- 4. Eccl., 1v, 12.

CHAPTER X

THE OPHITES AND THE JEWISH KABBALAH

- 1. Jewish origin of the Ophites sect.
(See plate I.)

The doctrine of the Ophites, serpent worshippers, is, as Gnosticism, a daughter of Jewish Kabbalah.

The Jews of Kabbalah, apostates from the true doctrine revealed, they had logically succeeded in revolting against Jehovah and voluntary submission to the yoke of Lucifer, the enemy of God. Not wanting to worship God, they begin-they began to worship Satan, taking as their example the people idolaters of their time.

The human mind, once corrupted, always seeks to explain the truths he knows according to the requirements of his preconceived ideas or according to the desires of his passions. However-dant, it was only rarely that he managed to give, without to blush, to God be the name of Lucifer and to Lucifer the name of God.

This case is found, among other places, in the sect of Ophites, the forerunners of the Freemasons, all worshippers of Lucifer in the form of the serpent.

Besides the magic number eleven, the Hebrew terms of Akhamoth, the Wisdoms, and of Jaldabaoth, chief of the heavenly militia, sufficiently demonstrate the Jewish origin of this sect. Moreover, it was merely a development of the Judaico-Gnostic principles, intended for the most daring of sectarians; like, in our time, forestry masonry and the order of Judges, Philosophers, Grand Commanders unknowns f are established for the most ardent and the most advanced between the Masters and the Kadosh.

1. Léo Taxil. The Cult of the Great Architect, pp. 211, 233.

124 Masonic Dogmatics

2. The number thirty-three in the doctrine of the Ophites.

The first principle, the Supreme Being from whom everything derives, is, as with the Valentinians, (1) the Bythos, the Profondeur, which they also call, along with Zoroasire, the Kabbalah, Hermeticism and the Gnostics, the Source of Light.

From Bythos emanates (2) Ænnota, Thought, and Pensee (3) Pneuma, the Spirit, feminine principle, mother of all things, the Wisdom from on high. To this last principle is subordinate-given another eternal principle, (4) Hyle, the matter which develops into (5) Water, (6) Darkness, (7) Abyss and (8) Chaos.

Enchanted by the beauty of eternal Wisdom, Sophia, these The first two beings, Ennoia and Hylé, united with her, fertilized in the divine light and gave birth to two new beings, one male and perfect, (9) the divine Christ, and the other feminine imperfect, (11) Sophia Akhamoth proneikos, the Wisdom of wisdoms, which precedes antagonism (between Good and evil). It is imperfect because it received only the superabundant portion of the dew of light (the seed of the photos). It is therefore an imperfect germ of eternal life.

The Pneuma, the Wisdom from on high, was to realize the idea creative in the celestial world, and Akhamoth, Wisdom preceding the struggle, in the earthly world.

While Christ, like his mother Pneuma, was-born in the primordial light and forms with the two first principles, Ennoia and Hylé, (10) the holy Church, prototype of the Church of the Pneumatics, Sophia Akhamoth set in motion the inert mass of Chaos, which hovered free for the first time on the water. She attracted all my-third to that one, darkened by this vision, and torn from kingdom of light, lost consciousness of its high origin and the kingdom from which she came.

The Ensoph of the Kabbalah, with its ten Sephiroth, is therefore reproduced once again. The Bythos represents the divine

4. Wetzer et Welte, Encyclopedia: Ophites.

Masonic Dogmatics 125

ineffable nature; Ennoia, God the Father; Christos, God the Son, and Pneuma the Holy Spirit. The seven Angels before the throne of God have become: Heavenly Church, Impar- Wisdom Done, Matter and its four divisions. Still an aberration growing |

Let us follow the Ophites into their second world, "the air of the middle," according to the Vedas, in which the number eleven reproduced.

Sophia Akhkamoth, who retained in her fall a fund of divine light, in its state of decadence, forgot all that who was superior to him, and imagined that she was herself the supreme power. To exercise its creative virtue, it gave birth to the demiurge (1) Jaldabaoth; Jal, supreme leader, Zebaoth, the heavenly host. This is the God of the Jews, the Jehovah.
from the Bible.

This Demiurge, perverse and domineering nature, wanted to equal-to separate oneself from everything that was superior, to surrender independent of his mother Akhamoth, and to pass himself off as the Supreme God. To this end he created an Angel in his image;
this one created another, and so on until the number of six, and together they formed (1-7) the seven Prints of Planets. In turn, these created (9) man, a mass formless, crawling on the earth, to which J'aldabaoth communicated the soul. Unbeknownst to him, a ray of light, which, by a secret provision from Akhamoth, his mother, he received from her, transmitted from his being to the nature of man.

The man drew to himself the light of all creation,
and soon presented, no longer the image of its creator Jaldabaoth, but the likeness of the supreme God himselfeven.

At this sight, the angry Demiurge hurled terrible re-glances at the very heart of the title, and its image is reflected there-

Fletant, from this was born a being full of hatred and wickedness. and envy, (8) Satan, ophiomorphos, in the form of a serpent, and the treacherous one, resembling the Persian Ahriman. In his rage, the Demiurge produced (10) woman and the other earthly existences in order to keep man captive in this gross and infinitesimal sphere. He forbade him, in order to... to wrest from the Wisdom of Akhamoth and from all relations with the higher world, to eat from the tree of knowledge. But Wisdom sent to her aid the genius (11) Ophis, Serpent, who persuaded the man to eat the forbidden fruit. Man thus came to know his origin and of his high destiny.

126 Masonic Dogmatics

The third part of the drama of the Ophites follows.

The first human couple was then precipitated by Ja/dabaoth of the ethereal region of paradise, where he lived in ethereal bodies, on the dark earth, and were imprisoned in opaque, earthly bodies. Meanwhile, the Wisdom had withdrawn from the Demiurge the divine seed of light- The first one had distributed the rays to the men. (1) The es-Ophis had been dragged into the abyss with the man; he had materialized in his fall, and had become a Satan In miniature, a copy of the Great Devil Ophiomorphos. By feelings of pride, jealousy, and revenge towards the men, who had been the cause of his downfall, he begat sir spirits, constituting with cux (2-7) the seven governing spirits naming the earth and the material world, which, since then, are constantly at war with the human race. Ja{dabaoth, For his part, he sought to hinder the free flow of light divine in man. Although he succeeds in most of the Men, Wisdom has known how to reserve for itself a small number of chosen ones who preserved the seed of divine light.

Finally, Wisdom Akhamoth addressed her mother Pneuma, And at her request, the supreme God sent Christ to the aid of mankind. Jaldabaoth, having given birth to (11) Jesus of a Virgin, Christ united himself to him at the moment of his baptism- even in the Jordan. Jesus Christ then performed miracles ct announced the unknown God. Jaldabaoth, deceived, had him crucified Jesus Christ by the Jews. Wisdom and the resurrected Christ. They buried Jesus and gave him an ethereal body. communicated his knowledge to a small number of Elect, (10) the Pneumatics, which at the end of the world will enter the Ple-Roma; (9) the Psychics will have a fate similar to that of the Psychics of Gnosticism, ct (8) the Physics reside-will meet with Jaldabaoth in Gehenna.

Having demonstrated, purely through the narrative of the doctrine of the Ophites, its close connection with the doctrines already expounded, and the repetition within it of the kabbalistic numbers of eleven and thirty-three, which we find in the franc-masonry, let us add the remark, that some among The Ophites considered Ophis to be a good spirit, as a symbol of Wisdom, and this, in a pan- sense theistic, like the universal soul diffused throughout humanity unity and throughout nature, from which everything emanates and in which All things return after being purified. These Ophites, who were the Ophites proper 1, but who were not that, in small numbers, had introduced among them a cult of a serpent similar to Marcion's. They nurtured a snake living in a chest or in a cave, behind their altar, believing that Jesus Christ was the serpent who had deceived Eve. They made her lick it, and thus consecrate it. the Eucharistic bread placed on their table, which they shared They were giggling; after which they each kissed the snake?

The Sethites and the Cainites are a degeneration of the Ophites.

The Sethites said that Cuin, Abel and Seth were the three strains of three different races, Hylics who owe their origin to evil spirits, psychics who received being from the Demiurge, and from the Pneumatics descended from a divine seed, derived from Sophia Akhamotkh.

Obviously, the tires respond to the intellectual triad - the lectual of the primordial Man of the Kabbalah, the Psychiques to the moral triad, and the Physics to the inferior triangle- the innermost part of this imaginary character, covering the physical part sic.

The Cainites taught the existence of two forces, one superior, Sophia, Wisdom, and an inferior one, Hystera (ute-

4. Wetzer and Welte, loc. cit.
2. August., of Iæres., c, seen.

of the celestial Sophia, Abel of the Hystera. Sophia had taken under her special protection Cain, whom she had endowed with a superior science, so that being stronger, he killed the descendant or the weaker favorite of the Æystera. They extended the worship of Cain to Ham, to the Sodomites, to Esau, to Kore and to all the reprobate figures of the Old Testament, up to Judas Iscariot, as to so many pneu- natures matics, perpetually attacked by evil De- miurge, always protected by good Sophia and transform- models in as many eons, models of humanity t.

The beliefs and practices of the Ophites had their mo- demons in antiquity; for, from time immemorial, Satan believed in- to see the memory of his victory over Eve perpetuated, and to celebrate his triumph through a special honor bestowed upon the Serpent which, by its very nature, is a worthy representative of malice of the Demon.

3. The demonolatry of the Ophites in Freemasonry.

Paul Rosen provides a diagram in his book, "Satan and Co." representing all the combined systems of the former- new initiations. The serpent is found first in the shape of a circle in the middle of the painting, in the glory that emanates from the triangle. It is the eternal divinity. On the circle are two male larvae and two "Miluca chambers", problems of the eternal development of divinity by the hub of generation. Then comes a fertilizing serpent. by his breath a woman: it is Incifer impregnating Eve and begetting Cain. Six other mon- representations thirty the serpent of Osiris, the serpent of paradise enveloping the tree of the knowledge of Good and Evil and biting into a apple; the serpent Knaphis, god of Elephantine, island of Nile; the Python of Greek mythology; the Indian serpent and the bronze serpent of the Israelites, - all marching on the tail according to the old fable, which says that the curse of

4. Wetzer ct Welte, Cainites.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 129

Dicu: "You will crawl on your belly," implies that aupara- before the snake walked on its tail and that it did not accept this punishment.

Let us now look at the teaching that the Most Respect- table gives at the 3rd degree, to the neophyte of mastery:

"I am going to introduce you to the hero of the symbolic drama—the lique in which you have just taken an active part, I want to say our master Hiram... His past was a mystery. En—sent to King Solomon by the king of the Tyrians, worshippers of Moloch, this character as strange as he was sublime, had known how to... Upon his arrival, he imposed himself on everyone. His audacious genius... placed him above other men; his mind escaped to humanity, and everyone bowed before his will, and—before the mysterious influence of the one they called: Ze master... Kindness and sadness were painted on his his face was somber, and his broad forehead — listen carefully, my Brother — reflected both the Spirit of Light and genius "Darkness..."

The venerable speaker continued: "No one knows the homeland nor the origin of this dark character, whose genius elevates him to the status of... above all men and who have the vulgar multitude in Profound contempt. But he who lives like this is like a stranger. being among the children of Adam is not, in fact, a descendant the first man's mother. If their first mother is also his Mother, Adam was only the nurse of Cain.

"Listen carefully, my Brother, to the genealogy of Hiram, the true one founder of Freemasonry, and you will understand that Hiram's sons form, in the midst of human society, a elite race. Let's go back to the earliest days of the world, at the time when Adam and Eve were still in Eden. Eblis, the Angel of Light, could not see the beauty of the pre—first woman without coveting her. Could Eve resist The love of an angel?.... Cain was born. His soul, a spark of

4. Gen., m, 14,

2. "Corruption of diabolos; it is one of the names of Satan; that's right—"The name by which Muslims refer to the fallen angel," Léo Taxil, II, p. 104.

9

130 Masonic Dogmatics

The Angel of Light, Spirit of Fire, raised him infinitely to—above Abel, the son of Adam... But God, jealous of genius communicated by Iblis to Cain, banished Adam and Eve from Eden to punish them both, and after them, their descendants teeth, from Eve's weakness.

"Adam and Eve hated Cain, an involuntary cancer of this unjust sentence, and the mother herself postponed everything his affection for Abel. As for Abel, his heart swollen by this unjust preference, he returned to Cain contempt for love.

A more cruel ordeal was soon to break the heart of Aclinia, the noble son of Eblis, and the first daughter of Adam and Eve, unique to Cain by a deep and mutual tenderness, and ill- In accordance with their wishes and prayers, Aclinia was given for wife to Abel, by the will of Jehovah Adonai. This Dicu Jealousy had kneaded the clay to make Adam, and he had given a servile soul; thus he feared the free soul of Cain!

"Driven to the brink by the injustice of God, by that of Adam, Of Eve and Abel, Cain struck the bad brother. Adonai, this dicu who was to drown so many thousands of men in the the waters of the flood made Abel's death a crime unworthy of pardon.

"However, Cain, to redeem his sin, this sin excusable, committed in a fit of legitimate anger, placed this superior soul at the service of the children of the mud that he received from the Angel of Light, Eblis. He taught them to cultivating the land; Enoch, his son, initiated them into moral life: Methuselah Icarus inscribed the writing. Lamech gave them the example of polygamy. Tubal-cain, his son, found the art to forge metals, perfected his discoveries and the propagated for the good of humankind. Nohéma, who knew carnally, his brother Tubal-cain taught them the art of to spin and make cloth for clothing!

"This is Hiram, the descendant of Cain, of Methusel, of Lamech, from Tubal-cain and Noahema, who uses all his

1. Tubalcain is the password for the master's degree in the rite Scottish.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 131

genius... to the construction of this temple that the pride of Sa-Lomon raises to this Adonai, to this implacable God whose hatred has pursued the race since the beginning of centuries "From Cain, generation after generation..."

This angel of light, the serpent, is also called Abaddon. That's the name Saint John gives it in his Apocalypse! Abad, in Hebrew, means to be exterminated, and Abaddon, per-edition, the Exterminator. Bryant? said it was a name from the The serpent god, and Hinsius is right to identify him with the Python snake.

The sacred word of the 17th degree is Abaddon. The Knights Easterners kneel before the luminous transparency of the West, shouting Abaddon! Our Christian French-Masons They surely don't suspect that by doing this they are surrendering guilty of the most hideous idolatry, of demonolatry.

We are witnessing the continuation of the ancient fables of the Gnostics and Ophites which is done—at nineteenth century – in the lodges of Freemasonry – Nonsense! That's how heterodox Jews explain the Jehovah's word to the Serpent: "I will put enmity between you and the woman, between her race and yours. The difference The relationship between the race of the Serpent and the race of Adam constitutes the mystery of the enmity between the initiated and the uninitiated.

The Freemasons will say that they do not believe in all these absurdities. But then, why do they bow down before the Blazing Star which is the symbol of this Spirit of Lucifer, or rather of Fire and the Abyss? Why do they persevere— They are in these dangerous absurdities up to the 30th degree where the Jews make them raise their armed hands with daggers against this

1. Apoc., 1x, 11.

2. Mythology, II, p. 202.

3. "Non dubitandum est, quin Pythius Apollo, hoc est spurous ille spiritus, quem Hebræi Ob et Abaddon, Hellenistæ ad verbum Apollona, cæteri Apollona dixerunt, sub hac forma qua miseriam humano generi invexit primo cultus. »

4. Léo Taxil, IL p. 172.

5. Gen., nt, 15.

132 Masonic Dogmatics

"Adonai unjust and cruel" towards the Angel of Light?
The worship of Satan and the phallus, these are the two pillars. see on which all doctrine and morality revolve, the theory and practice of Freemasonry.
The Freemasons were duped by the Jews, and the Jews by the Freemasons, dupes of Satan, that's the spectacle these centuries present to our saddened eyes!

4. Assessment of the Ophio-Magonic doctrines.

No one will ask us for a refutation of these doctrines. as strange as they were blasphemous, using cunning truly diabolical Eblis, Eve, Cain and Adam, the provider of Cain, in parallel with the Holy Spirit, the Virgin Mary, Jesus Saint Joseph. Who does not also know that neither the serpent nor the spirit... The supposed difference – created by Lucifer could not have impregnated Eve? The relationship between the two races exists only in a spiritual sense: the Children of God are those who admit divine grace in their hearts, and the children of men those who reject it. The Jews distorted the passage of Holy Scripture: "I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your offspring and "The century?" It is truly inconceivable that men reasonable people could have admitted and propagated the worship of Satan in the form of the Serpent! And yet this is the the oldest of idolatries. Two events that we tenets of divine revelation form the basis of everything that is linked to Ophiolatry in all countries up to China: it's the great battle in the cycle, between Satan and Saint Michael, ending with the defeat of Satan, and second-dement, the temptation of Eve followed by the prophecy of defeat of Satan by the son of the woman, the divine Redeemer. This This subject, however vast and interesting, falls outside the scope from this outline. The doctrine of Freemasonry must a large part of its dogmas, down to the latest ramifications

4. Gen., vi, 2.

2. Gen., I.

Masonic Dogmatics 433

of this ancient Ophiolatry, the first variation of the pure Sabeism*.

We don't know what should be more astonishing, the audacity Satan's caffrénée presenting himself to man in the form of Serpent, to ask for its adoration, or the incredible credulity of men accepting as reasonable Such aberrations of the mind. It is true, the Freemasons don't kiss the Serpent, corn, which is pretty much the Same thing, they're having sex on their knees with the filthy G in the middle of the blazing star? We like to believe that our Christians They are chained to Freemasonry and practice its rites. without grasping its meaning or understanding its importance. That they reflecting on the words of Our Lord to the Jews: "The father from whom you were all born is the demon?" "Serpents, You viperous breed, how do you evade the judgment of the "Was it?" And even before him, Saint John the Baptist said: "Races of vipers, who taught you to flee from the anger that come'? "

1. See on this subject Bryant, Mythology, II, p. 197, 458.

2. Léo Taxil, II, p. 24.

8. Jean, var, 84.

4. Matthew, 21:38.

5. Luc, m, 7.

CHAPTER XI

MANICHEISM AND JEWISH KABBALAH

1. Jewish origin of Manichaeism. The number Eleven.

There is ample evidence to establish Jewish origin of Manichaeism and the presence of Manichaean morality in Freemasonry.

As for his Jewish origin, Mr. Clandio Jannet cites a positive admission on the part of the Jews. In a letter addressed to Mr. Augustin Barruel by Mr. Jean-Baptiste Simonini, the latter nier received, in a manner that was admittedly not very commendable, the confidence of the most secret deeds of the Piedmontese Freemason Jews.

It follows from these confessions that "Manes and the infamous Old Man or Vicillurd of the Mountain (Leader of the Assassins) had left of their nation"; "that the Freemasons and the Illuminati" had been founded by two Jews"; that "from the Jews, drew their origin all the anti-Christian sects"; and that "the Jews promised themselves that, in less than a century, they would be the masters of the world, to abolish all other sects in order to make their rule prevail, to build so many synagogues churches of Christians, and to reduce the rest of them to a "True slavery."

Mants, the author of Manichaeism, was therefore a Jew. A Judging by the name of Manes, the fact even seems very probable.

In order to gain favor with the Christians, he resolved to proclaim the Paraclete promised by Jesus Christ and before teaching to reveal the whole truth to his disciples. At this end he took the name the Syro-Chaldean word meaning Paraclete or Comforter.

From Curbicus, as he was called, he became Manem, or, gracisé, Manèsy.

4. Secret Societies, by N. Deschamps, Volume III.

2. From the Greek Kurbis, the triangular tablet on which one inscribed
The laws in Athens.

8. Cf. Threni, 1, 4, 2. a The mistress of the nations (Jerusalem) is Having become a widow; of all those who were dear to her, there are none

Not a single one to console her (Menaham).

MASONIC DOGMATICS 135

Saint Archelaus, bishop of Mesopotamia, who gives this
In detail, it also recounts that, in order to fight the Christians, against his most formidable enemies, he formed a plan to ally his principles with Christianity. We will see that its principles
These were the examples of the Perso-Judaic Kabbalah. Saint Au-Augustine? quotes words from the Manichean Faustus admitting the Testimony of Hermes Trismegistus.

Mani sent his disciples to buy the books of the Christians hold on, to which he added and from which he subtracted everything that was either in favor of or opposed to his doctrines.

Invited by Saint Archelaus to a public discussion, Mani
He arrived in an extraordinary costume. He was wearing boots.
very high, a coat of different colors, which representsensed something ethereal, a large ebony staff his hand, a Babylonian book under his arm, one leg wrapped around him
One was made of red fabric, the other of greenish fabric.
Wasn't this Babylonian book the Kabbalah?

According to Eastern sources, Mani was born into a family priestly in Persia. Was it from one of those Jewish families?
who had remained in Babylon?

Whatever the case may be regarding these premises, the derivation of the
The Manichean doctrine of Kabbalah is quite evident to to conclude that its author was of Jewish nationality.

What strikes us most in the mixture of absurdities Manichean things that we will see, it is the presence within her of Jewish Kabbalah.

Let's look at the table we provide on the plate J.

The Ensoph is represented by God. Christians cannot-were more likely to be disappointed by the abstract idea of the Infinite, separated of the Trinity.

The Holy Trinity appears to be represented by (9) the Spirit Almighty (8) Jesus, the primitive Man and (11) the Holy-Spirit; unless one wishes to accept (10) the Virgin of

1. Acta disput. Contra Manetem, n. 36.

2. Contra Faustum, 1. XIII, ch. 1.

3. Mansi, Conciles, I, p. 1129. Rohrbacher, V, p. 548.

136 Masonic Dogmatics

the Light as Kabbalistic Wisdom to which answers God the Son. In that case, the Holy Trinity would be rejected to the extreme of the eleven divisions of the kingdom of the Light.

We did not find, in the limited number of books in our library, the names of all the divisions of the kingdom of Darkness; but the names of the five dark elements! corresponding to those of the elements luminous, suggest that the demons also had between them a hierarchy created for offensive and defensive warfare sive against the good warrior spirits emanating from Dicu.

The repetition of the five elements in the world of mixing, represented by five animal species, is one of the names-numerous reminiscences of the Persian religion which are found dais the system of Mani.

The Khordah-Avesta says in the Patet Aderbat, prayer of Penance: "If I have committed a sin against creatures of Ormazd: the stars, the moon, the sun, fire, dogs, the birds, the five animal species, I repent and Say: "Lord, forgive me, I regret my sin."

Anquetil reports the tradition of the Parsis, that the first species of animals includes those that have cloven hooves; the second, those who did not split them; the third, those with five nails; the fourth, the birds, and the Fifth, the fish.

This is probably in honor of the same number of five, that Manes gave his instructions, sitting on a A seat, which one ascended by five steps. This ornate seat of precious stones, was exhibited annually as a precious relic, venerated by sectarians, during The feast of the Béma (Cathedral) celebrated on Easter day?!

The Freemasons will find the Béma and all the documentation Manichean trinc in the five degrees that lead to The Venerable's seat; will they find them on their paintings? Where

4. August., of Hæres., c. xLvi.
2. August., Contra epistolam Manichæi, c, vin.
3. Léo Taxil, II, p. 9.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 137

They see the firmament, the moon, the sun and the three windows 1, and especially in the famous blazing star, this transparent before whom they kneel to worship the Great Arch-text of the Universe.

2. The Five Celestial Regions of the Manicheans and the Blazing Star Freemasons.

The blasphemous idea of a duplicity of sex and of a divine generation, like animal generation, such that Kabbalah and Gnosis had developed it, was neither convincing nor striking enough for the first Christians to They would have been fooled. It was therefore necessary to obtain the destruction of Christianity that the Jews were watching as a heresy, by a contrary means, austere in appearance, but in reality intended to destroy the morality of disciples of Jesus Christ, and by immorality, their faith.

Virginity and celibacy, two precious jewels in the the crown of the mystical bride of Christ, were to serve as starting point of Jewish hypocrisy for the corruption of Christian people. Marriage will be declared immoral, the matter a creation of the principle of evil, and the door will thus be open to all possible vices of the flesh.

We present a picture of Manichæan doctrine to better explain its Kabbalistic lineage and the
We will summarize it. We find immediately the Kabbalistic numbers of eleven and thirty-three, thus than most of the doctrines already discussed.

Like the fallen Parsism, represented by the Bundéhésch, Manichæism recognizes two eternal, equal, uncreated beings.
and living beings: the principle of Light and the principle of Darkness; the first is good, the other bad, it is Ormazd
Mr. Ahriman. Each of these principles has its kingdom. Their
The opposition is absolute and their distance immense.

4. Saint Augustine, Contra Faustum, Book XX, Chapter VI. a You say that the sun, which appears round to everyone, is triangular, and that through a triangular window of the sky, the light filter-comes into the world!

138 Masonic Dogmatics

These kingdoms, also organized, consist of five regions, populated by countless beings emanating from their principles. We represent them with the blazing star. in each of the two kingdoms. It is true, in the kingdom in the darkness, the star is not blazing, but, in the kingdom of mixture, matter, which originates from kingdom of darkness, hides within it the sparks and the rays of light conquered from the sky.

The blazing star, represented by a transparent before which the Freemasons kneel for the adolescent-rer!, does not appear to relate directly to the Kabbalah, but rather to the Manichaeism to which Freemasonry has borrowed many symbols.

To mislead the curious laypeople and the initiated from the lower degrees, the leaders of Freemasonry provide many explanations for this mystical number represented by the blazing star. It signifies the five senses external, the five internal faculties?, the five orders In architecture, the five wise men: "Solon, Socrates, Lycurgus, Pythagoras and INRif.

"Jesus Christ is worshipped as a deity by Christians," He should be respected as a wise man by philosophers. said the Venerable to the new Fellow Craft. Another time, The blazing star represents the five months of production of nature, the five points of happiness, the five lights of the masonry, the five zones of the masonry", or the five signs of the Freemasons: the vocal, the guttural, the pectoral, the manual ct the pedestrian ref.

But the true meaning of this blazing star is indicated

1. Léo Taxil, The Cult of the Great Architect, p. 13 and passim.
2. Léo Taxil, II, 45.

3. Ibid., p. 340.

&. Ib., p. 8.

5. Ibid., IL, p. 28.
6. Ragon, Initiations, p. 129,
7. Carlile, Manual of Freemasonry, p. 245.
8. Léo Taxil, II, p. 44.

Masonic Dogmatics 139

by the Venerable Master who receives the Fellow Craft and says to him: All the emblems that decorate the temples of Freemasonry remind us of the great temple of the universe, next to this star the flamboyant one you see above my head is the sacred figure that reminds us of the mysterious cause of so much of wonders, the Great Architect of worlds. In pron- After uttering these last words, the Venerable rapped on his desk a most vigorous blow with the mallet. Everyone bows. the head to salute the blazing star.

In the ritual for the consecration of a Masonic temple- nique, we read: "The master of ceremonies mounts a use a stepladder and light the candles that are inside a transparent, depicting a five-pointed star, which is suspended in the air above the Venerable. The First Supervisor, when the Master of Ceremonies came down from his stepladder, he said: "Venerable, the blazing star shines "With the brightest brilliance." The Venerable, after a blow of the gavel: "My brothers, let us invoke the divine light." He descends from his throne and he comes to kneel before the Venetian lantern- yours in the shape of a star. The Wardens strike each one a blow of the gavel. The entire assembly prostrates itself. The Venerable- rable, raising his hands: "Divine light, mysterious flame- "laughing, sacred fire, soul of the universe, eternal principle of "worlds and beings, revered symbol of the Great Architect, "Sole sovereign, all-powerful, enlighten our minds, our tra- "Vals and our hearts, and spread the life-giving madness in our souls" "Of Freemasonry." All together: "So be it."

Note that the letter G is almost always found placed at the center of this symbolic figure. It comes to comp- to further complete and clarify the Kabbalistic idea of 'the divinity. We have already made it clear that the pan- The theism of Kabbalah recognizes only an eternal reproduction the constant and continuous existence of the infinite Being, which in itself is not Not knowable, but becoming so through its development. This development occurs through emanation, or rather through a generation produced by two beings that mutually complement each other-ment. This is how, according to the Kabbalah, the worlds are formed. The letter G therefore signifies generation for the subs-

440 Masonic Dogmatics

The nature of the universe, and geometry for its form. To know or Rather than believing this doctrine, for Kabbalists, it is the true science; in this respect, the letter G also signifies Gnosis.

When the letter G is located within the blazing star,
It symbolizes the doctrine of Manichaeism; when it is placed in the middle of a triangle, it designates the doctrine of the Kabbalah, which is essentially the same. This letter is the expression-the most intimate sion of the divinity advocated by the pan-Kabbalistic theism of the Jews. Divinity consists in the eternal generative act by which all that exists exists.
Freemasonry, by worshipping the blazing star, denies Dicu, the supramundane Creator of the universe, ct professes the doctrine that matter and force, and they alone, exist
A set of eternity upon eternity!

According to Manichaeism, the Blazing Star signifies God, the generating activity or the Force in the midst of the five elements:
"Light, air, fire, water, and wind." According to the Kabbalah, this signifies the same divinity: the union of the Holy King and the Matron, two triangles joining at a common point, and forming a five-pointed figure. In essence, it is not than a triple intertwined triangle.

Cornelius a Lapide! mentions the famous Pentalpha, that is to say, Alpha quintuple, resulting from a pentagon in star-shaped, he said that before his war against the Galatians, Antiochus Soter, from whom the other kings of Syria received the name Antiochus, who had a vision during the night.
He saw Alexander at his side, ordering him to give to his soldiers the "sign of greeting" whose hieroglyph was found for a long time, that is to say a TRIPLE INTERLACED TRIANGLE by five lines touching at their points, so that their Five angles form five alphas. Antiochus obeyed, had it put in the pentagram on his standards and had it sewn onto his coat military of each of his soldiers. Immediately he won a glorious victory over the Galatians. There is still a silver medal of Antiochus with the inscription of the said pentalpha in the shape of a pentagon surrounded by a circle, with the five letters of the Greek word Mugeia, greeting, inscribed in the five angles.

In the army of the Byzantine emperors, there was an order of warriors called propugnatores, champions, who wore a blue shield with a red border and the green center, in the middle of the aforementioned pentapha.

From all this, it is not difficult to conclude that the Star The word "flamboyante" and its meaning owe their origin to the Jews. Babylonians.

The nocturnal vision with which Antiochus was honored reminds us of Poimandres sharply shewed the vision which favored the Jew Hermes Trismegistus. Who were this Alexander and this Poimandres, if not the one who is worshipped by the brothers to whom The Jews blindfold their children to give them "the light", and which, on our diagram, is located at the head of the pentagon Manichean!

3. Ormazd and Ahriman of the Persians, the Brazen Serpent and Adonai Freemasons,

The Manicheans, like the Ophites, adopted the The eternal duality of the principles of good and evil. They have borrowed from the fallen religion of the ancient Persians.

By delving deeper into ancient Zoroastrianism, one perceives his pantheism in the triptych of Ahura-Mazda: he is first God, then the first Ameschaspenta or archangel, and Finally, the first Yazata, or angel. Perhaps it is under this report that the Qarset-nyayis (chap. seen) of Khorda-Avesta He calls it "triple before other creatures". The great A priest from the Parsis in Bombay writes to us: "In a few-one of the books by Pehlvi Pazund, the human soul is also named Ahur-Mazda." This is the doctrine of Kabbalah that the soul Humanity is a direct emanation of divine intelligence. a spark of God-Fire. As a god, Ormazd has no rival, no equal, no peer. As an archangel, he has a twin brother, Akrimane. As such, he bears the name of Çpenta-mainyus (Beneficent Spirit) in opposition to Angra-mainyus (Striking Spirit). The thirtieth Yacna of the Zend-Avesta establishes this doctrine in an indubitable manner.

142 Masonic Dogmatics

table: "These two celestial twins first made by themselves-they understand good and evil in thoughts, words and actions. The wise distinguish precisely between the two, but not the reckless.

"When these two celestial beings began to create at
The beginning of life and mortality, and the world as it finally was
He was to be, the Bad for the wicked, the Good Spirit
For the pure: then, from these celestial Beings, the Evil One chooses evil by acting, and the Holy Spirit, by preparing heaven unwavering, he chooses what is good, just as those who choose it also do.
who please Ahura through their manifest actions and their "Belief in Mazda." The Avesta word Yema is in sanscrit Yaman, et signific jumeaux.

According to Professor D. Haug, verses 21 and following The XIX of Yaçna should be translated as follows: "I, Ahura-Mazda, I have spoken these words to myself (the Ahunapairyo) concerning the heavenly Lord and the earthly master (Ahu ct Ratu) before the creation of the heavens, before water, before the earth, before the trees, before the birth of the righteous biped.
man, before solar matter for the creation of archangels. From my two spirits, the beneficent one produced all good creation, by pronouncing the Ahuna-pairyo, "the "Prayer par excellence."

If this translation is correct, Ahura Mazda, like God, two spirits emanated from him, the (penta-mainyus and the Angra-Mainyus. As an archangel, he is himself the first of These two spirits are Arimane's antagonists.

Understood in this way, the former Zoroustrianisme was in perfect harmony with the doctrines of other contemporary nations Raines, ct explained the origin of moral evil in a way irreproachable: that is to say, the wrong choice that one of the
The first beings acted of their own free will.

Masonic Dogmatics 143

However, the ancient Persian doctrine soon lost this the true principle of the unity of God and the origin of evil in a consequence of the willful perversity of a created mind; Ormazd and Ahrimane were recognized as two co-eternal principles nels, remaining one in the light without beginning, and the other in the darkness without beginning. Between the two were in an empty space, the Vat, in which the melange eut licu.

As we can see, Manes merely copied the fallen Parsism, and instead of giving it a Jewish twist, by putting on the head of Primitive Man, the Crown of Esther and the With the Persian kingdom at his feet, he gave it a nomenclature-Christian tradition, by naming the ideal Man after Jesus. Was it out of hatred for Christianity? Was this "heresy" a trick to deceive Christians, or For these two reasons together, it is pointless to examine it.

But what is very useful to note is that in the 25th degree of Freemasonry, to the rank of Knight of Brazen serpent, it is explained that the "divinity decomposes into two eternal principles that fight each other, Good and Bad. Their names vary depending on the countries that give them birth. a cult. Evil is Adonai among the Hebrews, Akri-Mane among the Persians, Typhon among the Egyptians; the Good So it's Lucifer, Ormazd, Osiris.

The Ophites have already taught us that the Serpent is a emblems of the Angel of Light: it was he who healed the Hebrews in the desert. The true Israelites worshipped them well. the figure of the bronze serpent placed on a cross, which recalled the miracle of the desert, when their ancestors, punished by "snakes whose bite burned like fire?" were finally saved from this scourge by looking at the serpent of a-raiu that Moses "put up as a sign". It was a figure of Christ, who himself said: "As Moses raised the serpent in the desert, so must the Son of Man be

4. Léo Taxil, I, p. 245.
2. Number, xx, 6.

144 Masonic Dogmatics

exalted, so that whoever believes in him shall not perish, but "that he may have eternal life," Moses lifted up this bronze serpent so that all the people of the camp of Israel could see it. Thus the Christ was lifted up on the cross so that he could be seen by all the world. How well that brazen serpent was shaped of a snake without having the venom, thus Christ took the form of sinners without having sinned himself. Hebrew He said, "Put it on a banner." The banner that bore this The bronze serpent was probably in the shape of a cross. so that it can be fixed securely.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, "had the serpent torn to pieces" of bronze that Moses had made, because the children of Israel "had they burned incense for him until then?"

This idolatry may have been based on the same doctrine perverse, which we have found among the Ophites, that It is Adonai who sends misfortunes, and Satan, the Serpent, who healed them; that it was Adonai who had forbidden Adam and Eve to eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and of Evil, and the Angel of Light, the Serpent, who had en-revealed the truth by making them eat the mecha- fruit

ly defended.

The "Great Architect of the Universe" is not Adonai
From the Bible, it is Angel of Light, the Genius of Work,
'The Spirit of Fire'.

If this substitution of Satan for the true Dicu, and his ado-
Using ratio under the veil of Masonic symbols is a crime
The sign of the brazen serpent on the cross is appalling.
a no less detestable cflronteric. The form in use Among Freemasons, it is not a complete cross, since the upper part is missing; it is still the Greek tau, the impure sign of the generative act. The Serpent, recognized as Dicu, abandoning its circular form or its eternity, develops in time, around the phallus, through generation, through the work of the Holy King and the Matron, and thus creates the world.

4. Saint John, 17, 14, 15.
2. IV Kings, xvi, &.
8. Léo Taxil, II, p. 245.

Masonic Dogmatics 145

We have already learned the doctrine of Kabbalah on the existence of four worlds, each represented by the quarter of a circle: Add this quarter circle to the zau, represent-feel the permanent eternity above the {by a ring, Pass the Serpent through this ring, as if it were a Lower the cable from the top to a quarter of the circle.
and you have the Masonic anchor, representing emanation of the world of its principle, which boasts of being the principle of Good, but who, in reality, is still the one who wanted to sup-
To plant the Most High is to be equal to God! Our neighbors,
In Port Louis, they call their lodge the Lodge of the Triple Espérancid. On their front door, you can see three of these inks Masonic idolatrous.

Manichaeism propagated the ancient idolatry of the Jews hardened, their phallomania and demonolatry; and the Freemasons who still consider themselves Christians have led astray into Satanic worship through illegal oaths And sacrilegious! They made themselves slaves to the Jews, and by The Jews, slaves of Satan himself! When will he come

So, the new Hezekiah who will shatter the idol of the Serpent of Brass, which the Freemasons of the 25th degree wear as A jewel on the chest, attached to a fiery-colored ribbon? In truth, the kingdom of the Prince of Darkness is indeed firmly established on the earth!

The denial of a personal God and the deification of Human intelligence constitutes one of the foundations of modern Masonic rallies: they lead to a diabolical pride. The recommendation and sanctification of the act of generation they constitute the other basis: they lead to the crudest excess of animalistic voluptuousness.

The doctrine of Kabbalah, that the Universe is the result of an eternal commerce between the Holy King and the Matron, and the Gnostic doctrine which posits all its divinities, The Ogdoad, in particular, in male and female pairs, are doctrines taught and represented by the symbols of the Freemasonry: The Square on the Level, the compass in-straddling a quarter of a circle, the letter tau, the rose on the cross, two triangles, two triangles touching in a common point, sign of the divine and infinite couples; five points, figure of a finite or human couple in connection; the Blazing Star, etc. As we can see, atheism or pan-Theism, which amounts to the same thing, inevitably leads to the worshipped the phallus with all its perversions, such as the foul mysteries of antiquity knew them and practiced. In short, Freemasonry is paganism resurrected in its most filthy and revolting form. Aunt. Do our ordinary Freemasons know why? They, the mason sisters, wear the apron, a symbol of the "Work," precisely where they wear it? Let them ask why the Apprentice must wear the triangular bib—the gular part of his apron was raised; why was the Companion, who is the first to have the right to be part of the Lodges by adoption, has the right to wear the bib of his apron folded down; what does the blue rosette (French rite) mean on the white apron, we pocket it under the bib (Scottish rite) of the Master? What does the eye on the Master's white bib signify? Secret (and degree)? constant, summer... They will soon see that they are unconsciously given over to the filthy worship of the phallus. It's a disgrace! while Kabbalah and Gnosticism were still teaching a kind of marriage between their fanciful couples, Manichaeism appeared more brazen: he condemned marriage and advocated love free and infanticide, as we shall see.

10

146 MASONIC DOGMATICS

&, The Victory of the Light of the Manicheans and the Marriage Freemasons.

Let's continue with the Manichean mythology.

The Prince of Darkness, imitating the Persian Ahrimanc, was dazzled by the divine light he saw from afar, he resolved to attack him. Knowing his enemy's intention, the good Dicu wanted to protect his kingdom from all danger. At this Finally, he produced the Mother of Life, who in turn gave birth Primitive Man, also called Jesus. Jesus armed himself with the Light and joined the fight against the Prince of

MASONIC DOGMATICS 147

Darkness and its demonic followers. Unfortunately
He was defeated! The demons held him captive and took him away part of his shining armor. Seeing Jesus in captivity, God produced another power, the mighty Spirit, named also the Spirit of life, and sent him to help Jesus. The Spirit powerful, he took hold of the captive Jesus, and he deli-true, without being able, however, to reconquer its shining armorlante, a part of the celestial light, which the princes of darkness had scattered and enclosed within matter, their creation.

For the deliverance of these remnants of divine light,
God then caused two more to emanate from his substance letters, which complete the number eleven, the Virgin of the light-the Virgin and the Holy Spirit, also called the third majesty.
This divine trinity, the Spirit of Life, the Virgin of Light and the Holy Spirit worked to deliver the light divine in captivity, of Jesus patibilis, Jesus passible. In this But the mighty Spirit created the world. The princes of darkness, for their part, created Adam, in the image of the primitive man, Jesus, whom they had glimpsed, as Pakhamot of the Gnostics created intelligent men based on the image of the angels she had seen.

Simply exposing this system is enough to discover the but for which it was created.

A truly diabolical hatred of God makes him a God powerless, fearing damage to his kingdom by the princes of darkness; an unforeseeing God who produces for her defense a female being, the Mother of Life, so that she gives birth (we don't know how, if by its androgynous nature, or by his own father) a defender of the kingdom of the Light; a divinity, that truly Jewish hatred named after the name worshipped by Christians, Jesus; a deity fool, who attacks the kingdom of darkness, falls into captivity, and is stripped of her luminous armor! Who doesn't immediately sees that this fable is blasphemous and unreasonable can only be the hateful work of an alliance between Satan and the Synagogue?

148 Masonic Dogmatics

Defeated in his representative Jesus, God sees himself forced to to produce another being, stronger than Jesus. But still Once again, this Manichean Dicu has miscalculated the forces of his emissary; for he only succeeded in saving Jesus; he was unable to reclaim the shining armor that the demons still hold on. What an insult to wisdom, to the foresight and the omnipotence of Dicu!

For the third time, Manès puts his Dicu to work He had another woman created for him, the Virgin of Light, ct With her came her masterpiece, the Holy Spirit. It is this Holy-Spirit that had been promised by Jesus Christ as before to teach the whole truth to his disciples, and who finally embodied in Mani!

It is worth noting that this heretic does not unite his celestial beings in marriage. He wanted to destroy Christianity through immorality. Marriage, this divine institution, was to disappear. The Virgin of Light—what Goddess! — makes a living by corrupting male minds females of darkness, by showing them her heavenly helpers in the form of attractive girls and boys! Here's a divine means to wrest from them the remnants of light that they had conquered from Jesus, the primitive man!

And Freemasonry? It's Manichaeism that it has learned to condemn marriage and to advocate free love.

Where? Firstly, in his adopted lodges. We we do not want to repeat what Léo Taxil published in his Book: The Masonic Sisters. It feels like rereading the history of the Virgin of Light. If the adoption lodges are indeed as they are represented there, they are in truth the practical realization of these lascivious fables that Manes has en-slashed at his followers. Let us be permitted to call Pat-police presence at adoption lodges, in view of destroy a deeply immoral organization, which transforms "the Sisters" into Manichean virgins of light, and their "Brothers" five points in lewd demons and criminals.

Secondly, let us listen to the Masonic doctrine on the marriage. In a somewhat discreet way, so as not to avoid offending honesty, which was still quite powerful, she condemned marriage, just as Manichaeism had condemned it.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 149

In the book, The Cult of the Great Architect, we find the celebration of the Masonic marriage named, according to the principles Manichaeism, marital recognition. We just have to browse through this parody of a real wedding to convince yourself that the principles on which this ceremony is based are of Manichaeism. In the middle of the room, in front of the Orient, is a wide, short column, on which are alliances on a tray with flowers; in the center, a small casserole dish garnished with burning embers.

Those who have visited the Shaivite temples in India will immediately say that this wide and short column is located there always: it signifies the phallus of Shiva, the God of Fire. The burning ember on the short column thus connects the Masonic traditions linked to the phallogocentric nature of ancient paganism.

The Venerable One lets slip, during the course of the ceremonies, words whose significance will be appreciated by those who remember the Manichean doctrine on marriage.

For example: "Marriage was considered as the true religion of humankind." The marital act is implied.

"Marriage emancipates the young man and the young woman; It makes them independent and free to develop their nature and their faculties.

"Dear sister, give your husband this wedding ring, the shape is the emblem of perpetuity." The two circles intertwined, they represent the eternal perpetuity of the union of the Saint King and the Matron.

The Venerable, extending his hands above the heads of the husband and wife, said, "I confirm you in the sacred bond of marriage." and gives you the Masonic consecration that your virtues. » The civil marriage is implicitly declared null and void without this confirmation.

But what is the value of Masonic confirmation?
Here it is: the Masonic consecration of the marriage completed,

150 Masonic Dogmatics

The Venerable Master asks the Senior Warden: "Where should
So where does constancy in marriage come from?

The first supervisor replies: "It comes from the "Mutual freedom of husband and wife..."

The Venerable: "What do you think of the indissolubility of the marriage? "

Answer: "It is contrary to the laws of nature and to those of reason: to the laws of nature because the con-Social connections have often united beings that nature had been separated by unsympathetic people who only reveal themselves in marriage; according to the laws of reason, as well as indissolubility marriage makes a law of love and claims to enslave the most "Capricious and the most involuntary of feelings."

The Venerable: "So what is the remedy for marriage?"

The head warden: "It's a divorce."

Let Christians know this: their holy religion does not admit
Not divorce, she firmly believes in the indissolubility of marriage.
So, while divorce has become part of modern legislation,
This is the work of Freemasonry guided by the Jews, who they are more attached to this institution of the Old Testament than to all his prophecies and his morality. And we Christians-Look, we are forced to endure, in our Christian societytienne, this atrocious invasion of Jewish morals and lasci-Kabbalistic and Manichean life!

5. Latest developments in Kabbalistic sects.

The numbers eleven and thirty-three, which have guided us until-which here, seem to want to disappear along with Manichaeism primitive, and remain hidden in the Jewish Kabbalah, to re-to become a later member of the Masonic system. It's the simple Persian dualism, the good Dicu and the bad Dicu, which for minds resistant to the truth. Throughout history, these minds provide the masses that make up the large sects. We find dualism especially in the sects of the Middle Ages, among the Paulicians of the seventh century, the Cathars, the Bulgarians, the Patareans, the Bogomiles and other sects of the eleventh and twelfth centuries.

MASONIC DOGNATICS 1451

The sects that abandoned dogma and threw themselves entirely on that of morality are the Vaudois and the Albigensians; these heretics represent less a sect apart from being an amalgamation of all the old sects. Their the main and, so to speak, only dogma is well expressed by the response that one of these sectarians once gave, after his conversion, to Archbishop Arnold of Cologne: "They look-everything the Church believes and does is false and without foundation. demented. » The denial of truth had succeeded its perversion-Zion.

A relic of dogmatic Manichaeism was their belief that the author of the visible world differs from that of the invisible world. This belief implies equality between God and Satan. That's all the evil spirit could ask for. And that was quite enough. It was simply, in fact, to attribute the formation of bodies to the evil God, for to have a basis on which all the disorder could be established moral, social and political, by which Christianity had to be crushed.

It is unnecessary to repeat here what can be found in all the ecclesiastical stories about the Waldensians and the Albigensians. Their spirit and morality are reduced to a few principles; here they are: a brazen intellectual pride by which they did not recognize any authority above their own minds; an unleashed hatred against all existing authorities, primarily against the Church and its ministers, then against civil power and against order social and domestic systems based on property and marriage; and Finally, absolute secrecy surrounding their mysteries and their leaders unknown to the people, mysteries known only to the initiated tested over many years.

"The Cathars, probably coming from the Pays-Lower, they entered Westphalia and the pro-Vincennes of the Lower Rhine; a schism that broke out among them, at In the middle of the twelfth century, they were discovered. Attempts were made to convert them by publicly refuting them. Two important facts-Many are recorded in the documents of this century.

152 Masonic Dogmatics

First, this sect, after having strengthened itself in its resistance against the Church, then extended this opposition to everything that was prominent in society; she hated the nobility, all the principal figures of the State, and she he also endeavored to regulate civil institutions according to his ideas. The other fact is that the sectarians employed all the means to ensure their domination. That is why they sought to seduce the young King Henry VI.

In France, in 1184, a carpenter named Durand, pre-Texting an apparition of the Virgin Mary, gathers a good many of his compatriots, under the name of Brothers of the white cap, applied the principles of the Patares heresy and directed his forces towards the overthrow of all power superior. He claimed to achieve a state of equality that would have existed originally among men, and by virtue of which no external difference should be apparent in cux. All spiritual and temporal authority was declared pernicious. Its members entered into a pact between cux of brotherhood, with the aim of securing domination by the sword of their sect? What was new about this sect of coalition of all elements contrary to the existing order of things, it is audacity, it is fanatical zeal that characterizes it was terrorizing its members and promoters; which was old, This is the support that the Jews gave him.

Lucas de Tuy said: "The princes of the states and the judges" Cities learn the doctrine of heresies from the Jews whom they accept as acquaintances and friends.

When the Count of Toulouse, leader of the Albigensians, submitted, on June 18, 1209, to Pope Innocent III, and swore to-lies to his legate, Milo, before granting him absolution. the excommunication he had incurred, ordered to return to the bishops what he had taken from them, to drive out his mercenaries the countries of the country and to no longer use them, to remove the Jews of all functions, and to faithfully follow the future

4. Hurter, Zanocent III, 111, p. 48.
2. Hurter, ib., p. 50,
- 8, De altera vita adversus Albig. errors, 1, 3.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 153

orders from the Pope or his legates. At the same time, sixteen The barons, vassals of the count, swore an oath never to again to ally with no brigands and to give no more function to the Jews\.

The Council of Avignon decreed the exclusion of Jews from public functions*.

Certainly, this measure is more humane and effective than exile; it does not burden neighboring peoples with the scourge of usury and Jewish cabals.

The role of heretics based on the doctrine of Kabbalah was over. The crusade against the Albigensians had ended their last vestiges.

A new era opened for the Jews, and Satan made use of it. of them in an even more skillful way than in the past. At In the thirteenth century, the Kabbalah was publicly mentioned, and At the same time, the demoralization of the Templars began. which led these unfortunate knights to their tragic end. The remnants of their order secretly allied themselves with the Jews.

The propaganda of Judeo-pagan error will henceforth be but by the successors of the Templars, hiding in the corporation of Catholic Freemasons and calling themselves the Freemasons.

To error and deceit will be added violence.

Unbeknownst to the Freemasons, the Kabbalistic doctrine will remain the foundation of new efforts, it will not serve as direction only to the leaders of the Jews for the training and governance government of the new phalanx intended to attack, in alliance with Satan, Christ and his Church.

The new sect will combine with the essence of heresies pagan-Jewish, the cunning, the violence and the hatred of these three enemies of the name of Christ, fallen angel, the synagogue fallen and a fallen Christian order.

Divide and rule will be the Jewish motto. Destroy

1. Hurter, /nnocent III, m, p. 79.
2. Hurter, ibid., p. 95.

154 Masonic Dogmatics

Christianity by Christians themselves to obtain the supreme power, the Kether-Malkuth of the world, by Adept at their mysteries, this is the policy they will follow from now on.

"Two Jews established Freemasonry."

Their work was skillfully begun and skillfully continued until our time. Will they finish it?

6. The Jew in all Kabbalistic sects.

The importance of the condition imposed on the people of Albi defeated, to dismiss the Jews from their offices cannot be exaggerated. It is proof of the conviction of that time. that the Jews were the fans, if not the authors, of the abo- petty errors that were rampant in the sects whose unity of the holy Church had so much to suffer.

Indeed, the essence of heretical doctrines, since the Gnostics and the Manicheans up to the Albigensians, returns always to the Kabbalah, and originally, to the ancient paga- nism that the Kabbalah had absorbed.

However, nobody had any interest in reviving the old paga- nism; Christianity had replaced it in the same way more advantageous. There were no longer any pagans clinging to the The beliefs of their ancestors. Only the Jews had an interest to oppose the strengthening and free development of Christian civilization.

Throughout its history, we see this people guided, animated, enthusiastic, exasperated, exasperated, according to the various circumstances of his position, through a single grand idea: the expectation of his future Messiah. The simple logic of the facts This forces us to declare them responsible for all the misfortunes that the sects stemming from their Kabbalah have brought upon themselves on the great Christian family.

Saint Étienne les ha rangua: "Hard-headed men, concise heartfelt message, you always resist Holy Spirit: As your fathers did, so you do. Which of the prophets did your ancestors not persecute? They killed those who foretold the coming of the Righteous One, whom you "You have come to betray and kill."

Masonic Dogmatics 455

It seems that it was because of her tenacity that the divine Providence has chosen this people, unique in humankind. to be the guardian of his revelations, so that they do not They do not lose anything through the frivolity and carelessness of men. He himself had to provide permanent proof of the pro-magnificent masses performed for the men, of whom he was the porter-unworthy man. At all times he will call, like bells of the church, the people to the true temple of God, without entering it himself.

We will not speak of these hopes for a Savior and Temporal king who led him to resist Titus with a rage Incredible. The demagogue Bar-Kokhba (son of the Star), later named Bar-Khosba (son of falsehood), who presented him as the Messiah, stirred up the Jews, under the emperor Adrien, to shake off the Roman yoke. Akiba, one of the authors of the Talmud who enjoyed a high reputation and influence, and had falsely calculated the time of arrival of the Messiah, even became the squire of Bar-Kokhba, and augmented This considerably diminished the blindness of the Jews who They mistook Bar-Kokhba for the promised star. Bar-Kokhba was Initially very successful against Roman weapons, he seized not only from Jerusalem, but also from many other strongholds in Palestine.

Initially, the Romans did not pay much attention to movements of Judea, so often defeated and conquered; it was only when they realized that the Jews were putting in motion the whole universe, that Hadrian sent Julius Caesar Vere, the most valiant general of his time. He, not daring not attacking a multitude of people determined to fight in desperate, he took them separately; and in the space of a little More than two years after the war lasted, he perished approximately six hundred thousand Jews, not counting those who were burned alive

4. Act., vi, 51.

2. Wetzler and Welte, Akiba.

156 Masonic Dogmatics

by hunger, fire, and misery, nor those who were sold as slaves. The Jews viewed this disaster as the biggest thing that ever happened to them, including that which they experienced under Titus.

Bar-Kokhba caused the deaths of at least one hundred during this war. Four thousand Christians. The Romans avenged them. Jerusalem even lost her name; she was henceforth called Aelia Capi-Tolina; the stones of the temple were used to build a theater, and The Jews were banished from their capital.

Notwithstanding the desolation to which they were reduced as a result of the lies of their false prophet, their confession-The settlement was so large that in 432 they believed...

new to an imposter. A certain Moses arose on the island from Crete, claiming to be the ancient Moses, sent for the second once on earth, to bring his people back on dry land by the divided sea, in the land of his fathers. The Jews, delighted to be there—enthusiasm, abandoning their trades and their properties, followed their new guide to the seashore, and there, on His orders, unwavering in their faith, they rushed forward. They thronged in the waves and all lost their victory. Those who survived this calamity and claimed they had been deceived by a spirit of darkness, one of the demons of Samael.

Yet another example to show the incomprehensible force—possible hope that this strange people maintains of seeing One day the promised Messiah will come and subjugate them in their favor the whole world.

At the beginning of the seventeenth century, when Sabbathai Zevi presented himself in the East as the son of David and the The promised Messiah had as his forerunner Nathan of Gaza, who, Having become clairvoyant, he knew and told things pasts of which he naturally knew nothing. He had visions and predicted the future. Soon, prophets and Prophetesses appeared in Samaria, Adrianople, and Thessaloniki, Constantinople and several other places;

1. Gærres, Mystique, v, p. 55.

MASONIC DOGMATICS 157

men, women, young men, young women
And even children were seized with the prophetic spirit. They were suddenly thrown to the ground like epileptics ticks; they would go into convulsions and then announce in Hebrew or Aramaic language, although they did not know neither one nor the other, extraordinary things or things that had past, long past, or yet to come. Each one of these prophecies ended with these words: "Sabbathai Zewi is the true Messiah of the house of David, to whom The Crown and the Kingdom have been given.

Ab! the Kether-Malkuth, so well known to the Freemasons!

The rekindled enthusiasm of the Jewish people was cruelly Disappointed, when this new Messiah turned... to Islamism!

Having failed to recognize their high destiny, the Jewish people wander throughout the world in order to serve as a witness to Christianity.

In Germany and other Western kingdoms, they were regarded as the valets of the empire, which the monarch could use as he pleased. The great vassals treated them like slaves. Notwithstanding the remonstrances from popes and bishops who tried to a-
To ease their plight, they endure a truly harsh form of slavery.

Each year, upon returning from the Passion of the Lord gneur, when they allowed themselves blasphemies against the Christian mysteries, or stole children for the crucifixions
Proud, aversion and indignation against them increased.
Oppressed everywhere, they received as compensation the riches of Christendom, without excluding the treasures of the Church. They managed to seize most of it.
of the money in circulation, which they were making grow even more by excessive wear and tear. They were protected by the big guys, who shared with them the profits from their usury. But the people, doubly exploited by masters and slaves, he was becoming increasingly indignant against this profession to which he belonged.
victim, and against the ever-increasing prosperity of these

1. Gærres, v, p. 56.

158 Masonic Dogmatics

foreigners, who attached themselves like parasitic plants to nations among which they lived, in order to absorb all the substance.

We continue to follow Gærres in this narrative. The storm it formed slowly, announcing itself from time to time by a few isolated flares; but finally, when the crusades
This current has shaken Europe to its very foundations, the
The storm, long contained, suddenly erupted.
France, Spain, England, Italy, on the shores of the Rhine and the Danube, in Bohemia and in Hungary, the populations pursued the Jews with inexorable relentlessness primeable, employing pillage, arson and against them the assassination. In the Duchy of York, in England, five Hundreds of Jews, who had taken refuge in this fortress, placed there the fire after killing their children and per-They thus returned amidst the flames. The minor nobility of the surroundings, of which they were the creditors, had burned in the cathedral all the titles of their claims.

They were chased everywhere; but compassion was there.
which they had kept, they opened the doors again.
Louis VII, King of France, tolerated them, and Peter the Venerable, abbot of Cluny from 1122 to 1157, who knew the Talmud had the Qur'an translated in Spain, summarizing this prince to use their wealth against the Saracens.

Here is what he wrote in his thirty-sixth epistle:

"What I tell you about the Jews, O King, is well known to all. If they fill their granaries with fruit, their cellars of wine, their bags of silver and their chests of gold, it is not neither by working the land, nor by serving in war, nor by practicing some other useful and honorable trade, but It is by deceiving Christians, and by buying at very low prices, thieves, the objects they seized. If any thief-ron, forcing his way into a church, carries off candlesticks, incense In the evenings, whether it be the cross itself or the chalices, he goes to the Jews, ct enjoying by those a damnable security, not only He finds there a place to hide his stolen goods, but also he sells to the synagogue of Satan what he took from the holy

Masonic Dogmatics 159

Church of God. The vessels that contained the Body and the Blood of Christ, he delivers them to those who killed this body and shed this blood, which has filled the Savior with opprobrium world while he lived on earth, and who today They still continue to blaspheme against him!

These words explain it well, without justifying it however, the barbarity with which the populations at that time treated Jews were targeted from time to time.

The Talmud tells us that shooting stars are tears that Elohim pours twice a day on the captivity of his people. Every morning, he roars like a lion, striking From his feet to the firmament. Every day, he exhales a lament. like a moaning turtledove, and cries out: "Woe! Woe to me for having made my house a desolate place, for to have given my temple to the flames and scattered my children among the nations! A people who knew how to preserve their gold national pride, even in its abjection, that dared to lend itself to God himself, his indignation and his pain, must have been deeply affected by contempt and bad treatment comments to which he was subjected. But, defenseless and without cover- rage, his concentrated anger could not occur in the grand day, and was forced to resort to mysterious ways- laughing.

We will not deal here with the oft-repeated story of murders of young Christian children, committed by Jews for liturgical purposes. These immolations only served to increase- to lie about the rage of the population against the Jews. They told them he also attributed to the mania for poisoning the sources and the rivers and the practice of all diabolical asceticism. We know what power do the Jews attribute to the words Shem-Hammphorasch, meaning: the name explained. He who knows Using these words can create a new world; through this Words, Moses performed his miracles, the prophets foretold the future, it was Jesus himself, who had learned it from Joshua in Egypt, through it, has done marvelous things. It contains not simply, like the name Jehovah, the essence of God, but also its omnipotence, its wisdom, its truth, its justice his mercy and his kindness; it was written, at the entrance from the temple in Jerusalem, on the scepter that Jacob had anointed of oil. From the time of the destruction of the temple by the Romans-hands, this word was lost with the stone on which It was engraved.

160 Masonic Dogmatics

Freemasons are familiar with this famous saying. 14th degree, Grand Scotsman of the Sacred Way, called of Jacques VE, on donné au récipiendaire l'explication de la pierre Cubic with a point. This grotesque stone, overloaded with Letters and numbers, is a cube topped with a pyramid... One side of this pyramid contains these words: Sehem-Hamm-Phorasch. These are the words that end the grand-diabolical evocations in the Ritual of black magic. James VI, King of England and Scotland, whose name is mixed with that of the 14th Masonic degree, is renowned for to have engaged in the occult sciences °.

Since Kabbalah was highly esteemed by the Jews, it was quite natural to... turel that they devote themselves zealously to its study in order to draw from it of consolation. They also found points of support there. to establish contact with the spirits she advocates-knows; with the help they expected to find in these minds, They hoped to take revenge on the Christians, and discover treasures. Kabbalah has always been renowned as the primary source of black magic.

We drew the bridge by which the Jews of the twelfth century, they moved from the composition of doctrines heretics to the composition of a new society of clandestine finitely theological, secretly political and public-philanthropic. The heretical Templars dispersed will be their knights. The alliance between the fallen Synagogue and a fallen Christian order will come to an end.

2. Leo Tasil, II, p. 164.

BOOK II
THE

KNIGHTS OF THE KABBALISTIC JEWS

CHAPTER ONE
THE FALLEN TEMPLARS

1. The Kilwinning Lodge and Kabbalistic Zero.

During a conversation one day with such a statesman remarkable that it was just and honorable, we presented it to him historical evidence of the Freemason connection with the remnants of the suppressed Templar order in 1312; we insisted that the Kilwinning lodge was the mother lodge of all Freemasonry. Our honorary- A reliable and honored friend replied that this demonstration interested him very keenly; that he had once been the Venerable Master of this lodge, and that seemed to him very curious that she bore the number zero, while all the others Masonic lodges were registered under their numbers respective.

We have already seen that zero, forming a circle, is the figure of Infinity. In itself and by itself, zero is not nothing: it only has value in combination with other nouns. Similarly, Ensoph, in itself and all alone, is "To the Unknown of Unknowns;" it is only by manifesting itself within the ten Sephiroth that it can be understood. As the Zero is the end of each ten and the beginning of another ten, thus the Ensoph finds itself as if developed in the numbers of all worlds.

The application of Kabbalistic philosophy to number

11

162 THE KNIGHTS

zero of the Kilwinning lodge, which is the source of all The lodges, obviously.

The year 1717 is undoubtedly that of the establishment of the Reformed English Freemasonry; but long before this date, even before it took the name of Freemason- In fact, this society existed in Scotland, formed by a few The Templars were scattered. They had gathered to take revenge on the suppression of their Order, and had constituted at this finally a new Convent at Kilwinning, not under the designation- tion of "Temple", but, which amounts to the same thing, under that of "Herodom", Holy House.

"In the twelfth century," said Paul Rosen, "it existed in Orient, a sect of Joannist Christians; they claimed that the Gospels were nothing but pure allegories. Their leader, Theoclet, initiation into the Joan of Arc mysteries by the knight Hugh de Payens, leader of the Templars, founded in 1118, et en fait his successor. The Templars therefore professed the Gnos- primitive ticism; their teachings had a whole place marked in Freemasonry which was dedicated to the propagation of the gation of this pure gnosticism; and they gave birth to Templar Rite of 17431.

We do not know the source of this information. However, if it is based on a historical fact, it ex- explains the moral degradation into which the Templars fell on the side which earned them the suppression of their Order.

2. The Baphomet of the Templars and Freemasons,

In his book, The Mysteries of Freemasonry, p. 773, Léo Taxil traces the demoralization of the Tem- bending to their relations with Muslims, and in particular with the {Smaëlians who formed a secret Maho- society Metane, professing Manichaeism in its mysteries. They They secretly worshipped an idol named Baphomet. "a satanic image of naturalism," and reviving the The depravities of the Manicheans. The word Baphomet comes from Greek.

4. Paul Rosen, Satan and Company, p. 84.

KABBALISTIC JEWS 163

Baphé, immersion, and métis, wisdom. It means done Bap- theme of Wisdom. It is Kabbalistic, Hermetic, Gnostic- tic, ophitique et manichéen.

Who was this idol? Some say it was a bearded head mounted on four feet, having either one or Three sides!

Mr. de Lammer discovered a dozen of these heads. of Baphomet, as they were called, and tore the Arabic, Greek, or Latin inscriptions that they bear, as well as the symbols they carry. The métis, wisdom is represented on these idols, in accordance with ideas of the Gnostics, and particularly those of the Ophites, in a human figure combining the attributes of both sexes. It is accompanied by the infamous and vile letter Tau (the Phallus that the Egyptians called Za Key of the Life and the Nile), of the serpent, of the representation of baptism of Fire, and also Masonic symbols, such as the sun, moon, blazing star, apron, chain of aeons, the serrated tassel of the Freemasons, the candlestick seven-branched, etc... These symbols, these hieroglyphs, these inscriptions can be found on castles, churches and the Templar tombs.

Léo Taxilé gives another description of Baphomet and to this end cites the speech of the Knight of Eloquence, accompanied by an exhibition of this infamous idol before which The Gnostics and the Templars burned incense. – “We committed a crime against the Knights Templar, explains the Orator to the recipient of the 29th degree, Grand Scos- I know of Saint Andrew of Scotland, for having honored this symbol in their mysterious gatherings. What harm is there, then, in That? Baphomet is the pantheistic and magical figure of the absolute. The torch placed between the two horns represents-

4. Alex. de Saint-Albin, the Freemasons and the Secret Societies according to the records of the Templar trial, p. 18.

2. V. Bergier, Dictionary of Theology. V. Baphomet.

3. Compare Clavel, History of Freemasonry, II, p. 355,

4, The Mysteries of Freemasonry, pp. 358 and 369.

164 THE KNIGHTS

sense the balanced intelligence! ; the goat's head, synthetic, which combines some characteristics of the dog, the bull and the donkey, represents the responsibility for matter alone, and the expiation which, in bodies, must punish only the bodily faults. If hands are human, it is for to show the sanctity of work; if they make the sign of the esotericism (a secret doctrine reserved for initiates of certain-certain philosophical schools of antiquity), it is only to recommend the mystery. What can one find of inde-

a hundred to this emblematic figure of nature? Could it be the
A cross completed by a rose? Really, but that would be admitting it.
while we seek evil in what is good; for The cross, as it is thus depicted, symbolizes the immortal the nature of the human species. Would we reproach Baphomet for this?
To have a woman's breasts? But that proves he doesn't wear of the humility that the signs of motherhood and those of the work, that is to say, the redeeming signs. On his forehead,
The Blazing Star shines; we know what its meaning is.
mystical; this meaning is admirable. Finally, incriminate-ra-t-ou this divine figure because of these large wings de-Folded? But those are the wings of an archangel.

This Baphomet is carried in procession into the hall and the reserved corridors of the Masonic lodge. The recipientdaire inclines before him the flag entrusted to him guard.

Let us add, with the author, the following passage from the Ritual of High Magic, by Brother Constant, concerning Bapho-met (page 209):

"Let us boldly and loudly state that all initiates to
The occult sciences have loved, still love, and will continue to love them.
always what is signified by this symbol. Yes, the Great Ones Masters of the Templar Order worshipped Baphomet they made his initiates worship him; yes, he existed and he can

1. V. Clavel. Hist. de la Franc-Maçonnerie, p. 75.

2. The Templar Baphomet carried a caduceus in this place; in
In Masonic exhibitions, the caduceus is replaced by the cross.
with a trick.

KABBALISTIC JEWS 165

to still exist assemblies presided over by this figure, seated on a throne with her burning torch between her horns.
However, the worshippers of this sign do not think, like us, whether it be the representation of the devil, but well that of the god Pan (the Great All), the discus of our schools of modern philosophy, the god of the theurgists of the school of Alexandria and the Neoplatonic mystics of our days, the god of Spinoza and Plato, the dictionary of schools primitive Gnostics, Christ himself of the priesthood distinguished"sident."

The truth is that Baphomet is all at once a figure pantheistic of the great All, and the representation of Lucifer.

The torch between the two horns, it is said, represents Intelligence, which in the hermetic doctrine we have already known for the fallen angel, putting herself in the place of God the Father. In reality, it is God the Fire, the third The divine person of true Mosaic law, replaced in sects pagans by a God who is both good and evil, Lucifer.

The other symbols all belong to both doctrines.

Fundamental pantheistic principles: 1° that there are two principles eternal, Spirit and Matter; the former, a principle active or masculine, the second, a passive or feminine principle; 2° that divine life consists from all eternity in the re-active interactions between these two principles. Fire between the two horns, it is divine life or the conjugal act of the two principals cipes. On the head of Isis, the two horns are formed by a serpent. The blazing star on the monster's forehead means still the fire in the middle of the two triangles or principles in-Interlaced. The cross, the quadruple phallus, or divine force in the four worlds, completed by the rose, does not mean nothing other than the continuation of the life of the human species this main of all living species, by the same union of the two principles. The wings signify the spiritual principle, the head and the animal pices, the material principle; the beard, the male principle; the breasts, the female principle; the everything is a hermaphroditic being, and as such the first and eternal pantheistic principle.

166 THE KNIGHTS

In the past, he was depicted with the caduceus on his poi-trinc; the Freemasons substituted the Rosc- for this symbol Cross. The caduceus, moreover, symbolized exactly the same thing. something that the Brazen Serpent: the serpent leaving the form of the eternal circle, and so developing in time by the phallus or by generation.

Among the ancient Greeks, the god Pan (All) presided over the herds and pastures and was reputed to be the inventor of the trawl-meau. Jl was depicted covered in the skin of a goat, in having horns, spikes and hairy thighs. According to the In Eastern beliefs, he is the Supreme Being, creator and king of the world, identical to the universality of beings or of nature, similar to the Osiris of the Egyptians. This is the one that the Templars brought from the East to the West and their Temples closed within Masonic lodges. To worship it as the Grand Scottish Knights of Saint Andrew do, It is receiving the baptism of Wisdom, Masonic wisdom. nique being that of this Angel of Light.

Christians have always regarded this Baphomet as the figure of Lucifer, Pange fallen from the light, and the re- always smell with horns and cloven hooves signs of its degradation down to the level of brutes.

Philosophically and theologically, there is no doubt the figure of this Fire God, this Angel of Light, does not represent the person of the leader of the rebellious spirits against the Creator; it is he who, through his teachings, has replaced, in the minds of its followers, the person of God, his Creator; he the Father of Lies, the Father of pan-Theism, the father of black magic and demonometry.

It is not at all incomprehensible; it seems convenient. It is unbelievable that God would allow Satan to deceive in this way. men, who, in their pride, reject the divine revelation The people revolt against his holy law. As punishment for his Disobedience towards Dicu makes the man a slave of The Spirit of Hell.

This Baphomet, worshipped by the Templars, is a certain proof-tainè of the connection between the ancient Christian sects

KABDALISTIC JEWS 167

Kabbalistic and the degenerate order of the Templars. These last-The niers were the bridge through which the ancient paganism Judaized presented himself to the Christian West!

"The Freemasons of the Palladian Rite proclaim themselves the direct heirs of the Templars. Their first three degrees The initiation rituals are borrowed from the modern Rite of Adoption, and They have two special ranks.

"They claim that during the trial brought against Jacques de Molay and his accomplices, a number of Templars managed to save the monstrous idol known as Baphomet, they transported her to Scotland, and there, they continued their pr- secret ticks. The Templars, they say, changed their name to escape persecution, and became the Rosi-Crucians (or Rosicrucians). In 1717, a merger took place between the latest conferences of the building masons and the Rosicrucians. Anderson, Payne, Désaguliers, son of a Protestant pastor who sought refuge in England following the revocation of the edict of Nantes, introduced themselves into the year- ancient Freemasonry, which was a simple companion-swimming, and transformed it into a secret society of self-catho-conspiratorial schemes. It is indeed from this period that date the true militant Freemasonry.

"As for the famous Baphomet, who, it is said, had been given to the Templars by the Great Architect himself to serve as their Palladium, it was transported in 1801 to Charleston, in the United States, and there the first was founded Supreme Council, which then gradually formed the 24 Supreme Masonic Councils currently in existence on the globe.

3. The guilt of the Templars.

We don't need to dwell on the other points commonalities between Freemasons and fallen Templars. We could argue that the Templars were accused of

1. Frederick of Schlegel, cited by Deschamps, vol. I, p. 311.

2. Adolphe Ricoux, The Existence of Women's Lodges. Paris, Téqui, 4891,

168 THE KNIGHTS

the desire to maintain intelligence with the Infidels to thwart the projects of Christian princes in the East, etc. in particular for having communicated Frédéric IT's entire plan in the Sudan of Babylon; to prepare the ruin of the thrones, to establish in its place the ideal of the Jews, a Republic universal; to have entered into an alliance with the Order of the Assassins sins, whose leader, the Old Man of the Mountain, was a Jew; to deny Jesus Christ upon their reception into the Order; spit and walk on the cross; dedicate more sp— especially on Good Friday to these outrages; to commit between them abominable indecencies; to deliver, as the Ophites, to the flames the children born of a Templar; of to practice magic and spiritualism; to commit oneself by ser—to follow without exception the orders of the Grand Master; to consider everything as lawful for the good of the Order, and above all, never to violate the horrible secrets of their nocturnal mysteries, under penalty of the most terrible cha-times!

Historians have long debated whether if the solemn condemnation and the suppression of the Order The Knights Templar were actually, according to the saying Freemasons, an act of ignorance, fanaticism and of avarice, or rather an act of perfect justice in the interest of true civilization. But, in 1841, the first appeared volume of the work by Michelet, member of the Institute of France, which tells the story of the trial against the Templars, based on the authentic minutes up to unpublished material. In 1851, the second volume of his work was published the original minutes themselves. The two volumes have been incorporated into the "Collection of related documents" tifs to the history of France ct published under the auspices of Ministry of Public Instruction. This book teaches us therefore from absolutely authentic sources than the examination of the Grand Master JB de Molay, commander of 231 Knights Templar was established in Paris before a special commission com-

1. Alexandre de Saint-Albin, p. 18.

KABBALISTIC JEWS 169

composed of archbishops, bishops, high dignitaries, so ecclesiastical and civil, and four public notaries; that The Templars had complete freedom to defend themselves themselves and the Order; that this commission was appointed by Pope Clement V, after he had broken and annulled the procedures of a similar commission appointed by the king Philip the Fair. The Pope had previously directed himself-even, in Poitiers, an interrogation of 72 knights in presence of several cardinal-bishops and legates, no like a judge seeking to convict the guilty, but like a father who desires to find them innocent; had received from them a free and voluntary confession of all the crimes of which they were accused. Of the 231 Knights heard before the Paris Commission, only about thirty people, Almost all of them from the Foix region denied their guilt; others, without constraint, under repeated oaths and with meticulous circumstances of time, place and names, which imprint on their testimony the seal of truth-cited, admit the reality of the crimes attributed to them.

It was the Grand Master, Jacques Bourguignon de Molay, the Visitors, the Treasurers, the Ministers, the Provinciaux ct the local Superiors of Paris, Reims, of the Normandy, Auvergne and Champagne, the Chapelains and other Superiors of the Order.

Michelet remarks that the depositions of those who They denied the accusations, which are almost all identical in their terms, as if they had been made according to a a formula agreed upon in advance; while those of the Templars Those who confessed to crimes varied in all circumstances special ts with a candor that is the hallmark of the character-veracity teristic.

This gives greater certainty to the result which
The Paris Commission arrived, it's the same con~
The conclusion was presented in England, where the Synod of London, during a two-month investigation, obtained a similar admission of the infamous crimes and practices to which they had delivered the degenerate Templars. As a consequence of this

170 THE KNIGHTS

Following an investigation, the Order was abolished in England, and its properties allocated by Parliament for other purposes. There is more, the
The same result was obtained by the Councils held in Italy, in Ravenna, Bologna, Pisc and Florence, notwithstanding the desire prelates to absolve the Knights, provided they could in some way so justify.

From this abridged exposition, it follows that the accusation against the sect against Pope Clement V, for having condemned the Order by pure ignorance and fanaticism, it is entirely devoid of foundation.

Also false is the accusation of avarice leveled against Philip the Fair. In a letter dated December 24, 1307,
He declared to the Pope that he had seized the properties of the Tem-folds to allocate them entirely to their primary destination mordiale, that is to say, to the advantage of the Holy Land. He did the same statement in another letter, from the month of May 1311. And indeed, these properties were transferred to the Che-valets of Saint John or Malta, without any part in was attributed to the King.

One fact to note: among these thirty to forty thousand Knights, who were condemned for their confessed crimes to temporary imprisonment or to fasting and to prayers, not a single one retracted their confession, even after the death of the Pope and the King, even after his release from the prison. Only Grand Master Jacques Bourguignon of Molay and Guy, Dauphin of Auvergne, condemned by the Pope to imprisonment, ordered to request publica moment of forgiveness in the presence of the faithful assembled before the cathedral of Paris, renounced their confession. Phi-Lippe the Fair, without the Pope's consent, ordered, according
'the civil law of that time, to burn the Grand Master, on the island in the Seine, March 11, 1314.

&. The Knights Templar and the Masonic Kadosh.

This is the tragic event whose memory we commemorate.
in the 30th degree, grade of Kadosh or Knight Tem-fold. The initials of the Grand Master, JBM, appear on

KABBALISTIC JEWS 171

The coffin in the darkroom. At the foot of this coffin,
On the tombstone, three skulls are arranged:
The middle one, placed on a black velvet cushion, is supposedly the head of Jacques Molay; it is crowned of immortelles and laurels. The head on the right bears the cou-royal crown adorned with fleurs-de-lis and represents that of Philip the Bel; the head on the left wears the papal tiara and represents-sent that of Clement V.

The Grand Master (this is the title held by the president of The Areopagus of the 30th degree), addressing the recipient, said:
"Since you want to disregard it and recklessness drives you to brave an anger accumulated over so many centuries, am I-Me! "

He advances majestically towards the tomb, bows the kneeling before the laurel-crowned head, he said: "Imitate-
mol. »

The recipient kneels. The Grand Master:
"So far, you have only seen trouble in Freemasonry."
Problems, we need to face the realities now... Have you decided?
to trample underfoot the prejudices to which you have been enslaved, and obey without reservation everything prescribed to you by the Order For the happiness of humanity?

The recipient: "Yes."

The Grand Master, rising to his feet: "If that is the case, I will to give you the means to prove the purity of your intentions and to make known to us the extent of your wisdom. Pros-Bow down before this illustrious remains (he points to the head of Jacques Molay), and repeat the oath that I am about to dictate to you.

Holding a dagger in his right hand, he made Repeat the following oath:

"In the presence of God, our Father (the father of the Cainites)
– the divine Serpent) and of this august victim, I swear and I solemnly promise, on my word of honor, not to never reveal anything about the mysteries of the Knights Kadosh, and to obey everything prescribed to me by the regulations of the Order. I further swear to punish crime and to protect innocence.

172 THE KNIGHTS

The Grand Master and recipient. "Now, raise—
"You, and imitate me."

He then struck the surmounted head with a dagger with a tiara, and said: "Hatred to imposture! Death to crime!"

The candidate limits himself by repeating the same words. Then,
Both passing before the laurel-crowned head, they
They kneel, and the Grand Master says: "Eternal Glory
To the martyr of virtue! May his torment serve us as Lesson! Let us unite to crush tyranny and imposition!

"Turkish!"

They get up and reach the head surmounted by a cou—

royal crown.

The Grand Muftre strikes her with a dagger, in saying: "Failure to tyranny! Death to crime! »

The candidate is limiting himself by repeating the same words.
leave the vault and the Dark Room 1.

We do not believe it is necessary to bring any further...
very good evidence to show that Templarism continued clouded, in new forms, within Freemasonry,
Let us conclude this paragraph with the words addressed to Freemasons by Barrucl?

"Yes, your entire school and all your lodges came"
of the Templars. After the extinction of their Order, a certain number of guilty Knights, escaped from the proscription tion, sc meet for the preservation of their dreadful mysteries. To the whole code of their impiety, they add the vow to take revenge on the Kings and Pontiffs who destroyed their Order, and of the entire religion which anathematizes their dog—
My. They gain followers who pass it on from generation to generation
In general, the same mysteries of iniquity, the same oaths, the same hatred and the Dictionary of Christians and of Kings and Priests. These mysteries reach you, ct
you perpetrate impiety, vows and oaths:
That's your origin. The interval of time, the customs of

1. Léo Taxil, Les Frères Trois-Points, I1, p. 259.
2. Memoirs to serve as a history of Jacobinism, II, p. 393.

KADBALISTIC JEWS 173

Each century may well have seen some of your symbols vary and of your dreadful mysteries; the essence of it has remained; the
The desires and oaths, the hatred, the plots are all the same.
You wouldn't say it, everything betrayed your fathers, everything betrayed the children.

"Grand Master Jacques Bourguignon de Molay lived even when the Knights Aumont and Harris, military brothers-taires, and Pierre de Bologne, ecclesiastical brother of the Order, contributed to the secular and ecclesiastical constitution of Templars, the modifications that seemed necessary to them in such circumstances. The first condition of existence-
"Tence was the secret!"

This marks the beginning of the second period of the Order. of the Templars, that of the fallen Order. A few knights
The French took refuge in Scotland, where they found a protection under the Scottish crown. They constituted a Convent at Kilwinning, which became the cradle of all the Masonic lodges. In gratitude, they helped the king Robert Bruce in the Battle of Bannockburn against the English. The victorious king rewarded them by giving them a new name, to better protect them. He named their Order, the Royal Order of Saint Andrew of the Thistle. Thus,
The suppressed Order has once again acquired a public position.
In order to conceal their identity with the Templar Order, they constituted their supreme authority under the title of Chapriests of Herodom, and they also called themselves the order of Herodom, of the Holy House, obviously another name for Temple.

From Kilwinning and York, where another chapter was established
bli, the resurrected Order of the Templars, with another goal, in other forms and with a completely new constitution, retaining only the doctrine, the name, and the hatred of the first
The order spread secretly throughout all the countries of Europe.

1. From Saint-Albin, p. 36.

CHAPTER II

THE OTHER MASONIC KNIGHTS

1. The Knights Hospitaller of Saint John of Jerusalem, Rhodes and Malta.

We will refrain from writing the history of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, Rhodes and Malta,

The Pope and the Sovereigns established this hereditary Order. A universal third of the dispersed Templars. A very large number of German Templars had remained free from any investigation. Nothing was simpler for them than to enter with their possessions into the Order of the Hospitallers.

In a previous work (Masonic Revelations) we said that this Order was infected with the poison of the Order of the Templars; that in 1485, the Grand Master of the Hospitallers, from Aubusson, accepted the position of Grand Master of the secret society of the Templars, and since then, the Knights of Saint John the Baptist formed a degree in the Confederation secret deration. After further studies, we believe that this report which we had accepted in good faith, without The verification is unfounded, and we are seizing this opportunity to withdraw this serious accusation against a man who has always been worthy of the highest praise. As he He lived in Rhodes and ended his days there; he is not even pro- It is possible that he accepted a position that would have required his pre- presence in Europe. Furthermore, the Jews have always been present throughout history. mixed with Freemasonry, they would never have known felt at the election of a valiant Grand Master of the Hospi- Taliers, who had expelled the Jews from Rhodes because of the usury with which they oppressed the people.

Nevertheless, the Freemasons, when it suits them,

1. See History of the Knights of Malta, according to the Abbot of Vertot. Tours, Mame, 1867.

THE KNIGHTS OF THE KABBALISTIC JEWS 475

include the Knights Hospitaller of Saint John of Jerusalem Salem, Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta among their people. This The fantasies of the Freemasons do not establish the guilt of Hospitallers. Carlile, one of the best English authors of The Order said: "Some camps (provinces) are making a distinction between the Order of Malta and the Order of the Templars, while others create a new candidate at the same time

Knight of Saint John of Jerusalem, of Palestine, of Rhodes and Malta, and Knight Templar of Jerusalem-
"Lem!"

We believe this is simply a mys-tification. The Knights of Malta have always remained of true Christians, faithful to the Holy See and to the holy Church.
To appropriate their name is to insult them. Moreover, in the Order of Unknown Philosopher Judges, swearing oaths were made recipient. "to consider the Knights of Malta as the most cruel enemies?

2. The Knights of the East or of the Sword, and the Princes from Jerusalem.

The Knights of the East or of the Sword, who make up the 15th degree in the various Masonic rites, have never existed as an Order or Congregation. They represent simply the Jews after the Babylonian captivity.

Holy Scripture recounts that Cyrus allowed the Jews captives to rebuild Jerusalem and the destroyed Temple of Solomon by Nebuchadnezzar. Zerubbabel could not complete this great work. Under Darius, the temple was rebuilt; but the walls did not were completed only under Artaxerxes, by Nehemiah. The enemies of the Jews wanting to prevent the work and surprise the workers, "half of the young men were employed in work, and the other half were ready to fight. They
They had their spear, their shield, their bow, and their breastplate.
And the leaders of the people were behind them. Those who were

1. Manual of freemasonry, p. 137.
2. Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 401.

176 THE KNIGHTS

employees to build the walls and to carry or load the porters
the men, did their work with one hand, and held their the other's sword. For all those who worked had their sword at his side.

In the ritual of the 45th degree, Freemasonry recounts
This story in its own way. The President represents Cyrus.
the Keeper of the Seals Nehemiah, the Great Orator Ezra, and the recipient plays the role of Zorobabel "mason by rank, captive through disgrace." He is seventy years old. He represents-sente done – and this is important for understanding Freemasonry – the captive Jewish people.

The initiates of the 16th degree, Princes of Jerusalem, raise, in their ceremony, in one hand the trowel, in the other the sword*.

The Princes of Jerusalem only form the complement Knights of the Sword. They represent the re-established Jews.
blis in Jerusalem after seventy years of captivity.

3. The Knights of the East and West.

The name Knights of the East and West is a desi-generation of the Order of the Templars, who would have received their mysteries of an Eastern Gnostic sect, named Johannists.

The Johannists, also called Christians of Saint John
The Mandaean were a sect widespread in Persia and Arabia.
and even in India, and, according to some writers, originating from Jews, in the time when Saint John administered baptism to Jourdain. They had continued to practice this ceremony every day, which earned them the name Zemerobaptists.
They practiced astrology, admitting into the worlds
a kind of eternity, during which in turn these Worlds were destroyed and remade. The scholar Assemani thinks that they were true pagans, having adopted some opinions
We are Manicheans, not deserving the name of Christians

4. II Ezra, ch. 1v, v. 16, 17, 18.
2. Léo Taxil, I, p. 249,

KABBALISTIC JEWS 177

because they borrowed the worship of Christians cross t. We need not add that the Johan-Nists were not Knights.

We find nothing that allows us to believe that this
It was the Johannists who corrupted the Templars. Which What supported this hypothesis was that they were a sect.
Jewish woman steeped in Manichaeism; what then is French-Freemasonry, in its essence, if not a Judaic- cabal Pagan?

We do not know the source from which Léo Taxil obtained this information.

The information that this rank was created in 1118? We know except for the first three, which are of origin In paganism, there were still no ranks at that time. masonic.

4. The Elected Knights of the Nine, the Fifteen, and the Sublime Elected Knights.

The Knights who make up the 9th, 10th and 41st degrees are of the invention of the Sect. We will see, in the myth of the the murder of Hiram Abiff, whom King Solomon first sent nine, 3 x 3, masters to discover the three murderers: one He discovered the first of them and killed him. Thus was the chosen Knight. of the Nine. Then Solomon sent fifteen, three times five, masters to search for the other two, which were also discovered and killed. This is the chosen Knight of the Quinse.

The first murderer represents the priests, the second The kings, and the third, the rich. According to the language of the Pre-President of the Council of the 33rd degree, the three petty assassins What are Religion, Law (the King), and Property?

The Sublime Knight chosen has the mission of punishing by the Death to the traitors among the Brothers – which is a more The act of killing profane people is sublime.

Therefore, in these three degrees of Knighthood there is nothing historical.

1. Bergier, Dictionary, v° Mandaïte.
2. Léo Taxil, Les Frères Trois-Points, II, p. 189.
3. Paul Rosen, Satan and Company, p. 296.

12

178 THE KNIGHTS

5. The Rosicrucian Knights,

The historical origin of the Knights of the Rose Cross is not Not difficult to find. There has never been an Order of such knights – outside of Freemasonry. It's pure- ment and simply a degree of the secret society, of which Its origins do not date back further than the seventeenth century.

The symbol of the Rosicrucian cross, in the Christian sense, dates back to the time of the Crusades. Abbot V. Davin! rap-carries the report of Canon Brou on the armor of Saint George in Chartres Cathedral: "He is dressed and armed like Saint Theodore, who is his counterpart; The only difference is the shield, which instead to be immediately decorated with fleur-de-lis, is entirely united; the A cross carved on its surface bears in its center an eld-Rosacc glove; only a few fragments of its banner." Abbot Davin adds the remark: "The shield offering the knight's distinctive emblem, it is clear that we Here we have a Saint George Rosicrucian cross. The rose in the center the cross recalls Christ on the cross, in the purple of His blood purifies the world and will give it life. Respice rosam passionis sanguineæ, Saint Bernard has just said, this legislator of the Knights Templar, whose pious and sublime poetry will pass into the liturgy of the Church, to lof-The symbol of the Five Plaics. Is this from the shield of Saint George? that England, which gave Saint George as its patron saint to his armies, drew his two roses, red and white, if horribly famous during the fifteenth century, all full of its fratricidal wars? In any case, it is claimed that this wretched knight of Hell, who claimed to be Christ's knight Luther, who was reforming his Church, "carried in his seal..." "A rose surmounted by a cross?"; and it would be from there that the Andreae, his disciples, passing to a deism and a nature

1. Literary review, Supplement to the newspaper L'Univers. Issue number of November 1891.

2. Villers, Essay on the spirit and influence of the reform of Louis-ther, work awarded a prize by the Institute in 1803, 3rd edition, p. 290.

KABBALISTIC JEWS 179

Gnostic realism, of which he too prepared or sowed the seeds germs, would have given to their sect, in Swabia, at the end of the sixteenth century, the name, since so famous in the an-"Nationals of apostasy and depravity, of Rosicrucianism."

The famous Professor Hefele, from Tübingen, gives, in the Dictionary of Wetzer and Welte, an interesting description-concerning the origin of the Rosicrucians. If he had been at the neck-regarding the propaganda that the Freemasons were doing in Europe, and the Kabbalistic doctrine they propagated everywhere successfully, he would not have failed to explain well allusions that the Rosicrucian doctrine makes to the Kabbalah bale and the sects we've already discussed. He would have judged that the tendencies towards black magic, of Kabbalistic origin-

ticks, imported by Manichaeism, had given rise to a multitude of sects of fanatics and visionaries of all kinds

| genre, which were particularly prevalent in Germany. Alchemists, gold makers, astrologers and dream interpreters, spreading—displayed on all sides their morbid tendency towards practices mysterious, with occult doctrines and associations secrets. While the world was in this throes of turmoil, Two anonymous pamphlets appeared in 1614, obviously published by Freemasons, or — which amounts to even — by the Jews: one was entitled: United Reform Verselle of the world, the other: Address of the Fama fraternitatis or of the Brotherhood of the Venerable Order of the R.-C. in the States and to the scholars of Europe.

The title of the first book already indicates to those already initiated what one meant by a universal reform of the world. Of our These days, this reform is called the establishment of a republic. universal republic under the government of the Freemason—nerie and the supreme leadership of the Jews. But this book was not that a satire directed against the vices of the world and its self-proclaimed reformers.

The second book complemented the first. It began with mocking the supposed progress that theology and the natural sciences boasted of having accomplished so much in this century. Then came the announcement of the work "of the pious, religious and learned Father Fr.-R.-C., founder of the association of Rosc-Croix, aiming to introduce a general reform—ral and radical in the world.

180 THE KNIGHTS

The brochure says that the Founder was a German nobleman of birth, raised in the fourteenth century in a convent, long before the Reformation. He had fled, disguised as moiuc, a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, had arrived, not at Jerusalem, but in Damascus, he had been initiated into science occult of the Arabs. It is not difficult to recognize in it a Templar. He then left for Africa, where he had even greater progress in Wisdom, especially—In magic, he had learned that man is a Microrosm. Upon his return, his desire was to increase the light lit by Paracelsus and to found a society which would have all the gold, silver, and precious stones of which she would need, and could, like the ancient oracles, give to princes the most useful advice, and to the people the the wisest advice. He wanted to reform humanity. At this Finally, he had founded a kind of convent called the Saint—

Spirit, where he had inscribed the mysteries of his wisdom occult. With seven cooperative members, he had founded the first Rosicrucian brotherhood. The disciples had to go to-towards the world and maintain their secret brotherhood during All the anuses, the brothers had to meet once at the Convent of the Holy Spirit. Each member had to elect a successor.

But it happened, this book tells us, that while repairing a Part of the convent, a secret door was discovered leading to the vault where the tomb of the Grand Master was found. There found his body perfectly preserved, although he was dead for one hundred and twenty years. If the story is true, it is a Templar died some time after the suppression of the Order. Besides the body, there were many mysterious writings. tics, notably the Zipre T, written in gold letters, which, de-
Then, the Rosicrucians venerated it as much as Holy Scripture.

This is pure fable! The T, tau, is already us
As is well known, it's the set square on the level. Like the secret door,

KABBALISTIC JEWS 181

the book continued, which led to this tomb, bearing the inscription-tion: Post 120 annos patebo; "I will appear after one hundred and twenty years ago, the Rosicrucians decided it was time to do to learn about their association and to invite men to join it to learn their profound mysteries.

The attention these two books aroused was extraordinary.
naire. From all sides, messages were addressed to the members of the brotherhood questions about wisdom, their institute and the mode initiation. Deseartes, in 1619, made in Francfort-sur-le-Main and in Neubourg, research on society for the con-to be born; and there appeared a whole deluge of pamphlets on the Rose-Cross. Nevertheless, for about twenty years, nothing no one saw a true Rosicrucian Brother appear.

Findel, the German historian of Freemasons (p. 131),
He adds to this account that in 1615, a book appeared: Echo of the God-enlightened brotherhood of the venerable order of the R.-C., to which he attaches considerable importance relative to the origin of the Swedish system. This rite, he said, notwithstanding its Templar forms, is based essentially on the prin-Rosicrucian icons. He believes that the founder of this system (of the 18th degree) drew primarily from this source.

A Protestant minister, Valentin Andreae, wrote in 1616 a satire on the Rosicrucians: Chemical Marriage of the Christian Rosicrucianism, which was taken seriously and was the cause from a multitude of foundations of Chapters of the Fraternity, especially in the Rhine countries.

From Germany, these "Theosophical and Hermetic Societies" "ticks," as Findel calls them (p. 132), spread in Ireland, Italy and England. In England, the ground for the Rosicrucian seed had already been prepared by Dr. Robert Fludd in London, the oracle of mystics and theosophists. Through him, the Rosicrucian degree spread rapidly. He claimed, with all the hypocrisy of the sectarian, that it was "an ancient symbol of the cross of the Christ, reddened with his pink-colored blood.

In France, the Grand Orient united the two in 1786.

182 THE KNIGHTS OF THE KABBALISTIC JEWS

Orders of the Rosicrucian Knight and the Templar Knight of Heredom in one, and named its followers "Sovereign Princes Rose-Croix of Heredom.

No one will ask us to multiply the evidence to establish that this Rosicrucian rank was skillfully introduced by the secret leaders of Freemasonry. This is its very origin. The identity of its doctrine, of its hatred and its sacrilegious practices with those of the Kabbalah, of Gnostics and Manicheans, indicates to us the identity of the authors, that is to say, Kabbalistic Jews.

6. The Prussian Knights or the Noachites.

The 21st degree, the rank of Prussian Knight, was called formerly the Great Patriarch or the Noachite. He owes his Frederick II, King of Prussia, was given a new name, it is said, perhaps to please their royal protector, and to better use its influence, that the Freemasons change. They manage the name of this degree in his honor. This grade thus that the other chivalric ranks owe their origin to a source other than the combination of the authors of thirty-three grades.

Freemasonry is the summary of the doctrines of the paganism, Kabbalah and the great heresies of the centuries past. These doctrines are taught with a great deal of precaution by the supreme leaders of the entire society.

Militant ranks are established to support them by the strength to defend them.

BOOK I
THE

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

4. Jews teaching in Freemasonry.

"King Solomon also brought Hiram from Tyre, who was son of a widowed woman from the tribe of Naphtali, and whose Father was from Tyre. He worked with bronze, and he was full of wisdom, intelligence, and science to do all types of bronze works.

Hiram, the great hero of the Masonic fable, was therefore resulting from a mixed marriage between a Cainite and an Adamite. His father was a Tyrian, of the race of Ham, of Cain, and by—so much so, according to the fable of the Ophites and the Masons, a descendant—the spirit of Eblis, the Spirit of Light who, in the form of the serpent, had seduced Eve. Her mother was from the tribe of Naphtali, and therefore a descendant of Shem, Seth, and Adam, the creature of the evil God Adonai.

You shouldn't ask the Freemasons or the Jews.
how they explain the words of Genesis: "Noah
"He fathered three sons: Shem, Ham, and Japheth."

This mixed marriage, from which the hero of Freemasonry originated...
Stupidity is the symbol of the alliance between the Jew and Satan.
from which the secret society originated. The Jew and Satan make common cause common in this "great work" and share the advantages stages of the occult sect.

Let us examine the doctrines and the high leadership of the franc-Freemasonry, and we will find the Jew everywhere.

There is no longer any doubt, the decorations and the teachings

4 I Reg., ch. vu, v. 13, 14.
2. Gen., vi, 10.

184 THE JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

lodge proceedings prove that the Jewish Xabbale is the doctrine, soul, foundation and occult force of Freemasonry bullshit.

We only need to read two books, accessible to all, for
To be convinced: the Kabbalah, by Ch. Franck, and the Mysthe tenets of Freemasonry, by Léo Taxil. Those who wish-slow to conduct more in-depth studies have at their disposal-tion, on the one hand, the immense literature on the philosophy of Jews, Kabbalah, the Talmud and their practical application, and on the other hand, the numerous works on Freemasonry-ncric? ct on other secret societies.

The strongest argument to prove that the Freemason-Nerie is a Jewish cabal based on perfect harmony between the jewels, decorations, passwords and sacred words of the sect with the doctrine of Kabbalah. We have, in fact, already noticed that the jewel that put us on [the trail of The connection between Kabbalah and Freemasonry is the triple triangle, interlaced and surmounted by a Crown representing feeling the three Triads of the Kabbalistic Sephiroth with Kether, the Crown, at their head.

2. Jews leading Freemasonry.

To want to prove the direction given by the Jews to the political march of nations by means of franc-Masonry is undertaking a rather difficult task, isn't it?
due to the fact itself, which is almost universally accepted,
but because of the fierce contradiction of the French-Freemasons were accepted, but not initiated into the higher mysteries.

Let us return to the historical thread of Jewish political power.
among other peoples, to better understand their role in Freemasonry.

Pharaoh's words to Joseph still resonate in the eyes of the Jews, and the memory of it will never be erased:

1. For example, Henri Desportes' book, The Mystery of Blood, published by Jews throughout history.

2. See the works of Clavel, Father Neut, Father Deschamps, and Mr. Claudio Jannet, and especially the German lawyer Emil Eckert.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 185

"Where could I find someone wiser than you, or even like you? So it will be you who will have the au-Torture on my house. When you open your mouth to command, all the people will obey you; and I will have no further recourse.

Above you, the throne is the quality of kingship. I tell you established today to rule over all of Egypt. In At the same time, Pharaoh removed his ring from his hand and put it on in that of Joseph; he dressed him in a robe of fine linen, and He put a gold necklace around his neck. Then he made him climb onto a of his chariots, which was the second after his own, and made people shout by a herald, let everyone bend the knee before him.

With the royal ring in her hand and the gold necklace around her neck, there she was.
the ideal that will never leave the mind of the Jew.

The story of King David and his son Solomon, that's the ideal.
of the Jewish nation. Nothing could be more legitimate. These are the figures par excellence of the future King of kings, of Jesus Christ, the son by David.

The Kether-Malkuth, the royal diadem on the head
Esther's death could only confirm Israel's dream of domination.
universal nation. After the publication of the royal letter who made it known in all the provinces and to all the peoples subjected to the empire of King Ahasuerus, the Jews were ready to take revenge on their enemies, Mordecai, leaving the palace and from the king, appeared in great splendor, bearing a royal robe of hyacinth and sky blue color, having a crown on her head and a silk cloak purple. The whole city rejoiced; and as for the Jews, it seemed to them that a new light was dawning for them because of this honor, these congratulations, and these public celebrations... Mardoëhée took care to describe all these things; and, having made a book, he sent it to the Jews who lived in all the king's provinces, in order to that the fourteenth and the fifteenth day of the month of Adar were holidays for them that they celebrated every day years in perpetuity by solemn honors?

1. Genesis, 11:38.
2. Esther, ch. vrn, 1x.

186 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

"The Lord (added Mordec) has ordered that there be two fates, one of the people of Dicu and the other of all the nations; and this twofold lot came to appear before God on the day marked from that time onward to all nations.

3. Types of laws either against or for the Jews.

As types of all decrees of future kingdoms, either against, or in favor of, the Jews, we quote the following passages of the two letters from King Ahasuerus, the first of which was com-asked by Aman, his prime minister, and the second by Mordecai, the successor of Haman:

"The great King Artaxerxes... to the princes and lords" subject to his empire... Aman, raised by his wisdom and his Fidelity, second only to the king, has informed us that there is a people scattered throughout the earth, who conduct themselves by new laws, which, opposing the customs of other nations, despises the commands of kings, and troubled by the conflict of his feelings, peace and the union of all the peoples of the world... Seeing that only one nation revolts against all others... we have ordered that they be killed by their enemies, along with their Women and their children?

It is quite curious that this letter from Ahasuerus did not not found in the Hebrew text, but simply in the edition Vulgate. Did the Pen Jews make it disappear?

The other edict, issued by Mordecai, said: "The great king Artaxerxes... to the chiefs and governors... Several abusing the kindness of princes... are not content with to disregard the favors shown to them, and to violate in themselves Islands, rights of natural humanity, but they try to lose, through their lies and artifices, those who are faithful... If we command things that seem-different feelings... it's in view of the public good that we obliges us to form our orders according to the diversity of

4. Esther, x, 10.

2. Jbid., xm, 4, 5.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 187

time and the necessity of our affairs... Aman, stranger, Macedonian by inclination and origin, who had nothing of common with the blood of the Persians, but which we have raised as second only to the king... had undertaken to to cause us to lose the crown along with our lives. For he had done with the intention, through a completely new and unprecedented malice, of to lose Mordecai through the loyalty and good services of which we live, and Esther our wife, with all her people; so that after killing them, and depriving us of this help, he

we could surprise ourselves and make the Macé-Donians, the Persian empire.

"But we have recognized that the Jews behave by very just laws, that they are the children of the most God high, most powerful and eternal, by whose grace this The kingdom was given to our fathers and to ourselves, and still preserves it today. That is why we declare that the letters he had sent you against them in our his name is null and void, and that because of this crime he was hanged with all his loved ones, God himself, and not us, him having inflicted the punishment he deserved. We order that the Jews could kill those who were preparing to... We want to lose the thirteenth day of the month of Adar. We want... that you would consider this day a holiday... and if there is a province or a city that does not want to take part in this solemn celebration, we want her perish by iron and fire, and may she be so destroyed, may it remain inaccessible forever, not only- "For men, but for animals?"

These two letters are so characteristic that they have served and can still serve as models until the end of the world.

&. The Maccabees, the last true Jewish Knights.

Before seeing the Jews fall completely into their Blindly, we encounter the nobles in their history

- 4. Esther, ch. xvr.
- 2. Ibid., xvi.

188 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

characters of the Maccabees, bearing high the banner of truth God's people for the defense of their religion and not for the conquest of the universe, and fighting in the name of the Lord with heroic and religious courage. The Jews have preserved In Freemasonry, the motto on their banner is: To 30th degree, the sacred word is: Adonai, and at the 33rd degree the sublime word cst: Mikamoka Benlim.

These words are a corruption of the Hebrew Mi Khamokha Baelim, Jehovah? Who is like you among the gods, Jehovah? Hovah? They are borrowed from the Song of Thanksgiving. spoken by Moses after the crossing of the Sea?, The Maccabees had them inscribed on their standards; and their great victories were attributed to their superior strength natural. Several authors say that the name of the Maccabees The first ones are derived from it; for if we link together the first From the letters of these four words, we obtain the name #a-cha-bi, which in Hebrew means Maccabeus 8.

Indeed, the Maccabees were the glory of the people of Israel; but it's strange that Christians would let themselves be placed under their banner. However, the French must be forgiven—Freemasons, still this mystification on the part of the Jews: they have never studied Hebrew and do not know the meaning of fication of their sacred words.

5. The Jews, fallen through deicide,

The divine tragedy of Calvary changed the world. The Jewish people have just accomplished their divine mission. They have given to the world the Redeemer. For a long time now this people was divided into two parties, the Orthodox party and the party heterodox. The latter, the Pharisaic party, killed the Messiah. because he did not grasp the idea of a temporal king. The the Orthodox party recognized its Messiah and formed the Pri- Church milive.

From this moment begins the people's fierce struggle

4. Leo Taxil, 11, 366.

2. Exodus, XV, 11.

3. Cornelius a Lapide, in Exod., xv, 11.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 189

Deicide against Christ and his Church. Annihilate Christianity. nism, which for him is nothing but a "heresy," that is a duty religious matters are even more sacred than submitting to all the nations of the earth. Of Christ, as the prophets had predicted it, "bearing our iniquities?", "the hands and his feet pierced and ranked among the scoundrels, he has No idea. The humility and sacrifice of the God-Lord They are incomprehensible, and the cross is for him "a scandal 5.

"The scepter will not depart from Judah, nor the prince from his posterity until the one who is to be sent comes; "He is the one who will be the expectation of the nations." This prophecy of

The patriarch Jacob's reign was fulfilled when the kingdom of Judah passed into Herod's hands. For eighteen centuries the Jewish nation lost its political existence. However, The Jews stubbornly close their eyes to this prophecy, and adhere to the words of the same patriarch Jacob addressed—said to Judah: “Judah, your brothers will praise you, your hand will put your enemies under the yoke.” For them, the strength of These last words were not to end with the loss of the scepter at the time of the arrival of the Messiah.

Do not, they say, still remain the two co—J and B, Judah and Benjamin, as representatives of the A chosen people? The scattered tribes will reunite and the prophetic will still be accomplished through fus and nefas.

6. Freemasons working for fallen Jews.

Freemasons work for the Jews in their temple. Regardless of the two columns J and B, Judah and

4. Saint Paul, in defending himself against Tertullus before the governor Felix thus names Christianity in the sense of the Jews. Tertulle He had named it "the seditious sect of the Nazarenes". Acts, xxiv, 5, 14.

2, Isaiah, 35, 11.

3. Psalm, 21:18.

4. Isaiah, in, 12.

5. I Cor., 1, 23.

6. Genesis, xlix, 10.

7. Ibid., v. 8.

190 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

Benjamin, this temple is adorned, around its perimeter, with ten other columns representing the ten lost tribes of Israel. "In the frieze or architecture that rests on the twelve columns, a cord reigns which forms twelve knots, of the form known as lakes of love (it's Pamour fraternal bond that intertwines the twelve children of Jacob); the Both ends terminate in a tuft, called "A serrated tuft, and they come to rest in columns J and B i."

When Rehoboam, Solomon's successor, did not want Heeding the people's wish, "Israel separated itself from the house" of David, as he is still separated today"; Rehoboam assembled the whole tribe of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin to fight against the house of Israel. Then the Lord He addressed his words to Shemeias, a man of God, and said to him: "Speak to Rehoboam, son of Solomon, king of Judah, to all the house of Judah and Benjamin and all the rest of the people, and tell them: This is what the Lord says: You will not You shall not wage war against the children of Israel who are your brothers; for it is I who did this. They will listen to the "Word of the Signer?"

Let the Freemasons therefore understand which temple They dedicate their labors, and to what people are they the servants very humble drivers!

The ten tribes of Israel will be found, the Jew told himself. for Jehovah has promised us: "Do not be afraid, O Israel, I will deliver you from this faraway land where you are (Babylone), and I will take your children from the land where they are captives.... I will exterminate all the peoples among whom I have scattered you; but for you, I will not lose you. Thirdly, I will punish you according to my justice, so that you 'Don't think you're innocent.'

In their blindness, the Jews transformed Man-God promised in this Kabbalistic figure of which we have

4. Leo Taxil, 1, 344.
2. III Kings, ch. xu
3. Jeremiah, xxx, 10.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 191

spoken; then, after having made it an emanation of their Ensoph, the Jew, the Man par excellence, is declared by They are a direct emanation of this Adam Kadmon: the Jew is the God-Man, as Carlile so aptly defined him. – Add to the decide the sacrilege of the apotheosis of the Jew, and you will take the unspeakable rage of the Kabbalistic Jew against the Nazarene, his heresy and his Church, you will understand in at the same time this feverish activity that he puts into destroying with his mallet, everything that opposes his ambition, and to build with his trowel the temple of his universal domination, of which He polishes rough stones from the Apprentice grade onwards.

Before we get to Freemasonry, we would need to collect the names of all the Jewish Mordechai, from the deicide and the destruction of the temple up until the Crusades; but the purpose of this study does not allow us to write their history; moreover, in our little island of Mauritius, it there is no library that can provide them to us elements. Let's hope other writers will undertake the role of Jews in the persecution of Christians before Constantine the Great, under Julian the Apostate, during the invasion Saracens in Spain, in the revolts of the sects of Gnostics, Manicheans, Bulgarians, and even the Albigensians, and in the revolutions of different countries up to nowadays. We are sure they will meet everywhere their frenzied hatred of Christ and their devouring thirst for universal domination.

We have simply set out to unmask the Freemasonry. The reader must already be convinced. that it is essentially Jewish Kabbalah, of which all the doctrines are reflected in the emblems and decorations masonic. It will be much more so when we do the detailed description of the Masonic plan in its thirty-three degrees.

Ahasuerus, since the thirteenth century, is the very powerful Order of the Templars, continued in Freemasonry; The Kabbalistic Jew is his Mordecai.

192 THE JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

7. Corruption of the idea of the Messiah by the Jews.

Seeing the strength, the discipline, the wealth and the influence. Due to the influence of the Templars, the Jewish people had to envy them. that the Lord had promised to him, saying by David's mouth: "He will rule from sea to sea, From the river to the ends of the earth. In front The Ethiopians will prostrate themselves against him, and his enemies will lick him. will worship the earth. All the kings of the earth will adore him, and all "The nations will be subject to him."

A bold, grand, and fruitful idea: to afflict oneself with this Order for the conquest of the universe? With him this project will be accomplished brilliant phetia l

At the opening of the sessions of the Supreme Council of the 33rd of- With due respect, the Sovereign Grand Commander President addressed himself to the Lieutenant Grand Commander, he said:

D. "Mighty Sovereign Lieutenant Grand Commander, how old are you ?

R. – Thirty-three years completed, Most Powerful Remembrance-rain Grand Commander.

D. – What is our mission, powerful and illustrious Brother?

R. – To discuss and promulgate the laws that Reason and the Progress is necessary for the happiness of peoples, deliberate on the most effective means to employ to to fight and defeat the enemies of Illuminati.

D. – What is our duty?

R. – To defend the immortal principles of the East, and the to spread continuously across the entire surface of the globe.

The principles of the East are [the principles of the Kubbalah] Jewish. To spread them by fighting all its adversaries. This is the ultimate goal of Freemasonry. The Jews They inscribe the principles and the Templars fight against them Enemies, that is the constitution of Freemasonry.

Tacitus already said that the Jews had faith in a pre-

1. Psalm LXXI.
2. Histor., L., v, 13.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 193

a saying contained, according to them, in the ancient books of their priests, that the East would prevail, and that from Judea came forth-would be the masters of the world. Alas, for them, the king of Israel, the prophesied conqueror, whose name is the Orient, had come Indeed, and his apostles have already gone to conquer the world.

Zechariah predicted to the high priest Jesus that the Messiah would come-would be at the temple that Zerubbabel had begun to rebuild; "Listen, O Jesus, high priest, you and your friends who are with you, because they are destined to be the figure of the future: the wen I am going to bring the Orient, which is my servant 1. » The interpreters agree that Tsadekh, the East or the seed, means the promised Messiah.

Later, the same prophet received from Dicu the order to to put a golden crown on the head of the high priest Jesus and to say to him: "This is the man whose name is the East: It will be a seed that will grow by itself, and it will build a temple to the Lord.

The high priest received the crown and the name of the East, because he was "the figure of the future", that is to say, of the Messiah, the future King of Israel, who was to build his Church, the true temple of God.

The other Zechariah, the father of Saint John the Baptist, predicted For this reason, in his beautiful canticle Benedictus, to his son: "You, child, will be called the prophet of the Most High—High: for you will go before the face of the Lord to prepare him the ways, in order to give the knowledge of salvation to his people, for the remission of her sins, through the womb of the mercy of our Lord, in which He has visited us "The East from above?", that is to say, the promised Messiah.

The Catholic Church sings, three days before Christmas, the following antiphon: "O Orient, splendor of light Eternal and Sun of Justice: come and enlighten those who are sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death.

But, alas! the Jews did not want to recognize the truth—

1. Zechariah, nr, 8,
2. ibid., vi, 12.
3. Luke 1:78.

13

194 THE JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

Table Orient; they are still waiting and hoping to see him. In While waiting for him, in the Masonic lodges, they place his emblem on the Eastern side, and lavish their ho—Magi and their adoration. Christian Freemasons They join them and kneel before the Messiah. imaginary, not understanding that by acting this way they implicitly deny the coming of the true Messiah, in the name They were baptized! How far will the mystili—the citation and blindness of these poor servants of the Jews! Don't they yet understand that Freemasonry west than a means that Jews use to achieve Dominate the universe? That's only to use the power—the formidable power that the Order of the Templars had acquired, that the Jews allied themselves with these religious figures.

The conquest promised by God to the true East, they want to tear the Jewish people away with the help of the Templars and the ad—Dicu verse, which Our Lord calls the "Prince of this world.

8. Influence of Jews in Masonic lodges.

The first thing that strikes the new lodge member,
It is the Jewish character of everything in it. He understands,
From 1% to 30° degree, always talk about "Ja
The Great Work of rebuilding Solomon's Temple, of the assassination of the architect Hiram Abiff, of the two columns Boaz and Jakin*, from a multitude of passwords and words sacred Hebrews, and of the Jewish era, in use among the Franks-masons, adding 4,000 years to our era so as not to honor-to recount the birth of the divine Savior,

Having firmly established Freemasonry in the
In various Christian countries, the Jews obtained in all the Grand Orients their preponderance by influence and the number. They also established a large number of lodges.
exclusively Jewish. Even before the 1789 revolution, the

- 4. John, XIV, 90.
- 2. IHI Kings, seen, 21.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 195

The von Ecker and Eckhoffen brothers had established in Hamburg the "Lodge of Melchizedek" for Jews. The Jews von Ilirschfeld and Cotter founded in Berlin, towards the end of the century past, the "Lodge of Tolerance", "with a view to bringing together, through Freemasonry, the Jews of the Christians, to make the first, more humane, and to raise them to a higher degree of intellectual culture." The November 1864 issue
The secret Masonic newspaper of Leipzig says that "the center
One of these Jewish lodges was in Paris, near Crémieux and the Grand Rabbi.

On June 12, 1808, the lodge "The Growing Dawn" was established in Frankfurt, exclusively for Jews, under the Great-Eastern France. After the Battle of Waterloo, the circles Political constants forced this lodge to separate from this Grand Orient. Not wanting to submit to the condition that Landgrave Charles of Hesse demanded, to appoint always a Christian for a master, she asked for his affliction-tion to the Grand Lodge of England, it obtained it in 1817.

In September 1836, twelve Jews asked the three Grand Lodges of Berlin to admit Jews into their breast. All three refused. Since then, the question of the admission of Jews into Christian lodges was beautiful-

The controversial move. The Jew Gotthold Salomon, of the lodge "PAu"nascent rore" used an argument that finally won the Victory: "Why," he said, "don't the masons date?"
their era of the birth of Christ, but, like the Jews, of the creation of the world? Why is the name of Christ not never uttered, neither in oaths nor in prayers to Opening of a lodge, nor at banquets? Why not findvous-uous no Christian symbol in the entire rite of the Masonry? Why the square, the level, and the plumb line?
Why the motto: "Wisdom, Strength and Beauty" at the licu of "Faith, Hope and Charity"?

The Jews thus made their entry into two of the Great Prussian lodges, as they had done long before in the English and French lodges. The Count of Fernig, Vice-President of the Supreme Council of Prussian Lodges,

196 THE JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

declared that "the Great Architect of the Universe" was the God of the Jews.

Fischer! then wrote: "The vast majority of the order Freemasonry does not admit Christianity, but the fight to the point of using a knife; the proof is found in the admission of Jews in the lodges.

In 1844, Disvacli put the words in the mouth of the Jew Sidonia
The following words? : "Since your company in Angle-
The earth began to be agitated, and associations Powerful forces threaten your institutions, you see the he-breu, once so loyal, still in the ranks of trackers and latitudinators... This mysterious diplomat Russian matter, which so alarms Western Europe, is organized and primarily executed by Jews; the formi-a terrible revolution is currently being prepared in Germany.
and which will in fact be a second and even bigger
The Reformation developed entirely under the auspices Jews. In the Ministry of Finance in Russia, the Count Cancrin, I recognize the son of a Lithuanian Jew;... in the Spanish minister, Señor Mendizabal, I see a Jew from Aragon;... in the French President of the Council, Marshal Sault, I recognize the son of a French Jew; in the Prussian minister, Count d'Arnim, I see a Jew. You You see, dear Coningsby, the world is governed by completely different characters than those who are enraged by it who are not behind the scenes.

History will one day tell that all

The revolutions of the last few centuries have their origin in the Masonic sect, under the supreme direction of the Jews. Those those who enter the lodge participate, knowingly or unknowingly Specifically, to the war of the modern Synagogue against the thrones and the altars of our homelands.

During the 1848 revolution, led by the Grand-Orient of France, its Grand Master, the Jew Crémieux, became Minister of Justice. This man founded the Alliance in 1860

1. Marannic Review, January 1848.
2. Coningsby, VI, ch, xv.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 197

Universal Israelite and proclaimed, with an effronteric inconceivable, in the Archives Israélitiques of 1861, p. 651, that "in place of the Caesars and the Popes, a will arise "A new kingdom, a new Jerusalem." And our good Blindfolded Freemasons help the Jews in their The "Great Work" of building this new "Temple of Salo-My," this new Caesaropapist Kingdom of the Kabballists!

9. Complaints of Freemasons regarding Jewish preponderance in the boxes.

In 1862, a Berlin Freemason had printed, on the preponderance of Jews in the lodges, a sheet of eight pages, which he communicated strictly to competent people tents. Under the title: "A Sign of the Times," he pointed out a very dangerous character in the Berlin elections of April 28 and May 6, 1862. "An element," he said, "came to the surface and exerted a pernicious and dissolving influence-boasts in all directions: the Jew. The Jew is at the head, by his writings, by his words, and by his actions; he is chief and principal agent in all revolutionary companies tionnaires, even in the construction of barricades. He saw it clearly in 1848, in Berlin. How did it happen that at In Berlin, no fewer than 217 Jewish special electors were elected, and that in two districts Jews had been elected to The exclusion of all Christians?

This situation has only worsened since then. The Jews are the majority in the municipal corporation; so that Berlin has the right to be called the capital of the Jews.

"In the press, Jews speak of the 'people' or of the "nation" as if there were only Jews, and that he There were no more Christians. The explanation for this is given by the agitating Freemasons, including Fr.". Lamar-Tine said that the revolutions of 1789, 1830, 1848, etc., have were raised by the Masonic league; admission confirmed by Fr. Garnier Pagès, Minister of the Republic, who, in 1848, publicly declared that "the French Revolution of 1848 was the triumph of the principles of the Masonic league-nique, that France had received Masonic initiation, that 40,000 French masons had pledged their assistance to to complete the glorious work of establishing the Republic-republic intended to be established throughout Europe and on the whole face of the earth."

198 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

The culmination of all this is the political and revolutionary power tationary of the Jews, according to the words of J. Weil, head of the Jewish masons, in a secret writing: "We excrete a powerful influence on the movements of our time ct on the progress of civilization towards the republicanization of all peoples." And another Masonic leader, the Jew Louis Boerne, said, in the same secret writing: "With a powerful hand-In terms of health, we have shaken the pillars on which it is based the old building, so as to make them groan.

Mendizabal, yet another Jew, the soul of the Portuguese revolution at ease in 1820, carried out the capture of Porto and Lisbon, and, in 1838, imported, through his Masonic influence on the Junta, He followed the revolution in Spain, where he became Prime Minister.

The Jew Mendizabal promised, as minister, to restore Spain's precarious finances; but at a time very short, the result of his manipulations was an increase-terrible national debt crisis, and a great decrease in income, while he and his friends had amassed immense fortunes. For this accumulation of their personal wealth, they found an opportunity magnificent in the sale of 900 Christian institutions, religious and charitable organizations, which the Cortes, on the proposal The properties of the Jews had been declared national property. Clergymen were treated in the same way. The deriv-Zion's shamelessness in expressing religious and national sentiments The people went so far as to say that Mendizabal's mistress dared to wear in public a magnificent necklace having, with few some time ago, it served as an ornament on a statue of the saint. Virgin Mary in one of the churches of Madrid.

The Berlin Freemason continues: "The dangers for the throne and for the altar, whose power threatens the Jews in Freemasonry have risen to the highest levels high degree, and it is time to raise our voices against them. as the leaders of Freemasonry have just done German, writing: "The Jews understood perfectly that "The royal art" (the art of becoming king) was an essential means to firmly establish their own esoteric reign... The Danger threatens not only Freemasonry, our Order, But states in general... In the lodges, the Jews find numerous opportunities to practice their well-known system of corruption, and to sow confusion in a good number of cases... How dangerous must the influence be? Jews on Masonic affairs, when one remembers of the active part played by this people in the crimes of the French Revolution and Corsican usurpation; when we con- astounds the tenacity of the Jewish belief in a future reign Jewish influence throughout the universe and the immense influence exerted by gold Jewish people are represented in many government ministerial positions. The Jewish people a castle in hostile opposition to the entire human race, ct The "God of Israel" has only one chosen people, to whom all The other peoples were given as a "step stool".

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 199

"Now consider that between the 17 million ha- of the inhabitants of Prussia, the Jews only account for 600,000; consider with what convulsive ardor this nation, in its irrepressible, oriental vivacity, works to give itself all means that can be used to revolutionize the State, to to occupy even educational institutions with money superior, and to monopolize government positions in its favor government; consider also the insurmountable horror of these silversmiths for all manual labor; look Finally, the oppression suffered by our artisans through usury and the speculation of the Jews; – and then, ask yourself– even what must be the weight of the chains thrown by them on those of our compatriots who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow from their foreheads!

"The Jew refuses to merge with the mass of the people; He only does it with the noble class: they want to become the (Eastern) nobility of Hemagna. They claim to dominate

200 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

on us as ministers, presidents, governors, officials makers, majors; they will never want to put themselves on the same level as the opening.

"There exists in Germany a secret alliance with..."
Masonic forms, placed under unknown leaders, traitorous, however, for non-Masonic purposes. The Members of this alliance are almost all Jewish; they traitorous are worth in degrees and in systems, with rites and symbols, Christian only in appearance.

"Do not disregard our warning in this time of Danger! These are not ridiculous calumnies, to which The illiterate people alone believe this, but with an unheard-of level of fraud. shameless to the highest degree, abusing the most Holy! These criminals are no longer hiding in the shadows, They openly show themselves as our brothers and boast publicly advocate for the protection and brotherhood of German princes.

We heard a bricklayer. He was complaining. bitterly that the Jews form a Freemasonry in the Freemasonry, just as Freemasonry forms a state in the State.

"Add to what has already been said," the Berlin bricklayer continued, that Jews are now received in all lodges of the universe, while there are Jewish lodges in which Christians are not received under any circumstances. In London, Where the true heart of the revolution lies, there are two lodges. Jewish houses whose threshold no Christian has ever crossed. It is that is where the threads of all converge and from that is where they originate the revolutions. From there, the other lodges are directed. There find "the secret superiors", so that, almost All Christian revolutionaries are nothing but puppets. blind men in the hands of the Jews. This is done by the middleman of secrecy.

"During the annual Leipzig fair, a Jewish lodge..."
It's permanent. It never opens its doors to a Christian.
The Jewish lodges of Frankfurt and Hamburg are not "Only emissaries from other lodges were allowed."

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 201

"The Masonic conference in Bayreuth, in 1873, voted in favor of admitting the Jews, but the Great

The Berlin lodge "The Three Globes" continued to do difficulties. In April 1874, the question of the admission of Jews was subjected to all the Master Masons of the dependence of this Grand Lodge. 1,390 Master Masons were "For, ct 1,395 against their admission."

"The Masonic journal Bauhütte, dated June 6, 1874, is furious at this majority and calls on its members Masonic obscurantists. He adds: "This exclusion official of a large Masonic family and men worthy is a harsh and unfraternal measure, a negation of the fundamental idea of royal art, a heresy in Freemasonry is an anachronism.

"Although nowadays the children of Israel have access to almost all the lodges, which, shortly, must fall Before them lie the final barriers; they are quite skilled. to combine the advantages of Freemasonry with those of their own race. The end of Freemasonry – the em-worst in the world – is identical with the aspirations of the race from which the future King received this promise: "All the "The kings of the earth will worship him, and all nations will be devoted to him." "submitted."

Their Messiah, however, is not an individual person. dual, but the race, dominated by Freemasonry the entire universe.

In Europe, they carefully keep the existence a secret and the number of their lodges; but in America, they are less reserved. Under the name of Bnat Berith (Sons of Alliance), their Masonic confederation finds admission in all the lodges, first advantage for them, to which A second one is added: that of keeping their boxes inaccessible. accessible to those who are not Jewish. There are now more of 210 Jewish lodges in America. Lodge No. 1 was founded in New York in 1843, the CT had over 200 members. There were

1. Psalm 22:11.

202 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

In twenty years, the number of American Jewish Freemasons was rising to 18,000.

Carlile, one of the greatest Masonic authorities, said (ip. 86): "The Freemasonry of the Grand Lodge is current- "entirely Jewish."

The Gazette de la Croix, the main organ of the conservatives Prussians, gave in 1875 (June 29–July 3) a series of articles demonstrating that the main ministers of the Prussian and German governments, without exception of the prince Bismarck's methods were completely in the hands of kings. Jews of the Stock Exchange, not only conspiring with them, but still duped by them; and that the Jewish bankers govern were actually born, and Prussia and Germany. This led to the saying... Gizkow Jew: "The true founders of the new empire" Germans are the Jews; the first guides in all the sciences, in the press, in representation and in the political, they are Jews.

In 1860, a book was written on this subject by Mr. Stamm; it proves that "the reign of universal freedom on earth will be founded by the Jews." In the same year, Mr. Sammler published a long letter in the Prussian Volksblatt for to demonstrate that "the Jews will soon occupy the place of the Christian nobility: the outdated nobility must lose its position in this era of enlightenment and universal freedom with whom we are very close. Don't you understand? not, he wrote, the true meaning of the promise of the Lord Dicu Sabaoth to our father Abraham, a promise that will be fulfilled Surely, one day all the nations of the earth will be subjected to Israel? Do you believe that God meant by that A universal monarchy with Jewish kings? Oh no! Dicu scattered the Jews over the face of the earth, so that they became a leaven in the midst of all races and that finally They extend their dominion over them, as if they were chosen ones.

It is unlikely that the terrible oppression suffered by the Christian nations of Europe, who see themselves impoverished corrupted by the usury and avarice of the Jews, and complain of see the national wealth accumulated in the hands of Big bankers are content with a few uprisings. anti-Semites. The monarchies, whose foundations do not are not yet completely pulverized by the mason's mallet-nique of whose dynasties are not yet reduced to level of the sans-culottes masons, blindfolded and shoes knocked down, will unite against the monstrous sect and will break the ranks of the anarchists. Carlile himself, this a rabid Freemason, terrified by the fate of humanity between the hands of the Jews, he said: "When the legislators deal- They will once again form secret societies; they would do well not to not to admit yet another exception in favor of the freemasonry.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 203

The privilege of secrecy is legally granted to Freemasons. in England, in Germany, in France, and we believe, in all countries. The fact that all revolutions emerge from the depths of the back rooms would be inexplicable, if we do not we didn't know that the ministries of all countries – read Bel-temporarily excepted – are in the hands of Freemasons ultimately controlled by the Jews.

What we have said seems sufficient to reveal one The great mysteries of Freemasonry. What are they? The secret directors? They are the Jews.

40. The Presidents of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree are not the real leaders.

But among the Jews, who are the secret leaders of Freemasonry? It's certainly not the Soupe- their Grand Inspectors General of the 33rd degree; their Names are printed, and there are so many of them! This doesn't They are not the Presidents of the Supreme Council either; for, In the initiation to this 33rd degree, they speak of their leaders: "Princes and priests, unable to overcome an institution- tion which is hostile to them and which is so formidable to them, have had, at various times, the perfidy of crossing into the camp enemy, to become masons themselves and to intrude into Freemasonry: its customs, its formulas, its titles, its legends so absurd that they were bound to distort the spirit of the institution, which distorts its tendencies, and which, instead liberal and democratic doctrines seemed to favor to mock religious and aristocratic principles.

204 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

"Our leaders, faced with this danger, tightened the links to the real members of this secret society via Excel- The fact that it is masonry, and desiring to ascertain, if not Ja protection, or at least the tolerance of the powerful of this world, they allowed them to take part in Masonic activities which They only revealed to them what they wanted them to know. to reveal. Seeing without flinching the transformed masonry, in appearance, in a society as insignificant as it is possible, benevolent and charitable, of which these powerful of the earth believed they held the upper hand, our hearts let them- will declare that Politics and Religion were complicit. "Completely unrelated to Freemasonry!"

It is impossible for us to list all the lies here.

all the hypocrisy, even the admission of falsehood, of which the brave
In this statement, the presidents condemn those they they call our Cuers; it suffices for us, at this moment, to do Note that they do not say: We, the leaders, but: our chiefs, which implies an admission that beyond 33°, beyond the
As President of the Supreme Council, he will have other leaders as well:
The real unknown leaders.

Who are they? Where are these leaders?

11. The so-called Holy Trinity, the true unknown leaders.

We have before us the Temple of Solomon, Map general structure of the organization and the alliance's work plan revolutionary, by Doctor Édouard Émile Eckert, lawyer-sat (Prague, 1855).

The accompanying explanation gives us a clear idea of the entire Freemasonry system – combination diabolically ingenious; – we have neither the desire nor the duty to reproduce it here. We borrow it alone–

which can be useful to us.

1. Paul Rosen, Satan and Co., p. 294.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 205

Solomon's Temple is built on a carpet of 16 squares oblongs, which is called the Vestibule. The temple consists of 14 cubic stones, 9 of which form the first floor, 4 the second, and the third. Each cube represents a lodge.
or a part of the universe. One of the cubes is not visible.
being covered by the four cubes of the second floor. All
The other cubes are only three-quarters visible each.
Only the one on the upper floor is entirely open to the day.

The latter is the seat of light; the central cube of the
The first floor, which is completely hidden, is the headquarters of darkness. This is the representation of divine dualism, of the Kabbalistic doctrine.

We are passing over in silence the gradual decline of the light of Intelligence that comes from above, and which is lost entirely within the last cube representing Matter.

At the center of the upper cube is the God-Zomme, which we immediately recognize him as Adam Kadmon, The archetypal Man of Kabbalah. His symbol is the Phoenix. He is the bearer of the double crown, of the material empire-riel or political, and of the spiritual or ecclesiastical empire; As such, it is also represented by a double-headed eagle. crowned with a single crown. As head of the empire universal political, he calls himself Emperor of the World; as head of the universal ecclesiastical empire, his name is Patriarch of the world; as head of all virile activity in the entire universe, he is called the Great Architect of the Universe; as head of the activity of the power governing the world, He is called the Grand Master; finally, as a personal unit- The essence of all these attributes, he bears the name Jehovah.

What should surprise us is finding the designations of Patriarch, Emperor of the World and Grand Master alongside those of Jehovah and the Great Architect of the Universe- pers.

Carlile teaches us! that "the original meaning of the word Jew was that of a wise man and spoke through his devotion to the science. The word has the same scope as the name of Jehovah; Literally, it is the God-Man, the Holy Spirit or the inspired Spirit of Man." As such, he is the Great Architect of the Universe. This is a rare testimony in favor of and that we have already found: Primitive Man or Adam Kadmon is the ideal of the Jew.

1. .Hanual of freemasonry, p. 177.

206 JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

However, a distinction must be made between the ideal Jew who is identical with Jehovah, and the Jew incarnate in this world. The latter is the Grand Master of the secret society by excellence; he has as assistants two other Jews who are slaves Jews, the Patriarch and the Emperor of the world.

These three characters, the Grand Master, the Patriarch and the Emperor, compose ee which is called, in blasphemy, the Holy Trinity.

Once again, where are the leaders of the franc-masonry?

41. Residence of the Unknown Leaders of the Jews ct of Freemasonry.

On June 29, 1869, the feast of Saint Peter, took place in Leipzig a council jnif, most likely in the wake of the Council of Vatican, summoned for December 8th of the same year. To This meeting was attended by the chief rabbis of Türkiye, from Russia, Germany, England, France, the Netherlands Down, from Belgium, cte... The Orthodox Jews and the The reformers constituted two factions holding each other together. Another in equilibrium. And here is the thesis common to some and to others, as it was formulated: "The Synod recognizes It is only natural that the development and realization of ideas... dernes constitute the safest guarantee for the present and for the future of Judaism and its children,

Is there therefore a solidarity among the Jews of the West? and those from the East, the Chief Rabbi of Türkiye and those from Christian countries? Father Chabauty will tell us: "I

1. Auguste Rohling, The Jew According to the Talmud, French edition by To Poutigny. Paris, Savine, 1889.
2. The Jews, our masters! Paris, Palmé, 1882.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 207

It is historically undeniable that, since the dispersion Until the eleventh century, the Jews had no visible center and known for its unity and direction! » After the ruin of Jerusalem-Salem, this center was located for a long time, sometimes in Japhne, sometimes in Tiberias; he was represented by the Parniancues of the Judea, which enjoyed great authority. "They decided Matters of conscience and important national affairs: They led the synagogues as senior leaders; they they levied taxes; they had officers called "apostles," who carried their orders to the Jews of the pro-the most remote vinctes. Their riches became immense. These patriarchs acted in an ostentatious or cachede, according to the provisions of the Roman emperors with regard to Jews.

Above these Patriarchs were the Princes of the CAPTIVITY, who resided for a long time in Babylon 2.

"Jewish writers make a great distinction between The Patriarchs of Judea and the Princes of Exile. The pre- They claim that the first group were merely lieutenants of the second group. The Princes of Captivity possessed the quality and authority absolute authority of supreme leaders of all the dispersion of Israel.

According to the tradition of the Doctors, they were instituted to take the place of the former Kings; and they have the right to exercise their Expiation on the Jews of all countries of world.

"The Caliphs of the East, frightened by their power, their provoked terrible persecutions, starting from the eleventh century, history ceases to mention these leaders of Is-Raël. Did they disappear completely, or did they transport them? Elsewhere, the seat of their power? This second hypothesis is by far the most likely, given the following comments:

I. Letter from the Jews of Arlos to the City of Constantinople,

"Honorable Jews, peace and grace. You must know

1. Tléodore Reinach affirms this in his history of the Israelites.
2. Franck, The Kabbalah, p. 270,

208 THE JEWS IN FREEMASONRY

that the King of France, who is once again master of the country from Provence, we were obliged by public order to make Christians or to leave their territory. And those of Arles, of Aix and those from Marseille want to take our property, threaten our lives, ruin our synagogues and cause us much trouble harm; which makes us uncertain of what we owe to do for the law of Moses. That is why we beg you to wisely want to tell us what we should do.

Chamor, Rabbi of the Jews of Arles, on the 13th of Sabbath 1489.

11. Response of the Jews of Constantinople to those of Arles and Provence.

"Beloved brothers in Moses, we have received your letter in which you share your anxieties with us and the misfortunes you endure. We have been perborn of as great a sorrow as yourselves.

"The opinion of the greatest Rabbis and Satraps of our The law is as follows:

"You say that the King of France is forcing you to..."

to be Christians: do it, since you cannot do it at all.
terrifically, but that the law of Moses be preserved in your heart.

"You say they want to take your property; do your Child traders, so that through trade they might...
They rob the Christians of their own.

"You say your life is being threatened: have your children" physicians and apothecaries, so that they may destroy that of Christians, without fear of punishment.

"You say they are destroying your synagogues: do your children, canons and clerics, so that they destroy their Church.

"You say that you are being subjected to other forms of harassment: do your children lawyers, custodians and people who are ordinarily applied to public affairs; and by this means wished You will dominate the Christians, win their victories, and you will will take revenge on them.

"Do not be alarmed by this order that we give you-
No, because you will see from experience that, from lowered
As you are, you will reach the pinnacle of power.

JEWS IN FREEMASONRY 209

"VSSVEF Prince of the Jews of Constantinople, the 21st of Casleu 1489.

Abbot Chabauty perfectly demonstrated the authenticity ct the scope of these documents. "It was," he said, "a line of political and social conduct, which they demanded and which In effect, they received the Spanish and Provençal Jews. From then on,
We can perfectly understand why, leaving aside their doctors and rabbis from neighboring regions and even from home
They, however, are addressing their concerns elsewhere, far away, in Constantinople.
because, it must be for us now, of all things Obviously, their supreme leader resided in this city, no not only religious, but also political; there lay the head of the nation.

The course of action that this prince of Constantinople
the tracing of the Provençal Jews was admirably maintained to this day. Father Chabauty proved that the Jews obey today, as in the past, an oc- leader
A cult figure, but unique. This leader exists; he has the same power.
that in the Middle Ages, he led the nation along the same paths,

Can we say that the rapprochement we have

The fact is conclusive, and that the unknown leader of the Jews is also The unknown leader of Freemasonry? If he is not con- As an elected official, he is at least very likely and capable of leading. those who have every interest in finding the primary culprits of the anti-Christian and anti-social league.

13. Residence of the Supreme Chiefs of Freemasonry.

Adolphe Ricoux? was fortunate enough to get his hands on on the "Collection of Instructions" of the Dogmatic Leader of Freemasons. He brings with him a document of the highest order. of importance, the encyclical letter of the dogmatic leader or Supreme Pontiff of the Freemasons. "Freemasonry" universal, says the author (p. 64), has, as its ultimate peak of its international organization, a Supreme Directorate,

1. Henri Desportes, The Mystery of Blood, p. 335 seg.
2. The existence of women's lodges, Paris, Téqui, 1891,

210 THE JEWS IN THE FRANCHMAUNNERY

whose seven members are taken in turn role in the Supreme Councils, Grand Orients and Grand Lodges from various countries, which operate for six months only... The seat of the Supreme Directory is in Berlin.

"However, four heads of major centers are directors" are permanently installed ad pitam, reporting directly of the Supreme Director, and centralizing, for him to transmit- To put in place important communications. These four major The main centers are: in Naples, for Europe; in Calcutta, for Asia and Africa; to TVashington, for America- North America, and Montevideo, for South America.

"Finally, apart from the four major guiding centers, are two characters, each with a special mission: The Head of Political Action, specifically in charge of the Vatican surveillance, to hasten events against the Papacy, as soon as he received the order from the Directorate supreme authority; this head of action resides in Rome (this is currently- (the fr. Lemmi); and the Grand Custodian of Traditions sacred, who is in a way the Grand Lama of the sect, the dogmatic leader, the secret antipope, and who is known to Heads of the Supreme Councils, Grand Lodges and Grand Orients, under the title of the Sovereign Pontiff of Freemasonry Universal stupidity, residing in Charleston. It was Albert Pike, who just died. They say Albert Mackey is his successor.

The seven members of the Supreme Directorate and the four Major Management Centers still represent the famous number eleven. These are probably the President of the Directorate, the Supreme Leader, the Head of Political Action (Emperor) and the The dogmatic leader (Pontiff) who form the Holy Trinity which we have spoken of. With them, the mystical number rises to thirteen.

This work deals with the Kabbalistic number onse.
will one day see a work on the satanic number thirteen.

BOOK IV

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

1. Kabbalah, the main source of black magic.

In his exposition of the Kabbalah, Mr. Franck tells us to know the figures under which we have tried to represent—to sense the Sephiroth. "There are," he said, "three main ones, at least two of which are consecrated by the Zohar. One It shows us the Sephiroth in the form of ten circles. concentric, or rather nine circles drawn around a The point which is their common center, the other presents them to us under the image of the human body. The crown is the head; Wisdom, the brain; intelligence, the heart; the trunk and the chest, in short, the milicu line, is the symbol of the Beauty; the arms, those of Grace and Justice; the parts The lower parts of the body express the attributes that remain.

(See plate B.)

"It is on these completely arbitrary reports, pushed to their latest exaggeration in the Tikkunim (the supplements—(mentions of the Zohar), on which the Kabbalah is largely based practice and the claim to cure, by the different names from God, the diseases that can affect the various parts of our body."

The same author says (p. 273): "If one finds in the Judaism, traces of the darkest superstition, one must especially to seek the cause in the terror it inspires by his demonology. Such, indeed, is the power he abandons gives to evil spirits, that man, to all moments of his existence, he may believe himself surrounded by these invisible enemies, no less determined to destroy his body as well as that of his soul. He is not yet born and already

1. Franck, The Kabbalah, p. 151.

212 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

They await him near his cradle, to contest him at Dien and to a mother's tenderness; he had barely opened his eyes on this world, let them come and assail his head with a thousand perils, His thoughts were filled with a thousand impure visions. Finally, woe to him!
if it does not always resist! for, before life has begun—
Having completely abandoned his body, they will come to seize their prey.

Indeed, even today, we are in the presence of from a host of popular books, full of superstitions, of conjurations, occult secrets, magical remedies, blasphemous prayers and kabbalistic drawings¹. What—that it may seem ridiculous to mention these books, ar—snatched from the hands of superstitious people belonging
For the common people, it is by no means superfluous to point out that These books contain a number of Kabbalistic figures.
things reminiscent of certain Masonic decorations, and ex—taking precedence over the doctrine of Jewish Kabbalah; for example, the two interlaced triangles, the Blazing Star, the simple one, double, triple, and quadruple letters, including the letter Z, which we already have explained the vile meaning. Furthermore, it contains in the evocations of spirits, a large number of words
Hebrews, the same expressions and exclamations as Leo Taxil? cites from the Ritual of Evocations, second volume of the Ma—cabalistic manual, by Fr.—. Coustaut 30°, p. 230. Yours
The texts of these evocations mainly contain the name of God in various forms; for example: El ati, Dicu comes; Kyd for Eheyé, I am; Je-Je-Te — hau-hau-hau — vah-pah-pah, three times the name of Jehovah in syllables;
Khavajoth, Khavajoth, Khavajoth, Eves, Eves, Eves
Eves, Count...

This rapprochement confirms the opinion of almost all authors who have dealt with diabolical magic, that all the branches and practices of witchcraft owe their origin

1. The Secrets of the Little Albert, — of the Great Albert, — of Agrippa, — of the Great Etteilla, — of the Red Dragon, — of the Pope's Grimoire Honorius, — of the Red Magic, summer.

2. The Brothers ~., 11, p. 284.

to Jewish Kabbalah. The worship of the Blazing Star, of the Baphomet, and "the formulas written in hieroglyphic characters—"phiques" for the evocation of demons, which one must to keep "to abstain" are sufficient indications that the Freemasonry, in certain degrees of its sub-lodges, he engages openly in the practices of diabolical magic.

2. The Kabbalah leading Freemasons directly to demonolatry.

The story of Eblis, the renewed mysteries of the Ophites, cabalistic practices and evocations, the doctrine of Dualism, the principle of Good and Evil, falsification of the concept of Good and Evil, the whole of Freemasonry Kabbalistic, especially its relentless war against revelation The divine, the supernatural, and Christianity are all of the evidence that Freemasonry is a truly satanic sect, in every sense of the word.

We will therefore not be surprised to find in some lodges of unmistakable signs of direct communication between them and Satan. This communication is beyond doubt when certain effects cannot be attributed to either natural or intelligent form, neither to men, nor to good angels, nor to God, but only to intelligent minds and powers towards.

There is no point in discussing such an obvious thesis as this one that we have just stated. It will suffice for us to cite some of these facts have been duly noted. Moreover, in the 24th degree of Prince of the Tabernacle, the Knight of Eloquence assures the recipient—to say that, if Solomon, for having changed his cult in his old age, he lost the communication he had with Adonai (the bad principle of the Kabbalistic sects), he acquired From that moment on, an extraordinary science was revealed in Kabbalah. has become the author of the most secret magic books admirable, and was able to establish communication contact with the Spirits of Fire (from the good principle of sects?).

1. Sacred Ritual, p. 46.
2. Léo Taxil, les Frères .r., 11, p. 244.

The Prince of the Tabernacle was already prepared for such a Masonic revelation since he had already worshipped, in the 20th degree, of the Great Patriarch, the Star that shines in a golden cloud, which he had been told was the Morning Star, otherwise known as Lucifer; and the President had already exhorted: "Be like the Morning Star, which announces the day has come; go and bring light to the world; in the name "Holy Lucifer, uproot obsequiousness!"

Our readers know that in order to be able to divert from the truth, the spirits of the adepts, the Kabbalistic Jews took care to change the meaning of the words:

Dicu is Satan, Satan is Dicu;

Good is Evil, Evil is Good;

Virtue is Vice, Vice is Virtue;

Truth is a lie, and a lie is truth;

Light is Darkness, Darkness is Light-mother;

Revelation is Obscurantism, Obscurantism is the Revelation;

Religion is superstition, superstition is... Religion, etc...

This reversal is found to be done with a border. incredible in the sacrilegious imprecation written by Fr.-. Proudhon: "O Adonai, cursed Dicu, the first duty of The intelligent and free man is to banish you from his mind of his conscience... Lying spirit, foolish God, your The reign is over; search among the beasts for other victims... Eternal Father, Adonai or Jehovah... why are you deceiving us? You?... The mistakes that the inept ones ask you to forgive, It's you who makes them commit them;... the damned one who... Siege, the real Satan, that's you... Your name... from now on destined for contempt and anathema, will be reviled among the men; for God is foolishness and cowardice; Dicu is hypocrisy and lying; Dicu is tyranny and misery; Dicu, "It's evil!" – "Come, Satan, come, you who are slandered by the priests!"

4. Léo Taxil, The Brothers .*, II, p. 237.

and kings, that I may embrace you, that I may hold you close to my heart Trine. I've known you for a long time and you've known me
I know too. Your works, O blessed one of my heart, are not not always beautiful or good; but they alone give You alone give meaning to the universe, preventing it from being absurd.
You enliven and make work fruitful; you ennoble wealth; you serve
"Of essence to authority, you place the seal upon virtue."

The editors of the newspaper l'Ateo, printed in Livorno, the openly declare: "Satan is our leader; he is the genius of human restoration, the vengeful force of the reason. "

The same fierce and mystical exaltation is found in a declamation by Fr. .-. Serafina: "Hail the genius of Renov-Victor! All you who suffer, raise your heads high, my Brothers, for he, Satan the Great, is coming!

Grand Master Lemmi will say the same: "To you, cffré-
Born, my verses vanish; I invoke you, O Satan, king of banishment Out!... I salute you, Satan, O rebellion, O invisible force of The reason! May the vows and sacred incense rise to the heavens!
"Satan, you have defeated the Jehovah of the priests!"

Albert Pike, the High Priest of the Freemasons, has He protested strongly against the worship of Satan; but he pre-easily that of Lucifer, as if he were not the same character! I blame the Satan-worshipping Brothers, and said:
"These brothers, driven by a legitimate hatred against the God of Priests glorify his adversary under the name of Satan, etc.
by preserving for him the situation and the role of a fallen angel, Outraged. This is blatant heresy. The word of Satan, having been invented by priestly imposture and applying to a supernatural being, subordinate or devil, this word has no place to be pronounced in Freemasonry.

"Does the devil exist? – The priests say: yes."
Our answer is: no.

"The priestly legend is an infamous lie, and our Brothers who glorify Satan only end up...

1. Paul Rosen, The Social Enemy, p. 319.

216 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

to devote the imposture and to harm us clumsily in the opinion of the ignorant masses.

"That is why we condemn in the strongest possible terms formally presents the doctrine of Satanism, which is a delusion. of a nature to play into the hands of the priests. The Freemasons satanists unwittingly provide weapons against the franc-masonry.

"The Masonic religion must be, by all of us, initiates of the higher degrees, maintained in the purity of Luciferian trine. For the Lucifer of theurgy moderne is not the demon Satan of the goetic city. We are Optimal Rethenrgicists, and not practitioners of the black magic.

"Magic was born of Adonai, the slanderer of Lucifer.

"If Lucifer were not God, Adonai and his priests..."
Would they be slandering?

"Yes, Lucifer is God; and unfortunately, so is Adonai." also... The scientific reality of divine dualism is demonstrated by the phenomena of polarity and by the universal law saddle of sympathies and antipathies. That is why the intelligent disciples of Zoroaster, and after them the Gnostics, the Manicheans, the Templars, admitted, as the only logical metaphysical conception, the system of the two divine principles fighting each other for all eternity, and one cannot believe one to be inferior to the other in power.

"Therefore, the doctrine of Satanism is a heresy; and the A true and pure philosophical religion is the belief in Lucifer, equal to Adonai, but Lucifer, God of Light and God of good, fighting for humanity against Adonai, God of Darkness and God of evil."

The first oath that the recipient takes to the rank of Kadosh, 30th degree, lends itself: "in the presence of Dicu, "Our Father!" Now this God is the Angel of Light, the Great Architect of the Universe, from whom descended, through Eve,

4. Léo Taxil, I, p. 259.

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 217

Cain with his race which continues, through Iliram, in the Freemasons.

Hell, according to Masonic fables, should only be one

True Paradise. It is painted as such in the Inferno Chamber-nale, in which the recipient is introduced to the grade of Rosicrucian. "Here the demons and the damned, although at In the midst of the flames, they do not appear to be suffering at all: everything On the contrary, they appear radiant. All the damned of the Bible, Cain, Canaan, Moab and others, ant mines of patriarchs and radiate glory. Hiram, recognizable to his Masonic insignia and to his acacia branch which he holds in his hand like a martyr's palm, receives a golden crown that Eblis, the Angel of Light, Satan, places on his forehead.

All these diabolical ideas are already prepared at 3rd degree, in the philosophical explanation of the legend of Hiram, whom some newly initiated Masters choose- they say, "We are the soldiers of the Science, we fight superstition. Children of Iliram, of Canaan, of Tnbalcain, of Lamech, of Cain, and of the Angel of Light, son of him to whom the ancients paid homage worshipping the Sun, we have a great mission To fulfill this, we must lower the pride of tyranny. eternal, we must take a resounding revenge;... the The moment may not be far off when Eblis will be avenged. "The iniquities of Adonai?!"

From this it is permissible to conclude that the sacred word of the Che-Knights of the Kadosh or Templars of the 30th degree: Nekam Adonat - "Vengeance, Adonai!" is indeed revenge to be taken from Adonai, the Lord God of the Bible, Ini who is called by all reasonable men God, the Almighty creator of heaven and earth.

Hiram, in this respect, is obviously the substitute for Satan. We only need to read the account of the Masonic legend-

1. Léo Taxil, IL, p. 201.
2. Léo Taxil, The Brothers ..., II, p. 135.

218 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

nic, made by "the Most Respectable" of the lodge at the recipient of the 3rd degree, where he paints the figure of Hiram: "Hiram: Who was this man? Where did he come from? His past was a mystery. Sent to Solomon by the king of Tyrians, worshippers of Moloch, this strange character that sublime had managed, from the moment of its arrival, to impose itself on everyone. His audacious genius placed him above other men; His spirit transcended humanity; everyone bowed before him. the will and the mysterious influence of the one they called the Master. Kindness and sadness were painted on his face was darkened, and his broad forehead reflected both the Spirit of Light and the Genius of Darkness... Solomon recognized within him the existence of a power superior to his own, power to which the future, of which he had foresight, held in store... to be a greater sovereignty than his own and more universal... That is the memory of the one we call Our Mayor l. »

Add to these more or less veiled declarations that of Lieutenant Grand Commander of the 33rd degree: "The word of Maïrne, the emblem of Nature's regeneration, you is revealed to also be the name of the Cause Prenrère?, a

3. Appearances of Satan in the lodges.

The picture painted by the Masonic authority perfectly matches ment with the form in which Satan has often belonged To the will of men, this is not the place to deal. this important question; let us simply repeat, For the benefit of those who have not yet read them, three incidents that made headlines not long ago. The most recent one was reported by Blackwood Magazine ct reproduced by the Pal Mall Gazette, under the title: An appa- The authentic brew of Satan. Here it is

"Under the title 'let Diabolus, aut Nihil, histoire véri- "It's like a hallucination," Blackwood recounts how

1. Léo Taxil, p. 88.
2. Paul Rosen, p. 268.

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 219

Some spiritualists in Paris summoned the devil. (Author) The narrative presents it as "the true story of an entre- A vision with the devil, who was in Paris a few days ago years; – a true story in every detail, as one can easily be convinced by contacting to the people who witnessed the event and who exist "again." He said, "We cannot find the key to the mystery- tère, because we do not believe in any of the doctrines of the spiritual rites; but that an apparition similar to the one we we recounted how it took place in the manner and under the circumstances- reported remarks, that's a fact; and we leave to further profound psychologists that we take care to give to this A mystery that requires a satisfactory explanation.

"The main people whose names have been mentioned" are a Russian prince, Pomerantseff, and a French priest, Abbot Girod, who ridiculed the entire theory of appearances. At a dinner at the Duke of Frontignan's, the conversation shifted to spiritualism, the Duke affirmed to have seen the Spirit of Love. The abbot, who showed himself skeptical, had just delivered a great sermon in which he denounced—he treated the existence of an individual demon; he mocked the duke, when the prince declared that the duke's affirmation should not be surprising, given that he, the prince, knew the devil, for having seen it. "I tell you," he repeated, "that I pay Go, god of evil, prince of desolation; and, what's more "Yes, I can show you." Labbé initially refused; But, later, tormented by the offer, he accepted.

"The arrangements were made; and, that same evening, the abbot Girod, as agreed, was to arrive at nine o'clock and half, to find oneself in the presence of the prince of darkness. And This happened in January, right in the heart of Paris, the capital of the world. civilized, in the City of Lights!

"At half past nine, Pomerantseff arrived. He was in He was dressed in evening attire, but wore no decorations; he was deathly pale. They got into the car, and the coachman, who had probably already been informed of the location of their destination, immediately unleashed his horses

220 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

Pomerantseff made the doors fall open, and, pulling from his She took a silk handkerchief from her pocket and folded it calmly into a... narrow band.

"— I must bind your eyes, my dear," he said " calmly.

"—Good heavens!" exclaimed the abbot, who was quite agitated. There you have it.
"Which is hardly pleasant; I like to see where I'm going."

"The car was still moving."

"Are we about to arrive?" asked the abbot.
"Girod."

"We're not far away," replied Pomerantseff, in a voice that seemed sepulchral to Girod.

"Finally, after a race of about half an hour, Pomerantseff said aloud, "We're here!" The car turned and Pabbé heard the sound of iron-shod hooves on the paved courtyard. The car stopped. Pomevantseff opened the door and helped the priest down. "There are five steps," he said, "be careful."

"They crossed a courtyard, went up a staircase, traversed a vestibule. Pomerantseff opened a door and the priest entered. They walked on. Another door was open, but locked; and on this door the abbot heard the rustling of a thick curtain. Pomerantseff took the abbot's arm, made him take a few steps and said to him gently: 'Be careful!'"

"Stay standing where you are, don't make any noise. I will count on your honor: you will not remove the mouse from your sight until you hear voices."

"The priest folded his arms and remained silent. He heard the marcher, et soudain tout bruit cesse."

"The unfortunate priest guessed that the apartment where he was what he found was not obscure; for although he could see nothing, with his eyes blindfolded, he had the sensation of being surrounded of a strong light: he felt as if it were a caress of brightness on her cheeks and her hands."

"Suddenly, an unusual noise sent a shiver through the crowd. A terror in all its glory: it was like a shudder."

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 221

of naked flesh on the waxed floor; and before he could fully recover from this initial fright, he heard the voices of several men who seemed immersed in some horrible ecstasy; these voices were saying:

"Father and creator of all sin and all crime; prince and king of all anguish and despair, old man!"
"We implore you!"

"The abbot, mad with terror, tore off the handkerchief that covered his eyes. He saw himself in a large living room, furnished in the style of an old-style apartment with oak walls. The apartment was brightly illuminated, countless streams of light streamed through it. Candles fixed in candlesticks. This light, natural-looking, seemed cruel because of its intensity."

"He saw it all like a flash, barely his eyes were free when his attention was drawn before him by a group of men."

"Twelve men—and among them Pomerantseff—of all ages, from twenty-five to fifty-five, all in evening wear, etc., all of them, as far as he could tell at that moment, appearing to belong to the best of the world, were prostrate on the floor, their hands alone.

"They were kissing the floor. Their faces, illuminated" of an infernal ecstasy, were half-contracted, as if they were suffering, half-smiling, as if they were swimming in the joy of a triumph.

"Instinctively, the ubbé looked for Pomerantseff."
T was the last one on the left. While with the left hand He held his neighbor's hand, on the right, he nervously stroked it. He was polishing the waxed floor, as if trying to bring it to life. His The figure was calmer than the others, but of a deadly kind pallor, and purple hues of the mouth and temples They announced a painful emotion.

"They were all muttering aloud a kind of incantation—
tion extutique:

"O Father of evil, come to us!"

"O Prince of infinite desolation, who sits at the bedside
"Suicides, we adore you!"

222 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

"O Creator of eternal anguish!"

"O King of cruel pleasures and famished desires, we
"We worship you!"

"Come to us, your feet on the hearts of widows!"

"Come to us, your hair dripping with the blood of the innocent—
"Cence!"

"Come to us, the brow girded with the sonorous rosary of the twelve—
"Lcurs!"

"Come to us!"

"The abbot's heart was seized by an icy shudder at the sight" of these human beings, transfigured by mental effort, and who were prostrate before him. The air, charged with electricity, seemed filled with the murmurs of countless harps.

"The cold suddenly became more piercing, and the abbot felt the presence of a newcomer in the apartment, Stain Remover his eyes on the twelve prostrate men, who did not seem not to worry about him, those who did not cease their blas- Phenomena, the abbot let his gaze wander around him, and they met the newcomer, a Thirteenth who appeared having come by way of the air from which he seemed to be born, and right before his eyes.

"He was a young man in his twenties, from tall, beardless like the adolescent Augustus, his long Blond hair fell over her shoulders like that of a little girl. He was dressed in formal attire. His cheeks were pink and as if animated by intoxication or pleasure; but his gaze It was one of infinite sadness, of intense despair. The twelve men, who were undoubtedly aware of his presence, they were plunged into a deeper adoration: at the invocation- The tion followed praise and prayer. The abbot was taken A deadly terror. Her eyes couldn't look away. of the Thirteenth, who was standing calmly in front He had a vague, wandering smile on his face; and the smile seemed- blait made the despair that could be read in his deepen blue eyes.

"Girod was first struck by the sadness of this figure, then of its beauty, and finally of its intellectual vigor

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 223

which characterized her. The expression wasn't malicious, not cold meme; the nostrils, lips and forehead betrayed the pride and the height; but the exquisite symmetry and the par- The proportions of the mask indicated the flexibility and the willpower. Everything else contributed to making it more The sadness in his eyes is remarkable.

"His eyes were fixed on those of Girod, and the abbot in sen- concealed the subtle influence that penetrated his being through all the pores. This terrible Thirteenth only stared at the priest. while the twelve men were engaged in a prayer of increasingly savage, blasphemous and cruel.

"The abbot could think of nothing else but the figure" who was before him and the sadness that enveloped him. He did not He could think of saying a prayer, although he remembered the prayer. Was it despair that filled him thus, a des- Pear coming from such sad blue eyes? Was it despair? or death? It was a feeling that was both violent and passionate, having nothing in common with the serenity of the dead.

"The influence of the blue eyes fixed on him was taking hold of more in addition to the abbot, and flooded him with a kind of hor- voluptuousness It was something like an ecstasy of pain. becoming pleasure, the ecstasy of someone who would be banished from all hope and which, for that very reason, could con- to ironically call the author of all hope. Girod had the understanding that at another moment he would have smiled of what he was experiencing, that he would not have felt any weakness; and a familiar name – a name he had heard spoken several times by the twelve men, without making it the remark – struck his ear: the name of Christ. Where Had he heard it? He couldn't say. It was the name of a young man; he could remember that, and nothing else. Once again he heard the name: Christ. There was also another name like that of Christ, which gave him the im- The pressure of great suffering and profound peace. No only peace, but joy; and no other delights like it The blue eyes fixed on him were not coming. Once again, the

224 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

The name of Christ was pronounced. Ah! The word was Cross; it he remembered it now: a long thing with a something short had passed. Was it because he was thinking about it that Did the influence of blue eyes diminish in intensity? We dare not to affirm it; but as he was thinking about it vaguely, without all- once he could murmur a prayer, the abbot's right hand he rose heavily, and, as if mechanically, he traced a sign of the cross on his chest.

"The vision faded. The twelve worshippers fell silent and remained lying next to each other, as if numb and overcome by weakness. After a few minutes, they They stood up, staggering and trembling. They looked for a moment the abbot, who also felt exhausted.

"Pomerantseff, with extraordinary presence of mind- Naire, walked briskly towards the abbot, and pushed him towards the door The way they had entered; and, after locking it, in order to Not wanting to be followed by the others, they sat down for a moment. in the adjoining room.

"This sudden leak had overwhelmed them mentally and physically. The prince, who seemed to have retained his meaning that by a mechanical effort, carefully replaced on the abbot's will the headband that he was still holding in his clenched hand. It was only when they arrived outside that they realized they had forgotten their hats.

"It doesn't matter," murmured Pomerantself, "it would be dangerous." to go back there.

"And pushing Pabbé into the waiting car, he Eria: "At a full gallop!"

They didn't exchange a word. We arrived. Pomcrantsc{® removed the blindfold from his friend's eyes. The abbot did not
He could never say how he got to his room.

"The next morning, the fever and delirium subsided."

It seems that the Third, so handsome, so intelligent, so firm, so proud, so melancholic and so full of despair-Poir was the same character that the lodges know.

under the name Firam, and whom divine revelation names Satan, Lucifer, Fallen Angel of Light.

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 225

The other appearance also took place in France. The very Father Alexandre Vincent Jandel, Master General of the Brothers
Preachers, before his appointment by Pico IX to this high position, preaching in Lyon, was one day pressed by an interesting movement laughing to teach the faithful the virtue of the sign of the cross;
He did not resist this inspiration and preached. Upon leaving
From the cathedral, he was joined by a man who said to him:
"Sir, do you believe what you have just taught?"
"If I didn't believe it, I wouldn't write it," replied-
He, the virtue of the sign of the cross is recognized by the Church
I consider it certain. – Really... the other person continued-Astonished cutter... You think so?... Well! Me, I'm frank-mason and I don't believe it; but, because I am deeply-I was quite surprised by what you informed us, I just we suggest you try making the sign of the cross...
Every evening we gather in such and such a street, at such and such a place number; the demon himself comes to preside over the session. Come Tonight, with me, we will stand at the door of the hall;
You will make the sign of the cross over the assembly, and I will see
If what you said is true. – I have faith in the virtue of "the sign of the cross," added Father Jandel, "but I cannot, without Having given it careful thought, I accept your proposal. Give-I'll have three days to think about it. – Whenever you want "To test your faith, I am at your command," he continued.
"Freemason," and he gave his address to the Dominican.

Father Jandel immediately went to Mgr de Bonald and asked him if he should accept the challenge, in the name of the Cross. The archbishop gathered some theologians and discussed

We spent a long time with them discussing the pros and cons of this approach. Finally, everyone came to agree that Father Jandel should to accept: "Go, my son," Bishop de Bonald then told him. "Blessing him, and may God be with you!"

Father Jandel had forty-eight hours left; he spent them to pray, to mortify oneself, to commend oneself to the prayers of his friends; and, towards evening of the appointed day, he went to knock at the The Freemason's door. He was waiting for him. Nothing could to reveal the religious aspect; he was dressed in secular clothing; scule-

15

226 LUCIFER IN FRANCO-MAGONIA

He had hidden a large cross under his clothes. They leave and soon arrive in a large, furnished room. with great luxury, and stop at the door... Little by little, The room was filling up; all the seats were about to be occupied. When the demon appears in human form, immediately, pulling from his chest the crucifix which he had kept hidden there, P. Jandel teaches the student with both hands while training the audience the sign of the cross.

A thunderbolt could not have had a more unexpected result. Tense, more sudden, more brilliant!... The candles go out, The seats tipped over, one on top of the other, all the seated... So many flee... The Freemason leads Father Jandel away, and, when they are far away, without being able to realize the way they escaped the darkness and the con- In a fusion, the Satan follower rushes to the priest's knees: "I believe," he told her, "I believe! Pray for me... Conver- "Weave me!... Hear me!..."

This is the fact reported by many media outlets. religious.

Here's another one: "A young French officer again, affiliated with Freemasonry, was going to pronounce his final oaths and receiving the final initiation in a back room. The brothers were gathered for the somber ceremony- Monia, when everything, in human form, appears the demon, the doors and the windows being carefully closed.

At this sight, the young man was overwhelmed, and he said to himself: "Since the demon exists, Dicu must exist too." the thought of divine justice presents itself at the same time to its A frightened spirit, and he dared to go further: mercy infinity awaited him at that moment and grace touched his heart.

He converted, left the army, and entered the novitiate of a religious order. Ordained a priest, he devoted long years to the work of foreign missions. J1 returned in France where he was superior of a community for Some time ago. He is still alive, and recounted this event himself.

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 227

to Father Jourdan de la Passardière, superior of the Oratorians of Saint Philip Neri.

We do not want to multiply incidents of this kind; they are a continuation of the story of black magic which repeated in every century, either under ancient or under new forms.

Freemasonry is the heir to the ancient super-diabolical titations and demonolatry of ancient paganism.

It is in this sense that we understand the words of President to the recipient of the 33rd and final degree: "Before to reveal to you the ultimate secret that is our strength and makes Freemasonry eternal (because Satan does not die), I must ask you, brother, never to stray from two essential principles, on which the entire organization is based Masonic. The first principle is that power comes "From below."

Jesus Christ teaches the opposite, saying to Pilate: "You would have no power over me if he hadn't..." "Given from above?"

4. Jewish Kabbalah and Modern Spiritism,

Modern spiritualism is nothing but ancient necromancy. This fatal error is based on the assumption that there is no There is no difference between the spirits and the souls of the deceased. The demon, who can disguise himself as an Angel of Light, can He might as well hide under the guise of a dead man. His only goal, to deceive men, remains unchanged. The souls of the deceased, no longer having bodies, cannot no longer acting on matter.

The spiritualists, in order to prevent the recognition of the trace of Satan in the supernatural events of spiritualism, are forced to explain these facts by means of a certain-aerial body, attached to human souls before and after their existence in this world.

4. Rosen, Satan and C!, 'p. 278.
2. John, 20, 11.

228 LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY

As with other branches of black magic, it we must look for the roots of necromancy and spiritualism modern in Jewish Kabbalah.

In the Zohar, we encounter what our Modern spiritualists refer to these by the barbarous name of peris-taken.

Besides the triple soul which corresponds to the tripartition of Primordial Man, Man, receives from above a certain model shape of his body with individual features that distinguish this body from those of other men. "It is She was the first one to greet us upon our arrival in this world; it is she who develops with us when we we grow up, and it is with her again that we leave the Terret. It has been said that this doctrine was not invented. by the Jews of Babylon, but received from the Persians, who named-ment ceite forme Frapaschi, word corrupted later in Fervër and Frohar. That's a mistake. The Farvardin Yascht, the xxx? chapter of Khordah-Avesta, the Yaçna xxm', ct other passages of the Zend-Avesta give us another the idea of the perispirit. The Fravaschi are intelligent and protect man, from the first moment of his existence until his end, and accompany him into the other world. Meme Peoples have their Fravaschi. They therefore also express themselves Although the idea of guardian angels is possible. "If the powerful-Frapaschis, pure men, did not grant their protection... the development (of the world) would belong to the Drujas (Demons), the kingdom to the Drujas, the world "Bodily to the Drujas?"

The Fervor of the Persians does not correspond to any of the events of Plato nor to this Kabhalistic form that the spiritualists modernes call the individual principal è.

Modern spiritualists wanted to prove the existence of this spirit perishes: 1° by the impossibility in which it finds itself—would be a pure spirit, like the human soul, capable of direct action—

1. Zohar, 3rd part. — V. Franck, p. 176.

2, Farvardin— Yascht, 12.

3. Franek, p. 176.

LUCIFER IN FREEMASONRY 229

a lie about the gross matter of his body — an assertion absolutely free;

2. By the necessity of admitting between the body and the soul a link which belongs by its origin to the matter created by its subtlety to the mind, — absurd assertion of a substance material composed and unintelligent, and at the same time spiritual, simple and intelligent;

3° By the assertion that this perispirit is drawn from the ether universal, —a doubly false assertion, since neither lexis—neither the nature nor the nature of this universal ether has ever been proven, created, even if they had been established, this ether would be of no use whatsoever in explaining the phenomena. both ordinary and extraordinary relationships existing between the soul and the body.

Spiritualists also tried to prove the existence of this spirit by authorities of Holy Scripture, of Fathers of the Church and decrees of the Councils; but we made you look elsewhere! that each of their proofs is, or erroneous, or fabricated, or based on falsifications text interpolations.

As for the relationship that exists between spiritualism and the Freemasonry, it is no longer difficult to establish, after Mr. Léo Taxil's revelations about androgynous lodges. Given the essential connection of this branch of magic diabolical with the doctrines of Kabbalah, and the evocations—of the actions we have just discussed, it is absolutely certain that spiritualist societies are on friendly and familial relations lières with the back rooms where the worship of the Ba— is practiced Phomet, of the Serpent and of Lucifer.

4. The Struggle of Hell Against Heaven, Lectures on Superstitions Old and modern, Port Louis, 1890

BOOK V

THE LEGEND'S MEANING IS TENFOLDED

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS

1. The multiplicity of veils used to hide the true mystery of Freemasonry.

It would be an illusion to believe that, in order to hide his Mysteries, Freemasonry uses only one veil.

In Scottish Freemasonry, considered the mother of all others, There are 33 degrees, in each of which the followers must swear never to reveal their secrets to anyone profane or to brothers of a lower rank. There exists then the 90 degrees of the Misraïm rite, a rite superior to the Scotsman by the number of degrees, but inferior in value to its intrinsic. We leave the consideration of this rite and other rites aside. The Scottish Rite is the essence of Freemasonry.

But, let us say it again, those who are initiated into the 33 of the French Rite, the grés are not already initiated into all the mysteries. The adoption lodges of various rites have their mysteries. unfair, which are not explicitly contained in the 33 degrees.

Then there are the mysteries veiled by the entire system. Masonic, the true mysteries of the unknown leaders. It is that is revealed, unbeknownst to almost all the French Freemasons, the fallen Synagogue. And finally, behind the Synagogue is still hiding the one who is rightfully named the Satan is the leader of all these workers of darkness.

Add to that the fact that, to confuse the uninitiated outside And within the lodges, there are numerous explanations. mysteries. The initiated retreat there when an inquisitive too ardent a site to try to reach the true and final secret.

232 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

The Masonic legend of Iliam and the construction of the Solomon's Temple is the insignificant zero that contains, like the Kabbalistic Ensof, the ten Sephiroth, the ten

Various ways in which it can be explained. In honor of the three upper Sephiroth which form the intellectual part We will see the diabolical meaning of the archetypal man, Kabbalistic and Masonic; in commemoration of the three The following Sephiroth, which constitute the moral part of Adam Kadmon, we will explain the theological, philosophical meanings physics and ethics; based on the third triad of Sephiroth, which are the physical part of primitive Man, we will enhance the historical, political and physical senses of the said legend. Finally, to represent worthily the The tenth Sephirah, the Kingdom at the feet of Man, by- In fact, we will see the Jewish meaning of the legend of Iliram.

For the sake of greater clarity, we will not observe etc. order, but we will follow the path that seems most useful to us.

There is also, in honor of the three higher Sephiroth and of the seven lower ones, the three decorations: the apron, the cor- gift and jewel, and the seven emblems: the battery, the order, the sign, the password, the touch, the sacred word ct the Masonic age.

The words are almost all Hebrew words, Hebrew being a little-known language, the study of which is not encouraged ragece. Colors also play a big role in the Masonic mysteries, and they have their meaning; likewise the formation of the lodges, their altars and decorations, the reception and banquet ceremonies, baptisms, weddings and funerals of Masonic worship.

It is impossible to shake the impression that such a a mass of symbols and artificial veils made on the mind laypeople and Freemasons themselves. The hidden secret Beneath so many veils must constitute either an immense good, since it is only granted to the most studious and the most persistent, or a huge evil, since one has a fear It is extreme to see it revealed and known. The divine Savior has said: "The light has come into the world, and men loved darkness more than light, because their Their works were evil. For whoever does evil hates the light, and does not come to the light, for fear that its Let not their works be accused. But he who fulfills the truth comes to light, so that his works may be manifested, Because they are made in God!

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 233

2. Symbolic form of the Masonic legend.

The main hero of Masonic legend is Aëram, also called Hiram-Abi (my father Hiram), or Adon-Hiram (Lord Hiram). In the legend, he will represent the Architect of Solomon's Temple; in the astro- explanation the nomic aspect of the legend, the Sun; in the moral explanation, the perfect man; in political explanation, the people; in the historical explanation, the last Grand Master of Templars, JB Molay; in the Jewish explanation, the Jewish people; and in the diabolical explanation, Satan, the Great Architect of the Universe.

It will be useful to explain, for the benefit of the uninitiated, the Masonic legend as it is communicated to lodge recipients, in order to better understand its multiple explanations. We follow the account given by Léo Taxil in his book The Three-Point Brothers.

This was during the time of Salo-'s greatest power My son, David. This king, renowned for his wisdom, was to erect a magnificent temple to the glory of Jehovah. The ar- The architect in charge of this construction was Hiram. What Who was this man? Where did he come from?

Speaking of the Ophites and their demonolutria in the Freemasonry, we have recounted its origin and history from Cain and his race to Hiram, the builder of the Solomon's Temple. We resume the story of this last- to deny the point at which we left it interrupted.

Hiram, the son of the Spirit of Fire, of the Geniuses of Labor, He lives sad and lonely among the children of Adam, and he has

1. John, 19:21,

234 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

He told none of them the secret of his sublime origin. All of them They dreaded it, and Solomon more than anyone else. The fear that he inspires and stifles the affection of all hearts before even that she be born; Solomon, whom a secret instinct warned of the the mysterious grandeur of Iliram, and who feels humiliated by- before him, he hates him with all the strength of his pride.

Sent to King Solomon by the King of Tyre, he adored the creator of Moloch, Hiram, this character as strange as sublime, had managed, from the moment of his arrival, to impose himself on everyone. His His audacious genius placed him above other men;

His spirit eluded humanity, and everyone bowed in reverence.
before the will and mysterious influence of the one whom the master was named,

Kindness and sadness were painted on his face darkened; his broad forehead reflected both the Spirit of Lu-
First and foremost, the Genius of Darkness. Great architect and great In sculpture, Hiram had never known any other master than the solitude, other models than those that the desert had provided among the unknown debris these colossal figures and grandiose gods and symbolic animals, species vanished, specters of an ancient world and a society dead and missing.

His power was great; he had more than [number] under his command three hundred thousand workers, men from all countries, speaking all languages, from the Sanskrit language of the Himalayas up to the guttural language of the savage Lvbians. On a Hiram's order, the countless multitude of workers
it advanced from all points of the horizon like the waves from a rushing sea, ready to flood the valleys and plains insufficient to contain it; or, again, presenting
As far as the eye could see, the appearance was a mosaic of human heads.
It was arranged in an amphitheater shape up to the summit of the horizon, as numerous as the stars in the sky or the grains of desert suble.

Balkis, Queen of Sheba, came to Jerusalem to greet the

1. This name means Seduction of Baal. It is not biblical.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 235

great monarch and admire the wonders of his reign.
She finds Solomon all dressed in gold, sitting on a throne made of golden cedar wood, with feet resting on a golden carpet.
At first, he thought he saw a statue of the most precious of metals, with a face and hands of ivory. But the statue, Growing animated, she stepped forward to meet Balkis. The king had her sit down.
at his side on that throne which would dazzle anyone but the Queen of the South.

Balkis, after offering Solomon sumptuous gifts
Tuenx, in the oriental style, presents him with three riddles.
Wise, – that is the name Solomon calls himself, – having corrupted the high priest of the Sabaeans, and obtained from him in advance, for a price, the three riddles, made them pre-to prepare the solution by Sadoc, the high priest of the Hebrews.
Therefore, he can answer the queen as soon as she has spoken.

Solomon takes Balkis on a tour of his palaces, which he makes to admire the magnificent sights. Then he led her to the temple that he is concerned with raising them up to the God of Israel. When they are Having reached the foundations of the altar, the Queen notices a A vine uprooted from the ground and thrown aside. A bird wonderful, always accompanying Balkis, a hoopoe— Pelée Zud-Hudi, Ini makes it clear through his plaintive cries what Is this despised sign, what sacred deposit does this earth conceal? this land violated by Solomon's pride. "You have raised your "Glory upon the tomb of your fathers," said Balkis to the King; and this "Vep, this sacred wood..." — "I had it uprooted," interrupts Solomon, to erect here an altar of porphyry and wood

1. Tereus, king of Thrace, married Progne, daughter of the king of Athens Pandion II, and had a son, Itys; then, some time later, he made violence to Philomela, his wife's sister, had his tongue cut out for to prevent him from revealing the crime and locked him in a tower. But Philomela, having found a way to inform her sister of her misfortune, two, to take revenge on Tereus, served him the limbs of Itys to a They had a grand meal, then they revealed to him what they had done, Tereus, Overcome with despair and anger, he was transformed into a hoopoe; this The bird relentlessly pursued the two birds, including Philomela and Pro— They took shape at the same time, the nightingale and the swallow. Bouillet, Dictionary of History.

236 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

of olive trees, which I will have decorated with four golden Seraphim. This vine, Balkis continues, had been planted by Noah, the father of your race. A descendant of Noah could not without impiety compelled them to uproot this venerable vine. That is why the The last prince of your race will be nailed like a criminal to "This wood, which must have been sacred to you."

However, the fire in the eyes of the Queen of the South has em— Solomon's heart was broken, and he stood before her like a servant, like a slave before the master on whom he depends his life. First, Solomon's pride had revolted Balkis; but soon she was moved to see that the King had become for love, another man, and proud to have changed this heart superb and haughty, she made the king, who begged her, pro— wedding mass. But, either she visits the King's palace or the Temple which was built in honor of the Hebrews, that is that Solomon show him one of the other wonders who have raised her glory so high, every time she asks the name of the worker who designed and executed these masterpieces of admirable works, the King replied: "It is a certain Hiram, a strange and fierce character, whom the King of the Tyrians.

Balkis wants Hiram to be presented to him. Solomon tries to distract her from this idea. But, as he shows her some columns, statues of animals and statues of cherubs, as he shows her the ivory and gold throne he has made for himself erect opposite the altar, as he speaks to him of the sea of air—The Queen of Sheba asks him about the rain he is going to have executed: "Who erected these columns? Who carved these statues? Who has "Have this throne been erected? Who will sink this sea of brazen?" Salo—My friend always has to answer him: "It's Hiram." Balkis is therefore eager to see him, and Solomon, not wanting to not wanting to offend the Queen, he yields to her desires and orders that Eliram be brought.

Quaud Hiram, the craftsman of so many wonders, appeared before the Queen of Sheba, and whom he raises over her, without fear as Without vanity, her gaze like flames, Balkis feels troubled. in her whole being. After she regained some assurance—

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 237

In France, she questions Hiram about his work, and defends this model worker, an example of all perfections, against the criticisms that Solomon is inspired by base jealousy.

As she asks to see gathered before her eyes this countless army of masons, carpenters, of miners, founders, blacksmiths, engravers, cutters—their stone sculptures, by the sculptors led by Hiram, Solomon He told him that all these workers, who had come from all countries and from... speaking all languages, they are scattered in all directions and that it is impossible to bring them together.

But the Master, after having paid homage to Balkis, it leads towards the entrance of the Temple; it leans against the portico outside, and building himself a pedestal from a block of granite, he casts a confident glance at the assembled crowd heading towards towards the center of the works. At a sign from Hiram, all the Faces turn towards him. The Master then raises his arm straight, and with his open hand he traces a horizontal line, from the middle of which he drops a perpendicular line—area, representing two right angles, a sign to which Syrians recognize the letter T.

At this rallying sign, the human anthill stirs, as if a whirlwind had shaken her. Then the groups form, taking shape in regular lines and harmonious; the legions arrange themselves, and these thousands of ou—workers, led and directed by unknown chiefs, divided themselves gent in three main bodies, each subdivided into three distinct, thick, and deep cohorts, where march:

1. The Masters; 2. The Journeymen; 3. The Apprentices.

In the center are the stoneworkers; to the right those who trade are worth the wood; on the left, those who devote themselves to industry Metals. They are there by the hundreds of thousands. The earth trembles beneath their feet; they approach, like the High waves of the sea ready to invade the shore. Period No cries, no clamor; only the rolling of the drum is heard. muffled and rhythmic with their march, like the rumble of a distant thunder, precursor of the hurricane and the storm. Let a breath of anger pass over these heads, and these animated waves will carry away in the whirlpool of their power irresistible force, anything that would try to obstruct their impetuous passage!

238 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

Faced with this unknown force that is unaware of itself, Salomon paled. He cast a startled glance at the bright but: a small procession of priests and courtiers surrounds him. Will his throne be submerged and crushed by the waves of this A human ocean? No! Iiram just extended his arm: everything Stop! At a sign, this countless army disperses Persian; she withdraws trembling, but obedient to the intelligence-agency that dominates and tames it. – What, said to himself Solomon, a single sign of this hand brings forth or scatters armies... Then, comparing this hidden force, this formidable power to his own, the great king, who believed having received knowledge and wisdom from his God, understood that These gifts were nothing compared to what he had just received. to discover; and then, in his soul, he recognized the existence of a a power superior to his own, a power to which the future, of which he had foresight, perhaps reserved a sovereignty larger than his own and more universal.

The Queen too, seeing Hiram's power over this The crowd understands that he is more than a man. Balkis regrets the reckless commitment that binds her to Solomon, and him surprises the Queen's eyes fixed on the worker.

But this power of Iiram, so great that no interference The capture did not seem to exceed its scope, experiencing a failure all the more cruel as the Queen, who had come to attend his triumph, is witness to his humiliation.

A fellow mason, named Jubelas (or Phanor or Sterkin), a fellow carpenter named Jubelos (or Amrou or Oterfut), and a minor companion, named Jube-

lum (or Methousuël or Abibala), claimed the title of the
The Masters' salaries, and Iliam refused them this increase.
salary increase to which they were not entitled. To see To avenge, the journeyman mason mixed limestone with brick in the preparations for the pouring of the brazen sea; the com.
Pagnon, the carpenter, extended the crossbeams of the beams.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 239

to expose them to the flame; the slimming companion took in the poisoned lake of Gomorrah, sulphurous lava which he treacherously mixed with the molten iron.

A young worker, named Benoni (son of my sorrow), who has for Hiram the devoted love of a child for his father,
He uncovered this infamous plot, and he will reveal it to Solomon.
so that he might stop the flow of the brazen sea. But Solomon, happy to see Hiram humiliated before the Queen, wants that nothing is interrupted.

The solemn hour has struck. The obstacles that were holding back
The molten brass is pushed aside and torrents of molten metal flow.
rush into the immense basin which must be the mold of the brazen sea. But, this mold, overloaded, tears, and the liquid of fire trickles down from all sides. Iliam believes that The action of the fire vitrifies the sand, and to stop it he directs a column of water at the base of the mold's buttresses.
Water and fire mingle to fight each other; the burning water is now nothing more than vapor rising from the embrace of the fire by making the molten metal spurt into the air, and this rain falls upon the countless multitude who have flocked to see
This spectacle sows terror and death everywhere.

The great, disgraced craftsman looks around him and...
He can no longer find his faithful Benoni. In his grief, he accuses him.
and doesn't know that the poor child perished, a victim of his devotion, still trying to prevent this great catastrophe, following Solomon's refusal to extend his scepter to stop everything.

Iliam did not leave the scene of his defeat and his Shame. Overwhelmed by grief, he doesn't notice that this sea of molten brass that the steam raised while-whole, and which is still agitated to its very depths,
He can devour her at any moment. He thinks only of the Queen.
of Saba who is there, who was preparing to greet a great triumph-phe and who only saw a great disaster.

Suddenly he hears a strange, wonderful voice that emerges from the fiery abyss and calls to him three times: "Iliam!

Hiram! Iliram! He looks up and sees in the middle of the fire

240 SENSES, TENFOLD IN LEGEND

a human form, but much larger than men who live on Earth. The superhuman being approaches him saying, "Come, my son, come without fear; I have breathed
"On you, you can breathe in the flame." Wrapped in fire, Hiram finds, in the element where a son of Adam aspires—Death would be likened to unknown delights. A mysterious allure
He wins, and without further resistance, he asks the one who comes to call him and who takes him away like this: "Where are you taking me?"
At the center of the earth, in the soul of the world, in the domain of Eblis and Cain, or reigns with them freedom. Here expires the jealous tyranny of Adonai. Here we can, within ourselves laughing at his fury, tasting the fruits of the tree of knowledge.
This is the domain of your fathers. — Who am I then? And who Are you? — I am the father of your fathers, I am the son of La-
"Mech ct, the grandson of Cain, I am Tubulcain."

Tubal-cain brings Hiram into the Sanctuary of Fire, and There, he explains to him Adonai's weakness and base passions.
of this Dicu enemy of his creature and who condemned her to to die to avenge the kindnesses bestowed by the Fire spirits they spread over her. Hiram came forward, and he found himself in the presence of the author of his race, of Cain. The angel of Light, who begot Cain, dropped a reflection of his inef-fable beauty on the face of this son whose greatness irritates the Adonai's jealousy. Cain tells the youngest of his race his faults, his virtues greater than his faults, and his misfortunes which, through the persecution of Adonai, have equaled his virtues.

Iliram sees all those of Cain's race who are dead before the flood. For those who have died since that act of merciless vengeance, they are all present, yet Hiram cannot see them, because the earth holds their bodies;
but their souls have returned to this domain of Cain and of Eblis, who is the soul of the world.

And Hiram hears the voice of the one born of love of Tubaleuin and his sister Nohéma, who himself knew They carnally impregnated Ham's wife and had Canaan by her.
Nimrod's father: "A son will be born to you, whom you will not see."

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 241

not, and which will give you countless descendants. Your race, far superior to the race of Adam, will be trampled by its feet. For long centuries, your race will use all its courage and all his genius to fill with blessings In race Ungrateful and stupid Adam. Eventually, the best will become the strongest. They will establish throughout the earth the worship of Fire. Your children, rallying to your name, will destroy the power. to see the Kings and all the ministers of Adonai's tyranny. Go, my son, the Angel of Light and the Geniuses of Fire are with you!

Hiram is transported from the Fire Sanctuary to earth. Tubaleain returned with him for a moment. Before Leaving his grandson, he finally musters his courage; he gives him the hammer he himself used in the works that made him so famous, and he said to him: "By this hammer that opened the crater of the volcanoes, and with the help Geniuses of Fire, you will bring to life the work you have conceived and make the witnesses of your defeat admire the bronze sea."

After Tubal-caiu disappeared, Hiram used the hammer precious for repairing his work. A few moments have That was enough, and the first rays of day illuminated this new A marvel accomplished by the genius of Iiram. The entire people of Israel celebrates his glory, and the Queen of Sheba, whose Solomon's contradictions have tainted nascent love, has the My heart was overflowing with joy.

As she strolls along, accompanied by her women, Outside the walls of Jerusalem, a secret instinct leads to... Near her is Hiram, who shies away from her triumph and believes They always seek solitude. They make themselves for each other. Paveu of their love. ZJud-Hud, Yoiseau who is near the Queen of Sheba, messenger of the Fire Genies, and who in all circumstances have shown a great aversion to Solomon, Hud-Hud seeing Tiram trace the T in the air mysterious, it flutters above his head and lands with complacency on her fist. At this sign, Sarahil (of~ Jehovah's favor! The Queen's nurse cries out: "The oracle is fulfilled! /Zud-Hud has recognized the bridegroom that the

46

242 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

Fire spirits destined for Balkis, the only one she could "To welcome love without crime."

They no longer hesitate, they take each other for spouses are looking for ways to free up the speech that Balkis gave to the king of the Hebrews. Iiram will depart the first of Jerusalem. Shortly after, the Queen, impassioned

To meet with him in Arabia will deceive Solomon's vigilance.

But the three wicked companions, whose betrayal has was thwarted by the intervention of the Fire Genies, and which constantly spy on Hiram to take revenge on him, surprise
The secret of her love. They present themselves before Solomon.
Jubelas Ini said: "Iliam has stopped coming to the construction sites, in the workshops and factories." Jubelos said to him, "Towards
At the third hour of the night, a man passed in front of me, who was heading towards the tent of the Queen of Sheba; I re-known Hiram." Jubelum said to him, "Keep my companions away from him—" Guons and those around you, the King alone must hear what I have to say." Left alone with Solomon, Jubelum continues: "Pai took advantage of the shadows of the night to mingle" to the Queen's eunuchs; I saw Hiram slipping near of her, it was when I slipped away, a little before dawn, he was still alone with her.

Solomon speaks with the high priest Zadok about this that he has just learned, and together they are looking for the way to take revenge on Hiram. But he demanded a Solomon had an audience with him to obtain his release.
He asks him which country he wants to go to after leaving Jerusalem.
"I want to return to Tyre, répoud firam, to the King who had not sent to you." Solomon Ini announces that he is free. However, Hiram still needs, before his departure, distribute the workers' wages. Solomon asks him who
These are the irois companions, Jubelas, Jubelos, Jubelum:
"These are," said Hiram, "unskilled workers who will..."
should have the title and salary of masters; but I have rejected their unjust claim.

Solomon dismisses Hiram, protesting the affection he
He will always keep them; and he remembers the three companions.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 243

announces that Hiram is withdrawing, and adds: "Several masters are dead, and need replacing. Tonight, after payday, Go find Hiram, and ask him for your initiation into the Master's degree. If he grants it to you, if he gives you his Trust, and you will have mine too. If he refuses you the initiative-tiation, tomorrow you will appear before me; I will hear it justify your refusal, and I will hear you defend yourself against him; and I will decide between him and you, unless however that God may abandon him and mark him with some striking sign, that Hiram did not find favor in his eyes.

Hiram and Balkis will separate but will reunite soon.

The Queen of Sheba said to her beloved husband: "Be two happy times, my Lord and my beloved master; your The servant is eager to be reunited with you forever. and you will find with her in Arabia a fruit of your love she carries within her." He tears himself from the arms of the one that these words have just made even more precious to her.

Solomon, warned by the denunciation of Jubelas, of Jubelos and Jubelum wants to hasten his marriage to the Queen of Sheba. That evening, after dinner, he pressed her to give in to his Love, this is the moment Balkis has been waiting for. She excites him to drink, and Solomon does so, hoping to find in the wine The audacity to do violence to Balkis. He is full of confidence and hope, seeing that she herself had emptied her cup completely full of a wine that changes, when drunk, into a A burning flame, igniting all the senses. But, attentive On that very spot, she only pretended to drink, to deceive him. Soon Solomon fell into a drunken sleep, and the Queen takes the opportunity to remove it from the monarch's finger A sign she had given him as a token of her faith. A horse Arabia is all prepared; he takes Balkis away from Jerusalem Salem, in the land of Saba, where she is to meet Ilivam.

Alas! The three wicked companions saw more than with envy those whose talents and virtues had put them at the forefront above them and who were admitted into the Chamber of the Middle They resolved to enter this sacred place and settle there. to introduce willingly or by force.

244 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

Since they could not achieve this goal without having in Having possessed the sacred word of the Masters, they consulted among themselves on the means of rescuing him from Hiram. By mutual agreement, They resolved to intimidate him, in order to wrest from him by the fearing this word, which they did not expect to obtain from his free will. They were determined to kill him, in order to to evade the just punishment that was due to be brought upon their heads such criminal audacity. Hoping for no pardon, they were determined to steal at all costs the incriminating evidence which could point them out to other workers as the murderers Master's sorting tools. Vain illusion! The tools used by They, in order to perpetrate their crime, had to reveal the the working class to which they belonged.

After having taken in silence and in shadow shearing the provisions which, according to their calculations, were to To succeed in their despicable undertaking, they waited for the moment where, at nightfall, the workers, having completed their task, left the workshop to go and rest, because a-

then the Master, who always remained last, found himself-would see alone, and therefore defenseless.

The temple had three gates, Pune to the East, which communicated quait with the middle chamber ct was reserved for the Master; Another one to the south, and the third to the west. The latter served as a common entrance for all the workers; it was also! that is why Hiram had sewn up his seatbelt, before having inspected the day's work one last time.

The three accomplices positioned themselves at each of these doors, aliu that if the Master escaped Pun, he could not avoid the others. Jubelas lay in ambush at the South Gate, Jubelos at that of the West, and Jubelum that of the East.

After a few moments of waiting, Hiram comes out of the Middle room to visit the works and ensure as usual, his plans were executed. He leads First, his steps towards the South Gate, and he catches sight of Jubolas armed with a heavy ruler, Master Ini asks why He didn't follow the other workers; that's what he wanted from him. His companion Jubelas responds with the utmost audacity:

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 245

"Master, you have been keeping me in the..."
lower ranks; I want advancement; grant me to the rank of Masters. – I cannot, said Hiram, with In my ordinary kindness, I cannot, on my own, grant you this favor; the support of my Brothers is also necessary; when you will have completed your time, and that you will be sufficiently informed trout, I will make it my duty to propose to you in council some Masters. – I am quite learned, replies the rash man, and I will not leave you until I have received the word from the Masters.
"Fool," replied Hiram, "that's not how I saw it."
received nor should he ask himself; work, persevere, and you
You will be rewarded.

Jubelas insists and even resorts to threats. Hiram, without
"Let him be intimidated," he firmly replied, "and I hope in vain."
to obtain by this means the favor he seeks, and of a mou-
With a wave of his hand, he urged her to withdraw. At the same moment,
The Companion, furious, then struck him violently on the head
A ruler strike. The blow is deflected by a gesture made Hiram, and the heavy ruler, the twenty-four-inch ruler,
By misplacing it, he struck the Master on the throat.

Hiram, understandably worried, rushed forward to to exit by the West Gate; but there too he is stopped by Jubelos, who, in an even more threatening manner, asks for the word of the Masters. Foreseeing the danger that as the situation worsens, Hiram takes a step back, to withdraw and to reach the gateway to the East; but he did not flee quickly enough to avoid a terrible square blow that Jubelos It hits him hard. Shaken by this blow, Hiram heads towards staggering towards the last exit of the temple, through which he hopes to escape. Vain hope! He is arrested again by the last conspirator, Jubelum, who also asks him for the word of Master. "Death rather," said Hiram, "than violate the "A secret that was entrusted to me!" At that very moment, the scoundrel... he strikes him a violent blow on the forehead with a mallet, knocking him down and spreads it out at his feet.

The three murderers, having met up, wondered reciprocally the word of Master; seeing that they had not

246 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

Having been able to obtain it, they were devastated to have committed a crime. useless, they thought only of making them disappear. traces. To that end, they removed the body and hid it under from the rubble, and, in the night, they carried him out of the town and landed near a wood, planting on his grave an acacia branch.

Hiram's absence from the work soon led to... the terrible catastrophe was born to the workers; they thought They immediately accused the three companions of a crime. Jubelas, Jubelos and Jubelum, which, since that fateful day, were absent. The Masters therefore met in the Middle Room, which they draped in black as a sign of grief.

When the fumes of intoxication have dissipated and that Salomon found himself alone, abandoned by Balkis, he He was initially overcome by anger and he is threatening Zadoc and his God Adonai. But the prophet Ahias of Shiloh This fury was quickly halted by reminding Solomon that the The murderer of Cain was punished seven times, and the murderer of Lamech seventy times seven times. Solomon, to turn away from He condemned this sentence and ordered that the body be searched for. of Hiran.

He judged nine masters perfect enough to entrust to them the pursuit of Hiram's assassins. Although all were anti- of the same ardor, however, it is to be believed that no could not have discovered the murderers' hideout, if a The unknown man would not have informed Solomon. The king sent someone there without the nine zealous masters, and Pun of them, Stolkin, being Having rushed into the cave, would he not have sooner seen Jubelum (Abibala) that he struck him a blow to the heart-gnard, whose traitor fell dead on the spot. Jubelum killed in the cave, below the burning bush, was the spring-Chief assassin of Iirum.

Jubelas (Stcrkin) and Jubelos (Oterfnt), his accomplices, Having managed to escape from the cave, they took refuge in The land of Geth. This land being a tributary of the kingdom of Israel, Solomon immediately wrote to Muaca, king of Geth, in order to

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 247

that he hand the two assassins over to trusted individuals that he sent. Consequently, the powerful monarch armed on the same day fifteen of the most zealous masters, numbering of which were the nine who had been searching from Jubelum (Abibala). He gave them sufficient troops. to escort them. The fifteen masters set off. on the 15th of the month corresponding to our month of June, and arrived in the land of Geth on the 28th of the same month. They presented the Solomon's letter to King Maacah, and the latter, trembling at This news prompted an immediate order for an a thorough search for the two murderers and that they be handed over without delay to the envoys of the Most Powerful Sovereign of Israel; He added, moreover, that he would be happy if his States were purged of two similar monsters. It was done So, a meticulous search was conducted, and these scoundrels were found. in a cave named Ben-Dicar (Son of Transfixion), the fifteenth day of the search. Zerbaël and Eligam were the first ones who discovered them. They were seized, they were put chains on which the type of torture was engraved which was reserved for them. They arrived in Jerusalem on the 15th of the month. The following month, they were immediately brought to Solomon, who, after venting his righteous anger against them, he ordered that put them in the dungeons of the tower of Hesar (narrow ligu), for to make them perish, the next day, by the most cruel death; this which was executed at ten o'clock in the morning. They were tied to two posts by the feet and neck, arms tied behind. Their bodies were opened from the chest down to the bottom of the Their bellies were torn off; their... and they were left like that, exposed to the heat of the sun for a period of eight hours. The flies and other insects drank from their blood. They burst into such lamentable complaints that they moved their executioners of compassion, which forced them to their cut off their heads. Their bodies were thrown into the ditches of the a city to serve as pasture for wild beasts. Solomon or- then gave that the three heads of Abibula, of Sterkin ct d'Oterfut were displayed on stakes, in the same order that these wretches had stationed themselves in the temple

to assassinate Hiram, in order to set an example to all his subjects, and particularly the stonemasons. In consequence, in the sequence, Stevkin's head was placed at the South Gate, that of Oterfut at the Western Gate, and that of Abibala at the gateway to the Orient.

At the time when Solomon stirred up the three evil companions—grievances against the architect of the Temple, he was a fervent worshipper of Adonai, and he was unknowingly suffering, the secret influence of this sworn enemy of the descendants of Cain. But, since then, Solomon nobly repaired his wrongs. After burying Hiram's body under the altar Solomon, the same figure as the Temple, abandoning the worship of Adonai, he ended his days burning incense before Moloch, the deity Tyrians, geniuses of Fire, and one of the Angel's lieutenants of the Light.

However, fear still besieges the great King on his throne of ivory and solid gold. He conjures all the powers—nature's graces to grant him mercy. But he forgot to ward off the smallest of all insects, the mite (the small man, the fire worker). The mite, patient in the accomplishment of the twisting of vengeance due to the Genie of Fire, gnaws, without ever stopping, for two hundred and twenty-four years, Solomon's throne, and this throne, under which the earth seemed to falter, it collapsed with a terrible crash!

8. Historical truth about the Masonic narrative.

Before giving the various explanations of the novel Masonic, it is only right to restore the truth about the characters and the actions of people that the Freemason—Nothing plays a role in this drama. The Three Books of Kings The second Paralipomena recount the events that the sect has shamefully perverted for the sake of symbolizing teaching of his kabbalistic doctrine and the execution of his revolutionary plans.

"Solomon resolved to build a temple in the name of the Lord, and a palace for himself. He chose porters at number seventy thousand, and eighty thousand men to cut the stones in the mountains, and three thousand

"Six hundred to be inspectors."

"So Solomon sent to Hiram, king of Tyre, and him asked to send him a skilled man who knew how to work in gold, silver, copper, iron, and purple works, of scarlet and hyacinth, {and to make all kinds of carvings and chiseling, to employ him with the workers he had beside him, and whom David had chosen. He asked him
"also cedar, fir, and Lebanese pine wood."

"Hiram, king of Tyre, wrote to Solomon: 'I am sending you
"Hiram, a clever and very skillful man, and who is like
"My father. His mother is from the city of Dan, a woman
"Widower of the tribe of Naphtali, and her father was a Tyrian. He "knows how to work with gold, silver, copper, iron, and "marble, wood, and even purple, hyacinth, in "Fine linen and scarlet. He still knows how to engrave all sorts of things."
"of figures, and a marvelous genius for inventing all this"
"which is necessary for all kinds of work. It works-"
"Ira will work with your workers and with those of David your father."

"So Solomon began to build the temple, and Hiram having come to him, he did all the work that he ordered him to do.
11 made two bronze columns, and cast two capitals of bronze, in the shape of a lily, to be placed on top of each column. And there were also, at the top of the columns, two networks to cover two cords that were at the chapters the nets and, above the nets, other capitals proportionate tions to the column; and around this second capital there are
He had two hundred grenades arranged in two rows. He put these two columns in the vestibule of the temple, and having placed the
On the right column, he called it Jakin; he similarly placed the second a column which he named Boaz. He also made a molten sea
This sea was perfectly round, ten cubits in diameter.
placed on twelve oxen, three of which were looking at the Septenthree, three in the West, three in the South, and three in the East. Hiram He also made pots, cauldrons, and basins, and he completed all the work that King Solomon wanted to do in the temple of the Lord.

250 SENSES, TENFOLD IN LEGEND

This is all that Holy Scripture tells us about Hiram.
Tyre. Its origin from Tubalcain and Lucifer, the signs mysterious ways in which he guided the workers, his loves with the Queen of Sheba, her tragic death and her descent into Hell, it's all a fable and a lie.

"The Queen of Sheba, as Holy Scripture recounts, having

Having heard of Solomon's great reputation, he came to Jerusalem, to experience it through riddles. She had with her great riches and camels which were carrying spices, and a large quantity of gold and precious stones. She came to Solomon and explained to him everything that was in her heart. And Solomon explained to her everything she had proposed; and there was nothing that he did not give her. It became clear. Seeing all the wisdom of Solomon and the house he had built was completely out of sorts. even, and said to Solomon, "What I had been told in my "the kingdom of your merit and your wisdom is well verified" "table, at I recognized that we hadn't said half of "What I see of your wisdom." Then she presented sixty talents of gold, and a prodigious quantity of perfumes and very precious stones. The king, for his part, gave the Queen of Sheba everything she could possibly desire. that she asked for, it was much more than she had told me brought. And the queen returned to her kingdom with his entire entourage.

The novel of the loves of this queen, whose name was Balkis, Sarahil, the name of his servant, the bird 7/ud-Hud, etc... These are Jewish inventions, nothing more.

4. Physical interpretation of the Masonic novel.

In order to confound serious minds who might seek to unravel Masonic mysteries, the authors of this secret society, that is to say the Jews, have given to history d'Iiram, as we have already pointed out, several Different interpretations. The first and most vulgar,

4. Chapter 10 of the Third Book of the Kois, and Chapter 10 of the Second Book Paralipomena.

AND MASONIC SYMDOLES 251

which fills almost the entire "philosophical course" of Ragon is the application of fable to material nature. Hiram must represent the sun that builds the temple of the nature by fertilizing it with its heat and illuminating it with its light, as the center of the planetary system, it is the Great Architect of the Universe, which he built as his temple. The vault of this temple represents the firmament. The column – luminous J is the symbol of the winter solstice to which the the sun regains its strength; the dark column B is that of the The summer solstice, when the sun begins to wane. the last three months of the year, October, November and December

December, are the three murderers Jubelas, Jubelos and Jubelum, who one after the other deliver mortal blows to their master, the sun. The first three months of the year, January, February, March, are represented by Stolkiu, Zerbaël and Eligam, who avenge the murder of the master and bring back the sun. The blazing five-pointed star signifies the five months of production, and pomegranates, fertility of nature, produced by the action alternately invigorating and mortifying of the two columns, or of the vicissitudes of the Sun. The three windows on the lodge painting are the three points in the sun's daily journey: morning, noon, and the Evening. The mosaic pavement with its black and white stones is the image of day and night. The acacia signifies the step-wise from winter to summer, and, therefore, the renewal of the life and nature. The set square reminds us of the four parts of the world, and the flaming sword the rays of the sun. The twelve columns of the temple symbolize the twelve constellations; the mysterious seven-stepped ladder, the seven Planets. Apollo's seven-stringed lyre, the triangle and the seven-piped flute are images of the melody produced by the movement of the seven planets, harmony Spheres imagined by Pythagoras. The skull and horns The bull figures that encase this lyre represent the earth. our dairy cow, above which the harp— Celestial Monica. The rough stone is nature still formless. or sterile and dead; the cubic stone, formed nature, iron—

252 MEANINGS OF THE LEGEND TENFOLD

Utilized, producing ears of grain, wheat, wine. The fire of the sun is the life-giving element of the universe; the enveloping serpent a globe or a wand, is the development of life eternal, represented by the circling serpent, always existing by constantly devouring itself, etc... I It seems unnecessary to explain at greater length how a The lodge represents the universe, and the Venerable Master on his throne, the sun. With a little imagination, anyone can continue this chapter and make a longer application of the Masonic signs and decorations of a material nature and to its various evolutions.

But what is less easy is finding the interpretation—the interpretation of the Masonic legend as it relates to the human nature.

Nothing of what comes from the doctrine of the Synagogue fallen and the teachings of the fallen Angel, could not to be moral in the ordinary sense of the word. The interpretation—the tation in question here is actually all that there is to More scandalous, more immoral; it's so disgusting that we don't dare print it in French. Not even that Wouldn't we do it in Latin, if that's the purpose and subject of this book?

they didn't force us to.

Cum homo constet corpore et anima, doctrina et praxis sectæ massonicæ, quoad partem hominis corporalem, nihilo differunt a mysteriis iniquissimis antiquitatis gentilis.

ITiram imaginem refert hominis corpore et anima perfecti, “Unde came homo?” » quærit Præses Consilii Supremi gradus trigesimi tertiif. In gradus Tironis, who primus est totius ritus.

“Quapropter ejus tessera (sacred word) meaning cenon seu uterus (Boaz).

“Who is gay? » Ecce gradus secundus, sive Soci, cujus tessera (Jakín) significat phallón seu virgam.

“What is destinatio hominis? » Ilabes tertium gradum, seu Magistri, cujus tessera Mac-benæ (corruptio, filius corru-

Paul Rosen, p. 281.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 253

ptionis), significat putrefactionem. In hoc graduate completeness homine quatenus studium is materia.

“Conscicntia sui ipsius docetur homo, se non esse cffcctum alicujus causae. Bece quartus gradus, sive Magistri perfecti, cujus tessera significat, creationis humanæ princi-pium, finem ct dominum ceases phallón. »

Ex quo patet, priorem columnam, camque umbrosam, quam Boas vocant, designare materiam sive principium
passivum mulicbre, alteram vero, lucidam, quæ vocatur Jakín, principium activum virile, ex utriusque vero conjunctione, ct mediante seminis putrefactione, oriri grana gra-nati, fructus vitæ renovatæ, id est, novus homo, sicut avis phænix fabulatur ex suis resurgere cineribus. Unde habes verbum symbolicum (password) quarti gradus, siza seu zizon, quod hebraïce meaning: flos seu virtus floris.

Quis non videt in hisce symbolis restitutam phallolatriam? India multiformis repræsentatio membri virilis, quæ in signis massonicis undequaque occnrrit: Littera G, significans generationem, imagine obscena refert scrotum penemque, aut phallón in cteïde. Littera T junctionem exhibits membrorum utriusque sexus. Per litteram istam, tamquam per divinitatem, Hiram gubernat et circumducit totum vulgus operiarorum suorum. Ille will littera T triplicate, formans quasi duo T in littera IL, eique imposeun tertium T, trinam docet generationem, in mundo divino, spirituali and materiali; quadruplicate vero format crucem teutonicam, circa idem Jod vel unicum punctum, quod divinam suam potentiam generatricem in quartet partes mundi exerit. Cireinus incubans normæ, in the same way as medio littera G, obsœna is exhibitio actus conjugalis. Hæc in usum venit tanquam ordinarium vexillam massonicum. If Cireini et normæ puncta angularia jungas, habes Crucem sancti Andreæ, aliam ejusdem rei libidinosæ exhibitionem symbolicam to Massonibus adoptatam. Præciuctorium seu ventrale, quod virum laborantem significare dicunt, una cum appendice sua (apron and bib) idem ostendit ac littera G. Tiro, utpote adhuc impuber, appendixem adhuc sustentatam ge-stare jubetur, Socius vero, utpote jam puer, eandem pendentem; quamobrem ille nondum admittitur ad' conventus adoptionis, sive feminarum initiatarum; hic vero, ad secundum gradum admissus, mercedem suam recipit juxta columnam feminam B. Ad eundem finem traduntur candidateis chivotecæ albæ "pro feminis quas præ aliis æstimabunt". Perpendicular mobile regulation imposes therefore in center quiescat, eandem rem turpissimam expressed. "Arbor medii" and "cubiculum medii" aka symbola sunt utriusque membri. Idem expressed rosa cruci aceubans. Iterum, pavementum mosaicum quod alternis quadris albis et nigris observation. Ita gladius flammeus designat phallum vivum seu virgam vibram, Duo triangula conserta marem ostendunt feminamque, sed præcipue Kabbalisticum Regem sanctum sanctanujne Malronam. Supra ostendimus triangulum lineare exhibere formam entis infiniti, triangulum vero punctorum entis finiti, seu hominis in quantum est individua imago divinæ Trinitatis Kabbalisticæ. Porro, per duo triangula punctata, alterum alteri incubans et eum co in uno puncto conveniens, conficitur figura quinque punctorum quam femina initial nominibus suis appendere solent. Habes rationem cur in Conventibus feminarum, quos adoptionis vocant, "omnia fiant per quinque. » Phalloglatria absque lupanariibus florescere nequit. In illis Fratres Sororesque "operari" oportet, sicut Tubalcain eum sorore Nohema laborasse a Massonibus narratur.

254 SENSES TENFOLD OR THE LEGEND

Sunt adhuc plurima nauscabunda ejusdem generis que conscribere kedet pudetque. Sit venia pro necessario dictis, ex quibus Heet concludere, Sectam massonicam in secretio-

ribus Conventibus libidinosam phallolatriam antiquitatis cethniciae eum omnibus suis consuetudinibus abominandis redintegrasse, cique ceum mulierculis inverccundis nostro adhuc sweulo operam lasts impensam. Eh! renovata sunt, modo forsan elegantiori, impudica festa bacchanalia, saturnalia, cleusinia, Bon Dew, aliaque horrenda cjusdem generis; eaque ab initialis utriusque sexus sedulo abscoï-- duntur sub cooperculo massonico ventralium. Oh pudor!

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 295

5. Ethical value of the story of Hiram,

Hiram represents moral good, which should be the teacher.
of the perfect man according to Masonic morality, a morality which differs radically from rational ethics and even more of Christian morality. Still ignorant of his dignity, he said In Freemasonry, man is like a rough stone.
which, in the lodges, is chiseled and gradually shaped until it became a cubic stone with points.

The master leads his disciples who are willing to enter the temple of virtue, first at column J, symbol of the Firmness and Strength; and from there to column B, figure of Stability and Wisdom. They then climb the ladder mysterious through the three degrees of theological virtues, the Faith, Hope, and Charity, and the four degrees of cardinal virtues, Prudence, Justice, Strength and Temperance. Having reached the height, they descend the same scale on the other side by the seven liberal arts!

Superstition, ignorance, and avarice are the three internal enemies, and lies, tyranny and fanaticism-- the three fierce external enemies that attack and kill man, while Truth, Science, and Virtue are her three saviors. The pomegranates are the emblem of friendship that binds the members of the ma- family conical, and the serrated hoopoe is the symbol of the union fraternal. The gloves given to the apprentice indicate by their whiteness, like the hands of a mason must be pure of all excesses, and that he must carefully avoid the most light soiling. The apron is the emblem of work: it reminds the mason that his entire life must be consecrated created through labor. The mosaic pavement, formed of white stones
The two black and white pieces, cemented together, symbolize the union of all Freemasons, regardless of their skin color, their nationality and political and religious opinions

1. Grammar, rhetoric, logic, arithmetic, geography-- metrics, music and astronomy. Ragon, p. 396.

256 TEN-TIMES MEANING OF THE LEGEND

that they profess. The square teaches the respect due to regulations: the perpendicular, the rectitude of judgment; the level, social equality; the three lights in the lodge, Wisdom, Strength and Blessing; the mallet and the chisel, the intelligence and reason that have been given to man to enable him to discern good from evil;

The blazing star, the five senses; the letter G, geometry, the art of measurement, which leads man from truth to truth up to Pinfini..., summer..., summer... We don't need a great insight in adapting all Masonic symbols

These are examples of this kind of insignificant morality. This explanation jouc nevertheless plays a major role in Freemasonry nonsense, to mislead narrow minds who don't They only see what they are shown...

6. Templar meaning of the tragedy of Hiram.

In the Templar explanation, Iliram becomes Jacques Bourguignon Molay. His three assassins are Pope Clé-King Philip the Fair, and the informer Squin Floriau?, on whose accusation Philip the Fair undertook the destruction of the Templar Order. The rank of Kadosh, 30° degree, is a dramatic representation of the death of this Grand Master was accompanied by terrible oaths. of revenge against "those in authority". Your lodge represents their temple; the double-headed eagle, temporal power and spiritual knowledge they wish to acquire; the sword, vengeance; the Maillet, the destruction of the Bourbons and the Popes... and and so on.

No one had any interest in avenging the sup-pressure from the Order of the Templars and the torture of his last Grand Master; also this continuation of the Order Is she merely a pretext to conceal other characters? who act and other goals they aim for and that we have already mentioned quite often. Iliram, the architect of the temple

4. The three principal Sephiroth of each of the three triads Kabbalistic.

2. Ragon, p. 161.

Solomon is not the person for whom one would know to inspire the minds of the new era. He was subsumed by thus appoints the Grand Master of the Templars, whose fate...-gic is capable of moving hearts, and whose apostasy imitators will easily find their way, provided that the war opposing Christianity brings temporal advantages.

Therefore, we simply need to state this explanation and ren-see the reader to the revelations of the various authors on the Kadosh rank!

7. Political importance of the Masonic tale.

No one believes the lodge's assurances anymore, that it does not concern itself with politics; and it is pointless to refute once again his protest which is entirely lacking and of sincerity and truth.

Hiram is the Chief or Representative of Freemasonry. Freemasonry itself is, in terms of its aims and means, identical to the fallen order of the Templars: it len-She uses it to hide it from your view, to...to assert oneself and defend oneself.

The three mortal enemies of Freemasonry are; the Monarchy, the Catholic Church and the Nobility, -the enemies-members of the Order of the Templars, but generalized. Philip the Bel represents all the monarchs, Clement V all the elitists Catholic, and the informer denounced all the privileged.

The three saviors are: Democracy, Naturalism, and this Socialism.

Balkis is humanity; Hiram's workers are the people and the proletariat, who blindly obey the Master who Guided by the "phallic Tau," the passions. The words The Order's motto is: Liberty, Equality, Fraternity - words subjects open to a multitude of diverse meanings.

For Freemasons, Liberty means the destruction of all Civil, ecclesiastical, and domestic authority: Equality wind to speak of the destruction of all dignity, of royalty, of priesthood and nobility; Fraternity implies the destruction of ties of the homeland, of family, and of property. One only has to read the volumes of Father Neut, Father Deschamps, Father Pachtler, of Dr. Eckert, of Claudio Jannet, of Léo Taxil, of Mgr Fava, and so many other authors, which we will not attempt to list here. to repeat the evidence and documents as numerous as co-elutants.

258 SENSE TENFOLD DK THE LEGEND

Solomon, surrounded by Sadoc and his elders, represents The kings surrounded by priests and their courtiers. Balkis is the people who still admire kings and are attached to priests, but whom Hiram, Freemasonry, converted and takes from his former masters. Iliram's murder is lane-erosion of the people's freedoms and rights by the monarchy Chic, religion and property. The search for the body Hiram's represents the revolutions, and the recovered body, the restoration of the liberty of the people, or the republic democratic.

The construction of Solomon's Temple under the direction Hiram's death symbolizes the gradual preparation of the republic universal through Freemasonry. The various instruments Construction workers are the emblems of political labor and social aspects of the lodges, divided among the various degrees and directed by the Supreme Leaders of the secret society. An honorary rank of Rosicrucianism returns to the supreme leadership of anti-religious work holy; to the rank of Kadosh or Templar, the supreme direction of political and anti-national work.

If we say that a society that aims only to destroy what exists, could not exist on this purely negative basis, one already sees that the construction of the temple of humanity is—that is to say, of the universal republic under the sovereignty Masonic, is the positive basis of the works of the free-masonry. This double work is symbolized by the sword and the trowel, which is placed in the hands of the Princes of Jerusalem, to the 16th degree, in imitation of the Jews rebuilding the walls of the willow town: "Those who were employed in building the walls— They knew how to do the work with one hand, and held their swords in the other!

1. Ezra, tv, 17.

Everyone will be able to apply Masonic politics to it. tion of all the other numerous emblems and symbols. On easily guesses that the temple is the image of the unified reign- versel of Freemasonry; that its two principal columns- The main ones are Force and Wisdom, that is to say, violence and cunning; that each hewn stone is a perfect mason; that the walls and the twelve columns are the peoples of all the sides of the world, the one and indivisible people of the republic universal; that the sacred vault is the Supreme Government- Masonic affiliation; that the apron is a symbol of the political work of the Freemasons; that the letter G, in The geometric sense indicates the division of the entire earth in provinces or districts; that the mosaic pavement is a symbol of all the nations that make up the republic universal; that the middle chamber is the seat of the gov- supreme government of Masonic authority, and the tree of the in the middle of its supreme head; that the trunk of the widow is the fund of militant and revolutionary Freemasonry, that all the masons must supply until the that the universal kingdom of the secret sect be established and af- Fermi, etc..., etc...

This chapter reveals the true purpose of Freemasonry. Nonsense. Read between the lines of Masonic texts. seek to pierce the veils under which the brothers seek to conceal the negative and positive aims of the Masonic order- screw, and you will always find complete destruction principles and foundations of the current political order, reli- religious, social and domestic, and the construction of a kingdom of the lodge under the name of universal republic. If the The firmament is the vault of their temple, and if all the nations of the earth form its foundation, its universality the kingdom to which Freemasonry aspires, is clearly expressed. All countries in the world, perhaps with the exception of Patagonia and Central Africa, are already under the Masonic square and compass, divided into provinces and obedient, and endowed with their Orientations, Masters, Provin- Companies, chapters, and other government agencies. That's the new Power that a prophet sings of in the verse:

260 SENSES, TENFOLD IN LEGEND

Et princeps nescit quod nova poientia crescit; "The King
"Ignoring that a new power is growing!"

How many times have monarchs been warned, but
In vain! They cannot grasp the head of this hydra.
The head! These are not the Princes and other Grandeur.
that we know, and whose names are the most beautiful ornament Outside the Temple of Solomon: these are the Chiefs so far

They're nowhere to be found. Look for them in Berlin, in Rome, and in... Charleston! Perhaps they are still there.

8. Jewish significance of the drama of Adoniram.

In the previous chapters, there always remained a certain number of Masonic symbols more or less unsuitable applicable. In this chapter, everything that plays a role in Freemasonry and in its legend, applies to Jewish people with astonishing ease. In truth, everything that found in Freemasonry is fundamentally Jewish. exclusively July, passionately July, since the beginning-cement until the end.

What interest do other nations have in building the temple of Solomon? Are they doing it for themselves or for the Jews? Are these nations or are the Jews the ones who are making a profit? What advantage do they have in devouring each other? to make the "Princes of Jerusalem" triumph everywhere (16°), the "Chiefs of the Tabernacle" (23°), the "Princes of the Tabernacle" (24°)? Have the nations agreed to humble themselves all together like a footstool under the feet of the Jews? Why are they in such a hurry to put on the Crown? (Kether) upon the head of the Jew, and the Kingdom (Malkuth) of the ground beneath his feet?

It is so obvious that Freemasonry is just a tool in the hands of the Jews who hold the reins of power there, that one is tempted to believe that the new Jewish masons have completely-

4. Hermann de Lehnin,
2, Psalm 10.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 261

They lost their intelligence the day they were blindfolded. eyes to initiate them into Masonic mysteries.

When we name the Jews, we are not thinking at all of the Orthodox Jews before Christ. These people were... turned to see fulfilled in Jesus, the son of David and of the Virgin Mary, all the prophecies, types and symbols of messianic of the Old Testament, and gathered in him all the gifts of Wisdom, Knowledge, and Omnipotence divine. We are talking about heretical Jews and the sect Kabbalistic, Talmudic, and Pharisaic, whose origins go back to the time of Babylonian captivity-nienne, whose tenacious branches survive to our days, and whose leaders constitute what is called the Fallen synagogue.

Hiram is the personification of the Jewish people and the Synagogue. Fallen fool. It is the synagogue that builds its temple national, under the figure of Solomon's Temple, Solomon being the representative of the King of Judah, called today the "Prince of Exile," and Sadoc, the representative of the Great Priest, known today as the "Patriarch".

The three enemies who killed Hiram interrupted the construction of the Temple involves: the Christian Church, the State Christian and the Christian Family. The three saviors are the Kabbalah, the Templars, and Freemasonry. The "Widow" is the synagogue, and the "Children of the Widow" are the children of Israel scattered throughout the world and affiliates of lodges. The Jew is the quintessential Man; Humanity, the Jewish people and the Freemasons.

The persecution of Hiram, which culminated in his murder, symbolizes... read the preparation of the kingdom of Christ which is accomplished by The establishment of the Church and the fall of the Synagogue. The search for Hiram's body signifies the efforts of the Jews to overthrow the Church and restore the fallen Synagogue, the Kabbalistic-Talmudic Synagogue. The Discovery of the Body Hiram's death foreshadows the restoration of the Jewish monarchy, The Kether-Malkuth of Esther and Mordecai. Death atrocious to which the three assassins of Hiram were condemned is the punishment reserved for Christian kings, for the Catholic clergy-lique and to the nobility of Christian nations; – in a The word is the extinction of Christianity by fire and sword.

262 SENSE OF THE LEGEND INCREASED

Solomon does indeed mean the King of Israel, but the ortho- king doxe; the fallen Synagogue needs a kabbalistic king. This explains everything that is said in the legend of the king Solomon, his participation in the murder of Hiram, and his final conversion to the worship of Moloch, the Fire God.

Balkis is the people to whom the King offers his love, but who, in the end, allies himself with Hiram. The master craftsmen, companions and apprentices, commanded by Hiram and including Its Kabbalistic symbols are the Freemasons, and, behind them, the populace always ready to follow their impulse and their direction. Eminently Jewish and hateful are the reprimands Balkis's request to Solomon for having torn out the venerable vine planted by Noah, and the prediction of infamous crucifixion of the last of his race.

The temple is the universal kingdom of the Jews, extending from East to West and South to North under the vault of the firmament. The twelve columns are the twelve tribes of Israel. Columns J and B are no longer Jakin and Boaz, but Japheth and Benjamin, the two faithful tribes; the other ten columns symbolize the ten lost tribes. The cord at twelve nodes intertwining the twelve columns, begins at the a serrated tassel attached to the pillar of Judah and ends a low serrated tassel attached to Benjamin's column. Pomegranates are the emblem of fertility. of the children of Israel. The middle room and the tree of middle signify the Supreme Synagogue, or the Chiefs of the islands working under the presidency of the Prince of Exile.

Masonic tools, hammer, square, etc., symbolize they are using the multifaceted action of the Synagogue to arrive at His goal, Kether-Malkuth.

The history of the Jews is represented in the 15th degree, Jecheva-Link of the East or of the Sword, by Cyrus, restoring freedom to captives and granting to Zerubbabel, aged seventy, the permission to rebuild the temple; in the 16th year, the Prince of

AND MALONIC SYMBOLES 263

Jerusalem, by Darius, ordering the Samaritans to submit to the Israelites; and at the 17th degree, the Knight from the East or the West, by the Jews uniting with the Gnostics, Johannites, and Templars. At the 18th degree, The Rosicrucians celebrate Jewish Passover in mockery of the Passion of Jesus Christ. This is primarily where the hatred The Jewish woman allows herself all possible sacrileges against the divine Savior. In the following grades, one sketches on a grand scale features the desired kingdom of the Jews in the form of the Jerusalem Heavenly peace with its Grand Pontiff (19th degree); its Grand Patriarch (20th degree); his Head of the Tabernacle (23rd degree); his Prince of the Tabernacle (24th degree) and his Sovereign Commander of the Temple (27th degree).

9. Philosophical concept of the Masonic fable.

Philosophy says, in other words, what the Theology and mythology. She reduces their characters to inanimate beings or pure concepts. She enjoys depersonalizing through abstract ideas what is often is a living being or an individual.

It will therefore suffice for us to give to the Holy King and to the Holy Matron and in columns J and B, the names of Spirit and of Matter, or, if you prefer, active energy and substance passive, or even of the masculine principle and spontaneous and of Feminine and receptive principle; or of Force and Matter, etc. Summer. That's pure pantheism.

The "Three Enemies" Opposing Development of the active ingredient of intelligent, are the absence of life, of form and movement in matter. The "three sans-veurs" of the life-giving spirit are Intelligence and Will, and the driving force.

In order to avoid the need to recognize a personal God, pantheism denies creation ex nihilo, confusing always with unreasonable obstinacy the emanation of beings of nothingness, which is certainly an absurdity, with their creation from nothingness effected by the omnipotence of the eternal Being. Pantheists prefer to admit the absurd-

264 SENSES TENFOLD OR THE LEGEND

the identity of an eternal and temporal Being, infinite and finite, immortal and mortal, divine and non-divine, rather than to admit the existence of a Deity, to whom they will have to report the deliberate error with all its disastrous consequences.

The Temple that is being built under their auspices is, according to their philosophy, the Temple of Wisdom. Hiram who... built is an emblem of the wise man, belonging to the race of the children of Wisdom or Philosophy. Men who, by imitating the qualities of matter, oppose to the construction of the Temple of Wisdom, are those who lack intelligence, willpower, or industry; the superstitious, the fanatics and the ignorant; while the avengers and friends of Hiram are the souls of the elite, the intelligent, the virtuous, and the resolute. All of them. The emblems of Freemasonry are easily left to be explained by following these general ideas. The eye in the triangle represents the intelligence of the mind; the blazing star and other symbols of the same kind denote the union of the mind with matter; the mallet and the trowel, the activity of Hiram; the sword, his resolve to defend his work; the phoenix, the constant renewal of nature; the serpent in a circle, the eternity of the world: consuming itself, it is the primitive principle; eaten, the passive principle; Hiram, the principle of intelligence and benevolent, Adonai, the unintelligent principle and malicious, etc., etc... Readers will surely appreciate those...

they can fill in the gaps in this brief presentation.

10. Theological meaning of the story of Eblis and Hiram.

In searching for the theological meaning of the story of Hiram and of Eblis, we do not want to speak of Christian theology—yours, but from Masonic or rather Kabbalah— theologic listic. We must therefore go back to the source itself, to the Kabbalah, to establish this meaning with authority.

From the Ensoph, who is the eternal, inscrutable Being, emanates Everything that has been, is, and will be. Its first manifestation is Kether, the Crown of the ten Sephiroth, "the principle of all the principles, the mysterious wisdom, the crown of

AND MASONIC SYMDOLES 265

"The very highest thing, the crown of crowns."

It represents the Infinite distinguished from the finite, Being in itself, named in Holy Scripture Ehyhé, Ego sum; she is the primitive point or point par excellence. Before I ph. the radiant The light of Kether is nothing but darkness.

From the heart of this Kether, this absolute unity, emerge In parallel, two principles, one male or active, Khokhma, Wisdom; the other passive or female, Binah, Intelligence. Wisdom is also called the Father, because she is said to have engendered all things; intelligence is the Mother, thus that it is written: "You shall call Intelligence by the name of mother i, »

From their mysterious and eternal union comes a Son who, taking on the features of both his father and his mother, bears witness to them both: it is knowledge or Science, Dajath? This does not constitute a Sephirah special.

In this triad Kether, Khokhma, and Binah, we do not We can't find the three friends of the good principle, because that these avenging and redeeming friends assume the perpetuation— Treatment of the murder of the good principle. However, in the system In Kabbalah, there is no opposing principle, neither to the Ensoph nor to the Crown, unless one says that, through concentration From every being in the Crown, its opposite is born of itself: the Abyss. This assumption seems correct to us, although we we have not found it affirmed anywhere.

After the description of the world of emanation, that is to say—

Of the ten Sephiroth, Kabbalah teaches the existence of the world of creation, inhabited by a single angel, the Meta-throne, so called because it is located immediately at the-beneath the throne of God, represented by Adam Kadmon. has under his command myriads of spirits that the Kabbalah has divided into ten categories, constituted the third world, that of Formation. The Metatron, with its ten categories

1. Proverbs, 15, 3.
2. Franck, p. 140.

266 TEN-TIMES MEANING OF THE LEGEND

of spirits, is the second series of eleven with which we We've already met.

Samael, the Angel of Desolation (Hebrew Sammah, desolation tioni), the supreme leader of the world, finds himself opposed to the Me-tatron.

The first three demons under the name of Sa-Maël (Eblis) respond to the first three good Spirits subject to Metatron. The first two demons are the Tohu (the Formless) and Bohu (the Unorganized), that is to say the ab-the absence of any visible form and organization; the third is Khoschek (darkness) which at the beginning-ment covered the face of Thehom (Vabimo).

The Abyss (in Greek, Bythos), the Tohu and the Bohu, that's what Kabbalistic theology: the three enemies of the Light divine. They prevent it from developing and hastening the Temple of the Visible Universe, Olam Asia, the world of the Manufacturing. But they are defeated by the three avengers and Friends of Metatron, the first three good Spirits.

There is no doubt about the identity of Samael, of Diabo-Los and Eblis are the Hebrew, Greek, and Muslim names. of the same Prince of Darkness. H also calls himself the Angel of the Light; this is explained by the fact that he is the Father of lies.

Hiram, in the theological sense of the Masonic narrative-nique, is the representative of all men who work-fought under the direction of the Prince of Darkness, whose name he is Eblis, Lucifer or Angel of Tunnière.

There is no need to elaborate further on the theological parallel.

41. Kabbalistic idea of the Masonic myth.

The Jews did not implement their doctrines.
secrets of Freemasonry, nor ever published on this subject Their political program. All we can, therefore To do this is to conjecture its content based on the theories of Kabbalah and the Talmud. But such an ou-

4. Ps. xxv, 19,

BT OF MASONIC SYMBOLS 267

Since vrage is not of great practical value, it
It will suffice to indicate its main features.

Adam Kadmon, the quintessential man, is the ideal Jew.
his divine idea and the archetype of the historical Jew. Now, pnisthat the Ensoph reproduces itself in different worlds, and reveals in temporal beings who bear his image, the
A historical Jew must strive to resemble as perfectly as possible possible to its divine prototype.

Believing himself endowed with intelligence and wisdom, superior to those of the Goyim, or nations outside and to-beneath his own, the Jew also believes himself superior to them,
In matters of grace, justice, and beauty: according to the Kabbalah,
He comes from the Holy King, whose essence these attributes are.
Jl is also convinced of his superiority in terms of strength and Your Majesty. Does it not rightfully belong to her, from the Holy Matron?
The eternal source of his eminently privileged nation? The
The souls of the Jews have the privilege of being a part of God same; they are of the substance of God, in the same way that a son is of the substance of his father. That is why
A Jewish soul is dearer and more pleasing to God than all the souls of the other peoples of the earth; for the souls
Some of these come from the devil and are like souls.
to those of animals and brutes 1. Jews alone are
Are men and other nations merely a variety of animals?

Being of such a noble and elevated nature, which carries within it the expression of the named Sephiroth, the Jew is entitled to both Sephiroth Kether-Malkuth, with the royal diadem: the Crown on his head and the Kingdom under his feet. "God gave all power to the Jews over the property and blood of all the peoples." The Talmud draws the logical conclusions of this thesis and allows Jews to steal, exploit, to kill Christians as they wish, and they may be able to. The Freemasonry, which is their tool, is therefore a means legitimate to achieve this goal, and it serves as his instrument

f. Rohling, The Jew according to the Talmud, p. 91.

2. Ibid., p. 405.

3. Ibid., book LI, chap. 1 to vin.

268 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

main for achieving reproduction on land of the primitive and ideal Ilomme that the Kabbalah places in the sky.

As we can see, Hiram is the ideal Juil of the Kabbalah. If the first attempt to place him on the throne of the earth
It will not succeed if the revolution that should lead to it does not come to fruition.
in time, than a defeat and a disaster for the
The Jewish people will see in it only an imitation of these "creations" who failed because Dicu hadn't gone down with them to remain there." These aborted creations are symbolized by the seven kings of Edom who preceded the kings of Israel!
The Kabbalah links the fall of these kings of Edom to the belief in a kind of revolution in the invisible world of "Divine Femanation?".

Here is a text from the Kabbalah expressing this idea:
"Before the Ancient of the Ancients, the most hidden one"
Among the hidden things, the forms of kings were prepared and
The first diadems had no limit or end. H se
He then began to sculpt these forms and trace them in his own substance. H spread a veil before himself, and it was daus this veil that he sculpted for these kings, that he traced their boundaries and their forms; but they could not subsist. That is why as it is written: These are the kings who reigned in the land of Edom before a king reigned over the children of Israel, He
This refers to the early kings and early Israel (ideal, celestial, (intelligible). All the kings thus formed had their names, but they could not subsist, until he (the Elder) descended upon them and veiled herself before them.⁵

The earthly world being formed in the image of the celestial world and the Jew in the image of Adem-Kadmon, who was not crowned that after all the previous revolutions (after the kings) of Edom), the Jew will never be discouraged by defeats and by the failure of the revolutions that he will have undoneborn; he will still hope, he will always hope that one hour will come, Jui bringing the Kether-Malkuth, and making of him

1. Genes., xxxvi, 81-40,

2. Franck, The Kabbalah, p. 153.
3. Ibid., p. 154.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 269

A successful and perfect imitation of Adam Kadmon. Hiram will always be resurrected until the moment when his assassins se-annihilated,

That religions, states, and civil societies of Edomites, or non-Jews, pass by like the three bad companions; let them inflict death upon him, – always alone-apparent, – he will always find his three Savors, his philosophy, his laws and his allies – whether Gnostics, or Manicheans, whether Templars, Freemasons, or socialists lists, etc., etc..., he will always start the construction again. of the temple, until it was completed and became an image perfect from the sky.

The illuminated column J represents the Holy King, and the column obscure B, the holy Matron; the pomegranates, the numerous fruits of their union; the sacred vault, the Ensoph; the luminous triangle, above the Venerable's throne, the three higher Sephiroth or the Great Architect of the universe towards; the sun and the moon at its sides represent once of plus the Holy King and the Holy Queen; the double triangle intertwined, the union of these two holy figures; the triple interlaced triangle, the three triads of the archetypal Man. The blazing five-pointed star with the letter G (gene-ration) in the middle again depicts the union of the Holy King and of the Matron; according to another interpretation, this star flamboyant, which has ten angles, represents the ten Sephiroth, five sharp and masculine angles and five angles obtuse and feminine. The flaming sword represents the emanation of the generative energy of the divine architect. The mysterious scale-The rieuse represents the seven lower Sephiroth by the-which soul descends to incarnate, and by which means it goes back to the death of the body, after its transmigrations, Towards its source, Intelligence. The Tau and the Teutonic cross figure the generating force of the Great Architect of the Uni-towards, either in the three or in the four worlds, the Beriah's world (Creation) is frequently omitted, because that it is inhabited only by the angel Meattron. The pavement Mosaic is the symbol of the two great eternal divisions of Light or Spirit and of Darkness or Ma-

The lyre of Apollo represents the harmony between the seven
The lower Sephiroth, between the seven planets that are part of it an image, at between the emanations of Ensoph in general.
The crown on Masonic jewelry is the symbol of the first Sephirah; the circle and the serpent biting its
The tail is that of the Ensoph. The developed snake is The Ensoph revealing itself in the universe. The brazen serpent is the great architect of the Universe enthroned upon the phallus, the emblem of its generative power. The Pelian nourished-jump or three or seven small signs again or the Ensoph don-giving his life to the three Sephiroth, or the Architect of the Universe giving it to the seven Sephiroth inferior;
Finally, the Phoenix rising from the flames is the same Ensoph renewing itself eternally.

Meanwhile, the Temple had only three windows, visible on the table of the lodge, because, "by a Kabbalistic process-tick, it is demonstrated that the name of God includes all the sides of the universe, with the exception of the North, reserved for
"wicked as a place of expiation." "At the end of time
This aspect, like the others, will fall under the ineffable name.
Hell will disappear; there will be no more punishments, nor trials, nor guilty parties. Life will be an eternal celebration, a

the evil one, the serpent venomous one named Samael – God of Poison – we retrans-fers the first half, which means poison; the second

"Sabbath without end." From the name of the archon is this the common name of all angels!

When the construction of the Temple is completed, that's all
The mystery explained – Parasch Kol – (password of the 32nd degree), eternity will be restored. The wax serpent will have swallowed the tip of its tail, which will have served to feed its body, the tail itself, and will still serve to nourish it laugh, once, a hundred times, an infinite number of times, in all the centuries upon centuries! Aronos will swallow his children again, and Brahme VUniverse, like the spider spinning its threads and the Reusorhe!... Disappointment! Fraud! Lies!

4. Franck, Kabbalah, p. 162, note.

12. Diabolical explanation of the Masonic parable.

Of all the possible explanations of the allegorical fable—the risk recounted by Freemasonry to its followers, the more striking, the truest and at the same time the most fiercely audacious and openly sacrilegious is the exp-diabolical cation. How can one imagine oneself against the divine Majesty, an insolence bolder than this: He who All humanity worships Him as the one true God, He is the The eternal principle of Evil! He who is called Satan, the Devil, Eblis, the Serpent, the ancient Dragon, Fallen Angel, Lucifer is the eternal principle of Good! We are in the presence of the realization of the satanic program that The prophet Isaiah, by comparing Belshazzar to Lucifer, puts in the mouth of this haughty mind, who was the first to to rise up against God, their Creator. The prophet said "How did you fall from the sky, Lucifer, you who seemed—I know it's so bright in the East? Who said in your heart: I I will monk to the cycle, I will establish my throne above the stars of God, I will sit upon the mountain of the covenant. Along the north wind, I will position myself above the clouds higher, and I shall be like the Most High.

Eblis, a Muslim name equivalent to Diabolos, is the The supreme deity of Masonic myth. He is God. the principle of Good, friend of mankind, the adversary and the Martyr of Jehovah Adonat. This one, our Lord, is the Evil God, the principle of Evil, the enemy of man.

Eblis presents himself as the equal of Adonai and as a being existing for all eternity. He compares himself to the phoenix, which fire always rejuvenates itself anew: fire is good its element, but it bruises it rather than revives it. He calls himself the Angel of Light, the Fire God, Intelligence, Wisdom, Beauty, Strength, the Great Architect of The Universe, it even calls itself Jehovah. It is in reality Eblis, the Slanderer: his entire work consists of lying—dreams and disappointments. He was once the Angel of Light,

1. Isaiah, 14:14.

272 SENSE INCREASED BY THE LEGEND

Lucifer; today, although he still remembers the name, it is no longer so in the same sense of the word; the light on—His natural light is taken from him; he has nothing left but his light natural, strong enough, surely, to deceive the poor Human intelligence, the smallest, according to Saint Tho—mas, of all created intelligences. He is the God-Fire, according to the common expression of ancient religions pagans; the parody of the Holy Spirit which is the divine Fire of the Love uniting God the Father and God the Son. Eblis is The intelligence of Hermes Trismegistus; he is also the Wisdom, the Brahmin, and the Strength of the Kabbalah. He mimics the Holy Trinity, whose Father begot, through intelligence, the Eternal Son, his image, his splendor, his beauty, and whose Father and Son produce the Holy Spirit, their love communion of their Force. Eblis is not the creator of the universe; He denies the possibility of creation, knowing full well, moreover that his denial is absurd: he calls himself the Great Architect, a designer of the Universe, an architect who does not create his materials but merely arranging them in a pre-Designed by him. The order preconceived by this great architect Disorder in the kingdom of God is diabolical. Finally, Eblis is also called Jehovah, or, by abbreviation, Jao, Jehovah, because he is in reality what that name means, the being par excellence, but because it arrogates to itself this name in order to be able to better deceive men in the short term seen as a sign of ill will.

The temple erected by Satan in honor of Jehovah, that is to say, of Satan himself, and to whose construction Hiram, a man bewitched by his own deceptions, is employed, is not the temple that Solomon, the former king of the Jews, has built in honor of the true Jehovah with the materials and the treasures prepared by David his father. The true Jehovah is for, Satan a "God jealous of the genius communicated to Cain by Eblis, "an unjust God who drowned thousands of "Bound men in the waters of the flood!" David was not to him.

4. Léo Taxil, II, p. 101,

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 273

that a "debauched" king and Solomon who had contributed to Hiram's murder, only regained his esteem in his old age, while "he converted and burned incense at "Moloch, the Genius of Fire." The Temple of the Great Architect of the Universe, which Hiram built for him, is the Kingdom of Satan on the earth.

Hiram is the representative of every man of the race of Eblis, the descendant of Cain, the fratricide; of Lamech, the bigamist; the Tubal-cains and Lots, the incestuous ones; and he is the ancestor of the Judases, the traitor; of the Jews, the deicides; of the Gnostics, Ophites, Manicheans, Albigensians, of the Templars and Freemasons, his maneuvers. He is even the representative of Eblis, of Satan, who presents himself as God. At the 33rd degree, the President teaches the recipient: "At the 13th degree, the word of Master, the emblem of regeneration-nature's ration, is revealed to you as also being the Name of the First Cause 1.

If Eblis the Serpent impregnated Eve to make her give birth Cain, it is not in a material sense that we must understand him-To take; that would be absurd; but in a spiritual sense. The race of Eblis are the men who are enemies of God, the friends of the Enemy of God.

Iliram's three assassins are: Superstition, name-Mec also Fanaticism or Lies, that is to say religion; Mosaic law is above all Christianity; Tyranny, also called Ambition, that is to say the governments or Just, religious kings, and especially Christian kings; etc. Avarice, also called Greed or Ignorance, that is to say the state, the family, and property well-ordered on the basis of Christianity.

The murder of Iiram is the establishment within humanity of the religious, civil, domestic, and moral order. Your religion revealed, including within itself the entire desired order of God is the principal murderer of the salanique power over the earth. Mosaic law, having been only a preparation for the

1. P. Rosen, p. 268.

18

274 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

Christianity hardly enters the army of the enemy of Eblis, but the Christian religion is his arch-enemy Tal, the infamous one who must be crushed at all costs.

The three avengers CHiram are: the true superstition which includes atheism, pantheism, heresies, the Magic, sorcery; the true tyranny, let it present itself in monarchical, aristocratic, or democratic form cracy; and the meadow appears of usurpers, of usurers and Jews. Formed into a society, these three friends from Eblis... pellent: Freemasonry, the clearest expression of the alliance between the Fallen Angel, the Fallen Synagogue and a Fallen Christian religious order.

To be convinced of the point we have just made, we only needs to read the instructions given to the recipient of the 33rd degree!: "Before reviewing the army corps which the Scottish Rite has at its disposal for the all-out fight against the enemies of Humanity (understand: of the Franc-Mn-nonsense or Jews); before revealing the Secret to you supreme (understand: Ja Demonolätrie) which is our strength and makes Freemasonry eternal (as is the government- (Satan's deception), I must ask you, Brother, never to deviate from two essential principles, on which it rests The entire Masonic organization. The first principle is that power comes from below (according to Jesus Christ, the power- (see, it comes from above!) and that it is delegated by means of the vote- democratic. The second principle is that, if you judge that a layperson cannot, intellectually speaking, rise above never quite reaching the level of the Knight Kadosh rank, one must You should be careful not to initiate him, even at the Apprentice level. because you will never be able to make a real Eco- bricklayer out of him "I know." – "The innocent Grand Master, as you sensed, is the man, the Man who is King and Master of the great nature (Jew or Lucifer), the man who is born innocent then- that he is born unconscious (deceitful substitution of a computer- man (related to the ideal man of Kabbalah). Our Grand Master

1. Paul Rosen, p. 178 seq.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 275

(who could not be just any ordinary man) was born (that is, created) innocent to be happy, to enjoy in their full enjoyment of all their rights without exception. But He fell victim to three assassins {that is to say the Holy Trinity), of three infamous people who raised obstacles formidable against his happiness and against his rights, and have ended up annihilating him (that is, plunging him into hell). These three infamous assassins are (in figures) the Law, Property, Religion... from which we have sworn to draw the most brilliant revenge: these are enemies to whom we have I swore an all-out war, a war without quarter, a war to death. Of these three infamous enemies, it is Religion that must be the constant concern of our deadly attacks; because a people has never survived its religion, and because that it is by killing Religion that we will have our Thank you, and the Law and Property; because it is established- sant on the corpses of these assassins the Masonic Religion- Masonic Law, Masonic Property, that We will be able to regenerate society. And, like all our Masonic secrets are impenetrably hidden beneath SYMBOLS, those of the highest rank you have attained are hidden within the symbol of our rank. The Eagle two-headed (one white: Spirit or Lucifer, Pautre) black: Matter or God) commands wisdom, that is-meaning that you must put as much effort as possible on your side.

possible chances of success, so that you can then dedicate yourself effectively to the material realization of the dual currency:
Deus MEUMQUE jus: To all our rights! ORDO AB CHAO:
"Down with the enemies of Order!"

This fury and this mixture of lies and malice—
how can we explain these things other than through hatred?
unquenched and the boiling rage of this Angel of Light who dwells in the fire and whom we call Lucifer?
He was the one who inspired these words, the latest revelations.
of the highest degree of Freemasonry!

1. Paul Rosen, p. 296,

276 TENFOLD MEANING OF THE LEGEND

It is important to be convinced that the true mystery of France—
Freemasonry is not expressly revealed within the framework of the 33 degrees, by what she calls "Our leaders". In the Ritual of the Master of Brother Ragon, officially recognized edition naked, it is said: "No known rank ensigns or reveals The Truth; only, each one thins the veil. The ranks practices up to this day have produced masons, not masons.
simple initiates. The secret of Freemasonry is, by its nature itself, inviolable; for the mason who knows it does not He may have guessed it. He discovered it by associating with lodges educated, by observing, comparing, judging.
Once he had discovered this secret, he kept it to himself.
"For sure, for himself."

13. The Two Standards,

Since Kabbalah and the Talmud originated in Babylon,
It is remarkable that, in his meditation "on the two Standards", Saint Ignatius arranges the forces of the kingdom of Hell under the scepter of the "Prince of this world?" seated on his throne, in the middle of a vast plain beside Baby-lone; while the army of the kingdom of heaven, sons the dragon—
The skin of Our Lord Jesus Christ is found in a plain near Jerusalem. It invites us to ask for the thanks to discovering and avoiding Lucifer's traps, and to
To know well and to imitate the virtues of Jesus Christ. In-Next, he presents us with the Prince of the Damned, in the plains of Babylon (which means Confusion), on a throne of fire, its element, surrounded by thick smoke, that is—that is to say, lies, allegories, and dazzling scenery

deceitful, spreading terror around the town by the defamation hideous moth-eaten features (see Baphomet!) and his eyes Terrible (hear the cries of vengeance in the boxes)!

Secondly, Saint Ignatius shows us around Lucifer the innumerable madness of his followers alongside his

4. Léo Taxil, Mystères, p. 150.

2. John, 11:31.

AND MASONIC SYMBOLS 277

ministers. There are gathered the sinners of all the centuries (from Cain to the Communards, to the Socialists) Germans, Russian Nihilists, Italian Luciferians); There are men enslaved by passions, the proud ones the ambitious (who covet supreme power in the government of the world); the plunderers of other people's property (high finance and large deceptive corporations); the shameless (the numerous adoption lodges, the Harms of the Freemason brothers); the homicides (the Carbonari and other Freemasonry affiliates), and... The design Lucifer's goal is to seduce all of humankind, by the establishment of the universal Republic governed by the golden gavel of the Supreme Chief of Freemasonry, and after seducing him, to draw him into his terrifying evil-hour, – not to procure delights for him in his element of fen, but to take revenge on him, the creature of Dicu, of the eternal punishment inflicted upon him by the divine justice. This vengeance of Lucifer will be the just reward–thinks of the apostasy of those who "loved the darkness than light, because their works were "Bad!"

Let us listen again in spirit to Lucifer addressing his minions. nisters, ordering them to lay traps on all sides to men, to destroy them. He teaches them his tricks. and its temptations: how, first of all, it takes souls by the love of wealth (to receive assistance, one must be a Freemason!), and then how he inspires their ambition (to achieve (To be able, one must enter the lodge!)), and finally pride, the bottomless abyss, from which all vices spring like their source. How many fools, idiots, and careless people, Alas! Both sexes are caught every day in These traps! How many blindly fall into them (their eyes first aroused, and then dazzled by the mason lycopodium–(nice), how many, not very happy to have let themselves be seduced, They are still working to seduce their brothers!

1. Jean, ur, 19,

278 SENSE TENFOLD DR THE MASONIC LEGEND

This banner of Lucifer, thus represented by Saint Isn't Ignatius a perfect image of a Freemason?
Nonsense? And isn't the standard of our King Jesus Christ...
a striking image of the Christian Church?

In a pleasant plain, near Jerusalem, city of Saints, a vision of peace, an emblem of heaven, there, not on a throne, but humbly conversing with his well-Beloved, Our Lord is found, drawing hearts by the beauty and the charm of her gaze, – of truth and of virtues which he teaches, – by the peace and consolations which he operates in chosen souls. Around him are gathered his disciples and apostles of all times, the patriarchs ehes, the prophets, the martyrs, the penitents, the virgins;... there, not a single one of the vices, not a single one of the weaknesses that dishonor humanity;... there, on the contrary, all virtues pushed to the point of heroism. What then is the purpose of Our divine King? The one to bring all men back to the virtue, and through virtue to the happiness of the time and to the glory of eternity. Thus, he wants his apostles to go throughout the world to preach the Gospel, to inspire souls
First, detachment from wealth, and then humility.
Source of all virtues, see the success of the apostolate
Christian: how many sinners have been converted, and thankfully so.
snatched from hell; how many disciples won over to the holy poverty and evangelical immorality; how many new apostles trained for the salvation of souls and the glory of God!

BOOK VI

INTERPRETATION OF THE 55 DEGREES

OF THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE

CHAPTER ONE

DIVISION OF 33 DEGREES INTO THREE ELEVENS

1. The feigned divisions of the 33 degrees.

The efforts made by Freemasonry to mislead the inquisitive stares of both followers and outsiders are as ingenious as they are numerous. Besides the sheer number of In interpreting the symbols, we observe a number considerable number of different Rites and divisions of their degrees.

The Scottish Rite of Heredom is composed of 25 degrees, divided into 7 classes. The first class has 3 grades, the The second 5 and the third 3: in all ounces. The fourth The class also has 3 grades, the fifth 5 ct the sixth 3: once again eleven times. The third eleven has just beginning; for the seventh and final class again counts 3 degrees; but the eighth class, at 5 degrees, and the ninth, at 3, were never added to it.

The York Rite is composed of 30 degrees divided into 4 series: the first series, called initiation, has 3 degrees; the second, called Royal Arch, 4; and the third, called Royal-Master, also 4; in all, once, The fourth series, called the Chivalry, has 19 degrees. Its last three grades play the same role as the 3 higher grades of the Ancient Scottish Rite accepted.

The Rite of Zinnendorf, also called the Johannite Rite, sup- rewards intermediate ranks of little importance, but he retains the principal ranks of the Rear Lodges. He is composed of 7 degrees in 3 classes.

280 INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

The Eclectic Rite has only 5 degrees: the three pre- first, of Apprentice, of Journeyman and of Master, and both principal ranks of the Rear Lodges, corresponding to those of the Rosicrucians and of Kadosh.

The Swedish Academy is composed of 12 divided grades in 4 classes. A sculptor brother may be invested with the 12th degree, the Grand Master of the Order.

The Rite of Misraïm, with 90 degrees, is divided into 33 degrees. symbolic, 33 philosophical degrees, 11 mystical degrees ticks and finally 13 cabalistic grades. We only do lightly touching on the mystery of the satanic number Thirteen. The last thirteen degrees of the Rite of Misraïm con- begin with the rank of "Doctor of the Sacred Fire," which indicates their nature. The 82nd degree Knight of Sadah Re- doubtful, it gives a glimpse into who this "Almighty Redou-" is.

table". The 83rd degree, "Sublime Knight Theosophist", demonstrates the origin of the modern sect of Theosophists. Finally, to be brief, the 86th degree, "Sublime Master of "The Lumincux ring" suggests, even to the uninitiated, Magic pair in which the initiates of this rite move monstrucux.

The French Rite, just like the Ancient Scottish Rite Accepted, it comprises 33 degrees; only, a certain number These degrees are conferred by communication, that is to say- It's said without proof. It's an excellent way to hide The true meaning of the ranks. Our exhibition of the 33 ranks will demonstrate the wisdom of the Order in allowing certain brothers, unworthy of the true mysteries, to the very last degrees whose true importance they never learn. The 33 degrees of the French Rite are divided into four series; the The first comprises 3 symbolic grades; the second, 15 patrilineal degrees; the third, 12 philosophical degrees physics, and the fourth, the 3 higher grades. We'll see later that it's not just the first 3 ranks which have the character of symbolic ranks; that the 12 philosophical degrees are something else entirely philosophical degrees; and that this division had four The series exists solely to mask the real division of the three times eleven degrees of true Freemasonry.

OF THE ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE 281

The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite has 33 degrees Orthodox; but the teaching given by the "minister of State" to the recipient of the 33rd degree still feigns a tri-arbitrary division of the 33 degrees; it is divided into teaching-primary education, comprising the first 3 grades; teaching secondary genation, embracing 15 degrees, ctensification superior, extending to the last 15 degrees'.

The "President" of the grade completes this teaching by informing the recipient that the first 6 degrees are dedicated to answering the question: What What are man's duties towards himself? – that the The following 19 degrees answer the question: What are the What are man's duties towards his fellow men? – and what about the The last 8 degrees should elucidate the question: What are What are a man's duties towards his country? "Six duties are nineteen relate to the isolated man, nineteen to the isolated social man, and eight to the social man in society?, »

The disappointment of its own members never ends, for the Freemasonry, not even at the 33rd degree!

The true division of the 33 degrees into three elevens is not found that in the most secret Instructions outside of the 33 grades, and "in the symbols under which the true Masonic secrets are impenetrably hidden.

2. The true division of the 33 degrees into three elevens.

Paul Rosen publishes in his book, The Social Enemy, in the face of facing, the instruction given to General Garibaldi and that Given to HRH The Prince of Wales. Shameless sincerity the first is matched only by the brazen hypocrisy of the second one.

1, Paul Rosen, p. 254.

2, ibid., p. 286.

282 INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

Having only become aware of these documents after having elaborated the interpretation of the 33 grades given in the cha-
Next clown, we were happy to find in Ja first, in open language, what our research had discovered in the sense of the "impenetrable symbols".

Here is an excerpt from this piece to which we owe a the most brilliant lights emerging from the darkness of France masonry.

"Freemasonry, being nothing other than the Revolution"
in action, something other than a permanent conspiracy against political and religious despotism, Freemasonry did not adorn herself with these ridiculous decorations, at means by which princes and priests play in the society highlights the roles they have usurped and stolen.

"But the princes and priests could not defeat a an institution that is hostile to them and so formidable, have, at various times, had the perfidy to pass into the enemy camp, to become masons themselves and to introduce In Freemasonry, these customs, these formulas, these titles, cos absurd legends that were meant to distort the spirit of the institution tion, which distorted its tendencies, and which, instead of liberal and democratic doctrines seemed to favor religious and aristocratic principles.

"Our leaders, faced with this danger, tightened the links to the real members of this secret society via Excelthe ence which is masonry, and desiring to ascertain, if not the protection, or at least the tolerance of the powerful of this world, they allowed them to take part in Masonic activities which They only revealed to them what they wanted to reveal to them.

reveal. Seeing without flinching the transformed Freemasonry seemingly in a society, however insignificant it may be, of benevolence and charity from these powerful people of the earth
They thought they had the upper hand, our leaders let them declare-to find that Politics and Religion were completely foreign to Freemasonry.

"Therefore, Brother, you must submit and accept all these ridiculous absurdities that support our institution

OF THE ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE 283

tion the protective pavilion under which it can, accepted Everywhere, working in the shadows and in secret towards the Sublime Goal that it is destined to reach, because you must not In our Order, no rank reveals completely the Truth; he only thins the veil which the hiding place for curious eyes.

"For us, invested with supreme power, for us alone, it strips him entirely, and floods our intellect-Liability, our mind and our heart, it makes us know,
to see and feel that:

"Man is at once the Dicu, the Pontiff, and the King of himself.

"Herein lies the sublime secret, the key to all science, the sum-puts initiation into practice.

"Freemasonry, a perfect synthesis of everything that is human, therefore is God, the Pontiff and the King of Humanity manité.

"This explains its universality, its vitality and its power !

"As for us, the great leaders, we form the battalion" sacred to the Sublime Patriarch, who is in turn God, the Pontiff and the King of Freemasonry.

"There you go, Brother, the third triangle, the third triple truth that will give to your intelligence, to your mind and to your the heart, the ineffable happiness of absolute possession of the The unvarnished truth! The entire organization, from the functioning and teaching of the Order appears now in your eyes, Brother, radiant with light; and you Yes, you understand that all our teaching boils down to this. in this respect:

"To bring about the triumph of our Virtue, our Morality and of our Authority in all of Humanity.

"That's why our grades have a triple classification—cation, depending on whether they are called upon to fight what our implacable adversaries, what our mortal enemies, what our infamous persecutors, the clerics, dare to call their Virtue, their Morality and their Authority.

284 INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

"To combat their abject Virtue we have the grades of: 1st Apprentice; 2nd Journeyman; 3rd Master; 4th Master secret; 5. Perfect Master; 6. Intimate Secretary; 7. Provost and Judge; 8. Building Superintendent; 9. Elected One of the Nine; 10. Elected of the Fifteen; 11th Knight Elected; which allows us to admit to start a layman from the unconsciousness of the Apprentice until the Chosen Knight's mission to defend the Masonic virtue, for the crusade of Man, God of himself...

"To combat their vile morality, we have the grades: 12th Grand Master Architect; 13th Royal Arch; 14th Parfait Macou; 15th Knight of the East; 16th Prince of Jerusalem; 17th Knight of the East and West; 18th Rose-Cross; 19th Pontiff; 20th Venerable Grand Master; 21st Noachite; 22nd Royal Axe.

Finally, Brother, to combat their criminal Auto-rite, we have the Grades: 23rd Chief of the Tabernacle; 24th Prince of the Tabernacle; 25th Knight of the Serpent; 26th Trinitarian; 27th Commander of the Temple; 28th Prince adept; 29th Grand Scotsman; 30th Kadosh; 31st Grand In-Quaestor; 32nd Prince of the Royal Secret; 33rd Grand Inspector General.

The clerics, infamous murderers of humanity, oppose—They pose, you see, Brother, to our Virtue, to our Morality, to our Authority, their Property, their Religion and their Law, and these are the three mortal enemies of the Masonic race—The fight you will now have to wage as army commander:

"The Law, because it is not perfect harmony between The Rights of the Isolated Man and the Duties of Man Social in Society, Rights which are acquired by all of us in their

Integrity, duties which are only the immediate consequence the right of each of us to enjoy all our rights without being prevented by anyone;

"Property, paved with the fact that the Earth does not belong to persons and that its products belong to everyone, in the measuring the real needs for the well-being of each individual;

"Religion, because religions are nothing but..."

OF THE ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE 285

philosophical systems created by men of genius, systems that the peoples have adopted under express conditions that they will provide an added benefit to well-being them.

"Neither Law, nor Property, nor Religion, can therefore to impose themselves on man; and as they annihilate him by depriving him of his most precious rights, these are assassins-sins from which we have sworn to draw the most brilliant revenge; these are enemies to whom we have I swore an all-out war, a war without mercy, a war to dead,

"Of these three infamous enemies, it is Religion that must to be the constant preoccupation of your murderous attacks; because that a people has never survived its religion, and because It is by killing religion that we will have it at our mercy.
Law and Property; because it is by establishing on the
the corpses of these assassins, the Masonic Religion, the Law Masonic, Masonic Property, which we will have regenerated the Society...

"...Ruthlessly repels these fights to the death and to to excess, by all the means at your disposal-tion, such dynasty, such institution, such class of society, such political infinity, such governmental authority, such princely figure, such a striking individual, who, positioning themselves either as an opponent of the social revolution, or as defender of the Christian idea or society, would form thereby creating an obstacle or delay to completion of our social mission.

"This social mission that our Supreme Leader has given us entrusted to us, we are very close to having accomplished it.

"Since our God is neither substance, nor body, nor soul, neither creator, nor father, nor word, nor love, nor paraclete, nor redeemer, nor anything else, we have enslaved the Church to the power-secular sance and overturned the temporal power of the Pope in awaiting the overthrow of his spiritual power.

"As we are the builders of the new Temple of Humanity's happiness, and as for the cons-

286 INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

To destroy, one must begin by demolishing, by destroying the state. In today's society, we have eliminated religious education. We have abolished people's rights.

"After overthrowing the Pope's temporal power, our infamous and mortal enemy, with the help of Italy and of France, we will weaken France, the support of its spiritual power, through the cooperation of our power and, that of Germany.

"And a day will come when, after the complete sharing of Europe divided into two empires: the West German and the Russian From the East, Freemasonry will join them into one, with Rom - as the capital of the entire Universe.

"Our Supreme Leader will reign alone over the world, and seated on the steps of her throne, the Freemason will share with him the All-Powerful.

"So grand and dazzling is this supreme goal that we We have just made shine before your eyes; great and patient are the: labors and efforts necessary to achieve it.

"Now that you sit among the Chief Masters, Your work needs to increase in intensity; it's to help you specify their trends while simultaneously ensuring the island Their success and triumph, we will summarize them clearly for you, the Great Light of supreme initiation.

"You are your God, your Pontiff and your King of yourself."

"Your reason is the only rule of Truth, the only key to tg" science and politics.

"Your appetites and instincts are the only rule of Bietÿ," the only key to progress and happiness,

"You must understand and interpret as follows our-holy motto:

#]

"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity."

"Freedom, the all-powerful weapon with which we have has turned the world upside down, means:

"Independence without limits or restrictions, under deals with all kinds of authority,

"Independence of mind, which cannot be hindered by no revelation nor limited by any dogma.

OF THE ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE 287

"Independence of the will, which submits to no power, which recognizes neither King, nor Pope, nor Dicu.

"Independence of personality, which has broken all the chains that held her captive, physical chains and moral chains, chains of the earth and chains of heaven, for to achieve the independence of humankind, through its emancipation absolute and complete.

"It is with Liberty as a lever and the passions of humankind" hands as a point of leverage that we will forever overturn Kings and Priests, those implacable enemies of the genre human, more deadly to humanity than tigers are to the other animals.

"Equality, the all-powerful level with which we have transformed the world, means:

"Equalization of property rights, including human rights"
on the common land, as a citizen of a single and even world, as children of one and the same mother, are more ancient ct more sacred than all contracts and all the customs, and that, consequently, these rights must be...
These customs must be broken; they must be abolished.

"Equalization of wealth, through proportional balance" wages, through the complete and radical abolition of the right inheritance, through the expropriation of all the Companies financial, through appropriation to national solidarity of each people has banks, canals, transport, and insurance and mining.

"Equalization of individuals, through solidarity, through enjoyment" equal participation for everyone in their collective production. That's with Equality as leverage and human appetites as the point of leverage that we will make disappear forever the Aristocracies, the implacable executioner, the unscrupulous exploiter of humankind.

"Fraternity, the all-powerful promise with which
"We have established our power" means:

"Fraternity in Freemasonry, to constitute"
a state within a state with resources and a way of functioning independent of the state, unknown to the state.

288 INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES

s

"Fraternity within Freemasonry, to constitute a state above the state, with unity, a cosmopolitanism, a universality that makes her superior, a leader of the State.

"fraternity within Freemasonry, to constitute a state against the state, as long as the armed forces exist manents, instruments of oppression, principles of parasitism ism, an obstacle to any fraternization.

"It is with Fraternity as leverage and the hatreds of men-
Maines as a point of support that we will make disappear at Parasitism and armed repression, these scourges, have never unsatisfied, these fierce scarecrows of humankind.

"Brother, this is the end of your training as Leader."
of Freemasonry.

"Now recite with us our Supreme Oath:

"I swear to have no other homeland than the universal homeland-saddle.

"I swear to fight to the bitter end, always and everywhere," the border markers of nations, the border markers of fields, houses and workshops, and the boundary markers of the family.

"I swear to overthrow, sacrificing my life in the process, the boundary marker-border where humanicides have drawn with blood and the goat, the name of God.

"I swear to dedicate my entire existence to triumph"
indefinite progress and universal unity, and I declare to profess the denial of God and the soul.

"And now, Brother, let the Nation, the Religion and the Family are gone forever for you in the immen-City of the work of Freemasonry, come to our arm, most Powerful, most Illustrious and most Dear Brother, par-Tager with us, limitless authority and unbridled enjoyment limits that we exercise on Illuminati, »

These extracts are sufficient to give us our interpretation 33 degrees, an official confirmation.

Satan always reveals himself as a Dicu monkey.

In a true and highly mystical sense, the revelation

OF THE ANCIENT ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE 289

divine tells us: Vos dii estis et sacerdotium regale; " YOU are gods," and "a royal priesthood." Satan seizes from these texts and said to the man: "You are your God, your Pont-
"Tify and your King."

So here is the basic idea of the 33 degrees, divided into three elevens: "The Man-Dicu, the Flomme-Pontife, the Iomme-
"King," Man, led to his supreme essential dignity spiritual and temporal, the true or perfect Man and the go-perfect spiritual and temporal government. It is the embodiment-tion of Man in the Great Architect, in his Sacer-sweet and in his royalty.

These are the three sacraments of Baptism, Holy Orders and of the Confirmation in the kingdom of darkness, the counterin the manner of the three sacraments of the Church of God, which imrileaving an indelible mark.

1. Ps. xuv, 10. – John, x, 34. – Peter, 11, 9.

CHAPTER II

KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES SCOTTISH FIRST ELEVEN

4. The 10th Sephirah. The Kingdom. – The Apprentice,

The general idea outlined and the details of each Grade in particular must necessarily explain and correct themselves to mutually strengthen. So let us enter directly into the details that we know after the revelations made by Léo Taxil, Paul Rosen, and several other followers of Freemasonry Stupidity itself, like Ragon, Clavel, Carlile and others. We are content with the Kabbalistic interpretation, basis of other interpretations.

The vast Kingdom from which he wants to leave and above which must arise, to dominate him, the chosen "Man", the future Freemason, that is the profane world, uninitiated humanity, seated in the darkness of ignorance and subjected to tyranny Kings and Priests.

Kabbalah teaches that the raw material, from which the world was formed, is the En Kadmon, "non-being, in "in which there is no distinction, no mode of existence." Therefore, you cannot provide a password when you wants to become a "Man". The Scottish Rite does not have one. The French Rite is wrong to ask the Apprentices for a Word of passage. Tubalcain means nothing in passing from the world profane to a lodge of Apprentices.

The sacred word of the 1st degree is Boaz. Boaz means sta-

4. Franck, p. 161.

2. Boaz, who is often found, especially in English books, is An error.

Boaz was the name of David's great-grandfather. The column The one made by Hiram was called Boaz.

KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 291

stability, firmness, immobility; this is the character of matter passive.

For the most part, sacred words refer to the essence of Masonic degrees, and serve to give the basic idea.

By deviating from Holy Scripture, as it always does... days when she sees the usefulness, Freemasonry (or Elie Ashmole, who composed this degree in 1646) gave to the Boaz column a dark color, and to the Jakin column a resplendent color. The Boaz column represents the passive, material, feminine, evil principle, and the co-

Ionne Jakin, the active, spiritual, masculine, good principle.

The Boaz column is black, the other white: the white and
The juxtaposed blacks are the colors of Satan 1.

By giving the sacred word Boaz in its first degree, and to second, that of Jakin, which means Rectitude, Direction
The author of these degrees intended to symbolize, through these words, such as these two columns which must support the temple of Solomon, the two eternal principles that the Kabbalah teaches, matter and force, feminine and masculine principles, whose eternal example is represented by the Holy King and the Holy Queen or Matron.

We often talk about three pillars: Wisdom, Strength
And Beauty: so you have the main representatives of the three Kabbalistic Triads.

The recipient is therefore considered as matter
first still completely unformed, that is to say a Pro-Fene, the ceremony of his reception will signify that he is created a new man, a Kabbalistic Man, as The pagan is created, in the Christian Church, a child of God through baptism.

Given the anti-Christian nature of Freemasonry, we Should we expect the antithesis and a parody of the Christian baptism.

In the think tank, determination is taken to enter Freemasonry, like a man who

1. Léo Taxil, Mystères, p. 367.

292 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

He thought about it before getting baptized. The lodge in which 'the recipient will enter' is obviously an imitation of a Christian church: the columns, the sanctuary, the altar, the priest, the deacon and the subdeacon, represented by the Venerable and the two overseers, the Divinity in the A luminous triangle beneath the canopy, cte... The triangle luminous signifies the three higher Sephiroth, the Anti-God, the "Great Architect of the Universe," whose Sword flamboyant represents a powerful beam of light at the Venerable's disposition. The Triangle with the Sun and
The Moon is yet another representation of the Sephiroth.
Roth, a new trinity that explicitly includes all the other trinities. The three terms of this trinity are the centers of the three Trinityes already named: the Crown, among The metaphysical Sephiroth; Beauty, among the attributes morals, and Royalty (or rather the Foundation), among the attributes The lower Sephiroth. These three Sephiroth constitute what is called the middle column, because, in the figures represented all ten Sephiroth (see plate B) are placed in the center, one above the other, in the shape of a line right or column. The Crown is called the Ancient of Days, Beauty, the Holy King, and Royalty, the Queen, we have her Matron. "If Pune is compared to the Sun, the cave is compared to the Moon, because all the light it shines, it borrows from higher up, from the degree which is immediately above her*.

Where are the Freemasons to whom the Jews have ever belonged? given this explanation of the three lights they see in their dressing rooms?

The entire structure of the lodge is explained by its doctrines. Kabbalistic, Gnostic, Manichean, etc., and by the ordinary symbols of the lodge. You see the two there columns, representing the Holy King and the Matron, the two

4. See the plan in Léo Taxil's book: Zes Mystères de la Freemasonry, a work which we will cite in our explanations of this book VI, by simply giving the pages.

2, Franck, the Kubbal, p. 149.

pes 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 293

male and female forces, Spirit and matter, the two principals Examples of Good and Evil: Jachin, the Righteous, and Boaz, the Stability, officially explained by the principal authorities masonry blades, as signifying the Phallus and the Ktéis, or the Lingam and the Yoni. Above these columns Pomegranates, symbols of fertility, are found there. of the two generating forces and the large number of men chosen ones who will form the Kabbalistic Kingdom. Between the two columns you see the five degrees, or chords, qni unite the two columns. We have already given the meaning- nauseating fiction of the number five; it is the marital union between the Holy King and the Holy Queen, by which are pro- all worlds and in particular humanity; this Humanity is represented by the mosaic above of the five strings: the black stones are the individuals according to the sex of column B, and the white stones, of individuals males.

Upon receiving an Apprentice, column B is alone illuminated; because the first degree symbolizes matter alone. Upon receiving a Companion, the two columns are illuminated.

You can see between the two columns, at the height of the cha-piteaux, an open compass spanning an inverted square; this is the ordinary Masonic symbol of the pan-divinity theistic, of the generative Force united with passive Matter. To the left of column B is the rough stone, which is still to be formed, and to the right of column J the cube stone, A structure topped with a pyramid. These two stones signify either formless matter or formed matter, or the Tohu Bohu and the Universe, that is, profane Humanity and Humanity Kabbalized, that is, the profane government and the government from the lodge, summer...

There are still the sun and the moon, the mallet and the interlaced scissors and the perpendicular to the level, three other symbols of phallic worship.

The main emblem of this shameless cult is the apron Masonic which is common to the brothers and sisters of ma-cones. The Apprentice, who represents Matter, carries the bib, triangular in shape, raised; the Companion, who represents the Force, the lowered door; the feminine triangle has The point at the top, the masculine triangle at the bottom. How many Freemasons know the ignoble meaning of the bib Raising the bib when it's down? How many people don't know that they are are involved in the restored cult of the Phallus? How many Do they know the true meaning of the word work?

294 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The three windows through which sunlight enters Dicu, as explained above: there is no window on the northern side. The same idea is expressed by the three Stars of the lodge, the torchbearers near the orator and the two supervisors.

The cord having twelve knots, or love spells, which the serrated cup is named and ends above the two The columns of the lodge signify the link that binds the twelve tribes. of Israel; the two bushy streams symbolize the vitality of two tribes that have remained intact and unmixed with other human races, the modern Jews.

The Temple's vault, studded with stars, indicates the Temple that masonry intends to build, having the firmament for roof, el wétant something other than a general reign which must to embrace the whole universe – read Universal Republic, under the scepter of the Jews, "the Great Work", to which the Jews work with unbridled zeal and unwavering perseverance supernatural.

A late visitor to a lodge said to the Venerable:

"The Master of my lodge salutes you three times three." That is a kabbalistic salute in the name of the three Triads, which is equivalent "To 'Greetings in the peaceful unity of sacred numbers!'" He said also that in his lodge "temples are erected to virtue, etc." "They dig dungeons there for vice" (p. 34), which means that work is being done there towards the establishment of universal rule of [Freemasonry and the destruction of all other profane reign.

1. Léo Taxil, JI, 408.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 295

Before being received, the recipient must make a will. as if he were about to die to the world and enter into a new life. Indeed, Masonic baptism is an enlistment in a new kingdom, the Kingdom of Satan. To signify this new birth, the profane is stripped of everything he has on him, even his clothes comments, as much as circumstances allow. His eyes are covered with a "thick headband", and a rope around his neck to lead him: it is the symbol of his "do-absolute civility" and his "unwavering consistency," that is- that is to say, the complete abandonment of his judgment and his will their own, absolutely necessary to be able to lead it until- that at the ultimate degree of intellectual and moral slavery under the hard Judaic-diabolical scepter. Let us note immediately that even In the 33rd degree, the Masonic mask is not yet He raised his eyes and freedom was not yet restored to him. Beyond the 33 grades he will be able to see clearly, when he will have reached the ultimate degree of Luciferianism; and then, he It will no longer be possible for him, humanly speaking, to turn back. way. It will only be by a special, long grace of God, he will still be able to break free from these infernal chains. Tuxquelles, he voluntarily condemned himself. Without this se- Costs, he will surely be dragged into the Infernal Realm of Eblis, foreshadowed and begun in this world by the fran-Freemasonry, like the heavenly Kingdom of God, is pre-figured and begun in this world by the Catholic Church. The two baptisms, Masonic and Christian, are the the first step that man takes in this life towards his destiny eternal. It is therefore not without reason that the "Venerable" names the "Layman" who comes to request admission to the nocturnal order, a "Reckless" and a "Daring" (p. 35). It is true, the Venerable will say that destitution and pri- The composition of metals represents man in his state of nature. that the blindfold is the symbol of blindness, of ignorance France and superstition of Christian beliefs and customs yours; but we also know that the Father of Lies names Good and Evil, and Evil and Good. It is in this sense that it

296 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

We must also understand the many seemingly false statements moral and rational approach that the Venerable makes in the course of his instructions. The lie envelops the recipient, and symbolically he throws it into a "cave" from which he does not He knows neither depth nor darkness. For it is then that he is made to invoke "the Great Architect of the Universe", of which the Venerable gives here a pantheistic definition: "He is one and infinite; he exists by himself; he reveals himself in "everything and everywhere, and it is red" (p. 69), adding nevertheless, with a rare inconsistency, the prayer that "his empire expands"-as if the empire of the "Great All" could be diminished or extended by anyone or in Whatever it may be. It is therefore the Empire of Eblis, of which we will speak in the third degree.

On this prayer, the candidate "confides – the audacious – to the unknown hand that will guide his steps! » Indeed, this is not this criminally blind faith that the Church asks the faithful. The recipient, after three "journeys" The air purifier, the water purifier, and the FCU (Fuel Consumption Unit) are questioned in these terms: "Who goes there?" The three applicants, the two Wardens and the Worshipful Master, who strike him once, twice and three blows with a mallet on the shoulder, probably represent essentially the same Sephiroth through which the soul must return in the eternal Source from which she had come, that is to say the Sephiroth that constitute the Matron. If this explanation- The cation is too mystical, but it is nonetheless the only one plausible in the presence of Kabbalistic doctrine and the declaration of the Venerable, that belief in metempsychosis cose is line error.

The purifying ordeal of fire, which consists of enveloping the recipient three times in innocent flames of lycopodium, and the ordeal of shedding its blood, are quite clearly understand the commitment he is making. At the end- the Venerable gives an explanation, that of the red-hot iron. This is a fairly important point that we should note. He said: "Any non-Mason who becomes initiated into Freemasonry ceases to to belong to himself; it no longer belongs to him... » A seal laden with characteristics hieroglyphic inscriptions, after being reddened by fire, are applied to the body of every newly received brother and there prints an indelible mark. The sin- is immediately visible the doctrine of Christian teaching, that the sacrament of baptism imprints an indelible mark on the soul. If the Christian is marked by baptism with the character of a child of God, the A Freemason is branded with the character of a slave of Satan. But God alone can imprint an indefinable character on the soul. lebile. To assert that that of Freemasonry is equally indelible, it is a lie that can carry the recipient of despair. [initiation is indeed a pact implicit or explicit with the demon; but this pact – uh- fortunately for the disappointed and repentant Freemasons – perhaps always terminated. A statement that one renounces this commitment- A criminal act is sufficient to erase its legal value, and absolution from sin, given by a simple priest according to the Church laws, washes the soul of all defilement incurred by this reckless act.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 297

The charity that is asked of the recipient for a Poor widow and her children, is not destined for a poor woman; the "Widow" is the mother of Hiram, and his "children" are the "brothers" of Hiram; for at the 3rd degree one makes the question: "Why do you say: 'To me the children of the widow? – Answer. Because all the masons consider themselves- "They were like the brothers of Hiram, who was the son of a widow." We can therefore understand what the trunk of the Widow and the Masonic "benevolence".

In the Jewish sense, the Widow is Jerusalem or the Synagogue gogue.

The three steps, the three knocks, the age of three, the triple fraternal kiss, the drums, the cheers, etc..., remember- they relate to the three Sephiroth of the third Kabbalah Triad listic, because the Apprentice represents the material or the Saint Matrona, like the Companion the Holy King, and the Master of the First Triad...

1. Leo Taxil, II, p. 125. See III Kings, verse 14, "Hiram who was son of a widow from the tribe of Naphtali.

The recipient is solemnly informed of the content of the oath to be taken, and he is told that he must take it of his full freedom. The pact is therefore well concluded. part of the profane. In exchange, Freemasonry gives him "The Light." If it's a real light, the contract is bilateral; but if this "light" is merely a deception, The pact is essentially null and void and derisory. But what What kind of "light" is given to the uninitiated? Is it the light of the Faith? Certainly not. Materially, it's the light of the lyco- the suddenly inflamed and dazzling eyes of novices, freed from the blindfold that had covered them until this moment; spiritually, it is the sinister light of "The Angel of Light," of Lucifer. One is initiated into Ja dema- nolatry.

Is this a lawful, valid, honest contract? No.

The brothers' swords are all pointed towards the chest of the novice, then resembling the sun, from which emanates a circle of rays. It becomes an individual sun, a a finite imitation of Lucifer's supposedly infinite sun. This are the spiritual gatherings originating from all these individual suns duels that surround him and that were formed one after the other, according to the archetype, the Sun-God of ancient initiations. After receiving the "light," the recipient repeats his first oath, and swears, in addition, "to faithfully obey the The (unknown) leaders of the Order, in all that they... will order conformity and non-contrary to its secret laws", also unknown to the neophyte!

Freemasonry, as we know, blames the Jesuits for this that they swear blind obedience. The Jesuits, like the religious of the other Orders know their superiors ricuts; they swear obedience to them in all that is not contrary to God's law, which they know. They do not swear not a blind obedience; they have, by issuing the vow of religious obedience, eyes wide open, But those who falsely accuse them surrender guilty of swearing truly blind obedience repudi- directly to sound reason, to conscience, to honesty, prudence, and the simplest goodness. For- What is it that makes laypeople fall for? It's an oath illicit, invalid, which does not bind anyone in conscience, and that Anyone can rape without offending Dicu.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 299

Note also that this oath of blind obedience

west not contained in the first oath, sworn before, then immediately after the "illumination": this first The oath only binds one to silence and to love one's brothers; the second, this abominable oath of blind obedience, this it is only after the illumination, after the renewal of the first oath, without having given one beforehand Knowledge is required of the novice. The novice He therefore has every right to refuse to lend it. But where is the No novice who has ever refused it?

The creation, reception and solemn constitution of the reci- The pioneer in Apprentice-Mason formally concludes the pact between the neophyte, on the one hand, and the sect, the Synagogue and Satan, on the other hand.

The triple kiss, the apron with the bib raised, the gloves intended "for the woman he esteems most", the communication of secret signs, agreed-upon words, and Mysterious touches then complete the formality.

The Sign of Order: "Bring the right hand flat under the throat, slightly towards the left carotid artery, the four fingers held together and the thumb extended at a right angle," is still the representation of matter or of the Holy Matron, whose neophyte crosses himself like the Christian of the cross. The Sign of Recognition: withdrawing the hand towards the right shoulder, simulating the act of slitting his throat, and Letting your hand fall along your body is a renewal tacit agreement of Masonic oaths; it is in the same time for the formation of a second right angle, which is crossed with the sign of the cross imitating Christians who make the sign of the cross with three crosses, on the forehead, on the mouth and on the chest, in honor of the Holy Trinity: the Father, the intelligent principle, is supposed to reside on the front; the Son, Word of God the Father, is placed on the lips, and the Holy Spirit, principle of Love mutual between the Father and the Son, remains in the heart.

300 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Touching generally relates to an act that is indicated by a few characteristic features. Firstly degree, we take our right hand, we place our thumb on the first joint of the brother's index finger, and one strikes three light taps in the palm of the hand. Anyone can to give it a meaning according to one's point of view.

The Catechism, which follows the initiation, is a very instructive, admirably illustrating how It is necessary to confuse minds eager to learn about the Masonic mysteries. Only true initiates who include the implied meanings in the explanations that the The catechism provides information on the different symbols.

The first step is taken. The layman, almost always a Christian, he gave himself body and soul to a society of which he did not knows neither the origin, nor the ultimate goal, nor the true documents Neither the means of action, nor true moral value. JI pledged himself, by several oaths deliberately taken, in a new religion whose worshipped deity does not appear He doesn't shovel God, but "the Great Architect of the Universe", mysterious deity, sometimes invoked personally, sometimes defined as the great impersonal Pan of the Pan-pagan theism. He was incorporated into this society which hypocritically hides under a philanthropic guise; He gave his consent, he formally bound his will. his life to a work that he knew well was neither Christian nor moral, and of which he could, of which he should suspect the immorality, not to say a truly satanic spirit.

Only the first step is difficult. Unless the Ap-Preuli doesn't listen to the voice of his conscience, he descends from degree by degree on the slope that leads to the interior more hidden in Lucifer's Kingdom.

The one who will reap all the benefits from this slavery is the Kabbalistic Jew, who lent himself to Satan to accomplish—to complete his work of hatred against the crucified Christ and Jehovah Adonai; who wanders in the world, running without ceasing

'after the ideal of the Xheter-Malkuth of the Universe that the Ten-

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 301

The hatter dangles promises before her eyes but never gives them to her. because he no longer owns it himself, since "a A stronger force than him emerged, triumphed, and swept away all the weapons in which he trusted, and distributed his remains i",

The war between Hell and Heaven has intensified and organized within Freemasonry. The Apprentice became to enlist.

The great army of the Apprentice Brothers constitutes, kabba-Literally, the matter on which the Spirit is destined to to work, —the rough stone from which stones are formed cubics intended for use in the construction of the Temple, — the Rovaur beneath Apan-Kapuon's feet, —the last Sephiroth constituting the archetypal Man.

The first degree of Freemasonry, the grade of Apprentice, therefore, represents the Sephirah, the Kingdom, and means the material principle, the bodily element of man.

2. The 9th Sephirah. The Foundation. – The Companion.

The sacred word Jakin being officially interpreted by The phallus, the central idea of the second degree, is evident; this The second degree is the complement of the first. The entire ceremony characteristic of this degree revolves around the Flaming Star boyante, of the letter G, of the number five and of the glory of the work.

We have already explained these more than sufficiently. symbols. All that remains for us is to quote several phrases from The Venerable's speech, whose double meaning should make to make any honest man blush who allows them to be addressed to him.

"Work is the guardian of virtue," said Hesiod; and The poet is right, even against the Bible. The Bible indicates work as a punishment, whereas it is only a a welcome necessity, a salutary need for the organization of man, based on nature, divine nature which produces constantly and never rests... All work deserves

4. Luke, x, 22.

302 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

salary... Masonic salary... means that the initiate mat- He does not hold his reward in the future, but he receives it "Here below, he finds himself satisfied," Sensual satisfaction!

"The Blazing Star... is the sacred figure that..." recalls the mysterious cause of so many wonders, the Great Architect of the Worlds. – Everyone bows "Head to salute the Blazing Star." There you have it, the idol-well-pronounced try and phallotherapy.

The veil is lifted when the Venerable declares to the recipient-saying that he is now five years old: "an age that makes us "able to visit the adoption lodges, where everything is done in groups of five." (P. 88.)

The password, Schibboleth, which means: ear of wheat,

It symbolizes something else, served as a password during the war between Ephraim and Gilead. Those of Gilead "so seized the fords of the Jordan, by which those of Ephraim were to return to their country, and when someone from Ephraim, fleeing the battle, came to the water's edge, and said to the kings of Gilead: I beg you to let me pass, They said to the Jews, "Are you not Ephrathites?" He answered them—said no, so they replied: Say, Schibboleth, which means an ear of corn. But since he pronounced it Sibboleth, because he couldn't properly express the first letter They immediately seized upon this word and killed him in passing. of the Jordan t. »

Freemasons therefore use it for two reasons, of this word as Password.

The Sign of Order and the Touch of this degree are expressed easily explained by the ignoble underlying idea that inspired the entirety of this degree.

By glancing at the kabbalistic figure of Adam Kadmon we will see what place the ninth Sephirah occupies there, the Base or Foundation. The grade of Fellow is explained then entirely by the Kabbalah; and there is nothing else than a rehabilitation of the old phallic cult. All the

1. Judges, xii, 6.

Of the 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 303

The indecent acts of the ancient pagan mysteries are reproduced there. theoretically, to be exercised practically in the androgynous lodges, also known as adoption lodges.

The generating force being considered in the ancient mysteries as the main attribute, or even the essence of divinity, Freemasonry, by restoring this This abominable error has degraded and continues to degrade its followers. below the level of the ancient initiates, in whose eyes The truth and holiness of Christianity had not shone forth. Let's expose these shameful acts! No honest man, no A modest woman cannot enter the dressing rooms.

The second degree represents the Sephirah, the Base, and signifies the generating principle, the virile force of the body human.

8. The 8th Sephiroth. Glory. — The Master.

The President of the Supreme Council of the 33rd degree teaches that the sacred word of the 3rd degree, Mac Benac, means "Putrous-faction 1. This Hebrew word mac-ben-mac means: "for-Ritual, son of rot." The Talmud seeks to demean human nature rather than ennobling it: "Where do you come from? – From a drop of putrefying matter. – Where are you going? Amidst the dust, corruption, and worms?

The President of the 33rd degree said: "Where does Phomme come from?" This is the Apprentice grade, the 4th degree of the Rite. Also its Does the sacred word mean: the Ktéis, the Uterus? What is it? The man? That's the rank of Fellow Craft, the 2nd degree. Also Does his sacred word mean: the Phallus? What is the des-The destiny of man? That is the rank of Master, the 3rd degree. Therefore, his word means: "Putrdfaction".

Everyone will now be quite convinced that the Freemasonry is essentially nothing but plagiarism, a reproduction

. production of the vile Talmud and the pantheistic Kabbalah-the tick of the Jews. From the rot of the ear of corn, wheat is produced, which itself is of a putrescible nature. The core idea of

1. Paul Rosen, p. 281.
2. Franck, p. 172.

304 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

This third degree is therefore the link between death and life. bodily, of destruction and reformation. The cor-Rupture is simultaneously the mother and the daughter of life. understands why the Master's apron has no bib: Neither rot nor the offspring of rot could in to make use of. We are in the presence of Indian Sipaism. Shiva, the third person of the Indian trinity, is in at the same time the Dicu-Destructor, terrible, and the Dien-A reformer, kind.

It is important to understand President 33's teaching: "Primitive religions envisioned the First Cause" under the triple aspect of creation, destruction and conservation, the result of the primordial conception that Everything that begins lasts until its end. However, in demas-Regarding the threefold conception of the First Cause of religions In its early stages, Catholicism did not have a fortunate hand. invented a God the Father, Creator, a Dicu the Son, Con-servant, but he forgot to give a president to the Destruction. He made the president of destruction the prince darkness, the demon... The Catholic Trinity is therefore unbearable.

Kabbulistic Freemasonry brings back "the Pre-"
"resident of destruction" in his Trinity, and declares the demon "like the Most High", Jehovah Lucifer equal to Jehovah Adonai. She calls him "her Master," and dedicates to him the 3rd degree in its hierarchical system.

The idea of this rank is expressed by the representation of the murder, burial and resurrection of the recipientdaire. This Brother himself is the representative not only by Jacques Bourguignon de Molay, but also by the fallen Jew and of the fallen angel. Several features of the ceremony and of The story of Hiram finds no application in history of the last grand master of the Templars, nor to that of the Jews;
They will have to be brought back to the fall of Lucifer. Others will not will only apply to Jews or to Jacques Molay.

1. Paul Rosen, 287.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 305

We have already said that Master Hiram and his three
In the diabolical explanation, assassins refer to Lucifer.
and the three persons of the Holy Trinity. It is only to them what might the three blows in the drama be related to In Freemasonry, the two Wardens and the Worshipful Master wear on the throat, the heart and the forehead of the recipient, and to the as a result of which he falls. Christians sign to these three places, in honor of the Holy Trinity, of the Father who begot the Son by his own intelligence, the Son which is the Word spoken by the Father, and the Holy Spirit who is their mutual love.

Saint Michael vanquished Lucifer with these words: "Who is "Like God?" a saying inspired in her by Wisdom divine, who is the Son. Having lost the dialectical battle,
In a sense, Lucifer was deprived of divine charity.
He withdrew the Holy Spirit from him, from whom it proceeds. The Judge Supreme, God the Father, confirmed and completed the judgment, in hurling the rebellious angel from heaven to the depths of hell. There you have it.
the three blows struck by the Holy Trinity against the rebellious Angel.

In this tale, the Rule signifies the uprightness of judgment.
The Square, union through love, and the Mallet, power supreme. From hell, Lucifer will never rise again for to return to heaven; he does not want to; but he is allowed to the power to tempt men; it can become their master, not by a superior force that he does not possess, but by the free will of those who consent to its domination to enlist in his army.

Let's follow Léo Taxil, page 102. The sacred word is not Ma-habone, which makes no sense, as far as we know. Carlile says that it is the name of the Chief of the Fifteen who found two of the murderers were identified. But this name is common-gifted like Zerbaël or Éligam. Moabone, at the con-milking, as the Scottish Rite says, has a perfect meaning according to the kabbulistic idea of this degree. Moab was the incestuous son killers of Lot and his eldest daughter?, to One (on) means strength,

4. Carlile, Manual of freemasonry, p, 247.
2. Genesis, 19, 37,

20

306 KADDALISTIC INTERPRETATION

wealth. Lot is a figure of the hermaphrodite Ensoph and His strength is replicated in Moab, like that of Ensoph in the first Sephiroth, that of the Hermetic Bythos in intelligence, which we have already recognized as being Lucifer.

The acacia tree that plays a role in the reception ceremony is a symbol of the innocence of Iliram, by Jacques Molay, of the Jew, of Satan. The Greek word akakia means innocence. Every hardened criminal protests his innocence. It is not of child, not a symbol of indestructibility, if the acacia tree is truly identical to that of Setim mentioned in the Bible. The wood of Setim is beautiful, it darkens imperceptibly and becomes like ebony. Moses chooses it for the construction of the Tabernacle, for the beams, the columns from the entrance portico, the Ark of the Covenant, the Table of Loaves of proposition, the altar of incense and burnt offerings, to the columns of the vestibule courtyard. The Venerable Bede said that because of the indestructibility of this wood, the Tabernacle was a true figure of the militant Church and even more so of The triumphant Church.

The Jews, in composing the rites of their secret society, They haven't forgotten the fine qualities of this wood. They have made to plant an acacia tree on the tomb of their master Hiram, to symbolize the indistinguishability of their race.

The Fellow who is received as Master must play the

The role of the murdered and the resurrected. The Very Respectable said: "This happy day brings back the light that we we thought lost forever. Our Master has seen the light of day again; to is reborn in the person of Brother N.

This renaissance is a multiplication of Va person of the Master! Therein lies the mystery of the 3rd degree, the formation of a son of Lucifer.

We invite the Freemasons to reflect on this carefully. In Ja reli- In the Christian tradition, we are taught that the Son of God... redeemed by his precious blood, to make us children of God and his brothers, not by nature, but by adoption tion. The Son of God multiplies himself in us; he raises us up by sanctifying grace, above our nature, "so that we became participants in the divine nature," and then- We should say: "Our Father who art in heaven".

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 307

Lucifer, "the Master" of Freemasonry, mimicking in all God and his Church, multiplies in those who, by their Masonic oaths, become "Masters" as him. This multiplication is the true meaning of the eighth Sephi- Rah, whose name is Glory. "It would be quite difficult," he said. Mr. Franck (p. 146), to find in the meaning of these two words Triumph and Glory, the 7th and 8th Sephiroth, if they were not followed by this definition: "By the Triumph and the Glory, we understand the extension, the multiplication and the strength; because all the forces that are born in the universe come from their breasts?

The Master is questioned at the entrance to the Temple: "How "Were you admitted, Master?" He replied, "By five knocks." distinct," through the work of the Holy King and the Matron, symbolized by third-degree touching.

Multiplication, that's the many grains of apples of grenades which are the glory of the two columns J and B?! There's the Sckibboleth! There are the many spikes on the stem of the Wheat resurrected from decay! Behold the resurrection of Master, often repeated in the numerous Masonic lodges- niques! Now understand the common exclamation the Companion brothers who, raising their hands, cry out: "Glory to Work!" (p. 87). The work of the Holy King and of You know the Matron; her glory? Look at the multi- plication of the Masters, created in the image of the one they name- "Our Master who art in the Fire!"

It is Lucifer whose name the Freemasons sign, by making the distress signal. It is turned upside down over the head or at eye level from the front, the two hands with interlaced fingers, and They cry out: "The Widow's children are mine!" The two before-arms form a straight line, the base of the mystical triangle

4, II Peter, 1, 4,
2, Zohar, ax, 296.

308 KABDALISTIC INTERPRETATION

turned on itself; the upper parts of both arms form the two sides of this triangle and are supposed to join the heart.

The modern top hat on the head of the Masters, named "Triangle", sins against the symbolism of yesteryear observed, when the revolutionary hat actually had the shaped like a triangle. The steel roof is a triangular roof. formed by the swords of the Masters, under which they pass their great men of honor. The sigre of horror so refers to the discovery of Iliram's body. The password Tubal-Cain, which signifies worldly possession, recalls history apocryphal story that the Orator tells of Iliram's descent into the abyss of fire, after the disaster of liquid brass. Tubal-Cain, emerging from hell, calls to the humiliated Hiram: "Come, My son, come without fear; I have breathed on you, and you can "to breathe in the flame." The Master receives the assurance that in the realm of Eblis, enveloped in fire, he will find "Unknown delights!" With "their Master," the "Masters," who are of his race, will pass, by means of this password, in the realm of Eblis, "where freedom reigns," and where, as the Father of Lies promised them, they will find-go from "unknown delights" (p. 140). – Hell, a place Delightful! The French password for Ghibblim is the name carpenters "from Ghibblos who prepared the wood and "The stones to build" the Temple of Solomon!

In short, the Jewish Kabbalah of Babylon provides the The most perfect interpretation of Masonic mysteries. depth to which one must descend to discover, at Milicu, weary of a lass of confusing symbols, the true meaning of these mysteries, fully justifies our opinion: the frank-Freemasonry is the practical result of a secret pact between Hell and the Synagogue; this pact has as its primary aim the subjection of the Universe to the domination of the Synagogue; for second bnt the complete annihilation of Christ-Tianism, and for the last bul, unknown perhaps to the Jews

1. Kings, v, 18.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 309

themselves, the total corruption of humankind and the Lucifer's triumph over Jehovah; over Jehovah, whose Ar-Fallen change usurps the name to also usurp the Kingdom.

Gentlemen, Masters of the 3rd degree, should know that in enlisting among those who carry within them the image of their ultimate "Master", they voluntarily entered as members in the counterfeit Church of Christ. By holding hands "in a master's claw" and letting themselves Without being struck on the forehead with the Master's gavel, they received, in the words of Saint John, "the character of the Beast "on their right hand and forehead!"; they voluntarily facts his Kabbalistic Glory.

And, The 7th Sephirah. Strength. – The Secret Master,

To obtain the 4th degree, it is prescribed that "nine full months must have passed since the date on which the applicant "received the rank of Master Mason?" – nine months since the conception up to birth. If the age of the Secret Master is 81 years old means that, for 8 and 1 month – or, according to the spiritual nature, for 9 times 9 years – the new Master remained in the secrecy of the Middle Chamber, before blossoming like a flower from its seed.

The password for this degree is Zisa, flower, or Zion. strength of the flower.

The word Zisa also means a blade. However, we read in the Book of Exodus, chapter 27, verse 36, the order given by Jehovah to Moses: "You shall also make a blade (Zisa) of very fine gold." pure, on which you will have engraved by a skilled craftsman These words: Holiness belongs to the Lord. You will bind him with a hyacinth-colored ribbon on the tiara, "on the "Forehead of the Sovereign Pontiff." This blade was the width of two fingers, and reached from one ear to the other. Rabbi Elieser, son of Josi, claims to have seen one with this inscription: Kodesch lajéhovak: "holy to Jehovah".

1. Apoc., xim, 17.

2. Paul Rosen, p. 119.

The president of the 33rd degree, by giving the sacred word Ziza this meaning: "the Beginning, the End and the Lord of Human creation is the Phallus," it is implied that This gold blade was a phallus, that is to say, a representation- the tation of the male member, a sacred thing and the divinity itself Indeed. That is, in fact, the true Masonic doctrine! Ziza, the phallus, or Zéson, the force of the phallus, is a Adorable thing!

In this 4th degree, Kabbalistic Freemasonry celebrates the The 7th Sephirah, the Triumph, which she explains, as we We have just learned this, through the power of the Force. The ear of corn emerges from Mother Earth and blossoms. Physical life is complete; She exists with all her instincts. So what is the principle? what is the key that could have unlocked the heart of nature to To bring this new being into being? The c/ef that hangs, like a jewel, from the cord of the "Thrice Powerful" and of his brothers of the same 4th degree, is easily explained if we consider the Words of the Orator of the 33rd degree: "The sacred word of 4th degree means that the Principle, the End and the Lord of 'Human creation is the phallus.'

The elephant represents the phallus, appetites, and instincts. of man, as was said to Garibaldi? We must give them obey.

The newborn's forehead is adorned with an olive wreath. and of laurel, an open wreath, because the flower, Zisa, has only just hatched. In the middle of the secret Master's apron They are two branches, one of laurel and the other of olive. forming an open crown, and in the middle the letter Z initial of the sacred word. The cord is 'onse centi- meters, the number known from the Kabbalah. The Bavsette, whose we already know the meaning, cast an eye on her or painted or embroidered.

The interpretation of this eye, which does not mean omni- Divine science, is given by the Orator of the lodge: "The

- 4, Paul Rosen, p. 281.
2. See p. 286.

The fourth degree shows us that in the work of generation, Man is merely the assistant, the collaborator, the executor. of a high principle which is within him and not outside of him.

"Consciousness is the voice of nature; it is of nature"
We alone must follow the inspirations, for she does not
It only pushes us towards things useful to humanity. Man
He therefore has no other master than himself! And he always has The right to obey instincts! To take for the voice of one's conscience science, the internal reproach that sometimes occurs in the
as a result of an education steeped in superstitions and prejudices were the basis, that's a gross error. A cons-Science that fights against natural tendencies is merely a "Distorted consciousness."

According to this doctrine, the drives of instincts are the voice of conscience. We learned from the Kabbalistic Zohartick that the human soul, even before its emanation from Adam Kadmon possesses a triple nature derived from the Trinity of Sephiroth. She is Spirit (Mishmah), Soul (Ruakh), and A coarser spirit (Wephesch), the latter "immediate-ment in relation to the body, and direct cause of what one refers in the text to the lower movements, that is to say the actions and instincts of animal life."

Instincts being the highest development of nature
The physics of man is dealt with in this 4th degree, which completes the consideration of Man as a physical being.

We are not at all surprised to see the treatment by the Freemasonry, the animal instincts of the human body like the vision of consciousness, which we must follow inspirations; for the first means to corrupt man is lust; and Freemasonry's primary goal is to to corrupt humanity in order to dominate it. She teaches that "what the uninitiated call Fertu is pre-
"sharply Vice, and vice versa" (p. 189).

Since in this grade we begin to address the question of the soul human beings linked to matter, it is appropriate to introduce in

1. Franck, p. 174.

312 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

at the same time the grand principle of Manichean dualism.

The three sacred words: Jod, Adonai and Jeah (Yhvk) indi-first, the supreme Divinity, the hermetic intelligence

tick (Lucifer), advocated as the principle of Good; the second, the Adonate of the Bible, ealumniated as the principle of Evil; and the third, the Tetragrammaton, the name of four letters, that is to say Jhøh, the consonants of the name of Jehovah without the vowels.

The Jewish interpretation of this degree casts a vivid Shedding light on the connection between Jews and Freemasonry. nerie. The Orator of this grade teaches the candidate that Jeah is not the true pronounciation of the Divinity's name, ct that only the Jewish high priest had the right to pronounce the Its real name is the tenth of the month of Tishrei. On that day, the Jews celebrate their Feast of Tabernacles, in commemoration of their journey into the desert, where they lived in tents. Ezra instituted this joyous festival after the return of the Israelites from their Babylonian captivity; he said to the people: "Go to the mountains and bring olive branches." and the most beautiful trees, myrtle branches, palm branches and the densest trees, to make "To make shelters out of branches... in the shape of tents."

Observe the double interpretation. In the sense In physics of this degree, it is the soul that enters the body: In the Jewish sense, it is the Jewish people who enter into humanity, like its life-giving spirit.

The last four Sephiroth of primitive man cor- therefore correspond exactly to the first four degrees of the first Masonic fortnight. It is to be presumed that the Other Sephiroth will be found in the other degrees. until, at the eleventh degree, the "true man" mason- nique is a perfect image of Ensoph.

The physical nature of man is complete, the second The Triad, moral nature, will be represented by the three following degrees.

4 Ezra, xu, 15.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 313

5. The 6th Sephirah. Za Beauty. – The Perfect Master.

The trick that presided over the 'making of the 5th degree of the Freemasonry is as astonishing as it is profound. Often we go through this "intermediate" degree as one of the less important, ct we confer it "by communication" (p. 105), the occult leaders deeming it unnecessary to confer it on some followers. And yet it is here that the the Achilles' heel of the Kabbalah philosophical system and of Freemasonry.

We have already noticed that all pan- systems Theistic teachings err in their teaching on the passage From the finite to the Infinite, or vice versa. This passage, for cux, is also Difficult to find than squaring the circle. Making the In- finite, finite, it's representing by a finite number how many times the diameter of a circle is contained in its circumference- To make the finite infinite is to calculate in exact numbers the circumference of the circle which corresponds to its diameter. One and the other are mathematically impossible.

"But Freemasonry claims to possess the solution" of this impossible problem." (p. 200)

This claim is the Kabbalistic figure of Man archetype nons give the true explanation of this grade of Perfect master. Indeed, the first triad of the Sephiroth represents the attributes of divine intelligence; the second, those of the will, and the third, the physical attributes, the first two belonging to the Spirit and the third of matter. We must therefore search in the confines of the first two triads and of the third, the passage that Kabbalistic-Masonic philosophy would like to establish between Spirit and matter, between the Infinite and the finite. This attempt is in the 5th degree.

The finite, material world is generally represented by a square, – the four parts of the world, – and Infinity by a circle, without beginning and without end.

Now, when we ascend from the first four degrees Masonic symbols, symbolizing the material world, in the fifth

314 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

where the spiritual world begins, there we find matter idealized and represented by "four white columns, raised to each corner of the room, at equal distances. Sixty-Four lights illuminated the temple, sixteen at each corner; but we can reduce them to sixteen in total, four in each corner. » (P. 199.) That is the ideal beauty of the material world, which, when descending from the height of Pensoph, com- It begins where the Beauty of the spiritual world ends.

Read the 6th Sephirah, the last of the second trinity, named Tiphareth, Beauty, is represented in the 5th degree, the grade of a perfect Master.

Let us note immediately that the Kabbalah designates as "Material symbol of Beauty: the breast or the heart 1" The archetypal man. "The recipient of the 5th degree, in the The initiation ceremony involves being led to a small mausoleum. placed on the right as you enter the room; there it is revealed to him that The heart of Master Hiram rests in the urn that surmounts the monument." (p. 200.) This coincidence is a new proof of the identity of the character Iliram with the Man archetype, the ideal Jew and Lucifer; she justifies once and for all plus our hypothesis on the kabbalistic basis of the fren-Freemasonry. Everywhere we find the Jew.

"This mausoleum, built in a hidden place, says the Rite, is the emblem of the reserve in which the Freemasons must uphold the profound truths they possess... Until Currently, we have simply taught the followers that it wy did not have creation, in the true sense of the word, but only-generation. Now, the aviator receives this confinement density: it is that the existence of humanity cannot be temporal, but that it is perfectly eternal. Back religions that claim that at some point the world can finish! In vain do we assert that a Dicu will be able to inter-disrupting the life of the universe; we forget that divinity includes two principles (we are at the midpoint of Manichaeism), and that Evil, ultimately, must be overcome by Good. However, it

1. Franck, p. 145.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 315

It is evident that a supernatural Being, Adonai, decreed the end of the world, is not Good, and it is indisputable that Being supernatural (Lucifer), opposed to this malevolent principle, does not let-"Such a monstrous iniquity will not be accomplished!" (P. 202.)

The perfect, intelligent Masters, even if only slightly versed in philosophy, they will immediately understand that the quadrature of the cerele, which Freemasonry claims To possess the secret, simply consists of dogma Manichean, obviously absurd, of the duality of Divinity. According to Maniès, neither matter nor the principle of evil has been They were created in time, but they have existed for all eternity. Matter is eternal; the square is round! There is a God. bad; the circle is square! Divinity becomes, by a Following generations, the material world; that's the forty-the shape of the circle. That is the whole secret that the "Masters" "Perfect" learn, by listening, either to the President of this degree, Adonhiram, son of Abda, the superintendent of the tribes of Solomon 1, namely the overseer Zabad, son of Nathan? even its Introducer, the "brother Serebia è?", finally, All of them Jews. That's perfection in Masonic mastery. Fuck!

The touching in this grade consists of this: that one sc they mutually place their left hand on each other's right shoulder, this which forms with the shoulder blades of the two "Perfect Masters", a square, while their right hands, held mutually-ment, holding the thumbs apart, form with these thumbs A triangle. The triangle and the square together symbolize the two worlds, the spiritual and the material.

The same mystery is hidden beneath the number seven which plays its role in age: "eight years, by one and seven": the unit divine of the Ensoph revealed by the spiritual world and the material world, the triangle and the square.

The material world is still signified by the Walk:

4. III Kings, iv, 6.

2. I Paralip., 11, 36.

3, II Ezra, 1x, 5.

316 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

"to form a square by four steps together", ct by the Drums: "four slow strokes".

On the apron of the "Perfect Master" you see three concentric keys, in the middle of which is a square picture bearing the letter J. It is obviously a representation of the higher worlds, the Asiluk, the Beriah and the Yesirah, which contain the fourth, the Asiah, in its material quadrature. The letter J signifies Jehovah, the Great Architect of the Universe, at the center of all that exile.

The Jewel shows the visible world, represented by the a quarter of a circle, since, in this Kabbalistic philosophy-Tico-pantheistic, the visible world is the fourth part of the Grand Toul, which is a circle. This quarter circle is graduated, or adorned with eleven precious pictures. The compartment open on this quarter circle is the divine Force which embraces and vivifies the malière. Formless matter, not being that half of matter, or the visible world, is represented measured by half of a square, that is to say a right angle.

The usual symbol of Freemasons is half a square, ouunc square, the feminine principle, spanned by a compass; the masculine principle, the divine Force, which opens to the quarter to enliven matter; but which is capable of opening itself Moreover: indeed, she did it before and of all eternity, to give existence to other worlds.

That is the pantheistic lie.

What we have just described is the second part of Initiation to the fifth degree. The first must refer to complementing the moral triad of the archetypal Man. Between the two, it is worth noting, the names of the three assassins-Sins change. The adversaries in the physical realm Eblis, Jubelos, Jubelas, Jubelum (or other fan- names) tactics), are enemies in the visible world: the Law, Property, Religion. But in the spiritual realm They will be spirits. Their new names: Sterkin, Oterfut, Abibala, seem to belong to a lexicon of magicians and of wizards, the last one excepted, as we shall see.

33 DEGREES EGOSSAIS 317

The password, Acacia, is described by the "Thousand times Powerful and respectable Master who presides over the 5th degree, like "the tree of life which, from the tomb of Iliram on the Mount Lebanon, sets off to defy the evil genius of the "Destruction," in Masonic slang, the occult meaning of This password appears to be: The acacia, the tree of immortality, is planted on the tomb of Iliram. This The tomb symbolizes Satan's burial in Hell after his expulsion from Mount Lebanon or Paradise. At the time from the creation of the new world, material and visible, The acacia tree sprang from Hell into the Garden of Earthly Delights. ct became the Tree of Knowledge of Good and of Malachi 11 was to defy Jehovah-Adonai by seducing Man, the master of this fourth world.

The Freemason, a liar in every way, identified acacia with Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil which the Bible speaks of. It is unnecessary to demonstrate here the The falseness of this comparison. We have touched on this point. to demonstrate once again that, in this grade, he According to Kabbalah, this is the passage from the spiritual sphere to the material sphere, or, according to Freemasonry, of the The transition from the material sphere to the spiritual sphere. Lucifer's rebellion, prior to the creation of the world visible, must be perpetuated after this creation that symbo- Read the 5th degree. The fallen Trough of Light will emerge from its falls to take revenge on Jehovah-Adonai by dragging the King of the Earth in his revolt against God. From acacia symbolise, the bridge that leads from Hell to earthly Paradise. Lucifer will present himself as a second God, "similar to Most High"; he will be called the principle of Good, and name-Mera Adonai, the principle of Evil; he will seduce Man and the will lead one to call oneself Dicu.

The sacred word is, for this purpose, a "claim".
"Jehovah means: I am who I am. Formerly this name was given to Adonai by the deluded peoples. Today, Freemasonry, claiming for Humanity this sacred formula, affirms the immortal existence of the species

318 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

human, under the protection of the principle of Good (Lucifer). At the same time, the initiate remembers this name, which is that of the Complete divinity in its two principles (in the mani- (chéen), and it is the collaboration of these two principles that Humanity owes its existence to having been brought into being; for it is only too obvious that Phomme is a compound of Bicu and "Bad." (p. 202)

The Masonic Master is only perfect when he recognizes Lucifer is born with the right to claim for himself the Divinity, equality with God. The word Equality has more than one sense !

Now understand the teaching of the President of the 33rd degree: "The purpose of the work of the 5th degree is to demonstrate that man, being finite, could not escape from the nature, its most hidden secrets, nor create the sciences and the arts, if his intelligence was not a direct emanation of the First Cause, and to draw the immediate consequence from it. It is clear that we are all free, all brothers, all equal and all co-owners of the fruits and produce of the "The whole world!"

The deification of the human soul, that is the central idea of 5th, 6th and 7th degrees. We also read in the teaching From the President of the 33rd degree? Their three sacred words in the 5th paragraph: "The IM reproduces itself in Humanity" through the three manifestations of Force, Intelligence and of human love; » in the 6th: « the universal soul revealed by immensity"; and year 7: "Direct issuance of the Cause first.

6. The 5th Sephirah. Mercy. – The Intimate Secretary.

Kabbalah teaches that the 5th and 6th Sephiroth are They call it Mercy or Greece and Justice; the first, a active principle on male, the second a passive principle or female. "But it is easy to see, for the role they

1. Paul Rosen, p. 255.
2. Ibid., p. 281,

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 319

play a role in the whole system, that this grace and this justice should not be taken literally; it is indeed rather than what we would call extension and concentration transmission of the will. Indeed, it is from the first that From the second emerge the masculine souls, and from the feminine souls mines. These two attributes are also called the two arms of the Divinity; one gives life and the other gives death.
The world could not exist if they remained separated; it is
It is even impossible for them to practice separately, because, according to The original expression is, "There is no justice without grace!"
We will find justice well pronounced in the 7th of-willingly; but we do not see enough in the fragments of Ritual of the 6th degree, revealed by Léo Taxil, how the 6th of-Grae symbolizes Misery, also called Greece, Love, or Greatness. The dispute between Iliram, the king of Tyre, and Solomon, regarding the cities given as a reward for the wood supplied, with all the incidents recounted in the
The legend of the grade shows less mercy and the thanks to a complete absence of these two attributes in the two kings and the other characters in the drama.
Perhaps they wanted to conceal the Kabbalistic doctrine of the divinity of the human soul under the name of the secretary Solomon's confidant, Johaben, who serves as the password to this degree. Ragon says that this name means Son of God, and of-Should it be written Jhaoben?; but we do not know the form Jhao, and we find neither the name in the Bible nor of Johaben nor celni of Jhaoben, while the name of Joha is known there. "Josiah, after having overturned the altars and the profane wood and purified the temple of the Lord, sent Joha, son of Joachaz, his secretary, to restore the house of the Lord his God 8. This name means, it is said: Who vivifies. By adding "ben," meaning son, Johaben must mean "Son of the..."
Invigorating. Your doctrine, hidden under the name of co-secretary of Solomon would therefore be that the soul of man, named Raakh,
1. Franck, p. 145.

2. Ragon, /nitiations, p. 200, footnote.

320 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

the seat of Good and Evil, of good and bad desire, in a word, of all moral attributes!, is derived or emanating from the one who gives life: that is to say, the human soul. Maine is a partial revelation of the universal soul which is revealed by its immensity. This is the interpretation that the President of the 33rd gives a sacred word of this 6th degree.

Touching of this degree, holding hands, that is to say Alternatively, by turning it over: Berith, Neder, Schele-Moth, seems to indicate the contract that we swear to each other according to the rules of justice, these words signify alliance, oath, rewards.

The pact with Satan is rarely made with Satan in no one appeared in any form whatsoever. "The most Ordinarily, says Gærres, initiation into the infamous mysteries a licu by means of secret societies and with certain forms-litanies, without the devil needing to intervene personally-"How?" The author confirms his assertion with a remarkable fact. comparable. A young man accused of magic converts et ra- He recounted how he had been seduced: "The Masters who had Those in charge of me led me to the church on Sunday, and There they made me renounce God, faith, baptism, and... the Church, and to pay homage to the Petit-Mattre; that is the name that they give to the devil. Then they gave me a taste. of a liquid contained in a wineskin; and I had scarcely had any I was struck by the magical images I felt within myself. to present themselves to me and to adhere to the practices of the pact that I had just contracted." In Freemasonry, the The pact is made at the 6th degree, the mystical communion at 12° degree.

Lacking a complete ritual of this degree, we do not have managed to discover his relationship there in a convincing manner with the Sephirah which is called Mercy or Grace. We let us not see further why the Sephirah Justice is represented at the 7th degree, instead of the 6th. The inverted,

1. Franck, p. 174.

2. Gærres, Diabolical Mysticism, 1. VII, ch. 1v, 2.

The combination of these two attributes is, however, justifiable, since Kabbalah states that they cannot exist without each other. and that Expansion or Generosity must necessarily pre- to relinquish its restriction, its endiguement which is done by the Justice. In any case, there is no doubt that 7° of- gré clearly relates to the Sephirah Justice. Therefore, we can assume that the expansion illi- imbued with Grace, generosity, and magnanimity, which must be the essence of this 6th degree, is very well represented by the royal munificence of the king of Tyre, canonized by the Freemasonry; this prince had provided Solomon with materials and silver in such great abundance, that the twenty cities of Galilee, which he received as a reward, him appeared to be an absolutely inadequate compensation.

7. The 4th Sephirah. Justice. – The Provost and Judge.

Provosts and judges were appointed by Solomon to Temple workers to administer justice to them in case of dissension or dispute. Their name Harodim is derived from the Bible! and means Commanders.

The Masonic Ritual reports that the Harodim were numbering 3600; the Bible says 3300, a number that the Kabbalists should have retained this as harmonizing with their Masonic system based on 3 times 11.

Tito, the name of the leader of the Harodim, comes from the Greek word tio. to honor or avenge, and means the Just or the Avenger. Alio- Reph (Back of God?) and Ahotah (Brother of God?) are his assistants, one, we suppose, for the punishment of the The unjust, the other for the remuneration of the just. The Members say as they enter: Chivi; the Unjust! The President- The tooth replies: Ki; a Stigma! In this grade, says the Porator, "we are in possession of the science obtained through an agreement" mutual (Berith) relating to mutual loyalty and support mutual (Neder), and making initiates capable of administering justice to their brothers (Schelemoth)". (P. 205.)

1. III Kings, v, 30.

21

322 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The mysterious elf appears to be an allusion to the prophecy From Isaiah (22:22): "I will place on his (Elinim's) shoulder the key to the house of David; he will open it without anyone being able

"It will close, and it will close without being able to open." The Provosts and Judges wear the cord across their shoulders; the A jewel, a gold key, hangs from the tip (p. 320). The "The key to the house of David" may be the key to the Temple that David and Solomon built, Fun while preparing the materials and the money for the construction, and the other in executing the prepared work.

The mysterious key is quite large, because, as said Foreriusf, "the great keys, like glues of cities, were carried by the ministers with clavicular bones on their shoulders, similar to the sticks carried by licentiates before judges, and the scepters before the kings." The keys denote Pindus-sorting, dexterity and wisdom in government, as The Pontiffs and the Kings must possess them; for the key must be inserted into the lock with dexterity, and be turned carefully so that the door could open, Thus the art of arts is the government of souls, says Saint Gregory. The Freemasons will call this art "the Art royal.

However, let us note the addition made by the Speaker to the Recommendation of the large key: "This is the key to the place where are enshrined the sacred remains of Master Hiram. With this The key is that Robin will be able to go to the mausoleum that we showed him to the 5th degree." (p. 204.) The true master Hiram, Lucifer, a bicu will, represented in the second Sephiroth's triangle, but it has no body, being a Pure spirit. "The sweet leftovers," beyond the will, These are his Intelligence, his Wisdom, and his Crown. The key Mystericuse thus opens the door to the mausoleum of attributes superiors of this "Master" who, according to Freemasonry Kabbalistic, is the principle of Good, co-eternal with Adonai, the principle of evil. At the 7th degree, the recipient is endowed-

4. Cornelius a Lapide, Zn Zsaia, c. xxn, v. 22,

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 323

to find the mysterious key that must lead to knowledge perfect of the First Cause; at the 8th degree, one half-opens the door of the mausoleum and they show it to the daring candidate the first glimmer of light that Eblis brings to his front: intelligence, that intelligence of a fallen mind which is the opposite of intelligence submitted to divine light. The mysterious key to the 7th degree is the prelude to the 8th degree.

8. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. – The Steward of Buildings.

The 8th, 9th and 10th degrees will respond, if our conjecture is correct, to the higher Triad of the Kabbalistic Sephiroth-ticks in their reverse order, to intelligence, to wisdom and to the Crown.

However, the Orator of the 8th degree says: "Any official protection is harmful to the workers of intelligence; and this intelligence tuality by order, the 8th degree is called upon to beat it in breach." (p. 206.) We find in this statement a further confirmation of the accuracy of our discovery of the falseness of Masonic boasting: "All our secrets Masonic symbols are impenetrably hidden beneath symbols." »

Furthermore, let us note the Kabbalistic purpose of this 8th degree: combating the "official protection" of the intellectual-agency, "intellectuality by order." It is not difficult to to pierce the veil of these expressions. Religious faith, the Divine revelation, that is indeed the enemy targeted. The truths revealed-laws protect human intelligence from the errors to which She has been a subject ever since the disobedience of our first The parent broke the bonds that tied her to divine truth. Faith dispels darkness; it increases the clarity of the intellect. human agency, like the sun increasing the faint light and limited to a candle. The very fact of a revelation It is divinely ordained to accept truths, a commandment from God. revealed: they are not a extinguisher of the light of the human reason, but very valuable aids for

1. Paul Rosen, p. 297.

324 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

to arrive at certain knowledge, both in the sphere supernatural as well as in the natural sphere. To combat this "official protection" coming from Dicu himself, this "Intellectuality by order," this obedience of faith, is The main purpose of this degree is to honor the Sephirah of Kabbalistic intelligence.

The President of the 33rd degree gives the following meaning at the 5th, 6th and 7th degrees, in which the Triad is found so-called morality of the archetypal Man, of his will, or of "the soul, Ruakh, which is the seat of Good and Evil, of the "Good and bad desire!": 5° "Man reproduces in humanity through three manifestations: of the Force, of the Intelligence and human love" (the representatives of the three triads); 6° "the universal soul revealed by immensity"

(the Ruakh), and 7°: "Direct emanation of the First Cause" (divinity of the human soul).

The explanation of the sacred word of the 8th degree is: "Residence
"This is the immaculate conception of the First Cause." This is the doctrine of Kabbalah: The intelligent mind of man (the Nishmah) is a spark of the divine fire of the first Triad of Sephiroth. "Each of the three souls, (Nishmah) the Spirit intelligent, (Ruakh) the moral soul and (Nephesh) the principle animal, has its source in a different degree of existence Divine. Supreme Wisdom, also called the Celestial Eden, is the sole origin of the Spirit. The soul comes from the attribute which unites within itself Justice and Mercy, that is to say Beauty, finally, the animal principle, which never rises Above this world, there is no other basis than the attributes.
of the Force?

Thus, the Masonic "workers of intelligence" in the
The 8th degree are literally the representatives of Intelligence Kabbalistics.

The recipient is shown an inverted triangle on which shine, momentarily illuminated, the three Jods

4. Franck, p. 174.
2. Ibid., p. 175.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 325

Hebrew with three different vowels: Ja, Je, Ji. It is the
the name of Jehovah, "He who was, who is, and who will be" (Hajah, Ekhejeh, Jihejeh), the past, the present and the
The future tense of the verb "to be" is "the Eternal." Why make so many Mysteries surround something so simple? Is it because the a large number, if not all, of non-Jewish Freemasons, do not
They don't know Hebrew, and this circumstance is being exploited.
To get them used to the mysterious and impose the unknown on them?
Oh no! This triangle is inverted and signifies a "deity". overturned. There we will find Jehovah Lucifer, enemy of Jehovah Adonai.

The triangle denotes the three higher Sephiroth.
The eternal Eblis exists in them, as he exists in the nine Sephiroth symbolized by the nine rays of light of clubmoss that is burst open around the triangle. The "resi-
"denial of the First Cause" is found eminently in the higher Sephiroth, its "immanence" in everything the universe; that is the pantheistic doctrine of the Kabbalah and of Freemasonry as taught in the 8th degree.

The Building Superintendent represents the understanding of the architect.

After Hiram's murder, the construction management has been corrupted. The Jakin column (leadership) has suffered a distortion. Àù! joined to Jakin, gives the sacred word J'akinaï, Disruption of the direction. Ben-Chorim®, the son of the free or nobles, the nobleman Iliram, must be replaced by a Hakar, a native, but son of a foreigner, that is to say by the recipient, who is received as a new Jew or a Little living Jehovah. That's the whole idea behind this grade: The foreigner, the non-Jew who has been Judaized and deified, is admitted to the lin-Temple tendency to build.

Let's follow the initiation:

The room is lit by twenty-seven lights (the three

1. From the verb Avah, to distort.
2. Ecclesiastes, x, 17.
- 3, Leviticus, xxv, 47.
4. Paul Rosen, p. 357, and Léo Taxil, Mystères, p. 205.

326 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

triangles in the three worlds); fifteen are placed in front The President, the thrice-powerful (it is He who multiplies himself) It spreads throughout the three worlds through the number five, (always signifying generation); seven are in front the First Warden (representing the seven Sephiroth) lower (directly derived from the higher ones), and five are placed in front of the second Supervisor (symbolizing the immediate cause of the Holy King and the Holy Matron in union).

The President sits in the East (Lucifer) on a throne, with Crown (first Sephirah) and royal mantle. "The point indivisible, the first Sephirah, without limits and cannot be known, because of its strength and its purity, spread outwards and formed a butterfly which serves as a sail so completely indivisible. This pavilion, although of a light less pure than the point, was still too dazzling to be seen; it in turn spread to outside, and this extension served as his clothing: that's how it was that everything is done through a movement that is always downwards;

"That's how the universe was formed!" The pavilion is
The archetypal Ilomme, clothing is the world of spirits and
The substance. This is the royal mantle of the thrice-powerful.
The president is protected by a canopy at the back of which... finds its emblem, the triangle, with the three Jod: Ja, Je,
Ji?, symbolizing his (affected) eternity.

In initiation, it is a question of compensating for loss of Iliran by the appointment of some directors of workers. The recipient knocks on the door through the battery of the Buildings Superintendent, five equal blows (as my-both from the regions of the Holy King and the Matron and sent by cux, for it is through cux that the soul descends here below, and it is through them that she goes back up and is returned to the heart of Dien).

While awaiting the Tiler, the peddler's account is brought into order.

1. Zohar, cited by Franck, p. 159. – Cf. Psalm 2: a You
"You are clothed in light as in a garment."

2. "Who is, who erat and who venturus est." » Apocal., 1, 4.

8. Franck, p. 150.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 327

of the Building Superintendent, raising his two thumbs to his two temples, his hands perpendicular to his body and strong-Using your thumbs to hold the square. These are the principles of The intellectual triangle adorning the head of Adam Kadmon.
Tuileur arrive gt also puts the thumbs up, as it is said, on his two temples. The recipient steps back two paces saying Ben (Son), the Tiler took two steps forward and said Cho-rim (of the nobles); or enters into the Judaico-Masonic nobility-nique. The candidate, as if dazzled, puts both hands on his two eyelids while saying Ben-Chorim (Son of the nobles),
And the Tiler fled in the same way. The recipient was surprised.
of the splendor that is revealed in the person of a /rtendant buildings. He avoids the sign of surprise. It's as if the
The candidate asked: Who are you? The tiler replied:
A member of the high nobility. The Tiler interlaces his hands which he raises to his forehead, to let them fall on his belt, then raising his eyes to the sky. The recipient-limit area by saying: Hakar, a word that the Tiler repeats.
This is a sign of admiration. Consider the three triangles:
The first one is still imperfect; the two thumbs on both temples are the beginning of the triangle that frames the head, and represents the higher Sephiroth than the 8th degree begins to symbolize. The sign of admiration draws two triangles, one representing the Moral Triad, having its base at the top, below the forehead, and its point at the heart; the other symbolizing the physical Triad, with its base at the waist, and intertwining with the triangle above it.

The product of this union of the Holy King and Queen is Hagar, a native of Judea, but the son of a foreigner, a person, finally, admitted among the Jews and enjoying their rights as citizens. Moses ruled on the rights of Hagarst.

This password is humiliating for non-Freemasons Jews; but they hardly understand it.

Next, the Tiler and the candidate each carry their own [item/item/etc.]

1. Leviticus, 25, 47.

328 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

time, their right hand on their heart and their left hand on their left hip, and they swing three times with the knees. Is this the movement of the cradle of a Jewish newborn? Is this simply a sign of life? In any case, the recipient said: Chai-vivant! and the Tiler replied: Jak, short for Jehovah, or perhaps of Judah. For it is a new helper that the chosen people have received an adopted Jew who will give his valiant Support for these poor oppressed people!

The Tiler then strikes the initiate's heart; the latter He returns this conp which signifies the murder of Hiram; and the recipient said: Jakinaï: the bronze column is twisted; the The direction has been disrupted! The damage must be repaired and replaced. to the loss of Iliram. The candidate who must come to the aid of The Jew passes his right hand under the Tiler's left armpit and grasped his right shoulder with his left hand, saying to him: Judah, long live the Jew!

The recipient is then made to climb seven steps: the seven steps of precision that must be completed before... come to the eighth, on which the Zntendants stand buildings. They are illuminated using an alcohol lamp. and a little clubmoss, the three Jods cut open in the middle from the sheet metal triangle, and nine light rays are emitted emerging from behind the triangle. The president explains new Jewish nobleman whom he had just seen the mysterious symbol and divine of the Good Principle (Lucifer-Eblis), but that he not will understand the meaning later, the day he goes worthy of this revelation. If he had paid attention to the the legend of Hiram which was told to him in the third degree, he guesses- would already know or would know that the Good Principle is the one that the Christians call Satan, and the great black spider, the Freemason, the increasingly enveloping envelope, him, the recipi-ndaire, of his diabolical sons.

9. The 2nd Sephirah. Wisdom. – The Chosen Master of the Nine.

Before reading the Ritual of the 9th Degree, we have says that he will surely deal with Wisdom, since this degree must correspond to the second Sephirah. And here we are we find placed on the altar, next to a dagger and other things, an open Bible to the Book of Wisdom, and that We learn that the President's title is the Most Wise.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 329

Our conclusion is that this degree will inscribe corruption tion of wisdom, as the previous one taught the corruption- tion of intelligence.

Solomon, who plays such a large role in the legends bizarre aspects of Freemasonry, hated by Jews Kabbalistic, and only earns their esteem when in his In his old age he offered incense to the god Moloch. In the At the 9th degree, he is notable for his lack of wisdom and prudence. while the king of Tyre, who was a worshipper of Dicu-Fire, wisely resumes his colleague from Jerusalem, and represents worthily, through its Kabbalistic-Masonic wisdom, the Se-Phirah Wisdom.

The ritual of this grade offers few mysterious emblems. which deserve an explanation. The dagger, the mallet, and the black cord, instruments of vengeance against traitors, the nine black flames arranged in diverging rays, the bloodstains on the aprons and gloves, the skull and crossbones above a crossed tibia and a dagger, the jewel which is a dagger, the yellow candles in candlesticks of wood stained black; all this in a room adorned with tent-black shapes on which skulls are drawn, crossed shins and red flames indicate that it is here, as clearly indicated by the sacred words Nekam, Neker, Nekah\.

Masonic wisdom will be revealed by its prudence in... avenging, and by his obstinacy in pursuing his goal according to

The Templar adage: Vincere aut mori; "To conquer or die! "

The Chosen Master of the Nine (of the nine Sephiroth or of the nine (first Masonic degrees) must avenge the murder (af) of the great man whom Solomon had entrusted to the leadership

1. Nekam, revenge; nekam-berith, vengeance of the alliance; zekar, percussion; nekah, innocent. ({Levit., xxvi, 25.)

330 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

(Jakin) of his works. The "King of Tyre" and the others Members of this Masonic degree swear vengeance on a mannequin representing the child left by Hiram as A sacred pledge. Who is this child? It is the personification. the representative of the race of Eblis, of the Pneumatics, of the Jews, Freemasons.

Here now is the wisdom of Solomon: The recipient-daire is reported by "l'Intime" and suspected of being the murderer of Iliram. Immediately, Solomon, seizing his polegnard decides that he must be sacrificed to the spirits of the Respect-Master Iliram's table. But the king of Tyre, who symbolizes the Masonic wisdom, Solomon continues, and proposes that we listen to the accused before the execution.

The recipient is taken away with all necessary precautions. necessary, the dagger of Intimacy always on his heart. He explains the blood that stains his hands by the struggle he had. with three animals, a lion, a tiger and a bear, tame by Abibala (abi, my father, bala, to kill), the main death-Miram's trio. They guarded the cave where he had retreated The assassin, he killed them. The lion, the tiger, and the bear represented... probably feel the kings, the armies and the people under the influence of religion. He said that a cave, a burning bush, a gushing fountain, and a dog for The guides showed him the retreat of the main murderer. of Iliram.

Since Abibala represents the most hated murderer of Kabbalistic Freemasonry, the Religion, we believe to find in the burning bush the Mosaic Law, in the a gushing fountain, the Christian Law*, in the cave disdainful designation of the earthly paradise, of the temple Jewish or Catholic churches?, and finally, in the dog that

4. Exodus 11:2. a The Lord appeared to Moses in a bush ardent.

2. John 1:14: The water that I will give him will become in Judah a fountain of water gushing forth to eternal life, »

3. 1 Kings, 14:11: "The Philistines said, 'Look, the Hebrews who They emerge from the caves where they were hiding.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 331

guide, the Templars, named by the Talmudic Jews of dogs, like all Christians t.

The rules of Kabbalistic wisdom are clearly defined born in the Ritual of this degree. The recipient, the knee With his right hand on the ground, he places his right hand on the Book of Wisdom. and the left on the compass and the mallet. Solomon places it on him. cautiously, his dagger to his forehead, and the intimate brother a naked sword on his back. Freely, in the midst of these menaces, the new Elected Master of the Nine takes the oath and "I swear, to avenge the betrayed truth and virtue (Lucifer- nothing) persecuted, to sacrifice as a sacrifice to the shades of Hiram, the false brothers who could reveal to the Uninitiated which- that one of our secrets." Indeed, if Masonic secrets They were innocent, they wouldn't fear the light so much: "For whoever does evil hates the light, and does not come point to the light, lest his works be accused of "sées?"

Solomon said to the recipient: "The punishment of the traitor must always have for a veil the thick shadows of at night. Go then! Finish your work by the light of night. "Darkness!" (p. 215.) One can understand why the recipient should be led, to obey this command or any other, must walk backwards, eyes still blindfolded, led by the Intimate even in the dark room or chamber of the Cave, and then, stab the mannequin representing Religion. To be even clearer, the President teaches the Candidate that everything he has just done is "a clear image of the obligations he undertakes"; he gives him a pair of gloves to teach him that "innocence "Only she has grief without remorse." That's how one "ap- "He takes on at this rank the art of punishing traitors"; "one must not "not to strike them openly,"... "but in a discreet way- Crete, without the perpetrators of the revenge knowing each other- "They feel each other." "Revenge is an act of

4. Pontigny, The Jew according to the Talmud, p. 107.
2. Saint John, 1m, 20.

332 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

virtue as soon as it is ordained by a legitimate power (ma(conic). A mason's conscience is inflexible; and the
The Great Architect of the Universe (Lucifer) is our senl judge." Thus, the recipient fulfilled his act of vengeance when "the day was about to break: Pastor who
"The light that illuminated it was Lucifer, the Morning Star." (p. 219)

The performance is over. Solomon strikes seven times.
of mallet on the antel: it does not belong to the true initiates,
The King of Tyre, the true Kabbalist, seizing his great poignard, complete the mysterious number by striking again two knocks. The recipient, representing one of the nine Masters sent to punish the murderer; the battery of the Grade: 8 strokes and 1; and age: eight years old and one completed.
no longer need interpretation. The speckled apron of red, lined and edged in black, the arm holding a dagger bloodied, embroidered on the bib, and the jewel, a dagger with silver blades, they explain themselves.

The password, Begohal Kol, in contempt of all, reminds us of the words of the prophet Ezekiel addressed to Jewish people: "You were thrown onto the bare ground on the day of your birth, like a person for whom one had "Nothing but contempt (begohal) t."

Paul Rosen gives a second password. The Tiler pretends to plunge a dagger into the candidate's heart and said Bikkoreth, in the murderer; and the other replied Nekah, innocent. We already know what that means.

True Wisdom is, in this grade, caricatured and reduced to a truly diabolical caution, necessary for the a Masonic sect to carry out its murders, including the great
The number is no longer a secret, and the most frequent victims
The chosen ones must be the priests and the traitors.

10. The {Sephirah. Za Crown. – The Illustrious Chosen One of the Fifteen.

The Kabbalistic meaning of the number Fifteen is already known to us known. The "Crown," Lucifer, wants to see his generation

1. Ezekiel, 16, 5.

(five) established in the three worlds, in the universe. At the 10th degree, Freemasonry must represent the first of the Ten Sephiroth, the: Crown, in either sense that we have indicated.

The Crown is the symbol of supreme domination, of complete victory over all their enemies.

To fully understand this 10th grade, one must remember The President's instruction of the 33rd degree: "These three assassins- Infamous sins are: Law, Property, Religion... Of These three infamous enemies, it is Religion that must be the constant concern about our deadly attacks, because a people who never survived their religion, and because of this by killing the Religion that we will have at our mother's house Law and Property; because it is by establishing on the the corpses of these assassins, the Masonic Religion, the Law Masonic, Masonic Property, which we will be able to "Regenerate Society 1."

The perfect representative of Lucifer's supreme power will be initiated into the 11th degree. Before becoming such a representative Sentient, he must earn his crown, by killing, after Abi-Bala, which symbolizes Religion, Sterkin and Oterfut, the two other assassins of Hiram, who symbolize the Law (the Kings) and Property. The 9th degree is intended to symbolize the destruction of Religion; the 10th, that of the Law and of the Property. The recipient will receive their civic crown there. the Chosen Ones of the race of Eblis, when he has brought them the two other heads: he will be acclaimed and glorified: "Glory To him! Eternal gratitude to the avenger of Hiram! (P. 223.)

The tapestry in the ninth-degree room was embroidered with flames. reds: vengeful rage, dipping its hand in blood. In the 10th degree, these flames will be replaced by red and white tears, tears of bloodthirsty rage and Tears of joy at victory. In the 11th degree, these tears will give way to flaming hearts, symbols of unity

1. Paul Rosen, p. 297.

cordial of the Sublime Elected Knights, representatives of the Supreme Power. First, a torch is lit at five branches in Lorient, from where the light emanates: the generation "in the sky"; then another torch in the south: the generation "in the air of the middle"; and finally a third to The West: the generation "on earth". The Temple, The Universe is illuminated by fifteen lights.

The recipient, after taking his oath, brings the heads of the two other assassins; in his right hand, that of Sterkin, on the left, that of Oterfut. The head of Sterkin, pierced by a dagger below the jaw, symbolizes the decapitation of monarchs; that of Oterfut, the ruin of the property.

King Maaca of Geth, in whose territory the two murderers had hidden, is a biblical figure, and the fact that Semei's slaves had taken refuge on his territory is mentioned in the Bible; but there is no— There is no connection between these facts and Masonic legend. This the use of names and passages from the Old Testament is proof that the Masonic system is an invention Jewish, and naturally to the benefit of the Jews. This observance— tion is confirmed by the meaning of the names following vants: Pen-Dicar, son of the poignavdement, name of the quarry from the refuge of the two scoundrels; Zerbaël, devouring fire of God, and Aeligam, the trembling of God, names of the two First of the fifteen Masters who discovered them, ct Herar, Detention, the name of the prison where they were imprisoned. Finally, The three heads of Hiram's assassins are a sign of the The initiate's final victory; he has earned his crown; he has shown himself worthy of being ranked among the valiant adversaries of Religion, of Law and of Property, among the worthy imitators of Satan, who imposed upon himself a Crown, to compensate for the lost crown an inauspicious day when three august persons, "of the lowest order" "assassins," condemned him to the loss of heavenly glory.

Ill Kings, w, 39.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 335

41, The Ensoph. — The Sublime Elected Knight,

No, let's not go into the physical meaning of this degree, that Léo Taxil declares to be so indecent and disgusting that he didn't have the courage to speak about it. The Kabbalistic meaning— Jewish, which interests us to a degree a hundred times greater, would perhaps be difficult to recognize, if we did not have the general idea that has guided us without error so far.

What, then, can be the representation in the 11th degree? tion of PÆnsoph, of the Infinite, after the phy- development musical, moral and intellectual character of the man who presented himself to our observation in the first ten degrees?

The President of the 33rd degree explains his sacred word. Adonati, by "Representative of the Power." This is not the translation of the name Adonai, but, as almost all- days, that's the core idea of the rank.

The individual representative of Power is the Jew,
The quintessential man, the perfect man.

In the questions of the Order, one asks: "Are you Sublime Knight Chosen? – Reply: My name can tell you To prove. – Q. What is it? – A.: Emerok. – Q. What What does this name mean? – Answer: A true man in all circumstances tance. » (P. 324.)

We have already given the meaning of the word Emerok:
I am polite, I have become perfect. But how can the Jew
Is he a perfect man, a Representative of Power?
An image of the Ensoph?

The Kabbalah taught us this, and the Talmud confirmed it.
this teaching. That the Freemasons do not become of illusion: they are, within Freemasonry, Judaized, reborn as adopted Jews, enslaved by the Jews, the esca-beautiful of the chosen people; they make a covenant (Berith) with the Jews, they confirm it by an oath (Neder), ct eu await the reward (Schelemoth), a temporal good
If they are faithful, a punishment; if they are unfaithful.

Let us first consider that upon receiving a candidate,
Only twelve brothers are present, symbolizing, according to

336 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The Jewish interpretation, the twelve sons of Jacob. The family Jacob's brotherhood must be complemented by the adoption of new brothers:
the room is lit by twenty-four lights, and the attou-chement means doubling through adoptive lineage.
The battery consists of twelve strokes. The session is open to the twelfth hour.

According to Albert Pike, quoted by Paul Rosen (p. 166),
"among the fifteen masters who contributed to avenging

the assassination of Hiram, Solomon chose twelve, and the rewarded them by entrusting them with the government of the twelve tribes." "All of King Solomon's enemies are destroyed." Jehovah, the androgynous, bisexual God, reigns supreme on the twelve tribes, mage of the people, and symbolizes the "Twelve months of the year, of time that has no end" (Ensoph}). Albert Pike was a true initiate.

Besides full incorporation into the Jewish people, this rank he also effects the perfect incorporation into Lucifer, he completes the Baptism of Wisdom. This is why at the adoption of a new brother, only twelve brothers are present: The newcomer is the thirteenth! Read again the appearance of the thirteenth, on page 222, let us remember that the number Thirteen is the diabolical number. The twelfth hour, at which session is open, does not mean noon, but midnight... the hour of the Genius of Darkness: for we part "At daybreak."

Before finishing the first eleven days, let's reproduce the interpretation given to it by the Instruction given to the general General Garibaldi: "Among the acts of man, the most divine is obviously the one that allows him to perpetuate his division Unit: the act of generation.

"And as the Clericals hide this truth under the absurd superstitions of a Dicu the Father begetting eternement, Dicu the eternally begotten Son, and Dicu the Holy Spirit eternally uniting the other two, we let's teach:

"Whether the Apprentice, Boaz, personification of Osiris or of Bacchus, coming to seek the truth in the Lodge, finds that he is a male and incomplete God for the generation of beings.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 337

"That the Companion, Jakin, personification of /sis or of Venus, is the female God who complements the male God and makes the generation of beings possible.

"That the Master, Mahabone or Aac-Benac, is the Dicu complete hermaphrodite, son of Lot and his daughter, son of sun and earth, man in full possession of its generating power.

"The Clerics believe in a supernatural revelation; we fight it by teaching the Secret Master that

The awareness of one's own existence is the source of everything that which is immaterial in man.

"The Clericals believe in the end of Humanity; we Let us teach our perfect Masters that the existence of Humanity
Manitas is eternal, for it reproduces itself endlessly.

"Having thus awakened in our Brothers the idea of struggle, of the all-out fight they have to wage against the Keyto the ricians, we provide them with weapons by teaching them to Intimate secretaries driven by curiosity and espionage
The enemy is a praiseworthy virtue, and to the Prefects and Judges, that It is natural law that assists us in this struggle; explaining to the building supervisors that because of this natural right, all means necessary to ensure our triumphs are essentially and fundamentally virtuous, especially the elimination of the unnecessary, which is the responsibility of the Elected by the nine, the repressions through ad hoc laws which are reserved for the Elect of the fifteen, and the fulfillment of triumph, the definitive victory of Masonic Virtue over
The clerical virtue with which the Elected Knight is charged.

It was pointless to give an old soldier the explanation complete and accurate of the first eleven degrees: for him, it
We needed something more practical. The unlimited right to The man with lust had to be explicitly taught in the lower grades, as well as in the other grades, his absolute independence from a just God who rewards Virtue punishes crime.

22

338 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

This instruction demonstrates once again the flexibility the Heads of the Order, when it comes to revealing, in a
To a certain extent, the secrets of their diabolical cabal.

Man made perfect, that is to say, independent of the goad of his conscience and the fear of Dicu, declared his own God; man made "like the Most High", and at the same time incorporated into the Jewish people, implicitly-ment, at the Trough of Light; in short, the Kabbalistic man, Judaized and devilish, that's the result of the initiation of the First Eleven Days of the 33 Degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Accepted. This is how man fulfills his duties towards himself!

The Kabbalistic doctrine of the first eleven degrees of the Freemasonry can therefore be summarized as follows:

4° To eternal matter, passive substance (Malkuth, Kingdom)

2. The vital spirit of Man (Nephesch), Force eternal, virile and active principle, represented by the phallus (Jessod, Basque);

3° the fruit of their union, through corruption, resurrected into a new life (Zod, Glory)

4° in a living human body (Nesakh, Triumph), of which Instincts, of divine origin, must be conscientious. I obeyed.

5° The human soul (Ruach) is attached to the vital spirit. seat of human Pamour (Tiphereth, Beauty),

6 of the immense expansion of the First Cause (Khesed, Grace}, that is to say, of the universal soul;

7th individualized plot for a concentration (Din, Justice), whose Conscience, of divine origin, must not recognize to be born with no master above herself.

8 To the vital spirit and the soul of man is united the Spirit intelligent (Nischmah), emanation of Intelligence (Binah) ct of

9° Wisdom (Khokhma) which form

10° The Crown (Kether) or the final revelation of 41° The Infinite Being (Ensoph). Human Reason must therefore

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 339

to recognize itself as a revelation of divinity; divine, She is absolutely independent of any authority; she is sovereign.

"Man is his own God!"

SECOND FORTUNE

42. The 40th Sephirah. The Kingdom. –The Grand Master Architect.

The stones being cut, perfected and polished, it
The task now is to build the Temple, the foundations, the walls, arches, vault, the perfect People, and from him to give it, to govern it, a perfect clergy. This is formed people and this clergy, starting again with the last Se-phiruh and finally the first one, which will represent the Supreme Pontiff.

The new Hamont password, the multitude, the people vulgar, expresses the whole idea of the Kabbalistic Kingdom that's what we're talking about. It's the common people, as a mass inert, blind, formless, only the perfect People will be chosen:
This common people being the masons of the first series, designated by the old password: Rab-banain, the mul-
The attitude of those who build. We will build like the Battery
As indicated: ten strokes in two series, the first of one stroke and two blows, the second of two blows and one blow, two blows and two blows°.

To understand this battery, it is necessary to distinguish between
The human way of building versus the satanic way.
Men first laid 4 cubic stones as a foundation-ment; on top of that 3 stones, the 1st floor; then 2 picrres, the second floor; and finally 1 stone which completes the structure.
But Lucifer has his workers start from the top.
The temple does not rise towards the cycle: it descends towards hell, to the center of the earth. He lays one stone as a foundation; there-below 2 stones, under keys 2 and 1, or 3 picts; and finally 2

- 1, Léo Taxil, p. 324.
2. Paul Rosen, p. 358.

340 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

and 2, or 4 stones, to finish his wall. To be logical, he will have to go down into the cellar of the Lodge to build the
See. That is indeed what he will do in the 12th grade.

The progression of this grade indicates the foundation and the First floor of Lucifer's wall: "One step and two steps precipitated" – precipitated, because the picrres are linked together by the lime of the mystical paste.

The regulation torches arranged as in Apprentice Lodge, symbolize the same first series of
The Battery: a stone and two picts.

This refers to the construction of a temple; the garment
The President of the Workshop clearly indicates it: a dress of High Priest, white. The black pocket in his apron blane nons indicates the same thing as the sacred word, Adonai. that is to say, there is here a Manichean mixture of Good and of Evil.

The supervisors are dressed in civilian clothes, as if they were... masons under the direction of the Architect Priest.

The jewel of this grade is a square of metal, a symbol of the evil world. On one of the faces are engraved four half-cereles; – perhaps quarters of a cerele symbolizing the four worlds of the universe; – otherwise, the intersection of the meridian and the equator, symbol of the globe of the earth; In front, several stars, the planets; in the center, a triangle containing the letter A, Architect of the Universe. On the other facing, the five columns of the Corinthian order architecture Thien, Doric, Tuscan, Ionic and Gothic, meaning the Brothers from the various peoples of the earth, the multitude, Jamon, from within which we will take the chosen ones whom we will perfect-nera using the instruments contained in the "case of mathematics !".

"Which is the first of all the arts?" This is the Question of order. The answer is: "Architecture, of which the geometry is the key as well as the rule of all the "Sciences." Geometry means, first and foremost, measurement.

4, Léo Taxil, IJ, p. 340.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 341

of the land. Conquering the land is the secret of the royal art.

On the altar is an urn in which there is a [unclear] made with milk, oil, wine and flour, – pro-products of animals, trees, shrubs and herbs; This is the cement with which the golden trowel will work. Gold It provides food and keeps the masons busy building. the Jewish Temple.

The recipient is told: "You are going to become a Priest of Freemasonry. The perfect people must be a people priestly – Jewish. Preparation for this office requires The candidate receives Confession and Communion. In this grade one ape these Christian sacraments by publicly confessing to the recipient his faults against the brothers, etc. to receive on one's knees, presented with the golden truncheon, a bou-she was made of the mystical paste which she was assured was a piece from the heart of Hiram! The ingredients must represent his gentleness, wisdom, strength and kindness! (p. 234).

In his Mystique (1. VI, ch. r, n. 2) Gærres gives a summary of the communions of the Montanists, the Munichians, Bogomils, fallen Templars and other sects, communions as dreadful as they are disgusting, and he said: "Those who had tasted it even a little did not give it up" almost never heresy to return to the path of the "Truth." The effect of a diabolical communion binds Fâme human communion, as powerfully as Satan's, The Eucharistic tradition binds him to God. For this ceremony, one imitates also the Christian rite of consecration of a church, where The bishop blessed water to which he mixed salt, ashes and wine, and over which he pronounces the true praise—The marvelous power of water: "Sanctificarei, cte..."

In order to confirm the recipient in his union, mystick with the "Great Architect of the Universe", and make it a completely devoted priest, he is given the name of Island Moabon, son of the race descended from the incest of Lot, ct on lni made him kiss the letter G on his knees, in the Flaming Star—

1. Pontificale Romanum.

342 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

boyante, whose meaning we have already explained full of turpitude and pantheistic error.

Christians bury their dead facing upwards the sky, which they hope to see open up to them; "the respectable Master Iliram was buried with his head turned upside down against the Star. Flamboyant, her mouth on the letter G, engraved on a gold plate with a triangle, which is the definitive emblem of three "Mystical angles united in one." (p. 235.) One could not speak more explicitly to reveal that the Flam— Star boyante with the letter G means at the same time, ct the divi— unity of the Generating Force which derives its light from Fire infernal being residing at the center of the earth, and Lucifer in per— sound, which by this Phallic Force is the Great Archi— the center of the Universe, the center of the triangle whose three angles are the Crown he arrogated to himself, the Wisdom he per— vertie, cl l'Intellisence qu'il a fausséc.

The Candidate, after humbly kissing the lingam of Lucifer is consecrated and proclaimed Grand Master Arrhitectes.

Why don't Freemasons reveal these horrors?
Are they uninitiated into Apprenticeship?

Satan, it is true, would be supremely imprudent if he allowed!

43. The 9th Sephirah. Za Base, – The Royal-Arche.

The bonding of the picrres with cement, at the 12th degree, is followed at the 13th by an arch, and at the 14th by a foot. The 12th degree drew the elementary forms of the Temple, the stones and the mystical cement. These elements must be considered before... to establish a symbolic guiding force, in the first series of eleven, by the Companion's phallus. Now, "the masons of the The Royal Arch degree is called that of Companions. This second degree of the second series of eleven must therefore also This corresponds to the Sephirah called Base or foundation. that the phallus is in the degree of Fellow Craft, the Column of bronze ballast in the degree of Royal-Arch; it is the sym-

4. Carlile, Manual of Freemasonry, p. 109.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 343

the base upon which the formation of the People will rest Perfect. This base is the freedom that the Order claims from the Masonic education of the people. Once this is acquired, one de- will similarly mandate for the people Za freedom or license of Conscience and freedom or license of thought. These three links bertés form the subject of the 13th, 14th and 15th degrees, conti- kill, so to speak, the physical nature of the Perfect People. and correspond exactly to the Sephiroth, the Base, the Glory and Triumph, as understood by the Kabbalah. are indeed the main principles of the perversion of the people that Freemasonry has in mind, and that it demands Logically, if the Kabbalistic Jew and Lucifer are involved, they must to achieve supreme and exclusive government over all Puni- Towards. But let's not get ahead of ourselves.

The 13th degree must lay the foundation, the active principle, of the perversion of the people. To find it, we will need to- ashes in the cellar, since the Kabbalistic Freemasons- Ticks build their Temple upside down, from the surface of the earth towards its center where the Great Architect of the Universe.

"The 13th degree assembly is held in the basement of the Masonic premises. Two cellars are available for this grade and the following; these two vaulted cellars communicate with each other through a narrow corridor; they have neither doors nor windows.

enters one through a trapdoor communicating with the ground floor of the building, and this first cellar gives access to the other." (p. 236.) In truth: a trapdoor! And there we are Go down blindfolded! The cellar vault is supported by nine columns which bear various names of God, because that the three times three Sephiroth are emanations of the Architect of the Universe who sits enthroned upon their feet as a crown on three interlaced triangles.

The great Kabbalistic-Masonic mystery is revealed to in the middle of this underground chamber: the upper bronze column bearing a luminous triangle whose interior lighting makes to bring out the three Hebrew Jods, Ja, Je, Ji, having at center the Phoenician letter which corresponds to G, and is not

344 KABBALIST INTERPRETATION

than another representation of the phallus. The Fecon Force- The goddess of nature is the Masonic divinity, the Great Ar- She is the architect of the Universe from a philosophical perspective. He identifies with Lucifer, who is its personification.

The legend of this grade claims that the prophet Enoch hidden under nine arches, each bearing the designation one of the qualities of the Great Architect of the Universe, a delta or an agate triangle, inscribed in gold with "Unspeakable name".

We already know that Ja Kabbale inscribes that the ten Sephiroth are attributes of the First Cause. The pro- Phetius Enoch, enlightened by a divine dream (p. 237), these are the Babylonian Jews who, illuminated by a diabolical vision, like the Spiritists of today, the Swedenborgs, etc., hid the Crown of the entire Universe beneath the other nine Sephiroth. We understand that it was Lucifer himself who... The Crown was awarded.

The "unspeakable name", the "lost word" or hidden word, that which is not revealed to the uninitiated, only becomes apparent to the For true initiates, the Sckemhamphorasch, the name explained. 17th degree, the poor brothers caught in the diabolical "trap" lique, will fall to their knees upon pronouncing it under one of its multiple forms; they will cry out: Abaddon, Prince of Darkness.

Zebulun, Johaben and Stolkin are the names of the three Great Ones Master Architects to whom Masonic legend attributes- to cover under the ninth vault the delta and the column of a- rain; they do not discover the marble column where finds explained the pronunciation of the unspeakable engraved word on the delta.

"Those of Zebulun who were seasoned men, always armed and ready to fight, they came to offer their services to David, without any duplicity of heart 1"; Jokaben, son of Joha, one of the bravest of those who were in David's army?"; Stolkin gathering them—that's the si-

1. I Paralip., xu, 33.
2. I Paralip., x1, 45, 26.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 345

meaning of these three names. We do not know in the Bible of a character named Stolkin; it is probable—The plural of the active participle of the verb Za/akh, to succeed, to succeed: "The elders of the Jews built the temple and everything they did was successful: they worked on this building—ficc by the command of the Dicu of Israel, and by the order of Cyrus, of Darius, of Artaxerces, kings of Persia!. »

The President offers a prayer to the Great Architect, and promises him, on behalf of everyone, to "take full care of the "Great work of perfection"; — it is to this "great work" that the Jews work tirelessly with fervor unrestrained.

Touching of this degree is to place one's hands under the brother's cries, as if we wanted to lift Him into the air, and They told him: Toub bagani gamal abel; "The camel groaned—sant (overloaded beast of burden, the people) returns under my protection; » they respond by doing the same thing to you saying, "Zebulun is a good mason."

Perceptive minds will find the seeds of change in all of this. of the armed revolution.

The battery of 5 shots proves that an arch was built on the top floor which was marked for 4 shots. You need at least five stones for the construction of an ark.

The jewel is a medal with the famous "trapdoor" of a on one side, and the "delta" on the other.

The entire degree means, according to the teachings of the President—tooth of the 33rd degree, that "the works aim to per-improvement of the people's education, through examination deepened the pantheistic notions that we possess—gifts on the First Cause, and the modification of Thought—idealistic (Christian) movement made compatible with the

the needs of Justice and the necessities of Progress (mason-
"Nice?"

As confirmation of our analysis of the 12th ct of the

1. I Ezra, vi, 14.
2. Paul Rosen, p. 257.

346 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

13th degree, we again cite the teaching given by The President of the 33rd degree: "12th degree. The works emblé-matics using the worker's tools are termined (1-11 degrees); work using instruments the architect replaces them. This means that this grade marks the transition from moral and material studies to philosophical and spiritual studies. The true instruction-
The Masonic ceremony proper begins. – 13th degree
– You dedicate yourself to Masonic honor and duty Masonic, which will henceforth be the pole stars of your existence; and the Master's word, the emblem of the regethe creation of nature, is revealed to you as also the name of the First Cause.

Let us add his explanation of the sacred words of these two degrees: "Man owes to his fellow men, once the established political freedom, to inquire into the legitimacy, of attributes and form, center and mobile of Social government, of the ererific power. »Etvoisale grade of Grand Master Architect, the 12th degree; thus his word sacred meaning: Chief, Head. –"Man owes to his own-blather to put before their eyes the terrible dangers which result from the submission of political power and of the pou-
"See scientific power in theocratic power." That is the Grade of Royal Arch, the 13th degree; therefore its sacred word means:
Should demonstrations be limited?; demonstrations and institutions political, scientific and thevocracial activities to be limited: war to governments, to beliefs, to religion! – There you have it
The Kabbalistic Base for the formation of a new people!

The perfection of this new people will consist in the complete development of the Judeo-Satanic germ that the 13th degree has deposited in the souls of the Brothers already Judaized and Satanized. This seed is the Ja Je Ji with the Phoenician letter engraved on the bronze column. The idea it contains must fer-to lie in people's minds and lead them through corruption

1. Paul Rosen, p. 268.
2. Ibid., p. 282.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 347

to regeneration, from an old life to a new life in the 14th degree. The result will be, in the 15th degree, triumph of the life-giving spirit: new Jewish priests, sacrificial-fire geniuses.

14. The 8th Sephirah. Glory. – The Great Scotsman of the sacred vault,

We enter the second cellar, which is supposed to reveal the image of the Sephirah, Glory, a feminine and passive principle, Freedom of conscience!

It is regrettable that we do not have the Ritual of this full grade. With the fragments that are before us, It is difficult for us to demonstrate the mysteries of this degree in its symbols.

The starting point of the transformation of the new Jew In a Jewish Levite, let's say, the spoils of his ordination are the spoils—the recipient's understanding of everything that might be useful to him weapon: "The census of the children of Israel who were twenty years old and above and who could go to the war having been fought, 603,550 were found. For the Levites were not counted among them... for the Lord spoke to Moses and said, "Do not name the "The tribe of Levi;... but establish them for "to take care of the Tabernacle of the testimony, of all its "vases and everything concerning the ceremonies."

The recipient then moves from the cellar forming the vault from the Royal Arch, through a long, dark corridor, to a second cave named Vote Secrète de Perfection.

At the entrance, there is a small ditch that the Great Scots cross on a plank, but that the recipient must jump.

What could this long corridor and this ditch mean? Should we jump? In the Jewish sense, it's perhaps a representation of the distance between the office of the Levites and the occupations of the other tribes of Judah. To enter into

1. Numbers, 1, 45-49.

348 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

the priesthood, you have to cross an abyss that separates you from always other men. In the diabolical sense, one wants to symbolize the abyss existing between the kingdom of God or of nature and the Kingdom of Lucifer.

Cross this abyss; this time without eyes bandaged; it's only the first step that costs! This is a

; L

Once accomplished, the voice of conscience will be silenced.

Always! Enter the priesthood of Eblis, you will have

Having acquired Freedom of Conscience; henceforth, you will pass over the abyss as if "on a plank"! Don't you

Let him not be exploited, neither by the lion, nor by Zerbaël with his

T mp

Sword! The lion could well be the "roaring lion that prowls, looking for someone to devour, but he has a key in his mouth

that he offers you a key with which you can open the Ark of Alliance where the true pronounciation of the

F

Unspeakable name! Then you will know your God. Zerbaël

It was well to be the "mad devourer of God";

could well be the "devouring fire of God"; but its

His threats are useless; he doesn't carry them out! Jump!

Once the jump is completed, the recipient learns the legend of the degree (p. 240) and the pronounciation of the unspeakable Name. It is: Hih-hoh, with very aspirated h's. (Khikhoh, imperative) From Khakhu, wait!)

The true secret name of Jehovah that, out of respect, the The Israelites did not pronounce it, and only the High Priest had the right to pronounce it once a year, on the feast of the Propitiation is Jihepéh, He who is. To avoid the blasphemy by pronouncing the word Jihevéh, one substituted for its vowels are those of the word Adonai, Lord, which makes Jehovah. Hih-hoh is not one of the ten Kabbalistic names of Dicu. These ten names, according to Saint Jerome, EZ, 3? 1

L ?

Strong; Eloha, the Provident; Elohim, the plural Eloha;

; ; y ? 7 I ?

Sabaoth, Dicu of the armies; Elion, the sublime; Ehejeh ascher

Ehejeh, I am who I am; Adonai, Lord; Jah, abbreviation of Jehovah; Shaddai, the Almighty; and Tetragramma-

3 9 ? ð

4. I Picrre, v, 8.

2. Ep. 136 ad Marcellam.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 349

your, Four-letter word: Jheh- the Jiheveh without vowels.

After the ludicrous revelation of the unspeakable name, we explain to the candidate the cubic stone with points, containing the Sacred words of the various grades already known, and the word Sehem-Hamphorash, "the Name explained." However, it is not revealed not yet explained the unspeakable Name is: Lucifer, the "Seven-letter name."

The Israelites looked at the name Jeh, called the Tetragrammaton, a four-letter word, with a superstition that became the basis of Kabbalistic magic. Many Rabbis claim that Moses and Christ performed the curs. great miracles through the hidden power of this name. "Moses did not used only this great and glorious name, and all his miracles were performed by Schemhamphorasch, the Name expliqué, which is the name Jihepéh (He is) ct Éhkejéh ascher éhejéh. (I am who I am)! » « Whoever pronounces the name Tetragrammalon, by his letters or as it is written, will not have "On the other side of the world?"

It is neither useless nor rash to assert that the franc-Kabbalistic masonry laying, in its first degrees of the second series of eleven, the basics of magic diabolism a code that only the most intelligent Freemasons will perceive and will understand. Note that the Speaker's speech highlights the advantage that the fractions of the Back Lodges have to "communicate with spirits; the geuies which are dependent on the Good Principle (Lucifer) can only help them to improve themselves." (P.244.)

The candidate takes his oath and is then "purified". He moves it forward near a tub called the "sea of brazen", and then they inject a few drops of water into his side his left hand exposed, saying to him, "Be purified."

The immense vase made by Hiram for the Temple of Salomyn was an imitation of the bronze basin that the Lord

4, Liber Caphtor, fol. 56, cit. in Buxlorfi Lexicon Uebraicum and Chaldaicum, p. 160,

2. Codex Sanhedrin, cap. iv, fol. 55.

3. HI Kings, seen, 28.

350 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

had ordered Moses to do this and to place between the tabernacle-nacle of testimony and altar. "Aaron and his sons wash there-will cover their hands and feet when they have to approach from the altar, lest otherwise they be punished by dead. "

This purification was not a figure of the Sacrament of Baptism, but that of Penitence, as is proven by if Saint Gregory, indeed? It was necessary for the priests who were to officiate at the altar. Before being consecrated, Aaron and his sons were washed with water 3.

In the cellar we are working on, there are representatives sensations of all the objects that were in the Solomon's Temple. The candidate, to whom the promise to "make him preach", is therefore obliged to purify his conscience in order to fulfill his duties as a Levite Judaico-Masonic. One can well assume that its conscience is far from being tranquil; he has committed himself by terrible oaths to a "Work" that he absolutely must to disapprove, especially if he has already realized that he has engaged in practices that obviously led him to magic This is to democratization. This uneasy conscience, perhaps Terrified, she must be calmed, if possible, by a ceremony religious ceremony which deeply impressed him. The one who has already gone beyond the twelfth degree, which is what made the The perilous "leap" will allow his conscience to be pacified by this Biblical ablution.

Alas! Having accepted a first lie, he accepts-tera will gladly give a second one, namely, the assurance that he is purified and that he no longer has to heed the cries of his conscience !

There it is, freedom of conscience. Freed from its serus-From the pain and remorse, conscience is stripped of all restriction and any inconvenience; she accepts the permission of all

1. Exodus, xxx, 18.

2. Hom. 17 in Evang.
3. Leviticus, 5th century, 6.

OF THE 38 SCOTTISH PECESS 351

what his old prejudices forbade him. The freedom of Conscience, in the Masonic sense, is the freedom to omit. to command good and to commit the forbidden evil.

The gold ring, in the shape of a wedding band, that each Grand Scossais, contains the inscription of his name and these Words: "Virtue unites what death cannot separate." This The ring reminds us of the medieval practice of writing the pact with the demon ct to seal it with his seal or ring.

What a macabre vision: Masonic virtue performs your union with Aeblis, and even death will not be able to break it- To solve! A terrible prospect for eternity!

To avoid being overwhelmed by this bleak future, we must, First and foremost, strengthen your heart, murder your conscience and to submit it to the supremacy of the Angel of Light. The President of the 33rd degree teaches you that the Sacred Word of 14th degree signifies: "Supreme of light!" and that its "works tend to proclaim everywhere the inalienable right- the absolute freedom of conscience and thought possessed a goal shared by all men, without exception, and that they should be attached to the study of the simplest and most formal claim of this right?

Freedom of conscience, in Masonic slang, means License to Evil.

What do the 3 signs, the 3 touches, mean?

Three covered words and the three passwords for this rank?

The first of these symbols seem to look to the past of recipient, the second group the present, the third group wash-nir. Given the lack of data on the ritual of this grade, we must rather guess than describe their meaning- cation. This grade is the third in the second eleven. and corresponds to that of "Master" in the first eleven.

The third-degree ceremonies signify the transformation From the Profane to the True or Kabbalistic Man, the Glory of The archetypal man. The Great Scotsman of the Sacred Vote

4. Görres, Mystique, l. vu, c. 4, u. 2.
- 2, Paul Rosen, p. 257.

(named Scottish because they wanted to mix in the name of James VI, King of England and Scotland, a spiritualist and magician of his time) must become a Jewish or Kabbalistic priest. He is indeed a supernatural thing! We call the Scotsman, also a Grand Elect, Perfect and Sublime Mason, because in this grade we reveal in particular the purpose of the Freemasonry, intellectualization, spiritualization exercising supreme domination over animality and materiality the man.

At the 3rd degree, the neophyte received the blow of the mason's mallet. a sniff on the forehead, and with it the sign that constituted it a another Master, trained in the image of the one whom the masons they name their "Master". In the 14th degree, the candidate is constituted "Priest of this Master".

For the Jews he becomes a Levite, for Lucifer he enters in the Order of Magicians.

Alin to ascertain the sincerity and fearlessness of the As a candidate, he is made to repeat the Sign of the Oath of the 6th degree, to which also relates the first encounter with the Berith, Neder, Schelemoth, Alliance-Promise-Retributions; the first covered Word, Zebulun, of the 13th degree, and The first password, Schibholeth, of the 2nd degree. It is the pass.

The present follows, the Sign of Fire: the right hand and under the left cheek, palm facing outwards, as if one could not bear the brightness of the light and the heat of the fire coming out of the burning bush (p. 327) from which Dicu (the Dien-Fire!) he pronounced his own name. To this sign correspond they lay the second touch which signifies the support mutual support that we give each other to encourage one another, the second word covered, Makob, the damned, and the second password, Ll-Khanan, the God of Canaan. Ham, of the race of Eblis, is one of the great Saints of the Underworld!

The third sign represents Pavenir: the impression that will make the new citizen of the Kingdom of Fire his new

1. Paul Rosen, p. 269.

remains. Here is the sign of admiration and silence ("the "Crying and gnashing of teeth!"): raise your hands eyes open and one looks at the (lost) sky, tilting one's head to the left (desolation or mockery of God). At this sign correspond to touching: clinging to one another as if we wanted to kiss (or tear each other apart, because everything has a double meaning in these signs), the Covered Word, Adonat (the (a hated god who is mocked), and Passwords:
Keleh, burn, and Nekham, vengeance?, or Ben-Makeh, son of the struck, and Bam-garah, Temple of contention. These words help us understand the tragedy that is being played out in recipient who, unaware of the meaning of these symbols and from these Hebrew words, perhaps with feelings of hidden terrors, perhaps with criminal nonchalance, perhaps with an already hardened conscience and bravery inspired by a proud hatred against God and his Christ underwent his initiation into the Levitical dignity of this grade.

This rank deeply moved us. As did that of Master, it is composed with a view to increasing the glory of the
"The Great Architect of the Universe" through the reproduction of himself in the poor men who have the courage to to take the perilous "leap" and throw oneself into the priestly order dowry, whether Jewish or Satanic.

15. The 8th Sephirah. The Triumph. – The Knight of the Orient or of the Sword.

The Knight of the East is the Jew; the Knight of the East and of the West (17th degree), it is the Templar.

The 4th degree depicted the Sephirah / Strength or Triumph in the individual man; the 15th shows how by the by force we make the people we want to free triumph and Perfect.

The emancipation of the Masonic people from the monarchical yoke

4. Matthew 12:12
2. Paul Rosen, p. 363.
3. Léo Taxil, p. 326.

of the Jewish people, Judah and Benjamin, from the captivity of Babylon: Zerubbabel, son of King Shealtiel, obtained from Cyrus the permission to return with his people to Jerusalem and there rebuild the temple. His work was, through the malice of Samaritans and a prohibition by Artaxerxes, interrupted until the second year of Darius' reign. When Zerubbabel resumed the construction of the temple, "Thanai, leader of those who were beyond the river (Euphrates), Stharburzanaï and their advisors!" they sent to the king Darius wanted to know if the Jewish prince had actually received any. Cyrus's permission. They received an affirmative reply. tive of the order not to prevent it.

The Masonic narrative makes Phomme Stharburzanaï a Starburzanaï River, and adds details to the story invented to make kings ridiculous and prepare the way for the esoteric credulous masons to revolt against civil authority.

The recipient plays the role of Zerubbabel. Cyrus... grants the requested permission after being intimidated, in a dream, by a roaring Lion, symbolizing the people, and by an eagle, surrounded by rays, the figure of the Great Architect of the Universe, ordering to "restore freedom to captives." "Cyrus's generosity was therefore not as "How meritorious she seemed to you," said the Most High later. Illustrious Master to the recipient Zerubbabel.

Zerubbabel, says the Masonic tale, upon returning with other Jews from Babylon to Jerusalem, was prevented by Freemason brothers to cross the bridge over the Starbur River-Zanaï; but he forced his way through and arrived at the Jewish capital.

The three letters LDP are written on this bridge, which mean... They are involved in this drama, "Freedom to pass"; but in the country where the Bourbons reigned: Lilia destrue pedibus, Destroy the lilies by trampling them underfoot; and in the others country: Freedom of thought, liberation of the mind yoke of the Christian faith.

1. I Ezra, v, 3.

OF THE 38 SCOTTISH DEGREES 355

The river that we like to call Starburzanaï carries Corpses, crowns, and pieces of armor. It's The political program of Freemasonry. The first The key moments of this drama unfolded in the Green Room, representing... both the court of Cyrus, and a fortress, a prison for the Jews captives. Columns J and B were found overturned by Earth. The second act, representing the journey of Zerobabel, and the affair on the bridge, is playing out in a forecourt between the The Green Room and the Red Room. The Red Room is the setting for the third act and represents Jerusalem. There, Zerubbabel is received by Jewish Freemasons who, during the captivity under Nebuchadnezzar, had secretly remained at Jerusalem. The Most Illustrious Master receives him among the true and legitimate masons, and the consecrated Knight of the East or of The Sword. The new Jewish Levite becomes a Knight and Mason. A Jew and one of the Princes of the tribe of Judah.

The meaning of this rank is the triumph of the people
The election will end with physical force. Go to the place of this document.
Trine is at the angle of the physical triangle where the vital spirit resides.
physical strength.

Zerobabel, "frozen for seventy years", represents the Jewish people held captive in Babylon. The J. and B. columns ren-spilled on the floor, in the Green Room, no longer mean Jachin and Boaz, but Judah and Benjamin. During the touching-which represents Zerubbabel's struggle with the Brothers
On the bridge, one said Judah, the other replied Benjamin. Of these symbols, the Freemasons who are still Christian, and even
All those who are not Jewish must finally understand that when they were received as Apprentices between the two columns J. ct B., they were enlisted as laborers for the Jews, ct called upon to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for them.

The password Ya-Voroum-Hammaiim, given by Leo
Taxil (p. 327) appears to be nothing more than a corruption. P. Rosen {p. 365} gives it: Zahaborou-Hammaim. Yakhaborou ham-maim (the caux were réuuiics) recalls the miracle of the pas-wise man of the Israelites by the Red Sea and the destruction of Pharaoh's army, overwhelmed by the returning waters. The corpses,

356 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

crowns and broken weapons carried by the mythical river Starburzanaï are a similar kind of threat to crowned heads and their armies.

The sacred word Raphodon should be written Raphidim. It is the name of the eleventh station of the Israelites after their exit of Egypt. There was no water to drink; and when
The people murmured against God, Moses brought forth water from the stone of Ilorebt; it was at Raphidim that the Israelites were attacked by Amalek. Joshua defeated and annihilated him.
These two events in Israeli history resemble the two Facts represented in this grade. The Great Word Schalal Sthalom Ab, he has taken away peace, or he has destroyed prosperity from my father, hardly any connection with the history of The return of the Jews to Jerusalem. Is this perhaps the meaning of the President's instruction of the 33rd degree concerning the 15th of-gré: "You declare war on apathy under some

"In what form does it manifest itself?"

Let's conclude with this level by noting the First's response Supervisor at the request of the Most Illustrious Master: "What
"What is your origin?" – "I am from the tribe of Judah." The Judah-
The sation of peoples by Freemasonry is no longer a mystery.

The formation of a new tribe of Judah, its adoption by the true, still-existing tribes of Judah and Benjamin, the initiation of this new people between the columns J. and B., all this is accomplished in the four first degrees of the second Masonic Eleven. He indeed presents a new Kingdom, made up of new citizens (12°) accepting a new doctrine (13°), are being-giving a new consciousness (14°) and freeing their thought of all divine authority (15°). On such a foundation, it will be easy to continue the construction of the Kabba Temple-listic, and to infuse him with the soul of the archetypal Man, his Beauty, its strength and its grace. This will be the work of the 16th and 17th centuries.
and 18° degrees.

1. Exodus, 17:6.

2. Paul Rosen, p. 269.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 357

16. The 7th Sephirah. Beauty. – The Prince of Jerusalem.

Historically, this is the desired rank after the start of the academic year.
Jews in Jerusalem: the Prince will be the principle of unity in the mass of the free people. The Kabbalistic interpretation requests the representation of the Sephirah in this grade Beauty: unity and harmony in diversity.

Wisdom, Beauty, and Strength are the three representatives often prenized in Freemasonry. In his teachings,
The President of the 33rd degree said about the 16th degree: "You will explain the almost insurmountable difficulties that are experienced-will see the reconstruction of the Liberty Building, once
Its three main foundations are laid: the Wisdom of rulers,
The strength of the governed and the harmony of invested interests;
you will advise that it is only through tireless work-gale ct incessant, made with the sword in one hand and the trowel

On the other hand, we will manage to raise it!

The harmony of the parts and unity in their diversity,
That is Beauty. But how to represent this Beauty?
in the perfect People? The same speaker tells us: "The 16th-degree works highlight that Equality human freedom entails as an immediate consequence and the independence of nations as historical groupings toric or territorial, and as a mediate consequence that the rights and general interests of humanity do not
"Cannot be bounded or limited by borders?"
Man owes it to his fellow men to recognize their equality.
This is the rank of Prince of Jerusalem, the 16th degree. Also Does his sacred word mean: Months of the year, equal times.

The Beauty of the Perfect People consists in this: that there is a Prince and a People, all of humanity embracing all nations in their diversity, and preserving harmony in all their rights and general interests.

1. Paul Rosen, p. 269.

2. Ibid., p. 258.

3. Ibid., p. 283.

358 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The idea of a universal Masonic republic is conceivable.
saddle. All nations will pay their tribute to the Prince who will reign over them. The Prince of Jerusalem is his image.

This Prince is one of the twelve Elders of the people (p. 258).

The promotion will have been noticed, "the increase in "salary," as the Freemasons say, which is reserved to the Judaized man, grade by grade. The first eleven degrees make the Profane a Man: a Jew.

In the 12th, he is admitted into the People of the Jews; in the 43rd, he learns the name of the Kabbalistic-Judaic deity whose
The spirit is imprinted on him; in the 14th, he is ordained a Lepite; in the 15th, he is admitted into the tribe of Jada; in 16th, among the Twelve Elders of the People; in the 17th, to the Grand Council of Twenty-four; and in the 18th, he will become Jewish Pontiff.

"The twelve Brothers (one for each tribe of Israel, "month of the year, at the same time") grow long beards

"Twigs, to represent the Elders of the People." (p. 258)

The place for these princes is well indicated at this degree where we celebrate the reconstitution of the people of Israel after the Babylonian captivity. The Password Æsrim Tebeth, the twentieth day of the tenth month, day of the return of the Israelites in Jerusalem; the Sacred Word Shalash-Esrim Adar, the twenty-third day of the twelfth month, the day of the dedication-cace of the new Temple of Jerusalem; the legend of this degree, sign and touch, everything indicates this time happy for the Hebrews, where they came out of the great tribulations of a harsh seventy-year captivity – age Masonic of the 15th degree, – and where they succeeded, after a twenty-five years' work, – age of the 16th degree, – to be reinstated their worship in the new Temple. This worship will be represented in the following degrees.

This restoration of the Jewish people is the emblem of state–the establishment of the Perfect People throughout the world under the Masonic government, based on the Equality of all nations and all men, equality symbolized by Pat–touch, when you put your right feet toe against Point of knee against knee.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 359

The scales of justice and the sword in the decorations signify the autonomy regained by the Hebrews, and their governance which, without any territorial limit, must establish itself in the whole universe (p. 258).

But the five stars and the two crowns on the cord of this degree? Kabbalistic Beauty forms the inferior point–innermost of the Triangle of the Holy King, and when it touches the uppermost point of the Triangle of the Holy Queen, where Ma–throne, the two triangles form a five-pointed figure. We understand why all the crowns of the decora–Masonic lodges are adorned with five fleurons. It is indeed just that the Prince of Jerusalem embroiders five on his cord stars and two crowns, one for himself, the new Mordecai, and one for her Esther, or rather, because The chosen people were split into two kingdoms, one for the one for the king of Judah and the other for the king of Israel.

17. The 6th Sephirah. Za Justice. – The Knight of the East and of the West.

The name of the 17th degree, the Knight of the East and West, immediately puts us on the trail of his interpretation.

foresees the official entry of the Templars into the system-
Theme of the Secret Society of Jews. The Password Zabu-
The words "Sacré Abaddon" confirm what is presumed.

Zebulun is the name of one of Jacob's sons, and consequently-a member of one of the tribes of Israel. On his deathbed, he... bestowed his final prophetic blessing upon his children, Jacob said to Zebulun, "He will live by the seashore and in the port for ships and it will extend as far as Sidon.
In elfet, the division of this tribe in the division of lu
the promised land stretched across the Mediterranean, part of a One end to this sea and the other to the Sea of Tiberias?

The Crusaders landed in the Holy Land on the territory of Zebulun, "on the seashore and in the harbor of vessels.

1. Genesis, xlix, 13.
2. Joshua, xlx, 10,

360 KABNALISTIC INTERPRETATION

But there is more. Moses, in his last words to the Children of Israel, join Zebulun and Issachar and say, "Rejoice-Are you, Zebulun, in your going out? And you, Issachar, in your tents. They will call the peoples to the mountain, where They will immolate victims of justice: they will suck like milk, the riches of the sea, and the treasures hidden in the sand 1. »

The Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, an ancient book, but Apocryphal text says that "Zebulun, on the point of dying, ct being one hundred and fourteen years old, he summoned his sons and their declared that he had had no part in the crime that he committed rent his brothers by selling Joseph." – It's for the So-secret society, which punishes with death those Brothers who betray it,

A good reason to honor Zebulun. – He continues:

"You will separate yourselves from the Lord, you will divide yourselves in Israel and you will follow two kings. You will surrender to the abominations of idolatry; your enemies are leading you away-will be captivated, and you will remain among the nations, oppressed of pain and affliction. After that you remember-
You will turn to the Lord, and the Lord will bring you back because he is full of mercy; after which God himself, the sun

justice will rise upon us; health and mercy are in its wings?, »

These quotations must have been sufficient for the Kabbalistic Jews who, in the 17th and 18th degrees, wanted to reproduce the Sephioroth of Mercy and Justice – not because these words are found in these texts, but because in their Together we notice the dilation, the expansion of the Ju-duism, whatever the idea of the Sephirah, Greece or Mise-record, and the just limitation of this expansion which is represented by the Sephirah Justice. This expansion has made possible by the incorporation of the Knights Templar who came from the West and won over by the Jewish Knights of the East.

Abaddon, the sacred Word, puts us on the trail of the mo-

4. Deuteronomy, 31:18

2. Malach., 1v, 2. – Calmet, Historical Dictionary of the Bible.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 361

sarcastic question with which the Jews laugh at the good Templars whom they enlisted in their Knighthood for that they fight for their own benefit.

Abaddon means the Exterminator, as explained
Saint John in his Apocalypse! We only have to read this chapter.
clown to recognize immediately that the apocalyptic locusts-Lyptics, presided over by Abaddon, mean for the Jews
the Crusaders in their medieval armor arriving
"port of ships", in the land of Zebulun, and invade-raising the Holy Land. There is nothing apocalyptic in to this degree, except for the audacity of adapting the sacred text To the Christian Knights. Let us listen to the prophet Saint John:
"After that, I looked and I saw an open door in the sky, and the first voice I had heard, and which had spoken with a sound as brilliant as that of a trumpet, he said to me: Come up here and I will show you the things that must-
The wind will arrive in the future. And having been suddenly enraptured in spirit, I saw at that very moment a throne erected in the sky and what-than one seated on that throne. The one who was seated appeared similar to a picre of jasper and sardonyx; and there around this throne was a rainbow that appeared resembling an emerald. Around this same throne, there are had twenty-four others on which were seated twenty-four old men dressed in white robes, with necks golden wreaths on their heads. He emerged from the throne of lightning, thunder and rumbling, and there were seven before the throne
With lamps lit, who are the seven spirits of God?

After reading this passage, the staging becomes clear.
of the Lodge working at the 17th degree: in the background of the
In the hall, to the east, is a throne raised seven steps high. At the top depicted on the throne is a rainbow, on either side of which are a Sun and a Moon (Masonic addition). In
In addition, seven suspended lamps are lit in front of this throne. On both sides of the room, in two lines, are

1. Apoeal., rx,
2. Ibid., 1v, 1-5.

362 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

twenty-two other thrones, eleven on each side (for honor-(to rectify the Kabbalistic number), each raised on three marks ches (Masonic addition). To the West and vis-à-vis the great throne, there are two others like the twenty-two, for the two Wardens. – Here are the twenty-four oldlards, seated on thrones, all wearing long robes white and wearing a red belt, and on their heads a crown made of gilded cardboard (p. 259).

The Apocalypse: "The twenty-four vicars prostrated themselves" were born before Him who "sits on the throne,... in saying: You are worthy, O Lord our Deducer, to receive
"See glory, honor, and power!" (V. 10-11.)

The Masonic Ritual: For the Touching, you tou-with his left hand on the Brother's left shoulder; and he,
with his right hand, he scratches (!) your right shoulder amicaelement; at the same time, you smile at each other, exchanging this dialogue in someone's ear: "Your beauty – is divine; – your wisdom – is powerful; – honor to you!
– Glory to you – you have the strength! On the jewel are engraved they used the initials of the same words.

The Book of Revelation: "Then I saw in the right hand of the one who sat on the throne, with a book written on it
"Outside, it was sealed with seven seals." (Ch. v, 1.)

The ritual states that on the jewel there is a lamb in silver lying on a book bearing seven seals.

The Apocalypse: "I saw a lamb in the midst of the vicars
"as if his throat had been cut... who opened the book."

The Ritual teaches us that we pretend to bleed the candy-date on the arm.

The Book of Revelation: "I saw the Lamb who had opened one of the of the seven seals... and I saw a white horse appear. That one who had climbed on it had an are; ct he left to con- to continue his victories. » (vi, 2.)

The Ritual tells us that we bring a book with seven seals, each of which is a small surprise box, tell- various small objects; from one the President takes out a small bow; he gives it to one of the assistants, saying:

pes 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 363

"Go and continue the conquest." And so on. The Ritual is a hideous travesty of the Apocalypse of Saint John. The terracotta trumpets on which the The brothers comply, and the seven firecrackers that the Lodge sets off, represent the "seven trumpets" and "thunderbolts" of the Apocalypse (vm, 2, 5).

Thereupon, the recipient is consecrated Knight of East and West, and informed about the union that took place between the Knights of the East, the Johannites, true dis- the disciples of John of Patmos, and the Knights of the West, the Templars.

The Apocalypse will once again be used by the Jews to represent the Templars. She said: "The fifth Angel sounded the trumpet, and I saw a star that had fallen from Heaven onto the earth, and the key to the shaft of the abyss was given to him. He opened the shaft of the abyss, and smoke rose from the shaft. From the smoke of the well came grasshoppers which spread out said on earth... these locusts (the Crusaders or "the descendants of Japheth", Catechism of the Rosicrucians, p. 301) were like horses prepared for battle.

They had crowns-- on their heads
They were made of gold (the helmets). Their faces were like Men's faces... They had breastplates like... iron, and the noise of their nils was like the noise of cha- Riots with several horses running into battle... They had as their King the Angel of the Abyss, called in Hebrew Abad- "Don, and in Greek Apollyon, meaning the Exterminator 1."

With this sacred Word, the entire degree is interpreted. Abaddon is another Schemhamphorasch, an explained name of the Prince of the Abyss.

Is it still necessary to explain why the Time of The work of these saints is "from sunset to its "Raise"? That is the work of the Prince of Darkness, the Angel of the Abyss with its Knights, the fallen Templars.

"Who are you?" is the Question of Order; Answer: "One

4. Apocal., 1x.

364 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Pathmon, who loves everything from Beauty to Strength.

– From the Holy King to the Matron! Lust always follows

Abaddon.

18. The 5th Sephirah. Za Mercy. – The Rosicrucian Knight,

This rank is prepared by the 17th, which recalls the arrival of the Templars in the East, and their perversion by the Johnites. If the 17th is a hideous travesty of the Apocalypse, The 48th is a sacrilegious mockery of the sacrifice of Jesus. Christ.

Let us first note, regarding the name given to the President of cc.grade, Athersatha, that he is no longer Hebrew, but Persian. It means cupbearer, the officer who pours drinks for the king. Alone Nehemiah, one of the exiles from the time of King Artaxerxes, is known by that name. Therefore, it is not Herod Tetrarch of Galilee, whom the President of the Rosicrucian Chapter represent (p. 266).

After rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem and completing the Temple, Nehemiah Athersatha restores the worship of the Tsraelites. He made a census of all those who had returned from the captivity. Among the Priests, the children of Habia and others, "sought the written record of their genealogy in the Temple. They took a census, and, not having found it, they were rejected from the priesthood. And Athersatha told them not to eat sacred meats until there was a learned pontiff and enlightened?

Such a restriction on the number of priests of the Great Architect is dictated by the spirit of the 18th degree. It is the limitation of the expansion achieved by the army of Eblis in the 17th degree by the admission of the children of Japheth into the Alliance of the Children of Shem.

Mr. Franck has already made us understand the meaning of the terms Mercy and Justice, names of the 4th and 5th

- 4, H Ezra, 1, 11.
2. Ibid., seen, 64.
3. Speech of the Most Holy See in the 18th degree. Léo Taxil, p. 270,

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 365

Kabbalistic Sephiroth to which the 17th ct responds 18° degrees.

Mercy, or Love, and Justice complement each other.
mutually and engender Beauty; this is the moral Triad of the Kabbalah.

Ala Justice which, in the 18th degree, restricts the number
"Grasshoppers" of the 17th degree to a small number of chosen ones, Brotherly love is joined, if it is permissible to name such a thing.
sweet name, the union of sectarians, to celebrate a mockery blasphemous of the Last Supper, the Passion and the death of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

The President of the 33rd degree teaches that the meaning
The sacred word of the Rose-Croix degree, INRI, is: "death
"Out of love for his fellow human beings!"

The Rosicrucian Agape is a confirmation of
The Kabbalistic idea contained in the name of the 5th Sephirah:
Mercy or Love.

The higher we advance in the higher degrees, the more the spirit of Kabbalah develops into pure Satanism. After having, at {7th degree, received from the members of the religious Order of the Templarsfolds in his Society of Johannites or Kabbalistic Jews-ticks, and having made them "priests of the Angel of Light",
This Lying Angel, of the 18th degree, leads his slaves astray.
to offer a bloody sacrifice, therein lies the infernal mystery of the Freemasonry is as profound as it is horrific. We
We are faced with a sacrifice offered to Satan. The Clergy Masonic is the sacrificer. The Lamb of God, who once
The Synagogue, driven by Satan, crucified the Synagogue.
Masonic crucifixion of him again, in effigy, represented by a lamb wearing a crown of thorns on its head ct having his feet pierced with nails. These new Jews will even further: they cut off the head crowned with thorns and the feet pierced with nails, like "the most
"impure," to throw them into the fire as a burnt offering to Lucifer,

The Spirit of Fire!

4. Paul Rosen, p. 283,

366 Kadbaltistic Interpretation

The depth of this mystery is surely not comtaken by the "sons of Japheth." They are unaware of how much the heart the Jew is hardened and full of satanic hatred against the Lord and his Christ!

Dicu, the Creator, offered to his intelligent creatures and free, to the angels and to men, a participation of his divine bliss on the condition that they accept from his hand Greece, this seed of glory, as a link between him and them. Grace is essentially supernatural.
The original order established by divine Providence was therefore For intelligent creatures, a supernatural order.
eternal bliss was to be attained through the use that the Angels and men were called to show grace. Now, Lucifer, seeing the greatness of his intelligence, conceived lorguvillénx project to acquire beatitude by himself promised; he wanted to become like God through the only forces of its nature. That is the origin of the denounced Naturalism in the Encyclical Humanum Genus of Leo XIII, as the foundation of Freemasonry.

The fall of man had its first origin, not in the pride of man, but in the seduction of Lucifer, who also became for man a Satan – a Hebrew word, which It signifies an adversary, an enemy. This fact, which diminishes the
The man's guilt is the reason for the possibility of a redemption for him.

However, through his victory over man, Lucifer became his master; the man, as if by a legal act, constituted himself willingly his slave. Saint Paul speaks of this act, in saying of Jesus Christ crucified, that, "erasing the record of The decree of condemnation that was against us, he did indeed
"Abolic by Pattaching to the cross!" Saint Chrysostom thinks that this document was Dien's contract with Adam Conte-enunciating the law: "Do not eat the fruit of the tree of the science of the good and evil: for at the same time as you
"You will eat, you will most certainly die?" This schedule

1. Colossians, 1, 14.
2. Genesis, u, 17.

was nailed to the cross, that is to say, broken, torn apart, and abolished by the death of Jesus Christ on the Cross. The schedule, the God's decree condemning man to death, being unable to
The idea stems from the death of the Man of Dien; it follows that the pact tacit agreement between man and demon, subjecting man to Satanic slavery was also invalidated, broken, and abolished. There you see the origin of Lucifer's infernal rage. against Christ the Savior. Through his pride, this Spirit of Light first wanted to make himself like the Most High; Driven by his hatred, he now wants to overturn the restorative act of the death of the Savior on the Cross, in order to restore his covenant with man and to recover the lost dominion over humanity.

The loss of eternal life, suffered by Adam for his own sake – even for his posterity, was of infinite importance. No human sacrifice, always of finite value, would have I was never able to counterbalance it. Only God could remedy the badly, especially because his justice system was involved. It was necessary a divine wisdom to find the remedy that would satisfy in at the same time, justice demands the eternal death of man, and to mercy, asking for his life. Foresighted In spirit, this divine remedy, David sang: "Mercy" and truth met; justice and peace met I gave him the kiss.

The incarnation of the Son of God, by which he reunited in one person two natures, the divine and the human. allowed him to act as Mediator between humanity and the human- nity and divinity and to offer themselves as a holocaust for redemption tion of those to whom he had become brother. His sacrifice was that of humanity, of which he was, as a man, the representative feeling and the substitute – sacrifice of infinite value to because of the divine personality of the priest.

It was therefore truly within him that they met Mercy and Justice. The two Sephiroth bearing these sublime names, are found in a very different way in the 17th and 18° degrees.

1. Ps. Lxxxiv, 11.

368 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The height of satanic audacity is to want to overthrow, first the Holy Trinity, to put oneself in its place, and in-next, the sacrifice of the Lamb of God, by having it offered to him to himself by those for whom he was offered. The Son of God incarnate, Jesus Christ, represented by a lamb, is crucified again, crowned with thorns, and, by an excess of malice, his crowned head and his hands and feet pierced with The clones are cut and thrown into the fire – as an offering to the Genic of the Fire, Lucifer. What was truly done on the cross, then, also done, but in effigy, on the Rosicrucian table: He who is Life tastes death, and He who is Death Triumph of Life!

Oh, the ingratitude of men who, in the full light of the nineteenth century, and in the presence of the ce- benefits weights poured out upon them by Christ, still allow themselves blind to the point of renewing the deicide of which the Jews ih- Those scoundrels are guilty!

The Rose-Croix degree is essentially the renewal- figurative and bloody image of the deicide committed for the first time first time on Calvary, as the Holy Mass is The real renewal was not bloody.

Nehemius renewed, in the rebuilt Temple of Jerusalem Salem, the ancient sacrifices of the Israelites. Is this for the renewal of the sacrifice of Calvary that the Jewish sect Masonic order appoints the President of the 18th degree, Athersatha, A nickname given to Nehemiah in Holy Scripture? By him The Jewish clergy has been reinstated: the Rosicrucians are the clergy Judaic-Masonic priest; in their Agape feasts they offer their sacrifice – in Saltau – to the enemy. This atro- The city of Coustilue is in reality a Clericalism which is the true Enemies of God and humanity! These men, for the Most of them, baptized in the name of the Holy Trinity, acclaim Lucifer: Hoshea, Hoshea, Hoshea: Savior, Savior, Savior!

It is no longer necessary to prove all the falsehoods. delivered in the substitution of Freedom of Thought for the Faith; from Socialist Equality to Hope, and from Fraternity

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 369

Masonic at the Charity; nor to expose the other numerous sacrileges accompanying the Last Supper and the Feast of the Rose-Cross; let's finish with the word found: INRI.

In the rank of Building Superintendent, the Sacred Word found was Ja, Je, Ji, He who was, is and will be; for the Rosicrucians, the lost and found word is INRI, inter. Kabbalistically attributed by: Zgne Renovatur Natura Inte-

Gra, all of Nature is renewed by Fire.

The Fire advocated by the Very Wise Athersatha as "the first agent of nature, like the emblem of the divinity, then as divinity itself" (p. 306), represented in the Infernal Chamber as the delirious abode—heavens of Eblis, Hiram, and all the great evildoers known in the Old Testament, the infernal fire is certainly the best sacred Word that Kabbalistic Jews could—were going to propose to the new Priest—Sacrificers of Lucifer. He suits them as Words suit them. de Passe, Emmanuel, Dicu with us, that is to say, the God—Fire is with us; and Paz vobis, peace of conscience be upon you with you! This sorrowful peace is attained through communion and a sacrifice sacrilegious in the highest degree!

19. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. — The High Priest of the heavenly Jerusalem.

The following three levels must meet the three previous requirements. The first Sephiroth, Intelligence, Wisdom and the Crown, and ultimately lead to the infinite perfection (Ensoph) of "True people." Let's see if our hypothesis is correct.

At the 19th degree, image of the Sephirah Intelligence, we find in the small fragment of the Orator's eloquence, published by Léo Taxil (p. 336), the following passage: "Our vision that can only encompass an infinitesimal portion of the Great Harmonious Whole of Nature, our intelligence being essentially finite in the presence of the Infinite, we must not prejudge the moment when Truth, Honor and the Brotherhood will definitively crush the Lie (Pro—Priesthood), Baseness (Law) and Intolerance (Religion), the three

24

370 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

heads of the hydra of evil; our duty is to wait for this moment. "Blessed with patience and trust."

The teaching of the President of the 33rd degree on this grade is: "The works of the 19th degree highlight that, for to make the rights of humankind effective, moral progress (16th–18th degree) must unite with intellectual progress (19th) and modify its principles according to the new needs and the progress in general education.

These quotes are sufficient to demonstrate the accuracy of our assumption.

At the 20th degree, we avoided explicitly naming the Wisdom, the second Sephirah descending, and the ninth going back up from the last one. We don't see the triple there triangle with the nine letters of the word Sapientia at their nine spikes; but first, the President is seated on a throne raised by nine steps; then, between the "Sanctuary and the altar » is placed a nine-branched candelabra which is always on; there can be no fewer than nine Great ones Patriarchs to compose the workshop; the recipient incenses nine times a star in a transparent named "The Morning Star," otherwise Lucifer; finally, the second The sign is this: "One falls to one's knees, thus prostrate, We put our elbows on the ground, and we shake our heads nine times. in the inclination to the left." (p. 400). In the triangle of the intellectual Triad, the Xether, the crown, holds the Wisdom, the one at the top, is the one on the right hand of Man. archetype, and intelligence, that to his left. Kneeling- When standing before this deity, one must incline one's head to the side left, if one wishes to offer one's nine inclinations of adoration to Luciferian Wisdom.

At the 21st degree, representing the Kabbalistic Crown, the President is a crowned king, the impious Frederick of Prussia, Freemason, philosopher- king, and friend of the Freemason Voltaire. His cousin Ronne represents "the crown of all that is most "High, the diadem of the turkeys!"

1. Zohar, n1, f. 288, Frank, p. 137.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 371

Therefore, the Sign is this: You show the three first fingers raised of the right hand, signifying the three great families of the peoples, the children of Shem, Ham, etc. Japheth (these three names are the sacred Word); then the Brother to Whoever this sign addresses comes to you, takes with their right hand He raised three fingers and said: Frédéric. In turn, he presents his three fingers; you grasp them in the same way in this way, and you say to him: Noah. All this means that the Noah's children must be subject to the King's Crown Masonic or crowned Freemasonry. It is the Republic- cosmopolitan republic under the Jewish government of France masonry.

The touching and the triple pronunciation of the name of Phaleg (division) which, according to the Jews, must have built the tower of Babel, signify the same subjugation of all humanity to the Masonic Crown, to Kether on the head of the Jew.

Finally, at the 22nd degree, the Ensoph, Infinity, is always represented through a circle without beginning and without end, one finds oneself in the Round Table which is prescribed for the sessions of princes of Lebanon, assembly called the Council of the Table Round. These ratios between the last four degrees of the second eleven days and the three upper Sephiroth of Ensoph are too obvious to deny. They prove— the main thesis of our book is that Freemasonry is a work of Kabbalistic Jews, tending towards this twofold purpose: to crown the Jew King of all the earth and to establish the Lucifer's universal reign.

Let us now return to the 19th degree in particular, this study— Let's consider its special character.

After the consecration of Masonic priests in imitation of the offering of the Jewish priests, and after the offering of their sacrifice satanic, it was necessary to place at the head of this moral body representative sensing the moral Triad of the Sephiroth, a ruling body similar to that which the Christian clergy possesses in the person of Bishops, patriarchs, and the Sovereign Pontiff. That's it. the three degrees of the intellectual Triad. The 19th degree is that of High Pontiff of the Heavenly Jerusalem, the 20th of the of the Grand Patriarch, and the 21st that of the Prussian Knight Noachite, whose president is named Inspector Episcopus, Bishop.

372 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The President of the 19th degree holds the title of "Thrice Powerful," probably because in him are gathered the power of her own /intellectual, that of the Sugesse and that of the Crown. He is dressed in a white satin robe, All the assistants wear white robes and around A blue satin headband with twelve embroidered stars adorned the front. in gold. The cord is a crimson ribbon adorned with twelve gold stars; towards the top is embroidered an Alpha, and towards the bottom an Omega (p. 399). The clothing is immediately recognizable. priestly of the Old Testament: "You shall prepare," says Dieu to Moses, linen tunics for the sons of Aaron, crowns and tiaras for the glory and ornament of their ministry... You will also take two onyx stones, where You shall engrave the names of the children of Israel. There shall be six names on one stone and six on the other, according to the order of their birth{. "

The jewel is a gold plate in the shape of a long square, on which are engraved on one side with an Alpha, and on the other with a Omega.

"You will also do the Rationale of Judgment... It will be square double ct... You will put four rows of pre- stones there "Cious," on each row three pictures. "You will put there the names of the children of Israel... You will also make a blade of very pure gold, on which you will have these words engraved: Holiness belongs to the Lord. You will fasten it to the tiara. with a hyacinth-colored ribbon on the Sou-'s forehead Verain Pontifef.

How to explain this marvel: the masons who they so hate the cassocks and skullcaps of Catholic priests liques, patiently allow themselves to be dressed in priestly garments Dotuous of the Jews!

1. Exodus, 28, 9, 40,
2. Ibid., v, 15, 36.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 373

The 19th-degree cadet is tasked with finding the route which leads to the heavenly Jerusalem. This Jerusalem is none other something like Eden, the garden of delights, from which Adonai, the Evil God, chased Adam and Eve away for eating The tree of knowledge! Reclaim Eden and destroy the bridge! see the harmful influence of Adonai in favor of Eblis, by leading Humanity's journey to true Kabbalistic science is my work. proposed to the High Priests of the Heavenly Jerusalem.

We know about the assault on Olympus and the war of the Giants against the Titans (Romans), the battle between Ahriman and Ormazd (Persians), between Brihaspatt and Roudra (ancient Indians), between Vishnu and Sesha (modern Indians), Jupiter ct Typhon (Greeks), Thor and Ymir (Germans), Bel and Omorka (Babylonians), Rah and Apep (northern Egyptians), Har and Set (Southern Egyptians), Ven-Vang and Tschì-You (Chinese), etc., cte. It's the same story repeated a hundred times. times: the Infernal Dragon always promises to his race and his credulous followers believe that in the end he will succeed in dethroning Dicu. He, A poor soul created is already punished in hell, vainere the Almighty! A miserable worm, dethroning the Creator of heaven and earth! And there are still men who They believe! It is useless, 0 Freemasons, to hope for victory final of your God Eblis, and to expect from him a reward- think for you to have made his priests, his pontiffs and his patriarchs! He is deceiving you, as he deceived our fore-

First parents!

20. The 2nd Sephirah. Wisdom.— The Great Patriarch, Venerable Master for Life.

The President of this rank represents Ahasuerus, the king who crowned the Jew Mordecai and his niece Esther, door with royal ornaments, a blue ribbon, a yellow ribbon, worn as a cross-over necklace across the chest.

It is the Ephod of the Jews, a kind of belt which, taking behind the neck and over both shoulders, came the-ash in front, crossed over the chest, and served

374 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

then to gird the tunic, going around the body.

The ephod was an ornament of the High Priest of the Jews. It is true, David had returned from an Ephod when he danced in front of the Ark, and young Samuel wore one when he served the High Priest; but these latter ephods were of a different material and form than that of the Souver-Rain Pontiff; this was clothed in gold, purple, and scarlet and of fine linen; the others were of simple cloth.

As we can see, a certain union is already emerging between the royalty and the priesthood, what the password is: Jeksan, to double-sided?, also seems to indicate.

Freemasonry aims for Caesaropapism. Why?

Otherwise, would King Ahasuerus be the President in the Sanctuary P In this grade, the East is called the sanctuary. The President said to the novice: "Be like the Star of morning that announces the coming of day! Go and bring it into the world the light; in the sacred name of Lucifer, uproot the darkness—"ism." Obscurantism is Catholicism, whose holy Faith obscures the dark "light" that emanates "from the place "which needs neither the sun nor the moon to be illuminated." (P. 399.) Alas! The Lord calls this place: "darkness "Outdoors, where will there be tears and gnashing of teeth!" Lucifer's complaints of being mistreated by Jehovah Adonai, and its teeth-grinding can be heard in almost each of the Masonic degrees.

Jeksan also means false, scandalous. Like this The password is followed by the name Stolkin, who found and killed the first of the three assassins (the priest), the latter

The meaning is perhaps that which the Composer of this grade wanted to give him, by insinuating that the fake, the scan-Dalcux is the priest, and with him, his God Jehovah Adonai.

4. Exodus, 15th century, 7th century.
2. Son of Abraham, Gen., xxv, 2.
3. Matthew, 21:48

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 375

21, The Third Sephirah. The Crown, – The Prussian Noachite Knight.

This rank represents the Crown, the Jewish Kether, and must to give us a glimpse of the hope of the "Chosen People" to be a day crowned with the royal diadem over the entire square of the universe, like Esther and Mordecai of old, over all the Persian kingdom, or like the Freemason King Frederick on Prussia. This is once again the meeting of spiritual power. tuel and temporal power in the same hand, with the expansion of the narrow kingdom of Israel over the inhabited world by all the descendants of Noah. Noahite is a term from the Talmud and means the Non-Jew.

The password, Phaleg, is pronounced three times in a tone gloomy, either because this man failed to finish the Tower of Babel; either because the Jews are sad to be still so far from the realization of their Great Work, their domination over the Universe.

Shem, the elder brother of Japheth, fathered Arphaxad, the Heber's grandfather. "Heber had two sons: one was named Phaleg because the earth was divided in his time into nations and different languages; and his brother was called Jectan? That's all the holy chronicle reports about Phaleg. She doesn't say anywhere that he was the Architect of the Tower of Babel, and it contradicts the claim that he was from the Cham race.

The "Grand Chapter" of the Prussian Knights held in a vast room lit only by a large window through which the full moon enters. Any other lighting is forbidden. The room must be decorated. recreated in the medieval style, and all the assistants have a mask.

The common opinion about the Holy Vehmic Court is that this tribunal The mysterious man held his séances in the darkness of night.

4. A. Pontigny, The Jew according to the Talmud, p. 167.
2. Genesis, x, 25.

376 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

beneath dark vaults, the seated members covered in masks t.

The Prussian Knight Brother wears in his buttonhole a small silver Zune. The battery consists of three slow strokes; It signifies the sacred Word: Shem, Ham, and Japheth. The march is: three steps of Master. The legend tells the story of the fraud. of a member of the aristocracy and a bishop, but he is It is difficult to conclude that the goal of this grade is to attack the clergy and aristocracy. This goal is too subordinate to indicate—to understand the true meaning of this eminent rank, which is, so to speak, The crown of the nine preceding degrees. The Holy Vehme, representing the secret Masonic judiciary, not a form that part of the legend of this degree, and surely the Accessory part. The main and most secret part appears to be contained within the Jewel: a golden triangle, crossed by a silver arrow with its point facing downwards (p. 402). What could this jewel mean? The triangle of three The higher Sephiroth, of which the Crown is the apex, The summit is easy to explain; but the arrow? It's not there. not, as far as we know, among the numerous symbols which the Kabbalah makes use of. In Holy Scripture, it It always means destruction. We believe we must refer this symbol to the subjugation of kings and of peoples, for this is the way to conquer the crown of crowns.

Speaking of Cyrus, Isaiah says in the name of the Lord the following words, that in this degree Lucifer and the Jews Kabbalistics apply to their modern Cyrus, the Fre-Deric of Prussia, the Prussian Knights, their Brothers, The Jewish Kings: "Who brought the righteous one out of the East, and who He called him and ordered him to follow him? He defeated the peoples before him and he made him master of kings; he did

1. Wetzer, Dictionary, Vehme. Conf. Clavel, Hist. de la Fr.-m., p. 356.

2. "The arrow is, like the sword, the spear, the bow, the javelin, etc., a Symbol of philosophical fire. The arrows of Apollo (Exterminator). "kill Typhon." Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy, pp. 550, 556.

his enemies fall like dust beneath his sword, it was he
 He made them flee before his bow like straw to the wind take away... But you, Israel, my servant; you, Jacob, whom I have chosen; you, descendants of Abraham, who was my friend, in which I took from you to pull you out of the extremes of world... do not be afraid because I am with you...
 I will call him from the north, and he will come from the east; he will recognize the greatness of my name; he will treat the great of the world like mud, and will trample them like the potter
 "He tramples the clay beneath his feet!" The arrow that descends from the
 The point of the triangle, of the Crown, means the same thing.
 that the Sign of grade: take the first three fingers (Sem, Chain and Japhet) that the Brother shows you.

The Caesaropapism exercised by the Jews over all the Nations is the idea of the 21st degree, an idea worthy of a Knight Prussian!

This Prince will reign in the name of Lucifer, and with him, over all the peoples of the earth descended from Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

22. The Ensoph. – The Prince of Lebanon, Royal-Hache.

This degree is the last one in the second year of Onsaine. For
 For the initiation, two apartments are needed. The pre-Mier, representing the workshop of Mount Lebanon, is illuminated by Eleven lights. Its President bears the title of Most Wise.
 and seems to depict the figure of Solomon, under which hidden within is the essence of this degree: Lucian Caesaropapism ferien.

The Solomon of the 22nd degree, named the Prince of Lebanon, because he had the cedars of Mount Lebanon cut down, symbo-
 reading the kings and the great men of the earth, is no longer the old king who participated in the murder of Hiram, but the converted king to the worship of Moloch, the Fire God of the Tyrians, before the idol in which he burns incense. In his person are gathered The King, the Priest, and the Worship of Lucifer. He represents the ideal of Kabbalistic Freemasonry. Israel will be a day "not only the fear-nor, but the POPE PEOPLE!".

1. Isaiah, 30, 2, 9, 25.

The recipient is shown an axe where one side engraved are the initials of the names Lebanon, Solomon, Abda, Adon-Hiram, Cyrus, Darius, Xerxes, Zoroaster and Ananias. These names recall: 4° the construction of the Solomon's Temple, for which Lebanon supplied the wood of cedar, and of which Adon-Iliram, the son of Abda, directed the works; 2° the construction of the Temple of Zerubbabel, self-ridiculed by the kings Cyrus, Darius and Xerxes; 3° religion Persian, upon which the Kabbalah, of which Zerubbabel was the author, was based; 4° finally another fact which relates to the name of Anunias.

Which Ananias is this? Is it one of the three young men? men of the tribe of Judah whom Nebuchadnezzar had thrown in the fire, from which they emerged unscathed? Is this to prove that fire can serve as a place of delight? Is this Ananias? son of Nebedee, High Priest of the Jews, who wanted To strike Saint Paul?? Or was it Ananias the Sadducee, one of the the most ardent defenders of the Jewish revolt against the Romans, before the destruction of the Temple after Jesus Christ? We believe that this is the first one we have in mind, because that at the same time as the miracle of the furnace, it recalls also the metamorphosis of King Nebuchadnezzar into an ox – a fact that the masons are careful not to forget.

This axe is called royal because it is used to "cut down the enormous trunks" of intolerance and selfishness (p. 343) – Popes and Kings – and that she led by this means to universal Caesaropapism coveted.

The Order's question is: "Are you Prince of the Lebanon? – Reply: The trees are good for cutting. It's understandable! The sign is very significant. Louis XVI should have understood it in time: we flee the movement to raise an axe with both hands and strike

1. Des Mousscaux, The Jew, p. 469.
2. Acts, xxii, 2.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 379

as if one were kicking a tree. We respond to this sign by raising both hands to forehead height, the fingers outstretched, and then letting them fall back down! – The Head falls!

On the other side of the axe are engraved the initials of names of Sidonius, Noah, Shem, Ham, Japheth, Moses, Besse- The name Ooliab. These names recall: 1° the Sido- workers niens engués à la coupe des cedars du Liban; 2° the race The entire human population that is to be governed; 3. Moses, the architect of the first Jewish Tabernacle, which employed Besemane for this work Leel and Ooliab, the former being "filled with the spirit of God, of wisdom, intelligence, science, and perfect knowledge... for cutting and engraving pictures";... and the other having been assigned to him after he too had been "rem- "A fold of wisdom!"

It is no longer difficult to explain the passwords: Japhet, Ooliab, Lebanon, and the sacred words: Noah, Béséléel, Sidonius.

By saying that "the 22nd degree is the first clear degree- "hermetic and kabbalistic" (p. 344), the Knight eloquence deviates from simple truth, like the twenty and The evidence already presented should convince him.

The same speaker's assertion: that "the Great Work,

"This is the apotheosis of Work," seems more serious. One feels naturally inclined to take on the teaching of the grade at serious: "The work focuses on the rehabilitation of the proletariat through the rule of collectivities, having mutuality "For the means and the Masonic family for the temple;" but, besides the obscurity of this declamatory phrase, the word apo- Theosis does not allow it to be understood that way. Those who know what the word Work means in Jewish philosophy and who have learned to see in the Blazing Star and in the letter G, the ever-active divinity, become another The idea of the Great Work, the apotheosis of Labor: it is leta- the establishment of the universal Kingdom through inspiring work of the Great Architect of the Universe!

1. Exodus, xxxv, 30 seq.

380 KABBALIST INTERPRETATION

The Council sitting around the Kabhalistic circle of Ia Round Table, seating around the one who is the center of co circle. The Infinite Being, the Ensoph, represented by an A "began by forming an imperceptible point": the Cou- ronne, of which five fleurons indicate the Work.

Everything in Freemasonry is impure; it's more... The higher the degrees, the more one realizes that everything is sata- fuck.

The second Masonic series of onset ends with the King-Pontiff Solomon sacrificing to Lucifer. – This is the pinnacle of The Levitical tribe in the Judeo-Masonic order. Here finds the Great Patriarch, whose name is inscribed on the upper cubic stone of Solomon's Temple. The myr-Western middlelings, transformed from "grasshoppers" into "Princes of Lebanon," in "Great Patriarchs" of the Jews, that is the marvelous two successes that the Judeo-Kabbalistic sect can precisely attribute to the infernal trick with which "all the secrets Masonic symbols are impenetrably hidden beneath symbols." "Boules".

Before finishing the second round of 33 degrees, Let us listen again to the interpretation given by the Chiefs of The order to General Garibaldi:

"To divine laws, to the divine right of the Clergy, our Grand Master Architects oppose the rights of the people. only legitimate, only true, only acceptable; to their dogma, degrading to man, our Royal Arches oppose the ideal of the perfection of Humanity, in Humanity and for Humanity; to their revealed morality: our Perfect Masons They oppose independent morality; to their persecutions inspired, our Knights of the East, through an energy campaign in favor of the Progress of Pure Reason; to their shameful submission, our Princes of Jerusalem respond with a proud proclamation of virile independence dance.

"To fight against the infamous tyrannies of Clericalism, Our Knights of the East and West are becoming the champions

4. Zohar. Franck, p. 132.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 381

the absolute right to freedom of assembly, in order to thus overcome the enslavement in which, aided by civil power, he wants to hold Humanity, and our Rosicrucians proclaim for the For the first time, his emancipation from the Popes and Kings. And, To achieve this result, our High Priests are making themselves the apostles of absolute freedom of teaching; our Venerable-The Grand Masters proclaim themselves bitter enemies from all obscurantism, wherever it comes from; our Noachites They swore an oath so that justice would be done, and our Royal Axes reach the pinnacle of our morality, once that Their minds are flooded by the rays of Truth, masked. for them, before reaching this rank, through the different trunks-forms of intolerance, hypocrisy, and superstition and the selfishness of Christianity!

How much reticence, how many lies, in so little lines!

If a Garibaldi is not deemed worthy of learning the truth Regarding the meaning of Masonic degrees, this is proof that true initiates must far surpass this man famous for the corruption of his intelligence and the perversion of his will. The Judaized and Satanized Man in the first ounce of 33 degrees, becomes in the second eleven a new Jewish and satanic pontiff, called to propagate the lies and vice and the sacrileges to which he has to be initiated, and thus to accomplish what Freemasonry calls "Man's Duties towards his Neighbor v.

THIRD ELITE

23. The 10th Sephirah. The Kingdom. – The Head of the Tabernacle.

For the third time, we must go through the constitution– The Kabbalistic archetype of Man to understand the eleven degrees which lead to the Purfai Government with its universal Emperor, that is to say at Papo–Caesa–Judaic–Masonic Islam.

4. Paul Rosen, The Social Enemy, pp. 29–31,

382 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Like the vast majority of trained "Perfect Men" act polis in the first eleven of the 33 Masonic degrees, provides the raw material intended to form, in the second eleven days, the Kabbalistic Priesthood, thus the mass of "Perfect Levites" of the 22nd degree lend themselves as subject matter first in the formation of the Kabbalistic Government. This allows us to understand how the President of this This degree carries the title of High Priest, of "Solomon" of the 22nd degree, and how the two Brothers Those seated beside him call themselves High Priests, and the others Lepite Assistants.

The transition from the Clergy to the Government, from the people–Pope to the people–king, is expressly indicated by the Che–Valier of Eloquence who says: "Superstition (religion)

must be skillfully uprooted; and consequently, it is to politics, to the governmental action of the ruling classes giants that bear the duty of declaring war on the Superstition. (p. 346)

As a representative of this new political figure, the The recipient plays the role of Hiram's son. This son, the Master assassinated, he left it as a "sacred pledge"; on his head, the The elected Masters of the nine, at the 9th degree, have taken the oath of to avenge the death of their Master. The three murderers, priests, kings and landowners, designated by the epithets of hypocrites, Traitors and vicious people are driven and directed by Adonai. the God of the Christians. This God kills men, with the the same cruelty as the crocodile to the inhabitants of Egypt. Eblis is still fighting this crocodile god. The recipient must commit to "recruiting soldiers for the army of Lucifer, the Savior of mankind." (p. 346)

Demo-worship is no longer hidden. The session chaired by the "High Priest" representing Aaron, the brother of Moses, ends with a ceremony in honor of the "Good "Principle, Great Architect of the Universe." Aaron carries a long red robe, and over the ephod a tunic yellow, shorter and sleeveless; on the head a mitre of gold fabric, on the front of which is a red triangle.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 383

He also wears a black scarf with silver fringe, at the- what a dagger. The Levites have a white robe with red scarf with gold fringe, from which hangs a censer. "These are the garments they shall make for Aaron," says the Scripture. Holy, the rational, the ephod, the robe beneath the ephod, the "A linen tunic that will be narrower, a mitre, and a belt." Simply indicating the origin of these clothes is enough to show to the Japhethites that they make themselves the apes of the Jewish Levites, for the functions of the priesthood of Eblis.

Uriel, Dicu-Feu, is a worthy password, which leaves to enter the recipient into the openly diabolical sphere the lique of the third eleven of Masonic degrees, in the Tabernacle of Revealed Truths (Password Answer); not revealed by Jehovah-Adonat, the Dicu of the Elders Jews and Christians, but by Jehovah-Lucifer, the "Good" Principle, the Angel of Light, the Great Architect of the Uni- towards", to which the Levites offer incense, and in honor of which they wear a censer as jewelry.

The priests of a religion as anti-Christian as it is anti-Judaic, that is to say of the Kabbalistic religion, take care of the candidate, Hiram's child, to give him his Political education. Let's see, at the 24th degree, what kind of companion they will give to this Apprentice, and what will be the Kabbalistic Basetic upon which they will build the temple of their Caesaro-popery.

24. The 9th Sephirah, The Base. – The Prince of the Tabernacle.

What could be the generative force giving existence?
tence to the new Kabbalistic-political Being of the last Eleven degrees of Freemasonry? In the kingdom of In spirits, the phallus is speech. Speech acts upon a spirit through established communication with him. Would we be-
We are therefore faced with an established communication between
The recipient and the evil spirits?

There are two apartments used for introductory training in

4. Exodus, 27, 4.

384 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

24th degree. The first is called the Vestibule, which is decorated of all the attributes of masonry. This indicates that the
The previous grades are the Vestibule of the Temple inhabited by Eblis and by the hierarchy of his Companion Spirits.

The second apartment, shaped like a cinchona tree, because it encompasses infinite space, is called the Aeerarchy "of Spirits".
Its President is called the Almighty, lc Schaddat, that we will find ourselves at the penultimate level. It is from him that comes the generative force creating the hierarchy of the third eleven.

The candidate is asked how many days he has worked.
at Solomon's Temple. He replies: 2185 days to obey, There's as much to imitate as there is to perfect. That makes three times 6 years, 8 years, or two times 9 years: the three triangles between-laced from the first and second series; he still has to traverse the same three triangles of the third series.

Let us now note the essence of this 24th degree in The speech of the Knight of Eloquence: Solomon, in order to have changed his religion, lost communication with Jehovah Adonai. From that moment, he acquired extraordinary knowledge.
A scholar in Kabbalah, he became the author of the secret books of the most admirable magic, and was able to put himself in communication

Interaction with the Spirits of Fire! Here again is the Words found, the words of Lucifer to man!

Question of Order: "Are you Prince of the Tabernacle?"

– Answer: Yes, I am; see in me your Brother, the last enlightened men. The enlightenment of the Freemasons is composed of takes hold, human reason is enlightened, is fertilized by the Luciferian light.

See the three Signs: The Sign of the Cord: "We door over the eyes [a right hand open, as if to to guarantee a bright light, having the left hand on the chest; then, the right hand is brought towards the shoulder "Left and then brought diagonally back to the right side;" the three main points of the three Kabbalistic triangles: the light emanates from the Crown, and shines back onto the seat of the Justice, and is reflected in the Triumph of the physical Triad.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 385

The Candidate makes this gesture an act of faith, like the Christians– They do this by making the sign of the cross.

2. The Great Sign: "We carry both hands open on the head, joining the two thumbs at the ends to form a triangle. The Candidate must therefore... to express the submission of one's intelligence to God– Fire, whose last triangle is the ortho– representation dogma for Freemasons.

3. The Sign of Admiration: "One inclines the head forward, in holding his right hand on his chest, and with his left hand covers his eyes. » An act of heartfelt adoration of the dazzled– Saint God–Fire.

In this grade, one promises to work on the twelve commandments of the Tablets of the Law. Surely, this Table does not mean the two Tablets of the Law of Moses, but the Round Table of the Templars at the 27th degree, or the Dodé– Masonic calogue which Fr. Ragon speaks of (p. 370).

The Council opens "at the first hour of the day of the seven of the construction of the Hierarchy; because it is time of the introduction and incorporation of the new adept into the hierarchy of the seven choirs of rebel angels, according to Zoroaster and the Kabbalists, who call them the Seven Kings of Edon! "The Council is closed at the last hour of the day." of life and sweetness." (p. 404.) The day of life has no Breaking news! To put it in layman's terms, we Let us see the Candidate enter the vestibule of hell, to perform acts of faith, submission, and worship there, and To promise obedience to the Law of Lucifer. Having fulfilled its terms of the pact, he is allowed to communicate with the choirs of fallen angels that will last all eternity nity.

This grade explains the system of the two principles of the divinity, represented in the image called "the Great Symbol of Solomon" – "the double triangle of the King very wise: we see the two old men of the Kabbalah, the macro-

4. Franck, p. 153.

25

386 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

prosope and micro-prosope,... the white Jehovah and the "Black Jehovah!" (p. 348)

The Great Face and the Little Face are Kabbalah terms. ballistics designating, firstly, the Crown, the first The other, the nine other Sephiroth. The express- The phrase "the two Old Men, or Anrians" is not correct: Kabbalah gives the name "Ancient" to the Great Weaving, to The Crown, but there are not two Ancients. The Ensoph, In its eternal incomprehensibility, it is called the Ancient One Ancients?

The Manichean duality of the Gods is already familiar to us: Adonai is the Evil Principle, Lucifer the Evil. In the In the previous grade, the Candidate offered incense to Lucifer; In the present, he melds himself into communication with him: he admits and receives in his mind the "extraordinary-" seed naire" (p. 347), supernatural, demonic, of the Angel of Light, as Eve once received in hers The seed of Eblis appearing in the form of the Serpent. This that Freemasonry taught at the 2nd degree on the origin of the human body, and in the 13th on the origin of the new As a Jew, she teaches here about the origin of the new Lucifer who forms in the third eleventh week.

Let's not forget the blue silk dress sprinkled with stars. of gold, which is the decoration of the Princes of the Tabernacle. It is easy to recognize there the aerial sky inhabited by the Spirits. Saint Paul urges us to "remain steadfast against the snares" of the devil; for we have to fight, not against the flesh and blood, but against the powers, against the leaders of this world of darkness, against the spreading Spirits of malice- "dried in the air." The Jewel is "a small golden globe on-mounted with a double triangle encircled by spokes, having at the center the word Jehovah" – obviously Jehovah-Lucifer. The Christians– They place a small globe in the hand of the Infant Jesus

1. See this image reproduced by Léo Taxil, p. 329,
2. Franck, p. 139.
3. Ephesians, 5, 12.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 387

surmounted by a cross. We see there two Heads, Christ and Lucifer, fighting over the earth.

25. The 8th Sephirah. The Glory. – The Knight of the Brazen Serpent.

In the 25th degree we encounter the Ophites. This grade was the third of the last Series of Eleven, corresponds in point 3 of the first and must, therefore, have a importance similar to that of the Master's degree.

Communication with the Spirits, which began on the 24th of– This, in turn, drives man to ophiolatry, the worship of the Serpent. classic symbol of Lucifer.

Above the altar in the room is a transparent representing the Ja, Je, Ji, the Masonic Jehovah, in the middle of a "burning bush." The miracle by which God... revealed to Moses is admirably suited to the Angel of Fire: "The Lord appeared in a flame of fire that came forth from the midst of a bush; and Moses saw the bush burning without it being consumed! If the Lord Adonai could to exist in this flame that no longer consumed him, the Sei-Lord Lucifer will not be consumed in the Fire either eternal, of which he is the immortal inhabitant.

A truncated cone-shaped mound in the middle of the room, carries a bronze serpent coiled around a sort of gallows (p. 348). The Lord said to Moses, "Make a serpent of bronze, and set it up as a sign; whoever is "The wounded snake will look at him, he will be healed." In the he– it is said: "Put it on a standard," as on a high position, so as to be seen throughout the camp, Black-Seigneur said, for this reason: "Like Moses, e/cva the Serpent in the desert, so it is necessary that the Son of Man be lifted up (on the Cross), so that whoever believes in him, may not 'He shall not perish, but have eternal life.'

The essence of this grade results from the comparison between the

1. Exodus, one, 2.
2. Numbers, xxx, 9.
3. John, ns, 14, 15.

388 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Christ and Satan, both represented by the Serpent of the air-rain. Christ on the Cross becomes the Death of Death, "in order to destroy by death the one who held power over the "Dead, that is to say, the Devil!"

Satan, for his part, appropriating this figure, said to the reciprocal that it was he who healed the Hebrews in the desert, he, Angelo of Light, of whom the Serpent is one of the emblems, he, Eblis-Lucifer, who took pity on the Israelites-lites, firstly because of the sacrifices to the golden calf, symbol of nature, then because in the number one finds-had many descendants of Cain (p. 348).

Thus, placed on a cross, the Serpent represents Satan, the true Savior of humanity, whom he heals of the wounds-sure wounds inflicted by Adonai; Sinai is his Golgotha and the A truly glorious Calvary!

The Candidate, already transformed into a Kabbalistic Jew, un-he acts like a Jew traveling in the desert; he makes do with some Brothers, around the mound that represents Sinai, a procession in honor of Eblis – the Serpent perched on a cross – seen more often on a gallows shaped like the letter T, A vile symbol of the generation.

The worship of the Serpent God constitutes the essence of this degree.

In the 3rd degree, the Master represents Hiram, killed and resurrected: life reborn from corruption; at the 25th, the Knight of The Brazen Serpent represents his death caused by malice. of Jehovah-Adonai and his resurrection brought about by Iblis-Serpent. From a Levite of Lucifer, he reborn another Lucifer. militant, enemy of Jehovah-Adonui.

The mystery of this rank is deeper than it seems. at. commencement. Its composer was a theologian profound. What, in effect, are Christian baptism and the other sacraments, if not a mystical transformation of Natural man becomes a child of God? Through the infusion of sanctifying grace wrought in baptism, a "particip-" "The nature of the divine?" is given to the human soul,

1. Hebr., u, 44.
2. II Peter, 1, 4.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 389

as the nature of wine is given to Lean, by infusion in
It is of this higher substance. We are incorporated to God. The divine life within us is nourished by the divine.
Sacrament of the Eucharist, the food must be of the of the same nature as that which it nourishes. The Sacrament of Confirmation Maturation makes perfect within us this divine life communicated in baptism. Through the Sacrament of Holy Orders we are, in various degrees, incorporated into Christ the Pontiff, of whom we let us become like members, representatives, until that, in heaven, we may be the family of God, the God's people, new gods: "I said: You are "Gods!"

The Demon's mimicry goes so far as to incorporate
The man has his diabolical personality. The man must...
To laugh like Hiram, and be resurrected as a new demon!
This is the meaning in which Jesus Christ spoke to the Pharisees Kabbalistics: "The father from whom you were born is the Devil, And you want to fulfill your father's wishes. He was a homicide from the beginning, and he did not remain in the truth. Therefore, truth is not in him. When he He utters lies, he says what is his own, for he is
'liar and father of lies.'

The incorporation of man into the demon is the work pro-aggressive Freemasonry. Like a follower of sects ancient and medieval traditions led Freemasonry to arrive via mystical asceticism, through the pact, through obsession and possession-sion, to its most perfect incorporation into the Demon.

The 25th degree depicts the transformation; the 26th, corresponding holding the rank of Master of Secret, must necessarily represent to feel a newborn Lucifer-knight.

But let us now consider the second part of the Che- grade.
level of the Brazen Serpent,—the political part,—since it
The 33rd degree must culminate in the perfect Patriarch-Emperor-Kabbalistic dreamer.

It is said in this degree that the crusaders — the Tem-

4. Psalm 80:6. — John, 7:34.

2. John, wine, 44.

390 KABDALISTIC INTERPRETATION

folds – learned the mysteries from the Israelites in Palestine of this rank, and that, amazed by this light, they abandoned gave Christianity to devote themselves to the worship of the true God and the deliverance of captives. The recipient is bound to follow them and give the people freedom, by breaking the heavy chains of civil, religious, military and despotism economic. To what extent do we dare to mislead? to the followers, even of the 33rd degree, the President of this degree This demonstrates that he designates as the goal of this degree "the duty of man to give his fellow men the most diligent care vowed for their health; thus does his Sacred Word mean Compassion! ! "

The Sacred Word of the 25th degree is Moses, who recalls the history of The story of the Brazen Serpent. Now he submits to order by showing with the index finger of the right hand the earth, – or rather the place burning delights of Dicu-Feu, which we imagine to be Somewhere in the middle of the earth. As a Sign, we draw a cross on his chest, not a Christian cross, but the cross on which the brazen Serpent God is supposed to be nailed down. We take nine steps in a zigzag pattern to imitate the movement of the Serpent. We beat nine times, because this degree is the ninth from the top, unless one wants to look for the mysteries already explained in numbers 5, 3 and 4, special-marked elements in the Battery. The Jewel is a snake of brass embracing a wand that ends in a T,

The figure of this Jewel, well known to everyone, is often represented in the Masonic Anchor. The Lodge of The Triple Hope, in Port Louis, shows on its door three of these symbolic anchors.

The cerele at the top of each anchor, symbolizing the En-Kabbalistic sophism, or eternity, is not formed by the the Serpent's own body, but, which amounts to the same thing, by a ring. From this ring emerges the Serpent, symbol of Jehovah-Lucifer, Architect of the Universe, turning around of the T, or triple phallus, and thus engendering the World.

4, Paul Rosen, p. 284.

hides its head behind the teeth of the Anchor. These teeth form a quarter of a circle and symbolize the visible world, the last of the four worlds, of which, according to Kabbalah, the Universe is composed.

The uninitiated mistake these snakes for cables, what—that there are no knots attaching the cables to the rings of the three anchors.

The same Masonic, or Kabbalistic, anchor is often depicted with a Dragon on the halter of a Serpent, as, for example, on the one hundred franc banknotes of the Bank of France. The identity of the Dragon with the Serpent does not require No evidence.

The Caduceus, an ancient pagan symbol, a staff surrounded of two intertwined snakes, which can be seen on other Banknotes and postage stamps of the Republic French Freemasonry represents the same thing as the Brazen Serpent; he merely adds the doctrine of the gender duality of divine figures: the Holy King and the Matron.

Due to the current proliferation of Masonic symbols In our public life, we almost encounter this figure as often as the Blazing Star, which is found today I am even on the front lines of the angels of Christian worship, on that of the Geuies, for example, of art, on the snares Italian officers, high school students, etc., etc. The Freemasonry, to replace Christianity, to in—it meanders everywhere through its symbols, under which its doctrine is "Impenetrably" hidden.

26. The 7th Sephirah. Strength or Triumph. — The Prince Thank you.

The incorporation of the pro-Demonic Spirits into the army produced, so to speak, a new Spirit which, by its very nature, must be able to enter the regions where its constituents live brothers.

The Prince of Merci is also called the Trinitarian Scotsman; Scottish, because magic passed on with the Templars refugees, via Scotland, throughout the West; Trinitarian, probubling because the Neophyte of this grade flies in the three circles.

392 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The recipient first takes nine steps in a meandering motion; this is the Sign of the previous grade, and symbolizes the march of the The Serpent God who never walks straight. They attach to him... Shoulders, two wings, symbol of the Spirits. Everywhere, even In the Church, Angels are always depicted with wings, to signify their spirituality. The recipient represents- So, feel a Spirit. Incorporated into the choir of Demons in the previous level, here he must climb nine steps, – perhaps- to be in honor of the nine Sephiroth subject to the Couronne, the Architect of the Universe.

From the platform on which he stands, his eyes bandaged, he must fly to the third heaven. He takes off and falls onto a stretched blanket held by a few Vigorous brothers. He is found in the first heaven, that wandering stars; – the stars representing the Spirits, it found in "the air where the Spirits of malice are spread".

We take him into the second heaven, the ethereal heaven, symbolized by soap foam which he must smell (!). There lie the fixed stars – the chained Demons in hell. A candle is brought close to one's fingers. lit up, to represent the heat of the fixed stars – of the hell he'd ended up in. To console him for the pen- A terrifying vision of the future eternal fire, he is given assurance that henceforth his body has acquired the property of resisting Fire!

After being tossed into the air, he enters the third-sixth heaven, in the presence of the Prince of Darkness, the God-Fire, which he must see "as it is?", "face to face?", – as Christians will see God. They show him "Truth coming out of the well" – from the well from which came the smoke which produced the locusts of the 17th degree.

4; Ephesians, 6, 12.

2. Jean, ur, 2.

3, I Cor., xu, 12.

93 SCOTTISH DEGREES 393

This Truth is represented by "a Freemason Sister" "In traditional dress"-just as she is! She is the Goddess of Reason, whom the altar of Our Lady of Paris has known.

So we leave the recipient alone with "the Truth". after giving him an Arrow, a vile symbol of God Cupid. The Freemasons' heaven resembles that of of Muhammad. The new Demon learns that he has soared in the three regions of intelligence, consciousness and of Reason – corresponding to political needs, social and material aspects of Humanity!

The recognition sign consists of a triangle made with the first fingers of both hands and placed on the belly: the Kabbalistic physical triangle is complete. 27°, 28° and 29° degrees will represent the moral triangle in the demonic sphere.

The password for entering the Lodge is Gomel. people of God, that is to say, of Lucifer; to communicate outside the Lodge, there are two: Ghibblim and Gabaon; Both are the Gomel, the people of God. The Ghibblim were a Phoenician people, whose capital, Byblos, was famous for its attachment to the cult of Adonis, which one believes he was wounded by a wild boar in Lebanon, in- above this city. The Adonis River, which flows down from the Lebanon, passes through Byblos and takes charge at certain times of a red like blood, because of red soil that it crosses and that it carries in large quantities into its excesses. It was then that those of Byblos, the Ghib- "Blim," Adonis weeps, pretending that it is his blood that The river is red! The Egyptians, every year, celebrate Adonis's people used to throw a box into the sea made in the shape of a head which they said was the head of Osiris, which contained a letter addressed to the people of Byblos, separated by more than eighty leagues. This box was going, it was said, of her own accord in Byblos after seven days t.

1, Calmet, Historical Dictionary of the Bible, x° Byblos.

394 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Gibeon was the capital of the Gibeonites, with whom the Israelites made a covenant!, and who for their super- cherries were reduced by them to slavery, in which they remained ever faithful to Israel. It was at Gibeon that Joshua stopped the sun and the moon: "Sun, stop over Gibeon; "Moon, is it not advancing on the valley of Aïalon?"

Under the name of Nathinaeans, or Doni, the Guabaonites went out to the temple, under the orders of the priests and the Levites, before and after the captivity.

But that's not the reason why Ja franc-ma- Stupidity loves this people so much that it makes its name a Password. Gabaon was sitting on a rise, like

His name, the author of iniquity, denotes it. Solomon went there, to beginning of his reign, to sacrifice there, because this was the most important of all the high places of countries where sacrifices were then tolerated. The holy Writer- This fact is reproached to Solomon: "Solomon loved the Lord- lord, and he conducted himself according to the precepts of David his father, except that he sacrificed and burned incense in the high places. He went to Gibeon to sacrifice there- Proud 3.

Here are some questions of order: "Are you Prince of Thank you? – Reply: I have seen the great Light, and I am a Prince of Merei, like You, by the triple alliance of which you and

I wear the mark. – Question: What is this triple Alliance? – Answer: Nine lights are upon the throne; one

The arrow is on the altar; Truth unveiled is our palladium. » – The three crowned Kabbalistic triangles, the Phallus and Truth unveiled, rising from the well!

The word Sublime Edu/ pen kagu means: Be just, of fear of being expelled. Received among the pure Spirits – let's say impure – the adept will rise even higher – let's say, go even lower. Catholics only pray by the Holy Communion of the "Body of Jesus Christ" may they be

1. Joshua, 1x, 3.
2. Ibid, x, 12.
3. HI Kings, 115, 8, 4.

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 395

incorporated into his mystical body among his members!". This is how the Kabbalistic man is, by degrees in degree, incorporated into the mystical body of Satan and counted among its members.

27. The 6th Sephirah, Beauty. – The Sovereign Commander of the Temple.

The new pure Spirit becomes, at the 27th degree, the representative so much of Kabbalistic Beauty, by the fact that it is received among the members of His Infernal Majesty's Court: he

He becomes the Courtier. The 27th-degree meeting is called The Court. The President is described as all-powerful, and holds sway. like Jesus Christ, a blue robe and a red cloak; at the end of its cord is a triangle, where the Sacred Word, INRI, is written in Hebrew; he has a crown on his head. thorny points. All it lacks is "the roscau in its right hand? » to make it an Ecce Homo. The Souve- Rains Commanders ascend at the beginning of each meeting, to the East, and kneel before the President's altar. "And bending their knees before him, they mocked him, saying: "Hello King of the Jews?!"

The bound recipient is brought into the room, for him To learn that he is still under the yoke of his passions! a sign of this slavery, an image of political slavery, we The strand is tied to a board and covered with a sheet. mortuary and on the island they carry in procession while singing a funeral prose. Afterwards, he is untied, to show him the dif- the difference that exists between a slave and a free man, and He is solemnly crowned.

That is the moral beauty of this degree: political freedom! But to fully understand its beauty, one must add the obligation, which the candidate accepts, "to always obey" nevertheless under the orders that will be hierarchically given to him transmitted." (P. 352.) It must help to replace with sou

1. S. Thom, Aquinas, Præpar. ad Missam.
- 2 Matthew, 27:29.
3. Ibid.

396 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

blind obedience, authority and government in the secular society, when the time comes, through representatives direct subjects of the free interests of the partners. The substitute- Order tuition for all existing governments is the political aim of this third series of eleven.

Freemasonry considers itself the great justice- secret keeper of governments and peoples. Jesus- Christ, INRI, who had arrogated to himself the title of King of the Jews, was rightly condemned; the true King of the Jews takes here the place that Jesus Christ had usurped! We kneel before him, no longer to mock him, but to honor him and to adore him.

The sign is this: You make a small mark on your forehead sign of the cross with the thumb of the right hand, and the Brother comes to kiss your forehead in the same place. Is it because

To suggest that Jesus Christ deserved the slap he received?
Is this a commemoration of Judas's kiss?

In this degree which, with the two following, represents the soul of the demonized Man, we reveal the core idea of the Kabbalah through embroidery that followers wear on the bib of their apron. We know the meaning of the bib. The Teutonic Cross, the sign of the fourfold gene-the ratio that produced the four worlds – the perfection of the triple phallus of the Phoenicians – appears surrounded by a Golden laurel wreath. It is the phallus, the general forcetrice, which unlocks all the treasures of nature. Also see-
You have the embroidered key below the bib, naturally on the Apron, another form of the letter G.

In the Court of the Prince of this world, one sees beauty of the whole and the harmony of the worlds emanating from the Supreme crown. And since the second world, cchi of the Metatron is inhabited only by this one Angel, the triple triangle, of the Spirit, the Soul and the Physical, is not repeated three times, and the Battery strikes three times nine, by 27 strokes. We divide them by two times twelve and once three knocks; the harmony and beauty of the Universe require the connection, the trade, between the various worlds, the

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 397

the great supreme trinity, always remaining at the summit, the Supreme crown; it is she who shines in a triple light-ideal mother; it is she whose supreme generative force, represented by the mystical number five and by the Star blazing, it spreads throughout the universe.

Question of Order: "Are you Sovereign Commander?"

– Answer: I saw the triple light and I know the five qna-
"listed."

It becomes clear that, in this grade, the progress that
The Kabbalistic Man consists in his admission into
The Court of the Great Architect of the Universe: he poet. In the 28th degree, he will be incorporated into the choirs of the Geniuses and the Cherubim, and in the 29th he will submit to the Master's obedience Supreme, who will deign to present himself to him almost personally-element in the figure of the Templar Baphomet. The soul and the Morality of Judaico-Kabbalistic Demonolatry reveal, and Masonic Truth is before our eyes in all her satanic nakedness!

28. The 5th Sephirah. Mercy. – The Knight of the Sun, Prince Adept.

Kabbalistic Mercy and Justice could not "to be exercised separately, for there is no Justice without Thanks." They represent "what we would call the extension and concentration of willpower! The extension The pantheistic nature of the primordial Being is revealed in the number of Geniuses or superior Spirits.

The hall for this grade, representing Eden, is not lit than by a transparent globe, representing the Sun, The President Adam, and a Masonic sister, without of all clothing, the "Truth" on Épe. – The meeting does not must not include more than twelve Brothers, including the Pre-President Adam, and the Grand Overseer, the "Brother of the "Truth." Five of the Brothers represent five Geniuses or Cherubies, the other five of the Sylphs or other Spirits.

1. Franck, p. 145.

398 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

"What do you mean by the number 12?" – Answer: The twelve Zodiac signs, the foundation of the first motive, the spreading throughout the Universe for our spiritual happiness temporal ct, »

The rank obviously wants to paint on creation day things visible and invisible. The twelve Brothers signify The physical heavens, themselves a representation of the spiritual heavens. The five sylphs and the five cherubim sufficiently indicate that According to Kabbalistic doctrine, pure Spirits do not are not so pure as to be devoid of comloincloths.

The Brothers, modestly dressed as Sylphs and Cherubins, that is to say, dressed in a tunic of golden gauze, the Sylphs with aprons, Cherubim even without clothes, include the celestial hierarchy, into which is incorporated, as thirteenth, a new Lucifer, the recipient.

He is shown the great secret of nature, which he com- will take if he knows how to free himself from the yoke of his belief youth, and to take in the spectacle of pure nature and its his own intelligence as the sole rule of his faith.

We no longer need to insinuate what the purity of nature: the recipient is admitted, at the same time, to the most infamous debauchery under the striking figure of pure Spirits, and magical communication with Spirits saturates.

The approach of Satan's Great Light is made yatu-actually through magical invocations (p. 356). The Philo-occult sophic of Agrippa, summarized by Brother Ragon and based on Kabbalistic magic, teaches that "there are three worlds: the elemental, the celestial, and the intellectual. Each The subordinate world is governed by the world that is subject to it. laughing. It is not impossible to move from knowledge from Pun to the other's knowledge, and to go back up to The archetype. This scale is what we call magic. profound contemplation that embraces Nature; in a word, the entire work of the universe. It is a sacred art that he "It must not be disclosed."

1. Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy, – Hermetic Quotations, pages 522-523.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 399

The recipient is instructed in the principles of the black magic; phantasmagoria produced by means of Magic Lamp represents to him the Spirits' Heaven in which it has risen to the 28th degree. On the base of the Lamp Magical are engraved the seal of Ilcrmes and the Androgyne at two heads of Khunrath. The Zohar teaches that before coming In the world, every soul and every spirit is composed of a man and a woman united in a single being; in descending to earth, these two halves separate. will animate different bodies. When the time for marriage The Holy One, blessed be He, who knows all souls, has arrived. and all the spirits, uniting them as before, and then they formerly formed a single body and a single soul®.

This is not the place to delve into the depths of Black Magic. In rituals and computer sessions... Regarding the Freemasons, we are careful not to arrive at a point capable of diverting a large number of people from their secret society a number of men who do not understand where they are being led.

The deity of the Universe, Pan, is represented by the Four passwords: Stibium (Latin), a stone, a symbol of the earth; Helios and Mene (Greek), the sun and the moon; and Tetragrammaton (Greek), the four-letter name, Yhoh, Jehovah, the "Good Principle".

The Sacred Word is Adonai, the Creator of heaven and of the earth, the "Bad Principle".

The response was Abrag, they made me bend my knees, they Gadol, the Great One who has risen: Satan imputes his pride to God himself!

Evidence that this is Satan worship can be found still in the Request: "Tell me the weather conditions at

"What time is it?" – and in the Answer: "It is Night on Earth, but the Sun is in its full glory for

1. Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 41.
- 2, Franck, p. 180.

400 KANBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

"The Lodge." Everywhere and at all times, night was preferred. to indulge in the worship of the Devil.

29. The 4th Sephirah. Justice. – The Great Scotsman of Saint-André.

If the Mercy and Grace of Jehovah-Satan deign to spread outwards and reveal itself in a perceptible way Justice, the symbol of justice, demands to be worshipped and prostrated. before the Great Architect. Now, after having been received among the Courtiers of Lucifer's Celestial Court (27°) and admitted amidst the adorable Genies and Cherubim (28'), The Kabbalistic Man enters, at the 29th degree, into the presence even of the Divinity, and justly restricted its adolescence ration to His Infernal Majesty.

As usual, on the occasion of the diabolical appearances– In the Hall of Lights, the room is profusely illuminated. With nine lights represent the image of the archetypal Man, nine times nine will represent his hidden presence. We receive it in a way mystical, with the muffled sound of drums covered in a red carpet; above the presidential throne shines his symbol: a luminous triangle, the Kabbalistic Delta his militia, and the President calls himself Patriarch, by the name of the highest dignity of the Synagogue of the 20th degree.

The recipient is entrusted with the flag of the Order of Temple. Three masked men want to seize it. He defends victoriously. Fen rents, and they lend to him. oath to fight against any usurpation of power, hence Whether she comes from a civilian, military, or religious background, represented by the three masked men.

The Knight of Eloquence, so as not to frighten too much or shock the recipient, bring them to the sight of Lucifer who will appear, defends the Templars against having worshipped Baphomet (Baptism of Wisdom), in which an explanation which confirms everything we have already said about Pantheism of the Masonic sect.

"Baphomet," he said, "is the pantheistic and ma-
The absurdity of it all. The torch placed between the two horns

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 401

"It represents balancing intelligence." The two horns we are reminded of the two columns J and B, and here is one of Clavel's various interpretations: "The two columns depict the two generative phalluses, one of the light, of life and goodness; the other of darkness, of the Death and evil, which maintain the balance of the world. The Knight of Eloquence continues: "The head of the goat, head synthetic, which brings together some characteristics of the dog, of the The bull and the donkey represent responsibility for the matter alone, and expiation which, in bodies, must punish alone-
"The bodily fantasies." In other words: the soul is not not responsible for the sins of lust, of intemperate ranee, etc... cominis by the body!

"If the hands are human, it is to show the sanctity-head of work (!); if they make the sign of esotericism, it is "only to recommend the mystery" – of duality Principles – of Good and Evil, of Lucifer and Adonai. "What could be found indecent in this emblematic figure-Nature's tick? Could it be Ja Croix completed by the Rose? The rose symbolizes the invertuality of the human species. "maine" – that is to say the phallus, eternally force generator. "Is Baphomet criticized for having Woman's breasts? But that proves he doesn't wear human-nité that the signs of motherhood and those of labor (!), that is to say, the redeeming signs" – work and ma-
The eternity of the hermaphrodite god is an invented atrocity and necessarily admitted by the great lie of the pan-Theism. "On his brow shines the Blazing Star: one knows what its admirable mystical significance is" – Donated for the Holy King and the Matron! "Finally, incriminate–

We are missing this divine figure because of its large wings
"Outstretched? But those are the wings of a fallen archangel!"

This diabolical idol is carried in procession.
in the hall and in the corridors of the Lodge. The recipient– Daire Izeline held the flag entrusted to her in front of her!

1. Clavel, History of Freemasonry, p. 75.
26

402 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The adoration of the Patriarch of the Synagogue and the honors
Military personnel from the Kadosh are in all justice rendered to Lucifer!

Léo Taxil reproduces (p. 359) a passage from the Ritual of High Magic, by Brother Constant, on the subject of Baphomet,
We cannot resist the desire to reproduce it here:
"Let us boldly and loudly state that all initiates to
The occult sciences are adored, still adored, and will continue to be adored.
always what is signified by that symbol.

"Yes, the Grand Masters of the Templar Order" would worship Baphomet and have it adored by their initiates;
Yes, assemblies have existed and can still exist.
presided over by this figure, seated on a throne with a a burning torch between the horns. Only the worshippers of this sign do not think, as we do, that it is the representation of the Devil, but rather that of Dien Pan (the Great All), the God of our modern philosophy schools;
the God of the theurgists of the Alexandrian school and of the mys– Neoplatonic tics of our time, Spinoza's God ct of Plato, the God of the primitive Gnostic schools, Christ even of the dissenting priesthood.

Isn't this a striking confirmation of everything that We wrote

The recipient's soul is perfectly incorporated into Kingdom of Satan: its Masonic sanctification is com–
Complete. What's still missing?

Why is the representation, in this grade, of the Cross of Saint Andrew? Because this cross symbolizes the five points.
of the Blazing Star and the junction of the two triangles of the Saint King and Queen in a single point. The general act.

eternal, divine, pantheistic tower, that's all Mystery Island,
The entire Masonic religion!

At this grade there are 7 signs, 3 touches and one touch-general change, corresponding to the 7 lower Sephiroth, to the 3 higher Sephiroth and to the Ensoph. These are reminiscences of the grades of the first series, ending with the Saint Andrew's Cross and the Sacred Word, Nekamah, Vengeance.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 403

The names of the seven Spirits and the Passwords of this These grades relate to Black Magic. We have them almost all of them can be found in popular books for the classes superstitious people, such as: Agrippa, the Great and the Little Albert, the Great Etteilla, the Red Dragon, the Red Magic, the Grimoire, etc... We will be spared from giving the explanations, which all come back to what we we just said about Baphomet.

The second Triad of Archetypal Man has changed
The Masonic man as a perfect adept of Magic.
Among Lucifer's courtiers and the geniuses of the other world, he worshipped, in the form of Baphomet, "the Angel of Light." Like the Saints in heaven before God, he humble and devoutly worshipping, he placed himself at the feet of Lucifer, and has spiritually transformed into a new Spirit and citizen of the Kingdom of Hell.

30. The 3rd Sephirah. Intelligence. – The Elected Grand One, Knight Kadosh, Perfect Initiate; KNIGHT OF THE AICre BLaxc er Nor.

After its moralization, or rather its demoralization sata-Damn, there's still a Judaized and devilish man left to be received into the most mysterious ranks of the Synagogue
Satan wanted to open the way to the Goyim, to the "locusts" of the generation of Japheth. There, it will be more difficult for us to to rediscover the Kabbalistic thread that has guided us this far, not because we couldn't guess it, but because he is not revealed with the same clarity as in the grades previous ones.

The 30th degree, corresponding to the Sephirah / intelligence, must have a connection with the 8th and 19th degrees which are also modeled on the third of the super Sephiroth-laughter.

At number 8, we see the inverted triangle with the three letters Ja, Je, Ji, which are shown to the novice, in the inviolability of the Faith, so much to combat "intellectuality by order," that is to say the holy Faith. In the 19th century, he was told the story of the assault on

404 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The army of Eblis against the Heavenly Jerusalem. At the 30th, we openly fight the battle against the Adonatus of the Bible, "Bad Principle", that is to say, in the Dictionary of Christians. The Jewish-political man, already morally formed by the The second Kabbalistic Triad is now armed against Adonai and wages open war against God!

Absorbed in the revelations being made to him about the Order fallen from the Templars—and on the terrible vengeance that the Freemasonry established itself and dedicated itself because of the suppression from this Order, from which he is forced to resume the worship—The recipient of the Baphomet rite hardly has the leisure to reflect on the high importance of the practice of the ceremonial—which is practiced in the White Room.

The Grand Master made him understand from afar that "no one can hope to be introduced into the Areopagus of the Knights Kadosh, without having sacrificed to the object of their worship." (p. 371.) The Courtier of Her Infernal Majesty's Court, after having submitted to Lucifer and having lowered the flag before him The image, Baphomet, receives at the 30th degree the order to worship it and to offer him, on his knees, the sacrifice of perfumed incense. In the "Sanctuary of the Kadosh," the White Room, illuminated by a wide and macabre bluish light at Pos— Having drunk wine, one sees above the altar, in a glory, an immense inverted triangle, suspended from its point a two-headed eagle of natural size, half white, half black, with outstretched wings and holding a sword in its greenhouses. The High Priest is alone in this room, seated in front of Pautel. He asks the introducer: "Knight, my brother, whom are you leading?" — Answer: "It's a..." Grand Scottish Knight of Saint Andrew of Scotland, who, possessing all the virtues of a sage (acquired in the 27th, 28° cl 29° degrees), wishes to enter the Temple of Wisdom. » The applicant is freed from his black veil!

"The Priest: Mortal, prostrate yourself! The Great In— The introducer makes the recipient of the incense take it, i.e., him He poured it on the fire and made him kneel. The Great The priest then recites the following prayer addressed to Lucifer: "O all-powerful Wisdom (Shaddai), object of Our adoration is to you whom we invoke at this moment. Cause and Sovereign of the Universe, Eternal Reason, Light of the spirit, Law of the heart, how august and sacred is your A sublime cult classic!... »

The recipient is still asked to pour incense. in the sacrificial vessel. The Priest: "Get up "And continue on your way." (p. 372)

The Judaized man is incorporated into the Priestly Sacrificers of Lucifer. He is sanctified, has become a Saint, Kadosh. As such, he has the right to commit even murder. in honor of the Great Architect of the Universe and his Masonic Church.

In a black-draped room, after having bandaged him eyes, they make him plunge his dagger into the heart of this They claim he's a traitor to the Order. He's a sheep gagged, with his left side shaved. The recipient must touch it, to properly confirm the heartbeat of a man who was garroted before being struck. Not being ins-learned from this substitution of an animal for a man, he commits – not materially, but formally – A murder!

After this bloody ordeal, the recipient is conduit to the Senate, the Political Council of the Kadosh in Ja Fourth Chamber. There again is, above the throne, the inverted triangle from which the black eagle is suspended and blane, but here he is wearing a white ribbon around his neck and black, to which is attached a triple patriarchal cross, corresponding to the triple tiara of the Popes, in the West found, on a pyramid, a mausoleum containing an urn funeral (of Jacques Molay), a crown (of Philippe le Bel) and a tiara (of Clement V): but the skulls are not there more.

There is no need to describe the ceremony. policy concerning Jacques Molay; it needs no elucidation.

The mysterious ladder returns, and the recipient is forced to go up one side to bring it down the other. The banal explanations given to him for the Hebrew words cl of the names of the sciences inscribed anx seven marches of Each side would not merit our attention, if the Tiler did not give a variant whose ultimate word is blasphemy and a bloody revenge. Let it suffice for us, however for having pointed out this thing which has very little connection with Jewish Kabbalah. The true meaning of the Ladder mysterious seven-stepped structure, which, by its shape, is reminiscent of The Della, or Triangle, is by no means what Ragon says, of a On one side, morality, and on the other, science, should they help each other? It is found in what Clavel recounts in his History of Freemasonry*, where he cites the Arabic tale having as Title: //The Story of Iabib and Doratilgoase: "The Knight lifts at the end a large veil behind which are the seven seas and the seven islands he must cross before reaching Medinazilbalor, the crystal city, Thebes or Jerusalem Salem mystique. These islands (the seven fortunate flowers of Lucian, the seven degrees of the scale of magic, the seven stations planetary bodies placed on the path of souls returning from this world of misery in the ethereal light of Ormazd, their true homeland) are distinguished by the names of the seven cou- lenrs; and as the white insignia have never varied for the first rank, the first island, that Labib must conquer, is the white island. But before getting there, he must know- The test of the elements is repeated. If the hero remains steadfast, it is by the aid of the Philosopher King's sword and of the sacred word that is engraved there.

406 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The same Scale is found in the Mysteries of Mithras. To represent the successive purification of speaking souls passage through the stars, "the recipient was made to climb- to make a sort of ladder, along which there were seven doors, and at the very top, an eighth. The first door The first was made of lead; it was attributed to Saturn. The second, made of tin,

1. Pachtler, Za Guerre sourde, p. 127.
2. Ragon, Juitiation, p. 395.
3. 30th edition, p. 352.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 407

was assigned to Venus; the third, of bronze, to Jupiter; the fourth, of iron, to Mercury; the fifth, of a metallic metal- the sixth, silver, to Mars; and the seventh, of gold, to the Sun. The eighth gate was that of the heaven of fixed stars, abode of uncreated light and ultimate goal, where "They should have tenderened their souls."

It is once again in the Kabbalah that we must look for the origin of this mysterious seven-step ladder. According to its documentation- Triune, the human spirit emerges from Wisdom. Supreme Wisdom, also called celestial Peden, is the sole origin of the spirit; The soul comes from the Sephirah Beauty and the animal spirit of the Base. "The soul painfully takes the path to earth, and "comes down among us*" The soul is illuminated by the light of the mind, on which it entirely depends. After Death has no rest; the gates of Eden are not open to her. not opened before the mind had returned to its source, to the Ancient of Ancients, to be filled with him throughout eternity; for the spirit always returns to its 'source'. » « The soul does not leave the earth until the Queen is came to join her to introduce her into the palace of King, where she will remain eternally.

Now, in descending from Wisdom, the mind must pass through intelligence, the 3 moral Sephiroth and the 3 Sephiroth physical; and going back up, it must pass through the same Seven Sephiroth to enter Eden. That is the origin of the mysterious ladder that the recipient must climb to to reach the 31st degree, the Sephirah Wisdom.

Jewish Kabbalah explains almost all the mysteries of paganism and magic. Through it, the Jews dominate over We.

At the tomb of Saint James (Molay) the cundidat pronounces four more wishes; but, before that, he is given the order to seize the crown and the tiara and trample them underfoot.

1. Clavel, History of Freemasonry, p. 323.

2. Zohar, Franck, p. 181.

8. Franck, p. 175.

4. Ibid., p. 178.

4108 KABHALISTIC INTERPRETATION

This act signals that the Order's vengeance must nor fall upon Philip the Fair and Clement V, who are dead for centuries, but on "who has the right", that is to say on their successors in the papal office and in the Royal dignity. "What have your feet trodden upon?" – Reply: Cou-royal crowns and papal tiaras." (p. 386.)

After the vows, the recipient is consecrated Aadosch. Perfect Initiate, Knight of the White and Black Eagle, which means, Priest of the "Good Hermaphrodite Principle, Sacrili-Lucifer's caterer.

"Question: Why are we Kadoseh? – Answer: For to fight relentlessly and constantly against all injustice and all oppression, whether it comes from God, the King, or the Poppy.–Question. By what right? –Answer. Mischtar, of the Government (of Order). – Question: What is a Ka-perfect oath? – Answer: One who has taken an irrevocable oath the term to maintain, at all costs, the principles of the Order, to defend, at all costs, the cause of the Truth and justice against all usurped authority, or abusive, or irregular, whether political, or military, or religious, and to punish without mercy the traitors to The Order.

The height of satanic hatred against Dicu is indeed expressed by the symbolic gesture of the Kadosh, when at their banquet, to drink the sixth toast, the dagger is plunged in the glass of red wine; while the drops are falling As if splattering blood, they all cry out at once: Deus Sanctus, Nokem; "Holy God! Avenger." After drinking, one gives a stabbing motion towards the sky while shouting: Nekam, Adonat; "Vengeance! Adonai!" Vengeance against You, the Christians' leader, vengeance for all the evil inflicted To Lucifer!

For the seventh toast, we bring a fiery punch; we extinguished the torches, and, in the sinister glow of the flames bluish with the spirit of wine, the Priests of Satan brandish the dagger against the sky, they sing their hymn of Ka-Dosch and it ends by repeating their invocation of Lucifer:

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 409

"Holy God, Avenger!" and their challenge to Diou: "Vengeance, Adonai!

The dagger is put back in its place, the Grand Master says: Phagal-Khol, he destroyed everything; the assistants reply: Pharas-Khol, he crushed everything. And the sinister banquet of The Areopagus is over.

"The kings of the earth have risen up, and the princes..." are gathered against the Lord and against his Christ, saying: Let us break their yoke and cast it far from us! He who dwells in the circles will laugh at them, and the Lord I won't care.

By summarizing this grade to find the Sephirah of Intelligence, we see the Candidate writing and signing, in the Black Chamber, the request to be admitted to higher knowledge, notwithstanding his conviction of finding it already in a supernatural and diabolical sphere. In this supplication, we find a new pact by which he commits, with full knowledge, to moving forward in the treacherous path. We will follow it in the Capeau du Sepulchre, where he knowingly commits a symbolic murder on the heads of the pope and the king.

In the Blue Room, the second one, he enters the "Temple of Wisdom," and there, on his knees, he offers his sacrifice to the Angel of Light; yet another act of demonolatry! In the Blue Chamber, it is decreed that the aspirant must "undergo his fate." What fate? To have to commit in the chamber black is a murder in reality, if not material, at least formal.

Finally, in the Red Room, he climbs the mysterious Ladder—seven levels. The number seven that recurs so frequently—wind in this grade, and on all occasions where it is a question of evil spirits, reminds us the seven Daeva of the Zoroastrians, which we discussed earlier. Those initiated into the Magic, among the Persians, involved climbing a mysterious ladder absolutely similar in seven double degrees (p. 375). The

The recipient is supposed to ascend through the seven choirs of

4. Psalm 1r, 24.

410 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

demons, as, upon his admission to the Court of Lucifer was incorporated into the Sylphs and Cherubim.

There's a whole book to be written about the seven spheres of Minds. It suffices for us to note here the progress made by the Candidate for his assimilation with the Angel of Light. He received the gift of Intelligence; he understood the inner workings of the Court which was opened to him at the 27th degree.

One more important point: in this degree, the Double Eagle does not yet wear a Crown, if necessary to believe the representation given by Léo Taxil to the page 393.

31. The Second Sephirah. Wisdom, — The Inquisitor Inspector Commander.

Here is the representative of the Sephirah Wisdom. Wisdom presides over the judicial supremacy of the Order in this degree; like the Crown to executive supremacy in the 32nd degree, and the Ensoph to governmental supremacy, in the 33rd and final degree (p. 435). For these various degrees of the Supremacy, the 31st degree is called the Tri- Sovereign bunal, the 32nd the Consistory or Grand Encampment, and the 33° the Supreme Council.

To rise to the rank of Inquisitor, Inspector, Commander For, one must go through a Nopiciat presided over by the Philosopher Judges, Great Unknown Commanders.

The recipient's instructions suggest the means to acquire "the highest Wisdom" (p. 422), and, having already learned in the grades of the two Kabbalistic Triads inferior, the value of the words Force and Justice, she makes him understand the central word of the Higher Triad or intel- The key to understanding the archetypal man, the word Wisdom. The:-President-tooth, after having received in his hands the seven oaths of the recipient – so to speak, the seven gifts presented to the Lucifer's wisdom – said to him: "Repeat after me: Wisdom" Strength! Justice! – The recipient: Wisdom! Strength! Justice! "Tice!" (p. 424.)

The Wisdom advocated at this level is by no means the wisdom, the first of the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit 1; we have not than to go through the rite of this novitiate and the 31st degree that follows, to learn what Masonic Wisdom consists of.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 441

In the reception room, fittingly located in the basement the building's ground floor, where one is forced to descend via a miller's ladder, a room that very well represents the anti- In the chamber of Hell, hieroglyphs can be seen on the walls. hermetic and kabbalistic (p. 414), including the explanation is given with sufficient clarity (p. 427) to dispense us to give them again. The subjects of these hieroglyphs are drawn from various ancient mysteries, all more or less explanations of phallolatry and demonolatry so often already mentioned. The official exhibition published by Leo Taxil leaves nothing to be desired with regard to the purpose of our essay.

Kabbalistic wisdom teaches you "to bind the feet and hands to the usurpers of human rights; to go-to govern humans and dominate them through secrecy which hides this government from the eyes of the secular world." (P. 416.)

After giving him a glimpse of his participation in the government—the world's leading figure, the President has the recipient loaned The Novitiate Oath. Right knee on the ground, cut—opening his chest and now with his left hand on his heart, the tip of his Kadosh dagger, his right hand In the President's hand, the candidate recites this oath Important: "I, so-and-so, promise and swear obedience" to the Most Holy and Indivisible Trinity, as well as to the Great Commander, Most Perfect President and Supreme Judge of this Sovereign Philosophical Chapter", etc...

Then the President makes it felt, by applying slight pressure, to the to receive, the point of the dagger that he holds on ba chest; which causes him a little pain (p. 419).

Having concluded this bloody pact, the candidate is adamant—Received and constituted Novice Judge Philosopher Grand Unknown Commander.

1. Isaiah, 20, 2.

412 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The mirage of supreme domination unfolded before the the aspirant's desire, reminds us once again of the temptation—The story told by Saint Matthew: "The Devil transported Jesus on a very high mountain, and showing him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory, he said to him: "All these "Those things I will give you, if you bow down and do not worship." The Kadosh, already enlisted among His Majesty's Courtiers Satan, do not respond like Jesus: "Get away, Satan, For it is written: "You shall worship the Lord your God, and you "You will serve only him;" but, notwithstanding the warning—The President's serious remark: The step you are taking today Today is the most important thing for your magpie... Think about it, There's still time... I await your last will and testament. (p. 4148), he places himself at the disposal of the Order and lends the the aforementioned oath.

What then is the Most Holy and Indivisible Trinity? to which he devotes himself body and soul? It's for the first time that we hear this name in Freemasonry; and we are already convinced that this is not the Holy Trinity of Persons whom Christians worship in The Unity of the divine Substance. It is indeed a Trinity.

blasphemous. But what is it? We no longer have to returning to the three faces that Dante gives to Lucifer, we we are forced to acknowledge this mystery whose Kadosh receives no explanation. The famous Dr. Eckert, the first doctor who seriously dealt with the the doctrine of Freemasonry, speaks at length about this Trinity in his work: The Temple of Solomon (Prague, 1855). "The matter of the world has existed from all eternity, and will exist throughout all eternity in the Holy Trinity, that is to say, in the unity of three elementary materials: the ele- the masculine element of Iron, the feminine element of Water, and the element- neutral Earth... Before the formation of the universe, These interconnected elements formed Chaos. From this... Motto of the 33rd degree: Ordo ab chao. "The three elements"

1. Matthew, 1v, 8-10.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 413

primary, with the division of the sexes into two, give the number five, principle of all body formation world, whose symbol is the sphinx, with the head and the breast of a woman, the body of a lion and the wings of an eagle. Developed by the force of Fire, the elements produce by the air, the soul of the world, and by the Light, the Holy Spirit, whose symbol is the Phoenix, the flying dragon emerging from the Fire. "

"Body, Soul and Spirit of the world form another Holy Trinity which is incorporated into the AJomme-God. He, the Architect of the Universe with the Patriarch of the World, or Director of Spiritual Power, and Emperor of the World, or Director of Temporal Power, that is the Holy Trinity ius- written on the Supreme Cube of Solomon's Temple. Inverted triangle, Lucifer, with the two crowned heads of the eagle, that is to say with the Great Patriarch and the Great Emperor or Sovereign, composing the Most Holy and Individual the possible Trinity, to which the Kadosh swears his oath blind obedience.

That Freemasons of the 22nd and 33rd degrees do not Let's not be fooled: they are not Patriarchs and... Real sovereigns; these two dignities will be found outside of above the 33 degrees of Freemasonry.

After this oath of the Novice, it is still necessary to consider the A Little Bite. In his Mystique, Gærres deals with the Pact diabolical, and recounts several events involving people who are devoted to demon worship. The students of Wurzburg-

The town "shows its fingers, and a drop falls."
of blood, with which they seal their pact with the devil."
Michel Ludwig would very much like the Devil to give him a little money. "I agree," said the Demon, "but you, what about me?"
"Will you give in return?" – Michel told him he had nothing in return.
"At this moment," said the other, "what, you have no blood?"
"Can't you give me four drops?" he asked.
he took her left hand at the same time, and, without causing her

1. Eckert, Der Tempel Salomonis, p. 61.

44 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

no pain, expressed a few drops of blood, which he
It re-curled inside an eggshell,

The door leading to Magic is open, but no
we refrain from letting our readers in to contemplate it-to fill the Kingdom of the Demon, established in the image of the Church of Dicu. What we have indicated is sufficient to demonstrate the nature of the third eleven of Masonic degrees;
It serves to incorporate the Brothers into the Mystical Body of Lucifer, like the Catholic Church, serves for incorporation of the baptized to the Mystical Body of the Son of God.

Oh! that little pig! Oh! that little drop of blood!
"He who seeks in this way to unite with the Prince-
The epicenter of evil, to a certain extent, is part of the City of which Lucifer is the leader; he already is, by virtue of a pact secret, a member of his mystical body. A common interest binds the servant to the master: one wills evil, the other carries it out;
so that Pun's weakness relies on the strength of the other. This same interest keeps him in Satan's Society, It leads the conduit degree by degree to the bottom of the abyss.
was initially attached to this Kingdom only as allied; but in the end he acquires native status and the right to cited by a formal pact with the Demon. » « He exchanges the
The freedom of God's children against the servitude of slaves of the Demon. His spirit finally unites with the spirit of the Devil, who is a spirit of lies and error. In contradiction with himself and with his conscience, he denies what he had affirmed.
"Previously, and now he affirms what he denied?"

"The spirit of darkness takes from him some of his spiritual possessions, faith and baptism; of his bodily possessions, his blood; of gifts he received from nature, his children; and from his possessions
"Outside, part of what he owns."

"His children!" This phrase will become clear when one will read the old formula of the Oath which, at the locus of being Septuplo, as today, was triple: "1° I break

4. Gærres, 1. VI, ch. 1v, § 2.
- 2, Ibid., § 4.
3. Zbid, l. IX, ch, 11, § 3.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 445

the carnal lions that can still bind me to my father, mother, brothers, sisters, wife, parents, friends, mistresses, kings, leaders, benefactors, to every man whatsoever to whom I have promised faith, obedience, gratitude or service;

"2. I swear to reveal to the new Chief that I recognize, everything I have seen, done, read, heard, learned or guessed, it is even a matter of searching for and spying on what would not be readily available my wishes;

"3. I swear to honor aqua toffana (subtle poison)" as a safe, prompt, and necessary means of purging the earth, through death or through hebetatiou, of those who seek to debase the truth and wrest it from our grasp.

As soon as the recipient had pronounced the oath, The initiating Commander said in a solemn voice: "At the Glory to the Great Architect of the Universe, in the name of the Su-First Council, from this moment, Knight N... N... is freed from all the oaths he has taken to this day, to the fatherland and the laws." (p. 434.)

And governments allow the existence of lodges. in their territories!

After the small injection, the President begs the Novice to to open up to him, because it is his duty and in his best interest to the Order to dispel all his doubts and scruples! One can see in it the reckoning of conscience that the novices of Religious orders must answer to their superiors.

The President guides the Novice in his studies, which make him to know and judge the morals and worth of men by their outward appearance, their facial features, etc... He he finished by saying: "Of all the knowledge you have Go and acquire them, and you will find the highest Wisdom. (P. 422.) "Physique," say the Kubbalists, "if we If we believe the masters of inner science, it does not consist not in the traits that manifest themselves outwardly, but in those that mysteriously take shape deep within us—same. Facial features vary according to the printed shape.

brought to the inner face of the mind; the mind alone produces all those faces that the wise know: it is

416 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

by the spirit that they have meaning. When the spirits and the souls leave the Aeden — that's what they often call read Supreme Wisdom — they all have a certain form which Later, it's reflected in the face! Let's remember that.
that the 31st degree corresponds to the Sephirah Wisdom.

Once the novitiate is completed, the recipient is admitted without further ado.
A ceremonial gesture among the Inquisitors and Inspectors
Commanders, whose wisdom descends from the Sephirah Wisdom must exercise the judicial supremacy of the Order.

The Lodge's decoration is a white tent supported by golden columns, as if Wisdom were the hui—
The thirteenth Sephiroth, counting Pen below; the 9th, the Crown, Complete the three Triangles. The Touch says the same something that the 8 columns. By approaching each other with the right foot and by touching the knees, you form uw full angle; taking his left hand and he was placing his right hand on his right shoulder,
We form two other triangles; but the upper triangle
Wétaul is not yet fully staffed in this rank, we are not asking ourselves not the right hand on the right shoulder, we are only doing to strike each other lightly, as if to say:
We are close to reaching the summit of the three interlaced triangles.

The Sacred Words: Tsedekak and Mischor, Justice and Equity, clearly designate the Court of Justice or the Inquisition ma—connigue to which the 31st degree is intended.

Brother Ragon reports a remark made by the Brother Chemin-Dupontès, which we reproduce: "H a
It has always seemed highly inappropriate for a Society, without character—within the legal framework, it allows itself to imitate the forms and to take the names of civil (Tribunal) or religious institutions (Inquisition) the most important; it is disrespectful
What do we owe to these institutions?

4. Franck, p. 465.

2. Ragon, Rituals of the 31st and 92nd degrees. Paris, Colignon, p. 2, note,

OF THE 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 417

22. The first Sephirah, The Crown, – The Prince of the Royal Secret, Knight of Saint Andrew and Most Faithful Guardian of the Sacred Treasure.

The Crown Sephirah, which is to preside over the 32nd degree, is there is "impenetrably hidden." We have, however, found on the two heads of the Almighty Eagle. Leo Taxil did not give the explanation of the Princes' Camp, of which he speaks on page 443. It is found in the Ritual of this degree printed by Brother Ragon. There, on page 32, he says: "The G flag, which is that of the Grand Masters of the Key, is sea green. It bears a crowned, double-headed eagle, wearing a gold necklace, holding a sword in his right claw and a bleeding heart in the wrist." Thus he was seen until the end our hypothesis that the Jewish Kabbalah is the the core of Freemasonry. The 32nd degree is the Jewish degree by excellence. Instead of Prince of the Royal Secret, one should to say: Prince of the Eisley; for this degree is the staging of the Psalm 136: "By the rivers of Babylon, it is there we sat, and we wept at A memory of Zion. To the willows that grow within its walls, We hung up our musical instruments... Com- How shall we sing the Song of the Lord in a Foreign land? If I ever forget you, Jerusalem, may my Let my right hand be forgotten. Let my tongue cling to My palace, if I no longer remember you!... Baby-'s daughter Long, woe! Blessed is he who restores your measure that you have measured for us! Blessed is he who grasps and "He will crush your children against the stone!"

Pain, hatred, and rage!

Non-Jewish Freemasons are obliged to to mourn for exiled Israel, and to shed their tears to the misfortunes of the Jews, their masters!

The first great national misfortune was the Babylonian exile. The Lodge's hanging is black, the color of mourning, strewn with of tears, skeletons, skulls and bones in a necklace. The Sacred Word is the Latin word Salir, willow: "To the willows, We hung our lips in awe!

The second great misfortune was the burning of the Temple, under Titus, the ninth of the month Ab; even today, this day is For the Jews, a day of fasting; hence the second Sacred Word the Latin word Noni, the nine.

The two Brothers then pronounce together the troi-Sixth Sacred Word, the Greek word Tengu, let us grieve! The general idea of the camp is the march towards Earth Holy, to reconquer it and to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem.

Abbot Chabaunty! demonstrated the permanence of a government-unique situation among the dispersed Jews: "It is historically-"It is undeniable," he said, "that since their dispersal" Until the eleventh century, the Jews had a visible center known for its unity and direction. – Theodore Reinach Falfirme in his History of the Israelites. After the destruction of Jerusalem, this center was for a long time sometimes located in Japhne, sometimes in Tiberias; he was represented by the Patriarchs of Judea (20th degree) which were governed by great authority. "They decided-they dealt with matters of conscience and important affairs of the nation; they led the Synagogue as supreme leaders They were joking; they levied taxes; they had officers called Apdotians who carried orders to the Jews of the pro-their most remote vinces, which collected tribute. Their wealth became immense. These Patriarchs were acting in an overt or covert manner, according to the provisions Roman emperors towards the Jews. They disappeared under Theodosius.

"Above these Patriarchs were the Princes of the Captivity, who resided for a long time in Babylon. The writers Jews make a great distinction between the Patriarchs of Judea and the Princes of Eril. The former, they claim, They were only second-in-command lieutenants. The Princes of the Captives possessed the quality and absolute authority of superior leaders. promises of the entire dispersion of Israel. According to tradition doctors, they would have been appointed to fill the position of the former kings, and they have the right to exercise their empire on Jews from all countries of the world.

4. The Jews, Our Masters. Paris, Palmé, 1882.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 419

"The Caliphs of the East, frightened by their power, their provoked terrible persecutions, starting from the eleventh

In the 19th century, history ceased to mention these leaders.
of Israel.

Did they disappear completely, or did they carry away—their seat of power? This second hypothesis is by far the most likely, given the Jews' letter from Arles to those of Constantinople, and the response of the Jews of Constantinople to those of Arles and Provence, dated from 1489, which we have already mentioned above. The abbot Chabauty deduced from this the obvious fact that in Constantinople resided their Supreme Leader, not only religious, but also Politics: "There was the head of the nation." This Prince of Constantinople was the successor to the Princes of Exile of Babylon. He was there in the center of the dispersion, and he enjoyed full authority: "he ruled like a master
"It was punctually obeyed."

Let us therefore not be surprised that at the head of this Institution entirely Jewish, which is called Freemasonry, we we found the true Prince of Exile, hidden under the name of Prince of the Royal Secret, with the epithet: Most Faithful Guardian of the Sacred Treasure.

Let us be fully convinced that the Secret Society of France Freemasonry is the most hidden war plan, the most skillful of the fallen Synagogue, aiming at the subjugation—tion of all nations of the earth for the benefit of the race elected by the Jews. Anyone who joins this society cooperates in The Israelites' Great Work of placing the Xether-Malkuth of the world on the Jewish front.

Why does the master of the 32nd degree take the title of Sou-verain of the Sovereigns, if by this title the supreme Heads do not do not want to designate the Royal Diadem on the heads of Esther and Mordecai from all the kingdoms of the earth?

1. C. Desportes, The Mystery of Blood, p. 335.
2. Ragon, Ritual of the 31st and 32nd degree, p. 9.

420 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

Why is this "Sovereign of Sovereigns" called Great Prince, otherwise because the true Prince of Exile must to hide under the royal costume and the scepter of the Brothers of 32nd degree? Why does he also bear the title of Aesthete Commander-in-Chief, if not because the Prince of Exile must be at the head of the Executive Supremacy of Order?

Touching is nothing other than the Union of the "Tem-
"Folders" from all countries to conquer the whole world
under the supreme leadership of the Jews.

Here are the passwords: A said: Phagal-Khol, he annihilated Everything! B replies: Pharas-Ahol, he broke everything! A continues:
Nekam-Makkah, Vengeance! Carnage! A and B.: Shaddai, the Almighty. These words perfectly express this idea: "Good-Happy is he who will seize and crush your children against the rock ! "

We wondered why the two heads of The eagles are no longer openly crowned in this degree which corresponds to the Sephirotic Crown. On the Corso we can clearly see the two-headed eagle, but we don't say and We can't see that they're wearing crowns. The reason seems to be that the crown is not meant to join the two powers, both temporal and spiritual, only at the 33rd degree; the 32° alone represents temporal power. The flag G ceduring already claims, at the 32nd degree, what the 33rd is called to be done.

The Teutonic Cross of the Templars, which has already found its Kabbalistic interpretation plays a major role here, as decoration on the refreshment stand, on the gimbal, on the belt, and as jewel. If Pon wants to delve deeper into the emblems of Freemasonry, one will find that the Croër Teutonic is the cubic stone with a point (14th degree) de-folded. Draw four lines from the tip of the square pyramid perpendicular to the four lines of its base, and drawn-nose these eight lines, the bases and the perpendiculars, in a plan around an point, and you will find the shape of Ja Teutonic cross. The dot represents the Kabbalah crown.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 421

listic, or Hermetic Intelligence; the four perpendicular, the quadruple generation, and the four bases, the four worlds. On one of the four sides of the pyramid sc Find the Shemhamphorasch, the Name explained. The pyramid
The Teutonic Cross and the Teutonic Cross have the same meaning. Now, the
The 32nd degree is the grade of the Crown represented by the central point of the Teutonic Cross and by the point at the summit puts the cubic stone with a point.

The last five degrees are the Templar degrees;
because the Jews were shrewd enough to see in these fallen religious figures, the best instruments of which they could use them for their Great Work, at the same time while their Cross is an admirable symbol of their Kabbalistic doctrine hidden in the emblems of the 32nd degree.

But why, besides the silver tears on the tapestry
From the lodge, are there burning tears on the throne?
Where does Lucifer reside? Is the exile of Israel a symbol of exile?
of Lucifer in eternal fire? and the tears of Lucifer Are they tears of fire? Dante, speaking of the three faces of Satan chained in the abyss of hell, says:
"He wept with six eyes, and the tears mingled with a spittle" Bloody fluid streamed down three chins. The flame of The light upon the head of Eblis, we believe, is quite intense.
to prevent her tears from freezing before they fell on the ice, from which "the Emperor of the Kingdom of Pains emerged"
"up to the midpoint of the chest."

To highlight the Kabbalistic idea of this important grade—
Therefore, let us distinguish the doctrine of the Zohar from its application to This diabolical magic, based, as we know, on Kabbalah, is based on...
Let us first discuss the last one, to which we do not wish to con—
I swear by these few lines, for fear of getting carried away.
in an exhibition of magic kabbalism which demands
It would be a whole book in itself.

After the explanation of the Camp given to the Kadosh recipient daire, the Sovereign of Sovereigns makes the requests to him following:

422 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

1. "What do you still need to know?" – Answer: One essential point liel which later revealed itself to me.
2. "Why is it hidden from you?" – Answer: Because thirteen only some of you can know this, and that, too recently—
Having been initiated, I cannot be among them.
3. "So you don't know everything you need to know."
It is important to know? – R. There are undoubtedly things that I don't know; however, I know enough others to walk towards perfection: a day will come when I am allowed to know more.
4. "On what do you base this hope?" – A. On a appearance.
5. "What objects did she show you?" – NR. Three birds: a raven, a dove and a phoenix.

6. "What does the crow announce? – A. The blackness of its Plumage symbolizes sorrow, disorder, and death.

7. "What does the dove depict for you?" – A. "Its whiteness." nannonce the regeneration of beings.

8. "What does the phoenix remind you of?" – "That emerging bird flames to begin a new life, is the em-problem of the perfected nature of a universal theory ct of a power without limits.

9. "Explain that to me." – A. "I can't, I'm too..." still young.

10. "How old are you?" – A. 5, 7, 9, 27 and 33 years old = 81 years old.

Ragon also communicates the Notes from the manuscript on this grade (32°). The first question is annotated with this Important revelation: "(27) page 40. This question thus that the following eight should only be done to those who intended for knowledge of another kind, for-which one cannot initiate in advance a Prince of the Royal Secret. "

To which note from the manuscript Ragon adds his own: "To The priestly art, the art of transmuting imperfect metals into

4. We quote from the Ritual of Brother Ragon, Mr. Léo Taxil having omitted the The first four of these questions,

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 423

pure silver and gold." (See Occult Freemasonry, where (See Sacerdotal Art, p. 128 et seq.) (JMR)

These two notes alone are enough to make those whose eyes are neither closed by the Masonic blindfold, nor dazzled by the clubmoss, which these questions raise so much or at least the veil that still covers occult Freemasonry. The still hidden sphere in which it moves is none other than the supernatural slope down which she makes man descend towards the abyss and leads him directly to the feet of Empeinfernal firebrand.

We have before us the Masonic Orthodoxy of Fr. Ragon, and we find there, on page 542, the description of the priestly art. That is Alchemy; that is where we speak of the mercury (33° degree), black, white and red, cor-beautiful, of the serpent, of the royal crown, summer...

The key point, not yet revealed to the Prince of the Royal
The secret is the Crown of the Kabbalah; it is, in a word, Lucifer himself.

The answer to the second question reminds us of "the Thirteenth" that Abbot Girod saw in the mysterious Lodge where the Russian prince Pomeranizeft had introduced. On the in-The calling of the twelve members: "O Father of evil, come to "Us!" he came; and the abbot saw "the newcomer, the Treithe thirtieth, who appeared to have come by way of the air from which he seemed to harm { ».

The black raven and the white dove, that's the half-eagle
white and half-black, Hermaphrodite signifying antitheses of the Good and the Bad Principle, of matter and spirit, of temporal power and spiritual power, of the mas- kind culinary and feminine gender, columns J and B, the two horns beside the flame on Baphomet's head, its two fingers raised, etc...

The phoenix rising from the flames is the great lie pantheistic of the eternal transformation of all that This is the resurrection of Hiram, the Zizon of the 4th degree.

1. See page 222.

424 Kabbalistic Interpretation

Three birds therefore signify: the Phoenix, the universe renews itself eternally velant, formed by the dove and the raven, the Two Principles of Good and Evil.

In another sense, the Phoenix is also, and principally-ment, the Angel of Fire emerging from his infernal flames to to renew itself, to embody itself and to live again in its followers. He reveals himself as the Third to his faithful followers.
teurs, after they have been found worthy of being admitted into the small number of the Twelve chosen and privileged. It is finally the emblem of nature, when at the end of the world it will be perfected, "in accordance with Kabbalistic theory, and subject to the boundless power of the Prince of this world, wearing on his forehead the crown offered to him by his followers, his unfortunate slaves. However, Christians know this.
then the Lord himself will destroy the world by fire-unworthy of existence: Dicu himself will come for the se-
When he judges the living and the dead, he will say: Behold the new facio omnia; "Behold, I am renewing all things!"

Let us not enter the labyrinth of black magic.
whose 32nd degree opens the door for us. But, in order to confirm-
What we have just said, let us quote another passage from Ritual: After presenting a sword to the neophyte, "Parma which Godfrey of Bouillon once used against the enemies of the faith," the Grand Commander gives him a ring, saying: "Receive this token of our union..."
the manuscript adds note (8): "If in conferring this grade, or considers it only as a stepping stone for par-to come to hermetic masonry, one gives no an-new to the recipient who only receives it by obtaining a new grade ê. » This note informs us of the existence of another masonry divided into grades and linked to 33 ranks via the 32nd. We are committed
Mr. Léo Taxil to obtain and publish what is still a a secret to the world.

Let us remain in the company of the common people of the Princes of

4. Apocal., xxx, 5.
2, Ragon, Rituals of the 31st and 32nd degree, p. 46.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 425

Royal Secret and let's now try to understand this Cam-the explanation the Jews give them, which is not
This is point one.

Here first is the "Tableau du Camp des Princes": "The milicu is a five-branched cross; cllc is wrapped by a circle, which is in an equilateral triangle; this triangle is, in turn, inside a pentagon which is contained a keptagon, itself enclosed within a neagon; all eela is in relief like an architectural model, with emblematic figures, banners, pennants, tents; this signifies the encampment of the Freemason-
"The whole thing, divided and grouped into grades." (p. 443)

If that were all, "Masonic secrets would not would not be impenetrably hidden beneath symbols.
Let us therefore penetrate to the very back of this Camp, in order to properly con-to uncover the true secrets hidden within.

Let's first listen to the official explanation reproduced by Fr. Ragon (p. 32).

"The triangle you see in the middle of the painting represents the center of the army, which designates the place that must to occupy the Knights of Malta admitted to our mysteries gathered at the Knights Kadosh, to share with them the treasury surveillance under the orders of the Valiant Princes of the Royal Secret. The body formed by this meeting is commanded by five Valiant Princes who receive directly from the Sovereign of Sovereigns the order which they have executed, and They have their flags fixed to the corners of the pentagon. designated by the letters TE NGU.

"1° The flag of the T, qmi pavilion is that of the Great Pontiffs, is purple; he carries the Ark of the Covenant flanked by two burning torches and surmounted by two palm fronds hoop. Above the Arch is written: Laus Deo.

"2° Flag E, which is that of the Knights of the Sun, is azure. It bears a golden lion holding in its mouth a golden elephant, and having a golden rim on which is engraved the number 515. At the top is written: Ad majorem Dei gloriam?

"3° Flag N, which is that of the Royal Arch, is of silver. He wears a flaming heart supported by two wings of black sand and crowned with a simple laurel wreath (Green).

426 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

"4. Flag G, which is that of the Grand Masters of The Key is ean green. It bears a double-headed Eagle, cut-Ronné, wearing a gold necklace, holding a sword in his claw right, side a bloody heart on the left.

"5° The U flag, which is that of the Great Patriarchs, is gold and carries a sand ox (black in color). See these five flags in a painting:

TABLET OF THE FIVE FLAGS COLOR

WEAPONS RANK DU BLASUN

FLAG.

. | Purple, The Ark
of Alliance.

Azure. Golden Lion.
N. | Silver.
G. | Aqua green.
crowned heads,
U. Or. Bæuf. Great Patriarchs.]20th,

1. Nagon, called Royal Arch, the 13th degree, which is not represented in the Tontes do the enneagon. We believe we must use the Royal Axe, in order to complete the heights grades of the nnoians 25 degrees, This army enters under the direction of the former 24th Knight Commander of the White and Black Eagle; the 25th and final degree was entitled: to the Most Illustrious Sovereign, Prince of Freemasonry, Grand Knight Sublime Commander Commander of the Royal Sceret.

The enneagon formed by the outer outline of the Tableau, designates the position occupied in the army Princes of Jerusalem, Knights of the East and West, the Knights Rose-Croix and all other Freemasons of rank inferior to this one, whose leaders receive orders from Five Princes of the Pentagon. The flames are marked by numbers; and the tents are designated by letters. arranged from right to left, in the following order: INON XILAS, and which, being read in reverse order, form the first two sacred words (Salix, Noni). These nine

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 427

The tents are those of the Freemasonry militia, distributed

TABLE OF THE NINE TENTS AND PAVILIONS

COLOR

OF THE COAT OF ARMS

FLAG
AND FLAMM]

Knights of the Rose Cross.

Spotted Blane \Knights of the East and of red. | of the West, . . .
Princes of Jerusalem.

.| Zorobabel. Veri-clair, [Knights of the East or of the Sword

Nehemic. Red. Knights, Grand Chosen Ones, Sublime Freemasons.

Sublime Knights-

S. | Malachias.

Elected Knights
Fifteen. . ss.
Elected Knights of

New. ss
EHRIeS: Black, 'Grand Masters Archi-/ texts...

Johaben, & [Black and Fe

Joiada. 6 | Red and black
Diamond-shaped. | Provost and Judge.. . . .
, (Intendant of Buildings)
Site 7 [Red toiletry bag!, Intimate Secretaries . .
Secret Masters...
Perfect Masters. . .
Masters
Companions...
[Rppraes e...

Joshua. 8 Green.

Ezra, Blue.

1. Ragon does not indicate the colors; we provide them, the colors of the pavilions.
corresponding to those of the respective back degrees of the curtains.

as above: "We put the description in a ta-
"Bleau, so that it can be understood more easily."

It is pointless to look for an explanation of the three words sacred, other than that already given. Ragon gives six or seven, more or less sought after and forced (p. 45). There are no link to dealing with these inventions designed to confuse the curious. Salis (Latin) is reminiscent of the willows of Babylon and the first captivity of the Israelites; Woni (Latin), the date of the destruction of the Temple, the second captivity and the dispersion Jews; Tengu (passive imperative from the Greek tengo) exhorts the Brother, enough to make you weak and weep.

Let's look instead at the true Kabbalistic interpretation of Princes' Camp. We searched for it for a long time; the The winged heart always puzzled us. But the three animals, The Eagle, the Lion, and the Ox put us on the trail of the The great vision of the prophet Ezekiel, of which Jewish Kabbalah is a part. does so much. Let us put a Man for the Heart, and cut-pons to PAigle one of its heads; then the Masonic doctrine-Jewish, "impenetrable hidden beneath her symbols," we will be revealed.

Let us listen, in turn, to Ezekiel and the Kabbalah.

Ezekiel says in the first chapter of his prophecy: "Behold The vision that was shown to me: A whirlwind of wind came from the north, and a great cloud, and a fire that The surroundings were filled with a light that shone all around; and at middle, that is to say in the middle of the fen, there was a kind of very shiny metal. And in the middle of this same fire... saw the resemblance of four animals which was This kind: one could see in it the likeness of a Man. Each of them had four faces and four wings; butters Their feet were straight, the soles of their feet were like the sole of a calf's foot!, and sparks were coming out of them those that come out of the most incandescent bronze. JI y had men's hands under their wings on all four sides, They each had four faces and four wings. The wings One's wings were joined to the other's. They did not return. They stood still as they walked, but each of them went ahead. themselves. As for the form that appeared there, they had all four a man's face, all four on the right a face

1. Look at Baphomet's feet!

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 429

of a lion, all four on the left, one with an ox's face, and all Four above, an eagle's face... Below the head animals, we saw a firmament that appeared as a sparkling crystal, terrifying to behold, which was spread over their heads... And in that firmament which was above their heads, one could see something like a throne that resembled the sapphire, and he appeared like a Man sitting on that throne. I live like a very shiny metal, similar to an FCU. both inside and around him. From his loins to high, and from his loins down, I saw a fire coming which cast its light all around. And like the bow that appears to the cycle in a cloud on a rainy day: that's what res- 'It seemed like the light that shone all around.'

"The ten Sephiroth, through which, according to Kabbalah, The infinite Being, Ensoph, makes himself known first, are not anything other than attributes which, in themselves, have no substantial reality; in each of these attributes, the divine substance is present in its entirety, and in their together constitutes the first, the most complete and the most elevated above all divine manifestations. Her name is Primitive or celestial Man; this is the figure that dominates the Ezekiel's mysterious chariot, of which earthly man is not "As a pale imitation?" "The form of man," said Simon Ben Jochai to his disciples, encompasses everything that is in heaven and on earth, both superior and inferior beings ricurs; that is why the Elder of Elders chose her for hers... That's who we want to talk about when we said that above the chariot one could see something like the figure of a Men.

The bringing together of these three Tents of the Ritual of 32nd degree, of the prophecy of Ezekiel and the doctrine of the Kabbalah, are sufficient to give the Camp of Princes lin- The following Kabbalistic interpretation: The Ensoph is represented by circle; the three upper Sephiroth, by the Triangle;

4. Ezekiel, ch. 1.

2. Franck, p. 133.

8. Ibid.

430 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

the other Sephiroth, that is to say the Holy King and the Matron, by the five-branched Cross; all the heavenly Man, by The Triangle and its contents; the revelation of Man Celestial on the mysterious Chariot, by the four emblems: his choice of the people of Israel, by the fifth emblem, The Ark of the Covenant; the fertility of the Holy King and the Matron outside the sky, by the pentagon of the five emblems; the seven kings of Edom!, by the heptagon which does not bear an emblem problems, because these kings have disappeared; and finally the world current, by the triple triangle or the nine tents; these serve at the same time to represent the people of Israel and its story.

The needs of Manichean Freemasonry have adds a second head to Ezekiel's eagle; the pro-Phète, however, was far from believing in the dualism of a Good and of a Bad Principle. Finally, the progress of revelations Kabbalistic teachings required that at the penultimate degree of the third Ouzaine, corresponding to the Crown Sephirah, some symbol indicated this first figure celestial: so the philosophical monster has been crowned. The two-headed eagle!

Here is the interpretation of the mystical number. 515 on the Golden Lion necklace: "The ten Sephiroth, says the Sepher Jetsirah, are like the fingers of a hand, at a number of ten, and five against five; but in the midst of them "Is this the alliance of unity?"

The general plan of Freemasonry includes: 1° the destruction of the current world order, 2° the establishment of a universal Judaico-Masonic Empire, and 3° the conquest of the Universe by Lucifer triumphing over Dicu. You must know read between the lines and interpret the interpretations of true initiates to realize the true nature of the Freemasonry. Let's listen to Master Ragon on the three birds.

1° "The Raven (he says, p. 41 of his Ritual), emblem al-

4. See page 441,

4. Franck, p. 109.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 431

chemical, indicates by its black color the first part of the Great Work: the decomposition of mixtures, chaos. Hence the motto of the 33°: Ordo ab chao.

2° "The whiteness of the Dove is the second color of the Work, indicating that it has been brought to white, to quicksilver, symbolized by the moon, emblem of /sis, of which The initial I adorns our first symbolic column, placed opposite this star of the Nights, to the north of the Lodge. From there the purification of the 33° in quicksilver over the fire.

3° "The color of the Phoenix emerging from the flames is the

the third color of the completed Work, red, symbolized by the flames, emblem of the sun, or of Osiris, whose initiate. The image of his nickname, Bacchus, appears on our second column, placed opposite this king of the stars, » south of the Lodge.

Who does not see in these flames and in the final end of Freemasonry's tail, the old Serpent? Oh yes! He wants to have companions in his fiery paradise!

Listen to the Princes of the Camp praying to Lucifer: "Alone and true principle of all light, Sacred Fire, which fertilizes and preserves the universe, a powerful being that one conceives and that which cannot be defined, inflames our hearts with love for virtues, ... bless the enterprise that we have formed only for Your glory and for the happiness of humanity. Amen (5 times).

The five journeys of the Masonic army culminate in the gates of Naples, Malta, Rhodes, Cyprus and Jaffa. Upon arriving there, the Princes contemplate a painting representing the city of Jerusalem, the "land forever consecrated" "with so many precious memories." "May we," said the Grand Commander, to restore to you your ancient splendor and rebuild the temple that the wisest of kings had erected in the Glory to the monarch of heaven! Amen (5 times).

To conclude the ceremony of receiving a new Prince, a few more grains of incense are being burned on the altar. perfumes, and we conclude with a touching prayer to The Masonic god, Lucifer.

432 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

33. The Ensoph.— The Sovereign Grand Inspector General,

Inspector is the translation of the word gros Episcopos. "Great" "Inspector General" is a euphemism for Sovereign. Pontiff or Pope. The 33rd degree is arguably that of the Emperor—Pope, of Caesaropapism.

The battery of the highest grade is eleven shots, 5, 3, 1 and 2: Mystery already explained: 19 by the Jewish year 5312, which is the year-born 1312 AD, the time of the suppression of the Order of the Templars; 2° by the number one, a sacred number of the Kabbalah; and 3° by the number 5 of the ascending generation to the truth of the Architect of the Universe, to the unity of the Cover-ronne, and finally to the dual eternal Principle of Good and Evil.

The representation of the Kabbalistic Ensoph is intertwined,

In this grade, the expression of hatred and the desire to vent the party from which Lucifer and the Templars burn. The President therefore unites, in his person, the Supreme Patriarch and Supreme Emperor.

The Supreme Council is draped in purple, the color of Blood, life and death. Skeletons, heads, bones of Death in a saltire and hands, are painted on it, emblems—either massacred Templars, or dunes in the sky red of Lucifer, Emperor—Pope of Fire.

Above the President is a transparent panel on which is painted a triangle in front in the center, the Hebrew liod, the initial of the name The ineffable Jehovah or Jihejeh that Lucifer appropriated. The center of the room is a triangular pedestal converted from a crimson carpet, the color of anger, on which is a Bible open and a naked sword across it — not to defend her, but to destroy it. To the north is a human skeleton holding the white flag of the Order in his left hand, symbolisant, not her chastity, but her so-called innocence. — and in the right hand a dagger in the movement of to strike down the traitors of the Order and of His Infernal Majesty.

Above the front door, inside, one can see a blue scarf the motto: Deus meumque jus.

Let us immediately give the interpretation of the double motto of Freemasonry, using the words of its Emperor—Pope. The Supreme Grand Master, Albert Pike, died a few months ago, had been at the since January 1859 head of universal Freemasonry; he resided in Chartres leston, at 33° north latitude, where the first Supreme Council was formed on May 31, 1801, and from which twenty-three other Superior Councils of the Ancient Scottish Rite Accepted, established on both hemispheres. This Grand Master of the Supreme Council of Charleston, the first Supreme Council—The Seal of the Globe, is also titled: Sovereign Pontiff of the Universal Freemasonry and Grand Master Conservative of the sacred Palladium. This Palladium is the figure of Baphomet. that the Templars had received, as they say, from Lucifer same. At the beginning of the fourteenth century, the Palladium was taken to Scotland, and in 1801, transported to Charleston!

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 433

In his latest instruction addressed to the Heads of all the Supreme Councils, as well as the Grand Orients and Grand Lodges of all Rites, united under his supreme direction, "in the thirty-first year of Our Ponti-

"ficat," as he says, we find? that, "in the franc-Masonry has two mottos: Ordo ab chao, which is the Divine motto of the Great Architect of the Universe; and: Deus "Meumque jus," which is the human motto of the Freemasons. having reached the highest ranks."

"The Great Architect, in organizing the Universe, drew The Order of Chaos. We bow in admiration to-
"Before his works, so beautiful and at the same time so reasonable."

By speaking this way, Lucifer claims to be the one organizing the chaos material of the universe and appropriates the glory of Dicu; furthermore, In his characteristic double entendre, he reveals cuore This truth: he is the one who created chaos, but chaos morally; he did so through his insurrection against God and through the seduction of a great number of angels and of our first Mother Eve. The order he brought to the moral chaos is not

1. Adolphe Ricoux, The Existence of Women's Lodges, Paris, Téqui,

p. 38.

2. Ibid., p. 79.

28

434 KABDALISTIC INTERPRETATION

something other than the organization of evil and the recruitment of all those whom he has corrupted to lose souls and spread the revolt against Dicu.

"On the other hand," Albert Pike continued, "each of the no's claims God and his rights; » their God is Lucifer, their The right to possess this world. "And we have several reprises took care to inscribe our human motto by its only initials, in order to give them a second interpretation- mystical interpretation revealed only to Perfect Initiates. This interpretation- this information must not be brought to the attention of the Brothers holding a rank lower than that of Knight Kadosh.

"Therefore, we formulate our motto as follows: D.*. M... I..." and we explain it esoterically as: Destruction, Mate- Imposition. In other words, it is necessary to impose. pure Masonic work, the Destruction of everything that the Materialization is not achieved. The three points that follow each- Each of these three initials signifies which Masonic work of Destruction, Materialization and Imposition is threefold.

1. Destruction of: 1° Superstition; 2° Tyranny politics; 3° of Anti-Masonry.

IT. Marénrazsarion: 1° of Conscience; X of the State; 3 of Education.

TT. Imposrrriox: 1° to the Family; 2° to the Nation; 3° to Vn-manité.

"That is why Masonic work must consist of..."
by all means, whatever they may be, to impose practical-first to the Family, then to the Nation, and finally to Humanity
Finally, nity, the Destruction of Superstition, where Motherhood Realization could not do its work on Consciousness; of the Political tyranny, where the state could not be established;
Anti-Masonry, where Teaching could not be achieved through materialization.

"This is the order of implementation of D.-. M... Te, which sums up our law in three letters.

Nothing is more eloquent than the two mottos of the Order so

1. Adolphe Ricoux, l'Eristence des Loges de femmes, p. 79.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 435

clearly interpreted by his Sovereign Grand Patriarch!
Imposition through audacity, cunning, and violence; WMaterialization-tion by debauchery, corruption and ambition; Destruction-tion through impoverishment, slander and murder of the Christian Church, states, and everything that is not mason. This is how the hope of Israel will be fulfilled.
fallen: his Lord "will make his enemies the footstool of at his feet, will bring forth from Zion the scepter of his power and "He will make him dominate in the midst of his enemies!"

This is how Lucifer, who aims only at the Establishment of his Kingdom upon the chaos of the destruction of the work
Dicu will see his ambition fulfilled!

Let's continue with the Ritual of the 33rd degree, published by Ragon.

In the East is a candlestick with five branches; in the Occitooth one with three branches; to the North one with one branch; to the Midday, one or two branches; eleven lights in all. To the North hidden within is the Kabbalistic unity we already know: the Prince of Darkness. From the East, since the beginning of the world,

He spreads among angels and men his generation perverse; it thus prepares the West for the end of the world, his infernal kingdom. That is how he will eternally his hole like Dicu.

The Grand Master represents Frederick II, King of Prussia, who embodies in his person the three qualities of King, Pope of a religion and of Freemasonry.

There is a "Treasurer of the Holy Roman Empire," a fitting expression.
to denote the Caesaro-pupism of the Order.

The President is wearing a crimson satin robe, bordered in white, a sign of his pontifical dignity; he has a Royal crown on his head, the Kether Malkhuth, sign of his Caesarean dignity; the naked sword in his right hand, as currently engaged in a war; he is sitting on a throne raised five steps high, like the central point of the five-branched cross; beneath a crimson canopy, the sky of the Luciferian wrath.

1. Psalm 90, 2, 3.

436 KADRALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The jewel, the crowned double-headed black eagle, having the wings outstretched and holding a sword in its talons, 'everything is already explained sufficiently.

The worship of Lucifer, through prayer at the opening of the
The work requires all members to be on their knees, which is the height of...
Masonic mysteries. There is no longer any doubt: we are in the presence of the Synacocus ne SATAN.

The recipient "must declare that the Holy Bible is the sacred and eternal word of God, because a person who swears on a book she doesn't know, does not contract that a false obligation." Ragon adds to this rule the Next note: "This clause is controversial for the three quarters of the world's inhabitants, if she were serious, would tend to make a 33rd degree unc intolerant coterie that would not have no connection with the cosmopolitan institution of Freemasonry-
"Nonsense." Ragon deceives us; Freemasonry teaches that the Bible is the work of the God Adonat, whom it calls the
The Principle of Evil; Lucifer, the Principle of Good, draws his sword across the book of Adonai.

The candidate, "dressed in black, without a hat, shoes, or sword"

no apron, his head bushy, his arms crossed over his chest,
"Elongated fingers and a black cord around the neck,"
like a criminal led to torture, do it three times tour of the Supreme Council, and when it passes before the Sovereign Grand Commander, he bows in humble veneration in front of the sacred Delta which is to the East," while the
The President said, the first time: "Let us humbly worship, with the deepest veneration and piety, the source of this glorious Spirit, who is the most merciful and benevolent, regularly creator of the universe and all the creatures it contains.
Glory be to His holy name, now and forever!
We can see that demonolatry is no longer even hidden.

In the second round, the President said: "How many are admitted-
The rays of glorious light, which are wondrous and astonishing, Shine forth from the heavens in the East! We adore the great and almighty Jehovah who exists from all eternity. Glory
"May it be restored to His great and mighty name forever!"

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 437

After the third round, the candidate must give a great proof of his consistency; he was told: "It is necessary that you walked towards this vase, and you washed your hands in the molten lead that you see inside (the lead melted west than mercury); by this means, the spots of the vice and immorality, by which your hands may be soiled, will be purified and cleared from the celestial register... Lead, Although melted, it will be disarmed by its heat; by plunging into it
"With your hands, it will give way when you touch it."

Hermes said: "Know, son of science, that the vulture shouts from the mountaintop: I am the blue of the black, because whiteness succeeds blackness. This matter, called white smoke, is considered the root of Part,
the quicksilver of angels, the true mercury of philosophers, the mercury tingent with its blue and red sulfur, naturally mixed-
"Really together in their mine." "The Philosophers" have often represented this whiteness by the shape of a
"A shining naked sword?" "The mercury of the wise, which one must not..."
not to be confused with common mercury, is a solvent
"Universal, it's the scythe of Saturn."

This being said in passing, for those who want to scrutinize the Palladian degrees of Freemasonry.

"After dipping your hands in it," the Ritual continues,
The candidate is led to the altar before which he kneels.
and lends its obligation during which the incense burns.
All members kneel partially, lowering the head in humble adoration, and all have their right hand on the heart. The candidate, with his hands on the Bible, pronounces his obligation*. » "When a Jew takes out his bond, he must to remain standing; he wears his tephelin (his garment in the ceremonies religious at the Synagogue), he has the Bible in Hebrew on the chest and hands crossed over it 5.

1. Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 556.

2. Ibid., p. 557.

3. Ibid., p. 548.

4. Ragon, Ritual of the 33rd degree, p. 9.

5. Ibid., p. 14.

438 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION

The President placed the word on the 4th finger of the recipient's left hand. A pioneer, a gold ring with the following engraved inside: Deus meumque jus, and the name of the candidate, then he said to him: "With this ring, I marry you to Order, to your Country and..." to your Dicu.

Bishops are married to the symbol of a ring.
lcurs dioceses. Yet another Church farce!

The first sign of this last degree is: To begin to knees, arms crossed over chest, fingers extended; the body and head inclined towards the earth, towards the one who is supposedly living at the center of our globe.

The second sign is: Draw your sword, fall upon the Left knee and place hand on heart. The third: Kiss the hilt of his sword three times. The gleaming swords are the mystical rays of Lucifer's light.

The passwords refer to Templarism and the le-Masonic study: De Molay and Hiram-Abif; the people named are figures of Lucifer.

Frederick of Prussia is a major figure of the Emperor-Pope: he was in reality King, Pope of the Church in his states, and a bricklayer.

The Great Password or Sacred Word is not Mika Mika Béalim, but Mi Khamokha baëlim: "Which of the strong is like you, O Adonai?

The question thus addressed to Adonai, which the Freemason-nerie has changed into Principle or Dictionary of Evil, takes a caa character of brazen and impotent mockery launched against the Almighty who punished the fallen Angel, the hated rebel-nine. Ragon acknowledges the accuracy of this interpretation in his Note (p. 13). "We will point out that begalim or bealim signifies idol and traitor; and that it is in the first
The meaning that this word should be taken to mean here is: Quis similis tui, which is unc Idols? The Sweet Word, according to him, means: Is there Is there a greater idol than you, O Adonai? However, idols

1. Exodus, XV, 11.
2. Note by Fr. Villaume in the Masonic Manual, p. 223.

DRS 33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 439

In Hebrew it is not ĕlim, but ĕlilim; and the text does not say baĕlilim, but baĕlim.

The conclusion of this degree and of the entire Rite system
Scottish is the prayer addressed to Lucifer by the Most High-Holy Grand Commander, who raises his hands like the priests and said: "O you, glorious and eternal Dicu, Father of the Light and of Life, most merciful and supreme Ruler-Creator of heaven and earth, guide us on the paths of virtue and (Masonic) justice! Teach us the great fundamental principles of true religion, which are related to the worship we offer you and to our duties to one another, so that we can "Deserve to become members of the Supreme Celestial Council!"
They all reply: "God grant it to us! So be it!"

Then comes the final blessing of the Almighty.
Sovereign Grand Commander: "May Saint Enoch of Israel and the Most High and Most Powerful God of Abraham, from Isaac and Jacob, may we be enriched by his blessings,
"Now and forever!" They all respond: "God us
The agreement! So be it!"

The Council is closed!

This last blessing deserves to be highlighted because of its entirely orthodox Jewish character; it is evidentdisagreeing with the phrases and feelings of Luci-Ferians that prevail throughout this degree. We see there - Whether just or not, we do not judge - a new proof that all of Freemasonry is nothing but a stepping stone which the fallen People of God use very skillfully.
The descendant of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is Jehovah Adonai.

the same one that Freemasonry denounces as God.
Bad. Why then, at the last moment, the invocation addressed to this God and the request for his blessings? He
It almost seems as if the worship of Lucifer should only serve a purpose.
to corrupt and exterminate men, so that the sons
Israel may, by this means, attain possession

1. Ragon, Ritual of the 33rd degree, p. 26.

440 KABBALISTIC INTERPRETATION of the earth. The cult of Eblis would therefore only be for the gotm, and the worship of Adonai was reserved for the Jews. Com-

How else can we explain this final blessing as well?
strange and unexpected, clashing with the whole of the Freemasonry?

Who is the Holy Enoch of Israel? It is not Enoch or Enoch, the first son of Cain, whose first city of The world bore the name, it was rather Enoch, son of Jared.
father of Methuselah, who "walked with God, and did not appear Moreover, because God Penleva!

"The rabbis maintain that Enoch, having been transported in heaven, was received among the angels; and that it is he who is known as Metatron, or Michael, one of the first princes of heaven, who keeps a record of merits and the sins of the Israelites. Enoch is credited with some books on astrology and especially geomancy this the invention of some letters. Josephus speaks of two co-Jonnes, one made of stone to resist water, and the other of fire-resistant bricks, on which the children of Seth, before the flood, is said to have written down their discoveries.
astronomical. Eastern Christians believe that Enoch is Mercury Trismegistus, better known as Hermes.
Enoch is given a son named Sabi, whom the Sabians
"Do people from the East want to portray him as the author of their sect?"
In this last respect, Enoch would be a character as acceptable to Kabbalistic Jews as well as to Orthodox Jews.

Whatever the case may be with this "Saint Enoch of Israel," he is It's quite curious to find it, according to the Masonic Rite, at the throne of Jehovah, giving his blessing to Freemasons!

To conclude the consideration of the third Onzainc of the 33 Masonic degrees, let us listen again to the instruction given to General Garibaldi on these last eleven degrees:

"The clerics spread their prejudices among the masses,"

1. Genesis, v, 24.

2. Migne, Encycl. theolog., t. II, p. 316.

33 SCOTTISH DEGREES 441

because that's their only lifeline, our leaders of the Tabernacle fights them by appealing to authority, to the governmental action of the ruling classes; to the om-vain words, formulas, and emblems by which the Clerical leaders are leading us away from the truth, our Princes of the Tabernacle proclaim the right of societies to get rid political and religious institutions that are contrary to our spirit; to the serpents of civil and religious despotism, Military and economic, our Knights of the Serpent cut heads to ensure their destruction; to superstitions, To false clerical doctrines, our Trinitarians respond through the apostolate of harmonizing social laws with our sublime principles.

"Finally, our Commanders of the Temple dedicate themselves to pro-to mention the promotion of our brothers to the Government of societies; our Princes, followers, proclaim the necessity of The reign of rationalism; our Scottish Grandsons fight without No truce or quarter against any usurpation of power, wherever it comes from, whether it is civilian, military or religious-gieuse; our Kadosh are in fact achieving social emancipation the infamous clutches of priests and kings.

"And, to top it all off, our Grand Inquisitors" propagate our authority, our Princes of the Royal Secret leta-they uphold and defend it, and we, Grand Inspectors General-"Rauz, we exercise it!"

The Judaized and Satanized man in the first Ouzaine, created Jewish and satanic Pontiff in the second, becomes in the third a new Jewish and satanic King of the world-towards. He is completely enlisted in the family, the priest-sweetness and the kingship of him whom Jesus Christ calls "Luke" "Prince of THIS WORLD?" This is how Freemasonry teaches him to fulfill "his duties towards Dicu"!

The total curriculum for all 33 grades is contained in this simple phrase: Man is his God, his Pontiff and his King to himself: he is equal to the Most High!

4. Paul Rosen, The Social Enemy, pp. 34-33,
2. John, 16:11.

CHAPTER III

SUMMARY AND COMPLETE INTERPRETATION 33 DEGREES

1. Official philosophical interpretation.

(See plate M.)

Following the instructions given by the President
The Orator of the 33rd degree to the recipient, the whole of the Masonic doctrine can be summarized as follows:

I

Freemasonry teaches Supremacy:

1. of philosophical donation,
2. physical and moral faculties,
3. of human reason.

She claims the following rights:

4. Freedom of conscience,
5. Political fraternity,
6. Social equality,
7. Popular legislation,
8. The political association.

It employs the following means:

9. the management of popular elections,
10. The establishment of international Masonic relations niques,
- LL. the demarcation of individual autonomies ct ge-general.

IT

She teaches the Supremacy:

12. of Masonic wealth,

1. Paul Rosen, p. 254,

SUMMARY AND COMPLETE INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES 443

13. of Masonic instruction,

14. of Masonic free thought.

She claims the following rights:

15. Personal freedom,

16. Cosmopolitan freedom, f

17. Freedom of popular assembly,

18. Freedom of speech, both spoken and written,

19. Freedom of morality.

She uses every possible means to:

20. To uphold the right to liberty,

21. To suppress false freedom,

22. Rehabilitate the proletariat.

III

It signifies the Supremacy of the Masonic Order:

23. on any constituted authority,

24. on any irresponsible power,

25. on all despotism.

She claims the following rights:

26. Masonic equality against all privilege,

27. Masonic justice,

28. Natural religion and universal morality,

29. the law of progress taking precedence over all morality and philosophy phie,

30. The obligatory struggle for political and religious freedom.
squirt.

It employs the following means:

31. The development of the executive power of the Order masonic,

32. The development of the collective power of the Order
masonic,

33. The consolidation of the supreme power of the Order masonic.

444 ABRIDGED AND TOTAL

2. Official, political and religious interpretation.

See plate N. Paul Rosen, p. 264.

ycz p P

I

Freemasonry teaches that Man,

1. Socially, politically, and religiously assassinated

2. is freed by the cardinal Masonic virtues, and

3. resurrected by Masonic forces.

She prescribes the following duties:

4. Progressive Masonic moral instruction,

5. The Masonic pacification of conscience,

6., Masonic peace, concord and harmony,

7. Masonic justice and clemency,

8. Masonic sympathy and mutual assistance.

She employs the following as Afoyens:

9. The complete eradication of intolerance and fanaticism.
10. of despotism and tyranny,
11. of the people's ignorance.

II

She notes that the People:

12. is instructed by philosophical and spiritual studies
Order's guardians,
13. through the knowledge of the Master who is the Pre- Cause mother,
14. through liberty, fraternity, intelligence and virtue Masonic.

She declares war:

15. to Papathie through vigilance and perseverance,
16. to carelessness through armed labor, the trowel and
"sword,
17. to Western philosophy through maconic,

ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES 445

18. to the religion of the West through Masonic charity,
19. to haste through patience and resignation.

She recommends the following means:

20. the instruction, obedience, and devotion of the people,
21. A free and independent judiciary,
22. The dignity and honor restored to work.

III

She states that the Government must:

23. ?
24. ?
25. Combat the crime and stupidity of the intolerant rancid.

She acknowledges:

26. Man's freedom to do evil or to pursue the good,

27.2

28. ?

29. Creation as a revelation of the First Cause, and

30. His duty to destroy error by all means, whoever they may be.

She desires:

31. The victory of Freemasonry through the purity of its dogma and

32. through the harmonious cooperation of all the workshops Masonic.

33. ?

3. Jewish interpretation,

(See plate 0.)

According to the true interpretation hidden beneath the symbols of Freemasonry and based on the doctrines of Jewish Kabbalah:

446 ABRIDGED AND OVERVIEW

4. The Profane is,

2. through the interpretation of the Jewish spirit,

3. transformed into an adopted Jew;

4. He is reborn a Jew;

5. His heart is formed on the heart of the Jew Hiram;

G., out of justice, accepts everything that is given to him, as

Solomon, the gifts of the king of Tyre;

7. It does not provide a sufficient equivalent, just like Salomy to the king of Tyre;

8. His intelligence places him among the Jewish nobility and the constitutes the defender of the chosen people;

9. His Jewish wisdom dictates the means to annihilate religion Christian for all possible means, and to strike the enemies without being discovered;

10. He becomes a new Jew, crowned by murder monarchs and by the subjugation of property owners;

19. He is completely incorporated into the Jewish nation and becomes a Perfect Man.

T]

12. The Judaized man is purified by confession and sanctified by the communion of the mystical paste;

13. His mind is enriched by the knowledge of the divine. Kabbalistic identity;

14. He is raised to the Order of the Jewish Levites;

15. He becomes a Jewish mason of the tribe of Judah, and

16. one of the Twelve Elders, of the People;

47. He is admitted to the Grand Council of Twenty-Four:

18. He is ordained Pontiff, and crucified Jesus Christ in chligie;

19. He is made Pontiff,

20. Grand Patriarch,

21. One of the Princes who will reign over the universe, ct

22. One of the Patriarch Princes of Lebanon exercising the Cesuropapism on the universe.

ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES 447

HI

23. Among the Pontiffs or Leaders of the Tabernacle,
24. He is chosen Prince of the Tabernacle, and his spirit is fertilized by the magical spirit;
25. He becomes a Knight of the Brazen Serpent, which he venerates;
26. He enters into communication with the pure Spirits of the other world;
27. He becomes Commander of the Temple and is admitted to the Court of the Sovereign of Eden;
28. He becomes an adept Prince and communicates with the Genies and the Cherubim;
29. He is made a Grand Scotsman, and put into communication direct contact with the Bou Principe;
30. He becomes Kadosh and Knight of the Good Principle today ready to crush all his enemies;
31. He becomes Inquisitor, Inspector Commander, Patriarch of Judea, is admitted to the Sovereign Tribunal, and takes part in the judicial power of the Order;
32. He becomes Prince of the Royal Secret, Prince of Exile, and is admitted to the Consistory and the Executive Power of the Order:
33. He becomes Sovereign Grand Inspector General, Sovereign Pontiff, having been admitted to the Supreme Council, and taking part to the governmental power of the Order.

$. Luciferian interpretation.
(See plate P.)

I

1. Natural man is,
2. by the inspiration of Eblis-Lucifer,
3. transformed into an adopted son of the race of Eblis;
4. He is reborn with an image of Eblis and recognizes the divinity of his natural instincts:
5. His heart is made like that of Hiram-Eblis;

6. His soul, an emanation of the universal soul, knows no thanks to the allies;

7. His justice is vengeance against all his adversaries;

448 ABRIDGED AND COMPLETE

8. His intelligence, of divine origin, constitutes him a new-calf Jehovah-Eblis, and makes him fight against religious faith;

9. His wisdom seeks the best means of revenge the Master and to achieve his main goal, destruction of the Revealed Religion;

10. He is a new crowned Lucifer, overthrowing the political and social order, the Law and Property;

11. He is perfectly and completely incorporated into Jehovah-Lucifer: Man is his own God.

IT

12. The demonized man communes with the heart of Hiram-Lucifer, and embraces the symbol of its generative force;

13. by freedom of education, according to the spirit of Lucifer, he acts on the people in opposition to the theocracy;

14. Through freedom of conscience, he silences the cries of his conscience, and becomes a Levite of the Master;

15. Through freedom of thought, he becomes a Priest to Fire Genius;

16. He learns the equality of the two eternal Kings, and holds the balance between them;

17. He sides with the Knights of King Abaddon;

18. He becomes Pontiff of the Genius of Fire, and sacrifices to him a crucified lamb, the effigy of the Son of God;

19. He accepts Jehovah's promise of final victory. Lucifer on Jehovah-Adonai and the conquest of paradise lost ;

20. He is made an Apostle, in the name of Lucifer, of the light Masonic, against the divine faith advocated by Adonai;

21. He becomes Prince, reigning in the name of Lucifer;

22. He dominates in both spheres, the temporal and the... spiritual: Man is himself his Pontiff.

III

23. Among the Magicians, the Followers of Lucifer, 2 a.m. He receives in his mind a new luci- seed feral;

ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE 33 DEGREES 449

25. He becomes a Knight of the Brazen Serpent, who heals him. wounds inflicted by Adonai whom he adores as the emblem of the Good God;

26. He is incorporated into the choirs of spirits and ascends to third heaven, where he sees naked Truth:

27. He is admitted to the Court of His Luciferian Majesty;

28. He is incorporated into the choirs of the Genii and Seraphins of the demonic hierarchy;

29. He is admitted in the presence of the Genius of Darkness and makes his act of submission to Baphomet;

30. He is sanctified and declared Kadosh; he burns incense to Lucifer, is admitted to the rank of High Priests of the Angel of Light and commits a murder in his honor;

31. He ascends the mystical ladder and concludes a pact with Satan a pact which he confirms with a drop of his blood;

32. He is constituted Prince of the Luciferian Secret and between in the army that marches for Lucifer's revenge and to the conquest of paradise lost;

33. He becomes Supreme Pontiff of the Synagogue of Satan and exercises with him the most perfect Lucian Caesaropapism Ferian: Man is his own King.

CHAPTER IV

THERE

FREEMASONRY A RELIGIOUS SECT

1. The religious dogmas of this sect.

Every religion seeks to establish or re-establish relations of Man with the Supreme Being. Freemasonry recognizes as Supreme Being, whom she calls "the Great Arch-Tect of the Universe." This Being is known to him in the Lodges. ordinary, under the various names of: "Master", "Eblis", "Jehovah" and "Angel of Light"; in the back Lodges, under those of: "Principle of Good" and "Lucifer", "equal of Adonai, who unfortunately is also Dicu?

Having recognized Manichaeism in this doctrine, everything Believe it or not, we no longer need to refute this cryptic error. refuted as many times as she raised her head in class of history. There is nothing more irrational and more savage-among all the errors that have afflicted humanity, that the doctrine of two equal dicux fighting each other in all eternity. Neither having been able to defeat their opponent, Neither one nor the other is all-powerful; neither one nor the other is infinitely wise, far-sighted, happy, present everywhere, immutable in its eternity; neither one nor the other is Dicu. To make the insipid Manichean fable, which had become, more palatable Today, the Masonic legend is the dogma of the Sect. It has always been necessary to resort to the most powerful passions. immoral, providing the human beast with no pretext for dogma-A tic for the free rein of his passions, that's the whole enigma of the power of the ancient Manichean hydra.

2. The first three Sacraments of the Sect.

The composers of 33 degrees have only elected us

1. Encyclical of Albert Pike, Supreme Pontiff of the Freemasons, of July 14, 1889.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGIOUS SOCIETY 451

perfect followers of Jewish Kabbalah and Magic black; but, moreover, they showed themselves to be profound theologians

Giens. What struck us most while visiting the three times eleven grades, it is this tripartition which corresponds to mer-vigilantly, in the Luciferian Synagogue, to the three Sacraments of the Christian Church: Baptism, Holy Orders and Confirmation, which imprints a character on the soul indelible.

In Baptism, man is regenerated as a child of God, and incorporated into the great family of the Heavenly Father. In the first eleven days of Masonic degrees, we let us see man degenerated into a son of Satan, and incorporated into the great race of Eblis.

Through the Sacrament of Holy Orders, the Christian is incorporated into the person of the divine Pontiff and becomes a participant in his Eternal priesthood that builds the bridge between heaven and earth. By the second Ouzaine, the mason, son of Satan, is incorporé to his Priesthood and to the race of the Kabbalistic Pontiffs which lead the affiliates to hell.

Through the Sacrament of Confirmation, the Christian receives the gifts of the Holy Spirit and is incorporated into the great army of Soldiers of Jesus Christ. By the third eleventh, the Pontiff Satan is incorporated into his militia and is part of the army that Lucifer's Angel leads the assault on Jerusalem light.

The man, baptized, confirmed, and ordained a priest, is signed indelible marks of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and enters the ranks of the people, the army, and the clergy of the Most High, King of Heaven. The man initiated into the degrees of Illustrious Knight Elect (11th), of Prince of Lebanon (22nd) and of Sovereign Grand Inspector General (33°), is signed by characteristics of a slave, a priest, and a henchman of Satan, King of Hell.

Saint Paul writes to the Corinthians: "He who us strengthened with you in Christ, who anointed us, it is

1 Corinthians, 1:21.

452 FREEMASONRY

God, who also marked us with his seal and gave us the a pledge of the Spirit in our hearts." The character, therefore, that the three Sacraments mentioned imprint themselves on the soul, is similar to the impression left by a seal on wax which it is applied to. Baptism leaves in our soul a resemblance to God the Father, from whom we become the children; the Confirmation, a resemblance to Dieu le Holy Spirit, from whom we receive gifts; and the Saints

Orders, a resemblance to God the Son, of whom we re-Let us consider priestly powers. Derived from the priesthood perpetual of Christ, the three Sacraments produce a Incredible printing.

The ceremonies of Freemasonry, its baptism,
Do his priesthood and confirmation also imprint a Character in the soul of the followers? A character, yes; a Indelible character, no. Saint John speaks of the seven angels who were to spread the seven bowls of the God's wrath: "And the firstfruits poured out his bowl and he did a cruel plea on men who had the character of the beast and those who worship its image! By the beast is designated Lucifer, and by the character a spiritual imprint-ritual,

Dieu, creator of the essence of the soul, has the power to imprint-sea to the faculties and even to the essence of the soul a mark indelible; but no created being, not even Satan, Man does not possess such power. The precious blood of Redeemer of the world, flowing in the Sacraments of Baptism and Penance, can at any time, with the con-the feeling of man, to wash away all the iniquities of which his
The donkey was able to get dirty, including "the character of the beast".
"Even if our sins were like ecurlita, they would become-will be white like snow; and when they are red like vermilion, they will be white like wool.
"Whiter?" Masonic symbols are therefore imprinted in the souls of the followers; but they are by no means

1. Apocal., xv, 2.
- 2, Isaiah, 1, 18.

A RELIGIRUSR SECT 453

indelible. However, those who want to keep them will keep them in hell. This threefold Masonic character, adoption into the mystical body of Satan's people, Affiliation to his Levitical body and enlistment in the
the phalanxes of his militia, constitutes the essence of initiation.

3. The four other Sacraments and the Sacrifice of the Sect.

The imitation of Satan, in the course of these 33 degrees, a parody of the other four Sacraments of the Church; but she does not flee from any of them a new character or a basis upon which she would build another Onzainc of degrees.

The Sacrament of Penance is parodied in the grade of Grand Master Architect, where the recipient must confess publicly all his faults against the Masonic Order; any other sin not being considered as such. The Sa-
The ceremony of the Eucharist is imitated in the same grade, where The recipient receives the mystical paste in communion.
The Sacrament of Marriage is mimicked in the 33rd degree, where the The recipient is "married" to the Order (Ragon, p. 12) as to his wife. Finally, the Sacrament of Extreme Unction was administered. found parodied in the same grade, when the man finds finally, "in molten lead," the purification "of the stains of vice and immorality, which his hands can "still be soiled."

There's no need to explain the parody of the Sacraments any further. of the Church.

If, in the Christian religion, there is one thing that is sovereign a detestable people, a deicide and an ancient Serpent, This is undoubtedly the Sacrifice of the Mass, the continuation- tion and the bloodless renewal of the bloody sacrifice of the Cross. I] reminds the Jew of his deicide and Satan of his defeat.

The double consecration of the bread and the wine constitutes a real, albeit mystical, separation of the body and blood Jesus Christ, and therefore, a mystical death of the Savior. The ceremonies of the Canon of the Mass represent the principal incidents of the unfinished divine drama on Calvary.

454 FREEMASONRY

On the cross lying on the ground, Christ is nailed by the hands and feet: his five wounds are symbolized by the five crosses drawn by the priest with the holy host on them above the chalice. The cross, with the victim attached, is raised to be fixed in the ground: the priest raises the chalice and the host above the altar, they replaced them immediately. With arms outstretched on the cross, the Savior of the world prays for the redemption of humankind: the priest extends his arms recites the Lord's Prayer. The Lord dies on the cross; His heart is broken: the priest divides the host into two parts. Christ will be resurrected with a glorious body: the The priest detaches a small piece of Phostia. For three days, the Squire remains in the tomb: the priest does three crosses with the particle detached on the chalice, and He wishes the Lord's peace to the faithful. Jesus Christ resarouses: the priest drops the particle into the chalice;

It is the union of the body and the shed blood. The Savior returns to heaven: the heart of the priest who receives communion becomes the
The dwelling place of the resurrected. All these ceremonies are, for the
For the Jew, and for Satan, "a scandal and madness." Also the
Are the Rosicrucians making it a parody full of rage and hatred?

At the "Agape" festival, on the night of Holy Thursday to Friday...
On Holy Friday, a lamb is served with a small [missing word] on its head.
crown of thorns and the four feet each pierced by a nail. The head and feet are cut off, declared
"impure parlies" and "sacrificed to Fire, the element principle" of the Angel of Light." Then the traditional toasts are drunk.
nelles. The glass is called a "chalice". After emptying it, one raise it to the height of the forehead, lower it to the hollow of The stomach is carried over the left shoulder, then over the shoulder right, and we put it back on the table. That's cross-dressing.
sacrilege of the Last Supper, of the crucifixion of Our Lord of the Sign of the Cross.

These are the Sacraments of Freemasonry and its sacrifice-Fice!

4.1 Cor., 1, 23.

A RELIGIOUS SECT 455

4. The Tabernacle of the Synagogue of Satan.

The veneration of the Palladium in Freemasonry is not not a simple fetish. Baphomet is more than a fetish. The Trojans said that their great idol, the
The statue of Pallas or Minerva had fallen from the sky. The Tein-
The pliers said that their Palladium had been given to them by The Great Architect. It's the same thing.

The Trojans carefully preserved their idol, believing that the salvation of their city depended on it. That is why Ulysses and Diomedes entered Troy by night, went to seize the Palladium at the sanctuary of the temple of Pallas, and they took it away.
Only then could Troy be taken.

Pallas Athena or Minerva, the goddess of Wisdom and of War, which sprang fully armed from the brain of Jupiter, is not something other than Kether, Poimandres, Masonic Wisdomnique. The Baphomet, Baptism of Wisdom, is his statue, his idol, and the Palladium of the Ancient and Modern Templars, in Jerusalem, in France, in Kilwinning and in Charleston.

Following Roman tradition, the two Greek heroes did not—
They discovered that it was a fake Palladium: the real one was worn by Aeneas in Italy, and later went to Rome, where he was kept in a place a secret known only to the High Priest and the Great Vestal Virgin. The day may come when we will see Baphomet.
to enter Rome, and to place oneself on the altar of Saint Peter. "First, there must be defection, and that the man of sin, the son of perdition, has been seen, who declares himself an adversary and rises above all that is called God, or is worshipped, even to the point of sitting in the "God's temple, appearing there as if he were Dicu?"

Baphomet is more than a fetish. It is the figure of the god of Freemasonry.

1. Conf. Bouillet, Dictionary of History.
4. II Thessal, , 11, #.

456 FREEMASONRY

5. The Masonic hierarchy and its Pope,

By traversing the three Onzuinces of Masonic degrees, we have seen the hierarchy of Freemasonry either in the ranks of the simple Faithful, or those of the Lepites, either in those of the Knights.

The true Pope-Emperor still needs to be shown; for one cannot admit that every Thirty-third is a Pope-Emperor in reality; the unity of order and its hierarchy demands that there be only one Supreme Leader of the entire Freemasonry, whatever its Rite or denomination nation.

The pronounced and almost exclusively Jewish character of the Freemasonry seems to demand that it be the Prince of the Exile of the nation of Israel, since the Synagogue is to them submissive. But, let us note well, the satanic character grafted onto the Jewish character of Freemasonry does not require not precisely that the Supreme Leader be a Jew; it suffices that he is a true Luciferian, a confirmed and genuine worshipper disciple of the Angel of Light. Such a character will find In the modern Jew, a close friend, that's enough. One
A recent revelation, made by Mr. Adolphe Ricoux, leaves no one in doubt.
There is no longer any doubt about the personality of this Supreme Leader and Emperor-Pope of all Freemasonry. "The first
The Supreme Council, as we have already said, was formed

May 31, 1801, in Charleston, at 33° north latitude, under the presidency of the Jew Isaac Long, made Inspector General by the Jew Moses Cohen, who held his rank of Spitzer, from Hyes, from Franken, and the Jew Morin. The latter held him since August 27, 1762, of the Prince of Rohan and nine other Freemasons of the Rite of Perfection, who had charged him to establish in all parts of the world the Powerful and Sublime Freemasonry?

1. The Existence of Women's Lodges. Varis, Téqui, publisher, p. 64 seq.

2, Paul Rosen, p. 219,

A RELIGIOUS SECT 457

The Jews were therefore the founders of the first Great Council which was to become the center of cos- Freemasonry Mopolite. And they placed it in America, in a city chosen precisely at 33° north latitude. Since 1801, The Supreme Chief resides in Charleston. This Chief was, in 1889, Albert Pike, whom we have already named. In his Encyclical Letter, dated July 14, 1889, anniversary and a celebrated centenarian, he takes the titles of each of the 33 of- grits and adds the following: "Most Powerful Sovereign Commander Grand Master of the Supreme Council of Char-leston, first Supreme Council of the globe; Grand Master Keeper of the Sacred Palladium, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Freemasonry. Under these pompous titles he published his Encyclical Letter, "in the thirty-first year of his Pontificate," assisted by ten "Most Illustrious, Most Enlightened and Most Sublime Brothers, N.... and N...., Sovereigns Grand Inspectors General, Elected Mages, comprising the Most Serene Grand College of Emeritus Masons, Council of the elite phalanx and sacred battalion of the Order.

We now know who the Sovereign Pontiff is. of the Synagogue of Satan, V'Ensoph, the First Principle, and around him was his Sacred College, composed of ten members.

The encyclical lists the 23 Supreme Councils "in-generated" until now, either directly or indirectly, of that of Charleston, and spread across the entire globe. She then lists one hundred Grand Orients and Grand Lodges of all Rites in communication with the Supreme Council of Charleston as the Sovereign Masonic Power, for example the Grand Orient of France, the General Council of the Rite of Misraïm, the Grand Council of Oddfel- Masons laws, etc. From this we are justified in concluding that the franc-Freemasonry is found all over the globe, in various forms countless, but under the supreme direction of the Sovereign Pontiff of Charleston. Charleston is the provisional Rome of The Synagogue of Satan. The Grand Master of the Supreme

1. Adolphe Ricoux, pp. 78–95.

458 FREEMASONRY

Charleston Council is its Pope, the Vicar of Lucifer on earth, aspiring to one day reside in the true Rome. The Grand College of Emeritus Masons is its Sacred Cardini College; the Sovereign Commanders of Supreme Councils or Grand Orients around the world are its Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops; the Venerable—the leaders of the Lodges, its Parish Priests; the Masons are its faithful; The Lodges, their churches and chapels. The Lodges' attire. are the more or less Luciferian cult; the sol-meetings ticiales, the great festivals of worship; and finally, the Palladium is the Tabernacle, or rather the Ark of the Covenant between Jehovah-Lucifer and his Masonic chosen people.

The Lord spoke to Moses and said to him, "You shall make a wooden arch made of Sotim (Acacia)... you will also make the neck—the cle of the Ark... We will put at these two ends two Cherubs... it is from here that I will give my orders. I I will speak to you from above the mercy seat, from the middle of the two Cherubs... to let you know exactly what I want to command the children of Israel, »

Lucifer mimicked this Ark of the Covenant in Baphomet. The two cherubs are replaced by two horns. in the middle of these horns burns the bluish flame indicating the Sehekhinah, the presence of the Dicu-Fire, which from there gives its orders to his Vicar on earth. We suppose—we do not Let us not doubt – that Satan is showing himself and communicating personally with his first replacement and his deputies, letting them know everything he wants to order from children of the Widow.

The Freemasons of the Palladian Rite (outside the 33 degrees) sc proclaim the direct heirs of the Templars... They claim that, during the trial brought against Jacques de Molay and to his accomplices, a number of successful Templars—rent to save the monstrous idol known as Baphomet, the transported them to Scotland, and there they continued their practices secret... This Baphomet, it is said, had been given to 4. Exodus, xxv.

Templars by the Great Architect himself for their to serve as Palladium. 1] was transported in 1801 to Charleston, in the United States, and there the first Supreme Council was founded. "The sect's top leadership was therefore split into two: in Rome, sits the Head of Political Action, who was, until 1872, Fr. Mazzini, then from 1872 to 1882, the Br. Garibaldi, succeeded by Br. Giuseppe Petroni, replaced today by Fr. Adriano Lémme; at Charleston, on the other hand, sits the Dogmatic Leader, the Antipope secret, which for a very long time was Fr. Albert Pike, American general, who died a few weeks ago and that They are now working to replace... Albert Pike has reformed the ancient Palladian Rite and gave it the character Luciferian in all its brutality. Palladism, for him, is a selection: he leaves the followers to the ordinary Lodges who cling to materialism or who invoke the Great An architect, though he dared not give his real name; he is a group under the title of Knights and Mistresses Templar, the fanatics that the direct patronage of Lucifer does not "To shudder!"

1. Adolphe Ricoux, p. 37,

CHAPTER V

FREEMASONRY: A POLITICAL STATE

This chapter has already been written more than once. The works of P. Deschamps, P. Neut, Mgr Fava, the lawyer doctor author Eckert, Paul Rosen, Léo Taxil and other authors antimasonic spare us from writing it again. times. Let us simply repeat what General Garibaldi learned from the Heads of the Order:

"Fraternity, the all-powerful promise with which
"We have established our power" means:

"Fraternity within Freemasonry, to constitute a state within a state with resources and a functioning independent of the state, unknown to the state.

"Fraternity within Freemasonry, to constitute a State above the State, with a Unity, a Cosmo-litanism, a universality that makes it superior, dominant of the State.

"Fraternity within Freemasonry, to constitute a state against the state, as long as the permanent armed forces exist, instruments of oppression, principles of parasitism, an obstacle to any fraternization.

"A day will come when, after the complete partitioning of Europe in two Empires, the German Empire of the West and the Russian Empire of the East, Freemasonry will join them into one, with Rome as capital of the entire universe.

This is the universal Republic so often named and praised in Freemasonry; awaited by the Jews of— Then for centuries, desired and offered by Lucifer to his followers, as he had offered it to Jesus Christ in the desert: "The Devil carried Jesus up a very high mountain, and him showing {all the kingdoms of the world and all the glory who was accompanying them, he said to him: I will give you all these "Things, if you bow down before me and worship me."

FREEMASONRY A POLITICAL STATE 461

Alas! to this same proposal made by Lucifer to men, how many are there who, instead of re—to lay with Jesus Christ: "Get away, Satan!" allowed themselves to be deceived and, prostrating themselves before him, offered him their incense and their worship!

CONCLUSION

1. The Synagogue of Satan in Universal History,

As we write these lines, a hurricane is passing by on a small black island, howling and trembling, overturning trees, breaking their branches, tearing out their excavations and sweeping them away in a furious whirlwind. All of nature He trembled and groaned. The poor plowman huddled in his fragile cottage, waiting for the storm to end.

Image of our century!

Science explains to us the origin and nature of our— ragan.

This book explains our troubled century.

Hell has once again unleashed its fatal errors.
of paganism, once vain; he called under his banner
the ancient hatred of the Synagogue, uncovered and the exasperated audacity—
The father of the deicide people, always ready to start his a relentless war against the Lord and his Christ; he has en-played a role in his army, suppressing all the violent passions of humanity.
corrupted humanity, avarice, pride, ambition, and above all the lust, its ever-young, ever-vigorous support, ct of all his weapons, the sharpest and most formidabletable. All these forces, Hell organized them and the directs against the Church of Christ. Those who formerly waged war—they were acting on their own behalf, and delivering in isolation battle against divine truth, all were summoned to form an alliance against the common enemy. Paganism, the Judaism, apostasy, vices and passions, under the Lucifer's supreme leadership, together they mount the assault from the heavenly Jerusalem, hoping that their battalions would be reunited will finally achieve the victory that, until now, they have been unable to achieve.
Give them separate attacks. That's their supreme effort.
before declaring defeat and surrendering. Attengifts a little longer: the Bride of the Savior is accustomed to

CONCLUSION 463

She conquers through suffering. In everything she imitates her divine Spouse.
Freemasonry, this new Synagogue of Satan, will be, like the ancient Synagogue, defeated by the Cross.

Blessed are those who have not bent the knee before Lucifer, not even before his idol! Woe to those who will convôles in the Dark Genic militia and will have expected of him a happiness that he does not possess and that he does not can give to no one! Beyond their tomb, they will see the sinister truth of their axiom: "The salary Masonic means that the initiate, like any good man,
He does not expect his reward in the future, but that he... receives here below and is satisfied, »

It is true, there will be, according to the prediction of Jesus Christ,
Before the end of the world, a final battle fought against the Church
by the Antichrist himself. Before the ultimate catastrophe, the Church must celebrate its greatest triumph by the con-
the quest of all nations and their submission to the sweet ct holy law of the Crucified. We are still very far from the
The end. The world has still done too little to have deserved it.
to be created!

Moreover, the crisis of our century, caused by the franc-
Freemasonry, is by no means as formidable as the pen-

It senses many minds. Once unmasked, this society secret will be hated by everyone and abandoned by the a large mass of his honest followers. These recognize— They will show how the hypocrisy and lies of their leaders Strangers had misled them and forced them to cooperate to a Jewish and satanic work of which they had no the slightest suspicion.

Once a movement of exodus from the Lodges had begun and The well-accentuated will be the beginning of the reversal of this seemingly invincible power of darkness.

4. The Venerable to the new Fellow. Léo Taxil, p. 86.

464 CONCLUSION

2. Governments.

There is reason to believe that public conscience is remembering will rise up against the Jews, the true authors of Freemasonry—nonsense.

Israel infandum scelus audet morte piandum. It will not be This is not the first time we have seen popular outrage. compressed for too long, bursting, and committing against the Jews of regrettable violence. Governments, not still entirely taken over by the Sect, should take precautions against this looming danger. They are wrong not to not to consider with mowing the necessary foresight.

But what to do?

Expelling Jews from a country is an act of uncharitable behavior. and justice towards the neighboring countries on which we dump These rodent worms. It is also too harsh a measure. against those among the Jews who are not guilty of crimes of the audacious handful who, by means of the franc-tuaçonuerie, exploits nations. It would suffice, we believe, to defend to Jews the occupations of bankers, of merchants, journalists, professors, doctors and of apothecaries. It does not seem unfair to declare the for-gigantic sums of certain bankers, national property-nale, because it is unacceptable that a man can, through financial maneuvers, amass in a short time a A fortune more than royal, a truly national capital, and thus impoverishing the country and the people who provide it with hospitality tality.

But are there still sovereigns who are sufficiently in control of their country, to act in this way? The Royal Axe threatens to flee, fall the heads of your sovereigns, like that of Louis XVI, unless they take the most energetic in protecting themselves and in liberating their people of Masonic imposture. Joining the Secret Society Being a Freemason is a crime of lèse-majesté. And almost All monarchs have had the weakness, if not to commit it, At least punish him! Will they still have the time?

CONCLUSION 465

to escape the punishment deserved by their weakness and their Carelessness?

If they want to save their crowns and their people, that they help to expose Freemasonry! This will not be not by brute force, but by the education of the people, of the great and the small, which they will still be able to divert the blow that threatens them.

8. The Jews.

What a strange figure in humanity, this people of Israel! How great and majestic it is in its history, as long as he walks with the Lord! How great he is too and especially terrible in his hatred for his Messiah, whom he has Unknown, he was killed on the cross!

If he only wanted to rise above the material meaning of his Holy books in a spiritual sense, he would be saved... But he did not It's not a matter of chance. His avenging is voluntary. It's a phenomenon. psychological factors that are found in older women intelligence and, among major criminals, persist in Evil lies in lies. Pride is the explanation. Satan himself can no longer be saved: he does not want it and will never want it. The pride of a great intelligence prefers a thousand times to suffer than to stoop and recognize his error.

As soon as he humbles himself before God, the Jew sees: "he "They fall from his eyes like scales!" He then exclaimed in astonishment. for not having known sooner what is now so obvious to him tooth, the divinity of the Messiah.

The great prophecies of the Old Testament did not can be explained by something other than the Lord Jesus-Christ, true God and true man. In him all the prophecies

Messianic and all the symbols of Mosaic law are found their harmonious and rational interpretation; it is not that with ill will, with preconceived ideas and endless contradictions, which can be given another

1. Acts, 1x, 18, 30

466 CONCLUSION

interpretation. Why then do the Jews not see the Truth? Why do they seek it in a fundamental Kabbalah?
Is it an anti-rational and openly satanic act?

Do not hope, O Jews, to escape the calamity that You are being threatened again, madam! Your deicide nation is in this moment, arriving at one of those peaks of power, of prosperity, so often repeated in your history, which must to result, as always, in a great national disaster.
The day that will crush you will be the eve of a vital oxybian of the Church, your victim, the one that history has never sight. Your prophets promised it to him!

4. The Protestants,

The hurricane purified Pair. The SAFCopeenr of the mind humans resume their natural course as soon as a storm Violent Pa, freed from his false ideas. The Freemasons Those most in the know have quite often, and very rightly so, criticized to Protestantism, having proven to be only halfway there. Before to proclaim the divinity of human Reason, it was necessary to emancipate it from divine faith: the divine priority of the Church had to be humbled before Reason. This is the work of the Pro-Testamentism. By burning the Pope's Bull, Luther made the first step towards Free Thought which burns the decrees of the Reason. The Templars in Scotland, and the Jews, have quickly understood the importance of the revolution begun by the German monk. The Masonic charter of Cologne, signed by Archbishop Ilermann, by Melanchthon, Colligny and others, is irrefutable proof that the apron
Masonic affiliation is perfectly suited to a revolutionary bishop.
This apron is not a vestment of the Christian priesthood.
Here: the protestant bishops who adorn themselves with it wear the insignia of the workers of "Graud Architect of the Universe".

Why are Protestants so slow to turn away from eyes of the deceptive glimmers of their thousand and one sects, and to contemplate the splendors of the truth of Catholicism?

Their great minds preceded them; they were brilliant and are still returning in large numbers to the fold of the Church,

CONCLUSION 467

the only true Bride of Christ. In this century where everything marching at the greatest speed, the return of the peoples to
The Catholic Church is growing too slowly; nevertheless, it is
It is easy to foresee the happy day when the successors of Saint Peter will joyfully embrace the nations that we had torn them away. And shepherd received the flock, Germania regem.

May the Protestant Freemasons become disillusioned with the A profound error, that the Lodge will stifle Catholicism at to the benefit of Protestantism. It only wages war against the Church Catholic because she knows that she alone is divine; Protestant sects do not worry him: they make his work |

When the Lodges are closed, the Protestant temples will will transform themselves into Catholic churches. The day is not far off. Blessed are the Protestants who warn him to taste right now the delights of the Sci- yoke gneur under the paternal roof they had left!

5. The Catholics.

The awakening of Catholic sentiment and the return of courage in the broken hearts of the children of the Church is one thing Wonderful to see. For over a century, the people Christian groans, weeps, cries, hopes, here and there, more or less discouraged. But ever since they dared to attack his pastors, ct especially its Supreme Pastor, the indignation against the au-
The audacious perpetrators of these iniquities provoked a reversal of fortune.
which the Masonic secretaries did not expect. The
The movement that has begun will not slow down until after the closing from the last Lodge. Let them have nothing to fear, children of Dicu ct of his Church! The honest minds among the Protestants among the Freemasons began to com-consider how much they were deceived by the so-called reformers. They are already returning and will return again in greater numbers. Catholic hearts will expand and will jump for joy at the sight of the ever-increasing number converts.

Let us never forget that the path that leads to happiness
 The path to glory passes through suffering and humiliation.
 The Catholic people know this, in theory, through the doctrine of the Cross, and in practice, through an experience twenty times safer area. However, the humiliations inflicted by Freemasonry to their harmless, pious, and patient people, arrived at their
 To top it all off: they attack faith through atheistic education, the saint-the death of marriage through divorce, the purity of morals through the impious theatre and shameless literature, the freedom of worship through revolting prohibitions, property through theft Unjust and audacious, the reputation of the ergé was tarnished by calumnies.
 incessant, fairness through outrageous ostracism, summer... The
 The time has come to change all of this. We want to have and we will have the full freedom to teach divine truth, of to give our children a Christian education, to possess which is rightfully ours, to celebrate publicly our worship, to protect our marriage against the desire of Jewish divorce, to enjoy our good reputation, of to push away from us and our families the bad press and indecent novels, and to take our rightful share of the public administration of our country. We do not want not to be slaves of the Jews, and we will not be anymore. We we no longer want to be the disinherited of our country, and we do not will not be. We are fed up with the indignities of which the franc-Freemasonry has inundated us with accounts of the affronts committed by the Jews.
 to our holy religion and their insults to our Savior, to his holy Mother and to our Pontiff. We will forget the divergence of our political opinions to be united and firm against the impudence and insolence of the adversaries of God and his Christ. Victory is assured. The future belongs to us. Lucifer and his emissaries will be forced to lower their Masonic flag: Satan and the evil Spirits that roam the world, seeking to destroy souls, will be cast back into hell, from which they are audaciously went out to attack the City of God.

CONCLUSION 469

6. The Sovereign Pontiff,

Thankfully, the true Jerusalem that came down from heaven is always effectively guarded by the One who governs it name of the Divine King. The Sovereign Pontiffs have everything
 He raised his voice against the Masonic hydra, and warned them kings of the earth and the faithful people of the danger she was preparing-contributes to public peace, the stability of thrones, and order social. Alas! The kings did not listen to this authoritative voice!

They allowed the new power to grow and even encouraged it.
sance" (et princeps nescit quod nova potentia crescit) which would one day have to take away their crowns, otherwise they would be condemned-to a violent and ignominious death! May those who They hold the scepter and learn true wisdom.
They open their ears and souls to the teachings of the Vicar of Jesus Christ!

Among the numerous and urgent exhortations, pro-proclaimed by the Popes from the chair of Saint Peter, shines, like a light from the cicl (lumen of coelo),
the marvelous Encyclic Humanum genus, published by the current reigning Sovereign Pontiff, Pope Leo XIII.
It is the lance thrust of Saint George into the heart of infernai dragon.

Mortally wounded, Freemasonry will not recover.
Never again. She can still assert herself for a time by brute force and underhanded intrigues; but it is the idea, the intelligence of man, and not the human beast, who ultimately rules the world.

The Popes, with the Church they lead, will still prevail
once Manichaeism, Kabbalah, and all of Paganism who dared to raise her head again, before giving way to the religion of the Crucified.

This victory will be achieved as a result of the conviction held in their minds through holy, immaculate, and infallible doctrine
The Church of Christ and its supreme leaders. The Pro-evidence allowed the Masonic world to strip the Holy Father of his heritage, to impoverish the Church everywhere

ATU CONCLUSION

Catholics are guilty of humiliating their sons through hateful ostracism.
so that it becomes evident to everyone that the ruin of Freemason power is due neither to temporal power, neither to earthly treasures, nor to nine human means. History will tell: the Synagogue of Satan has was struck down by the all-powerful voice of the glorious vici-bacon seated on the papal throne, by the Vicar of Jesus-Christ, Pope Leo XIII.

ADDITION

ME-A. Wallis Budge published, last year, the translation of a hieratic papyrus which recounts the evolutions of Ra. There too we searched and found the number Eleven in the theogonice, and a striking resemblance to the Genesis of the Egyptians with those of the Indians (p. 24), of the Chaldeans (p. 26), the Kubbalah (p. 30), and the Bible (Prov., vi, 22-31). In the texts we cite, we will find the infinite substance under the name of Nu, the Firmament, corresponding to the deities named Ánu ct Ahu; the Trinity is called Veb-er-Ter, Slayer of the Universe, Shu, product of Neb-er-Ter's body, and Tefnut, from his mouth. Neb-er-Ter said: "I, being a God, have become three gods. The other characters correspond to the seven gods. The other characters correspond to angels of other ancient nations.

Pages 48-51: "The book that teaches the evolutions of Ra and the defeat of Apepi.

COLUMN XXVI

"Words of Neb-er-Ter speaking about his entry" in existence.

"22. There was neither heaven nor earth; the animals of the earth and Reptiles didn't exist. I'm the one who built theirs. forms of the inert mass of aqueous matter.

"23. I couldn't find any place there where I would have I was able to rest. By the strength that lay within my will I laid the foundations (of all things) in form of the god Shu, and I gave them all the attributes that they possess. I was completely alone, because I didn't have

1. On the hieratic Papyrus of Nesi-Amsu, a Scribe in the Temple of Amen-Rà at Thebes. About BC 305. By EA Wallis Budge, MA, F.S., A. Westminster. Printed by Nichols and Sons, 25 Parliament St. 1891.

472 ADDITION

The god Sku has not yet been evacuated, nor has the god been spat out of my mouth. Tefnut.

COLUMN XXVII

"1. I poured some semen into my own mouth:
I expelled the god Shu, and I spat the god from my mouth.
Tefnut. My father Nu (the firmament) says: "They eclipse my
"an eye behind them since long periods of "Time they separate from me; after that, I, being a
"God, I have become three gods, of myself, by evoking myself"
"reading in this land."

"5. Shu and Tefnut gave birth to Nut, Seb; Nut gave birth to Osiris, Horus, dwelling in invisibility-Litey, Sut, Isis, Nephthys, one after the other, and their children multiply on Earth.

See table Q.

BOARD A

in

THE KABBALAH

475

474

T Tiphareth « Bout. Bei

8 Nezakh jj 8. Hod
(preng Brat apse t Mojaki

40. Jemsod. Fondemect Paes

478
SHEET B

THE KABBALAH

479

CN 2Khudd LT '

PLATE C

rt

Zoroastrianism

482 PLATE C 48

Zoroastrianism

ATEN LE. The Sigur.

Y%
a Le C
i A
south E Gine du Fos Labune

1) Reshnu–rouuts 1): Deina s, Aarsal.
iras dl Ohiane u ule Kastis La Lar Do dugtu

1. Asho Nakite. The Green Purti Lo. b. Prendi Pere de Touyers Mate Se Pointa.
Qpa Arnal. Lip Sainte Mire, 18. Aschig.Vangshi Potetri du Manage y Riman, L'Air:

s Zrnyod.
The Earth.

w PLATE D z

BRAHMINISM

TRI– LORA.

The wofil of Roudrg.

4, Adjsikapada

Dheuva

The Laure Star:

The Aswins deir,

+6 Aswi Kumorag Lies Diescure)

Prinsar ds L Aant "uai

% TÅryaman Years of heart,

Vahoorupa.

dolia Frega môle, Ki 1 Vahmaroupa

490 PLATE E 49,

BRABMINISM

J Brain RNA one ne Ha

1 -Ghandrs Remal Pose,

PLATE F 495

BUDDHISM

"PLATE G PÀ

Assyrians g. Pabylonians Candeker d'a daus de Ta RE

des diragi lis Eat sv |

Lia bja du branchu,

eua, ee PELA

1

PLATE H

GNOSTICISM

Syrme de Valeninien.

506 PLATE | 507

OPHITISM

s0 PLATE J sil

MANICHEISM

sti PLATE L s5

FREEMASONRY

DEGREES OF THE SCOTTISH RITE

A Fine du Tobernada.

AA he ai 39, huvaliur du Le Prince de
3 Weil, fairy Hadi the \oile Sarsa almdEpü,| /SurpenldAiroin. Sea .

5. Master Polo. n Buccilavre Intime. 16 Prince of hi a}. Sovereign Commas- 43 duSdél, SZ keusolems C7 hide, ANS es adapta,

3 Frot Judge - Airand Beotreig du Si André d'Ecmne,

4 Building steward 0. Kadah qu Grand Elect Churalier Kadorch, Pafat A inikas

9. Master of the sa Master ilu

s8 PLATE M o

OFFICIAL PHILOSOPHICAL INTERPRETATION

LY. PAUL ROSEN, p. 51)

52 PLATE N se

OFFICIAL POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS INTERPRETATION

(Y. PAUL REDY, p. 2L)

4 Ti
mamasilra labos al nhid
T prem fut,

M? READ

rommattes Luttes
CERTA Wa run l
Tas la mapa paela,

lla paré da a dogot pha valia deson +
born.
TA \55.7

d toas fus abs magrmquas

527
PLATE 0

—

JEWISH INTERPRETATION

526

8 dut erbrené Raki A fervilis Jesus Christ

P nagma paa pos narte

bme ma ti a Gui

530 PLANGRE P 531

LUCIFERIAN INTERPRETATION

bi da Tibru à lait
honali
ia P SEN E Leara ea KN AATA
% céleyad adam de Gronds ane hu da
VA angle M promises CL nds Sa gl

Jural

om ve map brw an aen hannaar y

BOARD Q

THE THEOGONY OF THE EGYPTIANS

, se 4. Tefrut.

F-Osiris.

Isis.

BOARD Q

has

THE THEOGONY OF THE EGYPTIANS

9. Horus.

35

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

A, 36, 52.

Aaron, 382.

Abaddon, 131, 344, 359, 360, 363.

Abda, 378.

Abel, 180.

Abibala, 238, 316, 830.

Abrag, 399,

Acacia, 246, 306, 317, 458.

Aclinia, 190.

Adam, 130, 147, 397.

Adam Kadmon, 4, 67, 191, 205.

Adar (month of), 187.

Adi, 74.

Adi-Buddha, 75.

Aditi, 74.

Aditya, 74, 75.

Adon-Hiram, 315, 378.

Adonai, 130, 143, 188, 216, 312,
315, 335, 340, 353, 399, 404, 408.

Adonis, 393.

Aelia-Capitolina, 156.

Agape, 365.

Lamb with seven seals, 362.

Agni, 18, 21.

Agrippa, 212, 398, 403.

Ahias, prophet, 246.

Ahoïah, 321.

Ahrimane, 19, 69, 89, 137, 142,
443, 373.

Ahu, 22, 23, 78, 142.

Ahuna-Vairyo, 142.

Ahura, 18, 19, 56, 78.

Ahuramazda, 2, 20, 69, 70, 141,

Eagle, 354, 413.

Double-headed eagle, 205, 404, 405, 410, 413, 417, 428, 480, 486.

Half-white, half-black eagle, 404, 405.

Akhamoth, 117, 123, 124, 127.

Akomano, 69,

Albert, the Great and the Little, 219, 403.

Albigensis, 32, 154.

Alchemy, 179, 423, 430.

Aletheia, 114,

Alfader, 19.

Alioreph, 821,

Alpha and Omega, 372.

Aman, 65, 186.

Amerdat, 70.

Ameschaspentas, 1, 69, 141.

Ammon or Amoun, 18, 27.

Amretat, 70,

Amrou, 238.

Ananias, 378.

Ancient of the Ancients, 386.

Elders of the People (the twelve), 358.

Masonic anchor, 445, 390.

Anderson, 167.

Andra, 69.

Andreae, 178, 181,

Fallen angel (v. Lucifer).

Angro-Mainyus, 69, 442.

Anna, 18.

Gold ring, 351, 424.

Anquetil, 436,

Anthropos, 115.

Antiochus Soter, 140,

Anu, 28, 78.

Apep, 373.

Aphrodithermes, 116, 119,

Apollyona, 131, 363.

336 ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Aqua toffana, 415.

Middle Tree, 254.

Arc, 362.

Ark of the Covenant, 348.

Archelaus (Saint), 135.

Architect of the Universe, 58, 119,

205, 413.

Ardibihist, 69.

Silver quicksilver, 431.

Arnim (Count of), 196,

Artaxerxes, 175.

Art Royal, 199, 322, 441, Sacerdotal Art, 422.
As, 20.
Ascha-vahista, 69.
Ashmole (Elie), 291.
Assassins, 134, 168.
Assémani, 176.
Ahasuerus, 64, 186.
Assur, 18, 27, 78.
Assyrians, 78.
Astrology, 179.
Asura, 20, 76, 78.
Aswins, 75.

Atars, 18, 19, 56.
Ateo (newspaper), 215.
Athersatha, 364.
Athor, 27,
Touching, 800.
Aubusson (d'), 17%.
Aumont, 173.
Avataras, 75.

Ayin, 49, 83.

B

B, 189, 262, 263, 269, 355, 431.
Babylonians, 78.

Bacchus, 836, 434.

Ring, 438.

Bahman, 69.

Balkis, 234, 250, 262.
Bam-garah, 353.

Bannockburn (battle lunch, 173.

Bant, 18.

Baphomet, 162, 400, 433, 455.
Masonic Baptism, 29, 295.
Bar-Khosba, 155.
Bar-Kokhba, 155.

Barrucl, 134, 172.

Basc, 302.

Basil, 109.

Bavette, 146, 253, 293, 304.

Begalim, 438.

Begohal-Kol, 332.

Bel, 18, 78, 873.

Beltis, 78.

Béma, 136.

Ben-Chorim, 325, 327,

Ben-Dicar, 247, 334,

Ben-Mokeh, 353,

Benoni, 239,

Berith, 320, 352.

Bernard {Saint}, 178.

Beséliel, 379.

Bhumi, 75.

Bible, 436.

Bikkoreth, 332.

Bin, 18, 78.

Binah, 50.

Bismarck (Prince of}, 65, 202,

Bnai-berith, 201,

Bonz, 249, 252, 290, 293, 336.

Boerne, 198,

Bogomiles, 150.

Bonald (Mgr de), 225.

Bossuct, 15.

Buddha, 76.

Buddhisattva, 76,

Buddhism, 75,

Brahma, 18, 21, 25, 74,
Brahmanics, 49.

Brahme, 21, 24, 25, 48, 74.
Bryant, 131.

Brihaspati, 373.

Burning Bush, 330, 352, 387.
Bulgarians, 150.

Bundehesch, 137,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Byblos, 393.
Bythos, 22, 74, 112, 124.

c

Cabinet of reflections, 291.

Caduceus, 164, 166, 391.

Cain, 128, 129.

Cainites, 127.

Camp des Princes, 417, 425,

Cancrin, 196.

Carlile, 90, 203.

Square, 313, 315, 340.

Casaubon, 103.

Indian Casies, 49.

Catechism, 800.

Cathars, 150.

First cause, 22, 24, 28.

Sepulchre Vault, 409.

Cave, 330, 331,

Circle, 313.

Chabauty (abbé), 206.

Chnï, 328.

Cham, 128, 240.

White Room, 404,

Blue Room, 409,

Middle room, 128, 243, 254, 309.

Infernal chamber, 217, 369.

Camera obscura, 171, 409.

Darkroom, 331.

Red Room, 355, 409.

Green room, 355.

Chamor, Rabbi, 208.

Chanaan, 140.

Chaos, 107, 124, 412, 433.

Ezekiel's chariot, 429.

Thistle (Royal Order of St-An(dré du), 173.

Charles of Hesse, 195,

Charleston, 3, 433.

Chefs, 203, 204, 209, 231.

Knights of Saint John or of Malta, 170.

Knights of the East, 175.

Knights of the East and West, 176.

Knights Hospitallers, 174.

Prussian Knights, 182.

Knights of Rosc-Croix, 178.

Dog, 330.

Chivi, 321.

Christos, 114, 116, 124, 126.

Sky (the triple), 392.

Ciron, 248.

Scissors, 293.

Ciavel, 3.

Key to Life, 163, 310, 322, 348, 863, 396.

Clement V, 169, 405, 408.

Coelum, 22.

Heart, 314.

Cohen (Mise), 3,

Colombe, 422, 423,

Brass column, 342.

Middle column, 292. |

Mystical Communion, 341.

Compass, 145, 293, 316.

Account of conscience, 415,

Comic of Toulouse, 152,

Confession, 341,

Conscience (Voice of the), 314.

Raven, 422, 423, 40.

Kore, 128.

Cotter, 195.

Crown (see Kether), 23, 35, 157, 333, 396, 410, 417, 420.

Supreme Creator, 60.

Creation ex nihilo, 34, 36.

Crémieux, 195, 196.

Cross, 165.

Saint Andrew's Cross, 84, 253, 402.

Teutonic Cross, 84, 896, 420,

Triple cross, 405.

Cupid, 393,

Curbicus, 134.

Cyrus, 175, 354, 378.

538

Dajath, 265.

Dante, 57, 421.

Darius, 90, 175, 378.

Goddess of Reason, 393,

Delta, 344, 436.

Demiurge, 22, 118, 119.

Disaguliers, 167.

Deschamps, 9.

Deus meumque jus, 275,432, 433, 438.

Devas, 76.

Diabolos, 119.

Dicu-Crocodile, 382.

Sun-God, 298.

Dimiou, 28.

Din, 50.

Disraeli, 196.

Divorce, 150.

DMJ, 434.

Dodecalogue, 385.

Dragons, 76, 391.

Red Dragon, 212, 403.

Flying Dragon, 413,

Drujas, 228.

Drumont, 65.

Durand, 152,

E

Eblis, 429, 217.

Ecce-Homo, 395.

Ecolesia, 115.

Mysterious scale, 405, 407.

Ecker (Von), 195.

Eckert, 208.

Eckhotfen, 195.

Eclectic. (Rite), 279.

Eden, 373, 397, 407, 416.
Edom (Seven Kings of), 268.
Edu pen kagu, 394,
Equality, 152, 318, 357.
Ehejéh ascher Ehejéh, 265.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Elephanta (island), 52.
Elephantine (island), 128.
Eligam, 247, 334.
El-Khanan, 552.
Emmarck, 67, 335.
Emperor of the World, 205, 413.
Ennoia, 124.
Enoch (Saint), 439.
Ensoph, 4, 22, 23, 28, 35, 45.
Eons, 112.
Flaming Sword, 251.
Ephod, 373.
Set square, 145, 293, 299, 305, 316
Esau, 128.
Esch, 17, 21.
Ezra, 176.
Spirit of Life, 147.
Spirit of Fire, 218.
Powerful Spirit, 147.
Esrin-Tebeth, 358.
Esther, 64.

Eternity, 34.

Morning Star, 214.

Blazing Star, 133, 138, 164
165, 301, 302, 341, 402,

Etteilla (the Great), 212, 408.

Eve, 128, 397.

Evocations, 212,

Hezekiah, 144.

F

Fatum, 22,

False of Saturn, 437.
Faustus, 135.

Woman, 413.

Windows (Three), 251, 270.
Fernig (Tale of), 195.
Fervèr, 228.

Fire, 20, 165, 166, 369, 431.
Findel, 3.

Fischer, 196,

Arrow, 376, 393.

Fleurons {Cinq}, 359.
Fludd, 181,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Foundation (v. Base).

Gushing fountain, 330.

Ditch, 347.

Franken, 3,

Fraternity, 152.

Fravaschi, 228.

Frederick II of Prussia, 182, 371
435, 438.

Brothers of the White Cap, 152.

Frontignan {Duke of}, 219.

G

G, 133, 139, 140, 253, 259, 304, 341.

Gabaon, 393, 394.

Gadol, 399.

Gloves, 299.

Garibaldi, 281, 380, 410, 459, 460.

Garnier-Pagès, 197.

Garondas, 76.

Giants, 373.

Gehenna, 126.

Indian Genesis, 24.

Chaldean Genesis, 26.

Egyptian Genesis, 471.

Kabbalistic Genesis, 28, 30.

Persian Genesis, 142.

Geniuses, 397.

Geometry, 140, 340.

Georges (Saint), 178.

Ghibblim, 308, 393.

Girod (Abbot), 219, 423.

Swords, 298.

Gnosis, 110, 140.

Gnosticism, 112,

Godfrey of Bouillon, 424.

Gærres, 413.

Gomel, 393,

Gotthold, Salomon, 195.

Master's Claw, 809.

Grimoire, 212, 403.

William II, 65.

539

Gutzkow, 202.

Guy, 170.

H

Habia, 364.

Habib and Doratilgoase, 406.

Royal axe, 378.

Hakar, 325, 327.

Hamon, 339.

Har, 18, 373.

Harodim, 321.

Harris, 178.

Haurvetat, 70.

Havani, 4.

Hayes, 3.

Héa, 18, 19, 78.

Helios, 399,

Hemerobaptists, 176.

Enoch, 130, 344.

Henry VI, 152.

Hephaestus, 19.

Heptagon, 72.

Heresy, 122, 189.

Hermaphrodite, 116, 119, 165, 337, 408, 423.

Hermes Trismegistus, 103, 440.

Hermeticism, 103, 399.

Herodom, 162, 173.

Hézar, 247, 334.

Celestial Hierarchy, 384, 398.

Hiïh-hoh, 848,

Hinsius, 131.

Hiram, 423.

Hiram, King of Tyre, 236, 249, 319, 321, 329, 332.

Hiram-Abiff, 129, 177, 183, 217, 233, 249, 438,

Hirschfeld, 195.

Hod, 50.

Man-God, 191, 205, 289, 413.

Man-Pontiff, 289.

Primitive Man, 146.

Primordial Man (v. Adam Kad-My).

540

Man-King, 289,

Honovar {v. Ahuna-Vairyo), 22.
Horos, 116.

Horus, 18.

Hoschéa, 368.

Hospitallers of Saint John, 174.
Serrated tassel, 490, 294.
Hud-hud, 235, 241, 250.
Hugues de Payens, 162.
Hygeia, 141.

Hyle, 124.

Hyliques, 120, 127,

Hystera, 127.

Idra raba, 5.

Ignatius (Saint), 276.

Islands (the seven), 406.

Indra, 18, 25, 76.

Innocent III, 32, 152.

Inon Xilns (v, Salix noni),
Masonic Inquisition, 416.
LN.RI, 138, 365, 369, 395.
Intelligence, 405, 108.

lod, 29, 30, 35, 52, 121, 312, 432.
Isaiah 17

Isis, 18, 121, 165, 336, 480, 472,
Ismailis, 162.

Issachar, 360.

Istar, 78.

Iswara, 76.

Itys, 235.

J

J, 119, 189, 262, 263, 269, 355, 434.

James VI, 160, 352.

Jah, 828.

Ja-de-Ji, 325, 326, 343, 387, 403.

Jakin, 249, 252, 291, 203, 301, 325, 337.

Jakinnä, 325, 328,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Jaldnbaoth, 123, 125.

Jnndel (Rev. P.), 225,

Jehoscha, 159.

Jehovah, 17, 317, 432.

Jehovah the White and Jehovah the Black,
or Jehovah Lucifer ct Jehovah
Adonai, 325, 383, 386,

Jeksan, 374.

Jektan, 375.

Jerusalem, 406.

Jessod, 50, 82.

Jesus, 126, 146.

Jesus Patibilis, 147.

Jesus, Soter, 117.

Jhvh, 312, 399.

Jiheveh, 348.

Joha, 319.

Johaben, 319, 344.

Johannists, 162, 176.

Joseph, 184.

Jubilas, Jubilos, Jubilum, 238, 242, 216, 316,

Judah ct Benjamin, 355.

Judas Iscariot, 128.

Unknown Philosopher Judges, 175.

Wandering Jew, 300,

Jews, 90, 134, 154, 183, 205, 267, 335.

Julius Severus, 155.

Jupiter, 19, 373.

K

Kabbaie, 4, 7, 19, 23, 89, 103.

Kadosh, 49, 405, 408.

Kélch, 353.

Kenom, 116.

Kether, 50, 68, 70.

Kether-Malkhuth, 64, 89, 157, 185, 260, 267.

Khésed, 50.

Khoïkoï, 120.

Khokhma, 50, 117.

Khons, 18,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Khordat, 70.

Khoscheck, 266.

Khunrath, 399.

Ki, 321,

Kilwinning, 161, 173.

Kinnaras, 76.

Kisur, 27.

Knaphis, 128.

Kneph, 27.

Koïilon, 22.

Kolpia, 18.

Kosmocrator, 120,

Kronos, 24, 27,

Kshatravairya, 69.

Kschatriyas, 49.

Ktéis, 293, 303.

L

Lakmu ct Lakamu, 26.

Lamech, 130.

Magic lamp, 399.

Lamartine, 197,

Nervous tears, 421.

Red and white tears, 333,

Lassalle, 65.

Lausanne (Congress of), 59.

LDP, 354.

Lemmi (Adriano), 210, 215, 459.

Leo XIII, 11, 366, 469.

Lebanon, 378.

Liberty, 348, 395.

Freedom of conscience, 350.

Lingam, 293, 342.

Lion, 330, 368, 354, 413.

Lodges, 56, 105, 114.

Adoption Lodges, 148.

Jewish lodges, 200.

Long, Isaac, 3.

Louis VII, 158,

Lucien, 406.

Lucifer, 8, 71, 128, 165, 214, 216, 315, 332, 374, 423.

Light, 298.

Moon, 431.

Luther, 178.

Lycurgus, 138,

Apollo's Lyre, 251.

M

Maaca, King of Geth, 246, 334.

Mackersey, 59.

Mac-benac, 252, 303, 337,

Maccabees, 187.

Forestry masonry, 123,

Mucro-prosope and Micro-prosope, 886.

Black magic, 211, 424.

Red magic, 212, 403.

Muhabone, 305.

Maillet, 293, 305.

Master, First Cause, 218, 273, 307, 309, 320, 822, 346.

Makob, 352.

Malkhuth, 50, 78.

Mandaiites, 176.

Mani, 134, 143,

Manichaeism, 134.

Marcion, 126.

Mordecai, 64, 186.

Masonic marriage, 149.

Mart-linda, 74, 81.

Marx, 65.

Methuselah, 130.

Matter (Origin of the), 83, 205.

Matron, 48, 52, 79, 84.

Maya, 25.

Mazda, 18, 19, 56.

Mazzini, 459.

Medinazilbalor, 406.

Memra, 16, 17.

Mendizabal, 196, 198.

Mene, 399,

Meodim, 82.

Mercury, 103, 487, 440.

Sea of Brass, 349.

Mother of Life, 146,

542

Merodakh, 78.

Metatron, 75, 80, 81, 265, 440,

Metempsychosis, 76.

Methuselah, 238.

Metropater, 119.

Formal murder, 405.

Symbolic murder, 409.

Liturgical murders, 159.

Michael (Saint), 305, 440.

Michelet, 168,

Microcosm, 180.

Mi khamokha baelim, 188, 438.

Milon, 152,

Minerva, 20, 56.

Ministers (the seven), 105, 110.

Mischor, 416.

Mischtar, 408.

Mithra, 406.

Moab, 305.

Moabon, 305, 537, 341.

Moses, 379, 390.

Moses, the Imposter, 156.

Molay (JB de), 168, 170, 256, 405, 407, 438, 458.

Moloch, 129.

Secular world, 290,

Morin, 3, 90.

Word, 18.

Mout, 18.

Mulga, 18.

N

Nebuchadnezzar, 175.

Nagas, 76.

Naonghaïthi, 70,

Nathan of Gaza, 156,

Nathinaeans, 394,

Neb-er-ter, 471.

Necromancy, 228,

Néder, 320, 352,

Nehemiah, 175, 364.

Nekah, 329, 332,

Nckam, 329, 353, 408,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Nekam-Makkah, 420.

Nekamah, 402.

Nekar, 329.

Nemrod, 240.

Neoplatonists, 402.

Nephesch, 85, 324.

Nephthys, 472.

Neptune 19.

Nergal, 78.

Nesi-Amsu, 471,

Netzakh, 50.

Ninip, 78.

Nirvana, 76, 77.

Nischmah, 85, 324.

Level, 145, 293.

Nonchites, 375,

Noah, 371, 379.

Nogah, 82.

Nohéma, 130, 240, 254.

Nokem, 408.

Unspeakable name, 348.

Names of God (the ten), 348.

Number 4, 402,

Number 3, 13, 57, 232, 297, 402.

Numbers 5, 438, 293, 301, 302
307, 326, #13,

Number 7, 6, 13, 72, 73, 419, 125,
210, 232, 328, 402, 406, 409, 410,

Number 8, 416.

Numbers 9, 3, 309, 332, 370.

Number 40, 107.

Number 44, 4, 4, 6, 405, 142, 116,
119, 123, 134, 136, 447, 210, 810, 432, 435, 457.

Number 42, 335, 897, 422, 424.

Number 48, 210, 280, 336, 422, 423, 424.

Number 46, 326, 332.

Number 24, 336.

Numbers 32, 77, 116.

Number 38, 1, 2, 3, 4, 442, 417,
124, 231, 279.

Number 81,309.

Number 90, 46, 231.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Number 545, 430,
Number 5342, 6.
Sacred numbers, 294.
Nouricl, 82.
Novitiate, 410.

We, 113, 125.

Nude, 472.

Nusku, 78.

Nut, 472.

o

Ob, 131.

Eye, 25, 52, 310.

Ogdoad, 115, 121, 145.

Olam Asiah, 80.

Olam Azilakh, 80.

Olam Beriah, 80.

Olam Yezirah, 80.

Olivier, 310, 812,

Omorka, 373.

Ooliab, 379,

Ophiomorphos, 125.

Ophis, 126.

Ophites, 123.

Ordo ab chao, 107, 275, 412, 483.

Royal Order of Saint Andrew of Chardon, 173.

Orient, 193.

Ormazd (v. Ahura Mazda), 1, 19, 69, 187, 142, 373, 406.

Osiris, 18, 121, 128, 166, 336, 398, 431, 472.

Oterfut, 238, 316, 333, 334,

Ouranos, 24, 27,

Ouriel, 82.

Bear, 330.

P

Pact, 297, 308, 320, 418.

Padaël, 82.

Paine, 167.

Palladium, 433.

543

Pallas Athena, 56,

Pamelius, 112.

Pan, 165, 166, 399, 402.

Pandion, 235.

Paraccles, 180.

Paraclete, 134,

Passardi re (R, P. Jourdan de la), 227.

Patala, 75.

Mystic paste, 341.

Patet Aderbat, 136,

Patareans, 150,

Patriarch of Judea, 207, 418.

Patriarch of the World, 205, 413.

Pathmon;' 364.

Paulicians, 150.

Mosaic paving, 293.

Pavilion, 80, 326.

Pelican, 72.

Penance, 349.

Pental , 140,

Perishri, 85, 228.

Perpendicular, 293,

Little Master, 320.

Petroni, 409, 459,

Phagal-Khol, 420,

Phalcg, 371, 375.

Phallolatry, 146, 149.

Phallus, 21, 84, 144, 149, 252, 253, 293, 301, 303, 310.

Phanor, 238.

Pharaoh, 184.

Pharas-Khol, 409, 420.

Pharisees, 38.

Phoenix, 205, 253, 413, 422, 423, 481, |

Philip the Fair, 169, 405, 408.

Philomela, 235.

Physics, 126.

Pius IX, 409.

Rough stone, 120, 293.

Cubic stone, 120, 293.

Cubic stone with point, 349, 420.

Pierre de Boulogne, 173.

544

Peter the Venerable, 158.

Pike (Albert), 210, 215, 433, 457, 459,

Sting, 411, 418.

Plato, 165, 402.

Pleroma, 115.

Pluto, 19.

Pneuma, 105, 124.

Pneuma hagian, 114, 116.

Pneumatikoi, 120, 124, 126, 127.

Poimandres, 107.

Pomerantself (Prince of), 219, 423.

Pomegranate seeds, 293, 307.

Poseidon, 19.

Prajapati, 1, 25, 75.

Prétahs, 76.

Prince of Wales, 62, 281.

Prince of the World, 120, 194.

Princes of Exile, 207, 417, 418, 456.

Principles of the Orient, 192.

Depth, 113.

Progné, 235.

Proletariat, 379.

Propugnatores, 141.

Proudhon, 244.

Psellas, 109.

Psychikoi, 120, 126, 127.

Ptah, 18, 27.

Purim, 66.

Purusch, 49.

Pyramid, 421.

Pythagoras, 138.

Python, 128, 434.

Q

Squaring the circle, 315.
Quarter of the circle, 340.

R

Rabbanain, 339.
Rachmiel, 82.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Rah, 18, 373.

Raphael, 73.

Raphidim, 356.

Rationale of Judgment, 372,
Ratus, 22, 142.

Rawma, 77.

Raziel, 82.

Rule 305.

Universal Republic, 460.
Rhenanus, 112.

Rischis, 75.

Rite of Misraïim, 4, 46, 279.
Swedenborg Rite, 279.
Rite of Zinuendorf, 279.
Rite of Ilerodom, 279.
York Rite, 279.

Eclectic Rite, 279.

Scottish Rite, 279, 284.
French Rite, 280.

Johannite Rite, 279.

Palladian Rite, 167.
Robert Bruce, 173.
Roboam, 190.

Rohan (Prince of), 3.
Roi-Saint, 48, 52, 79, 84.
Rose, 145, 164, 165.
Rose-Croix, 167, 178.
Rouakh, 85, 319, 324.
Rouakh hakkadosh, 17.
Roudra, 75, 373.
Kingdom, 157.

85

S, 52.

Sabaoth, 51.

Sabbathai Zewi, 156.
Sabbaton, 118.

Sabaism, 153, 440.

Sabi, 440.

Masonic Sacrifice, 365.
Sadoc, 235,

Wisdom, 16, 29, 115, 416,
Saint-des-Saints, 86,

ALPHABETICAL INDEX 545

Holy Spirit, 16, 114, 147.

Saint John, 38.

Salix, Noni, Tengu, 417, 425, 428.

Salmanassar, 74, 78.

Solomon, 234, 248, 378.

Samael, 71, 266, 270.

Samas, 18, 78.

Sammler, 202.

Sarahil, 241, 250,

Satan, 71, 125, 126, 215.

Saurva, 69,

Sautcrelles, 363.

Sceaux (the seven), 72.

Schaddai, 81, 38%, 405, 420.

Schalal Schalom Abi, 356.

Schallasch Etrim Adar, 358.

Scharevar, 69,

Schekhinn, 17, 458.

Srhelemoth, 320, 352.

Schem-hamphorasch, 319, 421,

Schibboleth, 302, 307, 352,

Seb, 472,

Shem, Ham, Japheth, 371, 376, 379.

Semeias, 190, 334.

Sepher Jetzirah, 77.

Sephiroth, 28, 48, 50, 79.

Seraffina, 215.

Sercbia, 315,

Brazen Serpent, 143, 166, 387.

Sescha, 373.

Sct, 373,

Sethites, 127.

Setim, 306.

Shu, 471,

Sidonia, 196.

Sidonius, 379.

Sigé, 113.

Sign (the Great), 385.

A sign of admiration and silence,
327, 353, 385.

Sign of the Cord, 384.

Sign of distress, 307,

Fire sign, 352.

159, 344,

Sign of horror, 308.

Sign of order, 299.

Sign of recognition, 299.

Recognition sign, 393.

A sign of surprise, 327.

Silence, 113.

Simon ben Jochai, 5, 429,

Simonini, 134,

Sin, 18, 78.

Singer, 6%.

Siva, 18, 21, 74, 75.

Sivaism, 30%.

Sivaites, 149.

Socrates, 138.

Sodomites, 128.

Solon, 138.

Sophia, 115, 121, 124, 127.

Soudras, 49,

Soult, 196.

Soumuérou, 76.

Sovereign Pontiff, 432.

Spendarmal, 69.

Spenta-armniti, 69.

Spenta-mainyus, 69, 141,

Sphinx, 413,

Spiegel, 22.

Spinosa, 165, 402.

Spiritism, 227.

Spitzer, 3.

Squin Florian, 256.

Stamm, 202.

Sterkin, 238, 316, 333, 334.

Stharbuzanai, 354.

Stibium, 399.

Stolkin, 246, 344, 345, 374.

spiritual, animal and substances material, 118.

Sut, 472.

Svargu, 75.

Swadha, 25.

Symbol {the Great, of Solomon), 385.

Syzigie, 116,

36

546

T

Masonic Tabernacle, 455.

Tabernacles (the Seven), 72, 86.

Lodge Table, 292.

Round table, 371, 380, 385.

Apron, 146, 253, 293, 304.

Tacitus, 192.

Tahariël, 82,

Talmud, 23, 103, 159.

Taric, 70.

Tat or Thoth, 25, 10%, 111.

Tau (the letter), 84, 144, 145, 163, 180, 237, 253, 388, 390.

Tefnut, 471.

Teletos, 115.

Masonic Temple, 205.

Templars, 9, 153, 161.

Time versus eternity, 3%.

Tephelin, 437.

Tereus, 235.

Heads (Three), 57,

Tetragrammaton, 399,

Thathanaï, 354.

Thebes, 406.

Thébon, 266.

Theoclet, 162.

Theodore (Saint), 178.

Theosophist, 280.

Theurgists, 492.

Thor, 19, 373.

Here, 18.

Tiger, 330.

Tihamat, 26,

Tikounim, 211.

Tiphereth, 50.

Titans, 373.

Tito, 321.

Tobit, 73.

Tohu-Bolhu, 71, 266.

Toub bagani gamal abel, 345,

Transmigration of souls, 85.

Trap, 343.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Work, 144, 146, 16%, 294, 301, 307, 379.

Thirteenth (the), 222, 336, 423, 424.

Intellectual Triad, 51.

Moral Triad, 51.

Physical Triad, 51.

Triangle, 14, 404.

Triangle (Hat), 14, 308.

Inverted triangle, 843, 404, 405,
A13.

Tri-bhavana, 75.

Tri-dasa, 75,

Tri-luka, 75.

Court of Justice, 416.

Trimurti, 57.

Trinity (Holy), 1%, 54.

Masonic (Holy) Trinity, 414, 412.

Trunk of the Widow, 297.

Throne, 80.

Trucelle, 341.

Tsadekh, 199,

Tschi-You, 973.

Tsédckah, 416.

Tubalcaïin, 130, 210, 254, 290, 308.

Typhon, 143, 373.

U

An infinity, 832.

Uricl, 383,

Vui, 143.

Vaissyas, 49.

Valentinian, 112.

Varunna, 18.

Vasus, 75.

Vaudois, 151,

Vedanta, 48.

Vedas, 1.

Vehme (the Saint), 375.

Venus, 337.

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

Von-vang, 373.

Verb, 16.

Vestibule, 384,

Clothing, 80, 81, 326.

Widow, 261, 297.

Empty, 117.

Vicillards (the twenty-four), 362.

Virgin of the Light, 135, 137.

Vicux de la Montagne, 134, 168.

Vincere aut mori, 329.

Face (the large and the small), 386.

Vishnu, 18, 21, 74, 373.

Vohu-mano, 69.

Voice, 83.

Steel vault, 308.

W

Weil, 198.

Wodan, 19.

xX

Xerxes, 378,

Y

Yama, 76.

Yakhaborou hammaïm, 355,
Yang, 48.

Yazata, 141,

Yema, 142.

Ymir, 373.

Yn, 18.

Yoni, 293.

York {Rite of}, 279.

Yotsem haschammaïm, 82.

Z

Zabad, 315.

Zebulun, 344, 352, 359.
Zacharie, 193.
Zadkiël, 82.

Zarie, 70.
Zend-Avesta, 1.
Zerbaël, 247, 331, 318,
Zero, 107, 161,

Zeus, 19.

Ziza, Zizon, 309, 423.
Zoć, 114.

Zohar, 5, 13, 79.
Zoroastro, 2, 19, 378.
Zorobabel, 175, 352.

French

English

Full text of " Kahn Jews Of Paris History "

See other formats

The Jews of Paris during the Terror, according to their identity cards stiffness

Francois Lustman

IN JEWISH ARCHIVES 2002/2 Vol. 35, PAGES 115-123
PUBLISHING THE BEAUTIFUL LETTERS

ISSN 0003-9837
ISBN 2251694129
DOI 10.3917/aj.352.0115

Article available online at the address
<https://shs.cairn.info/revue-archives-juives1-2002-2-page-115?lang=fr>

So, CAIRN

Discover the table of contents for this issue, follow the magazine by email, subscribe...
Scan this QR code to access the page for this issue on Cairn.info.

+

Electronic distribution by Cairn.info for Les Belles Lettres.

You are authorized to reproduce this article within the limits of the Cairn.info terms of establishment. Details and conditions on cairn.info/copyright.

Unless otherwise provided by law, the digital use of these resources for educational purposes the collective management body authorized for this purpose. This is notably the case in France.

+

The Jews of Paris during the Terror

according to their security cards

FRANÇOIS LUSTMAN

Since Particler, Hippolytus' pioneering work, our knowledge of them has

Prague, which in 1879 evoked the Jews of the revolutionary era, has become more refined. of Paris under the Terror, primarily through publications memories of his grandfather, of Léon Kahn in 1898 and of Mayer

The Jews of Paris during the Terror according to their security cards – ab)

Lambert in 1906, then in 1970 of Liliane Hagège and, for the "Portuguese-gays" and Avignon residents at the beginning of the Revolution, by Gérard Nahon. More Recently, other insights have been brought by Claudie Blamont on their marriages, and by Bernhard Blumen-Kranz on certain less tragic cases of clashes with the revolutionary police – We have known since Léon Kahn that others were guillotined for a political motive tic! Our work deliberately leaves setting aside this political aspect of their history to become interested in the study demographic and sociological.

Léon Kahn uses the figure of 500 Jews put forward by lawyer Godard in 1790, provided several lists, in particular of those engaged in the Guard national, which allow localization part of their homes, but remains very vague about their professions that he reduced to peddling.² It indicates equalment, a surprising observation at first firstly, for this anti-religious period, that the year 1793, and the year 1794 at a At the lowest level, were those where the Circumcisions were the most common. breuses ³, correlated information since – thanks to Claudie's research Blamont – at the marriage rate, at its maximum during years II and II of the Republic, i.e. 1793 and 1794. Liliane Hagège, limiting herself to the section Beaubourg (formerly the Carmelite district, then section of the Reunion), the most densely populated with Jews during the Revolution, puts forward the figure of 186 Jews in 1792, all Ashkenazi with their two synagogues closed toilets during the Reign of Terror, modest merchants or traders, crammed into a few narrow streets and unhealthy areas of the right bank between the street

Beaubourg and Rue Saint-Martin, moving frequently. Gérard Nahon studies a community of about thirty families originally from Southwest, mostly living in the left bank, rue Saint-André-des-Arts, structured around a synagogue Sephardic> and a relief society mutuels. What confirmations, What new details do we have? brings the analysis of the registers security cards?

Methodological problems

During the Terror, every citizen must have been issued a security card which established his identity and allowed him to... He went about his business. issuing these cards was the responsibility sections; they held registers in which they collected information regarding citizens to whom they delivered these maps. These registers are kept at National Archives in series F7. This material comes in the form of a cardboard register with a label quest which bears the name of the section, or a bundle of attached sheets. It contains either a table of columns on a double page, at a rate one person per line, or a short paragraph for each person, followed by signatures of witnesses; the information information presented in the paragraphs are often less complete than those of the columns. The pre- columns They smell from left to right: a number order, the date of issue of the card, name, surname, quality, age, current place of residence, pre-former residence, the time of arrival at Paris, the birthplace, the name of witnesses, the citizen's signature. All the people listed in the registers are adult men.

But how to determine among these numerous registers, those that are necessary Strip? I based my answer on the geography of Jewish settlement which derived from the works of Léon Kahn, Liliane Hagège and Paul Hildenfinger, the latter author for the period immediately preceding the end of tionnaire €. So I favoured the five following sections: on the right bank, that of Réunion, former district of Carmelite nuns, between the Beaubourg streets and Saint-Martin, the most densely populated Jewish city according to our authors; that of the Lombards, extension of the previous one the other side of Saint-Martin Street; that of the Halle au Blé, around the rue Saint-Honoré; rue du Temple; on the left bank, the one of the Theatre French, containing Saint- Street André-des-Arts 7. Pai had to give up the section of the Armed Man whose The register is missing. On the other hand, I have noted that that of the Lombards occupied two boxes, only one being available- Notable for the other sections. Despite the possibility that this difference of volume corresponds to the loss of a part of the data, and taking into account the the fact that my initial hypothesis may having made me neglect some iso- Jews residents living in foreign neighborhoods Gers to the Jewish housing of Paris in the pre-revolutionary period, I think having counted the majority of the Jews of Paris during the Reign of Terror. My method is supported by Leon's statistics Kahn, according to whom at the beginning of the 19th century 85% of the Jews of Paris lived always these neighborhoods ®.

The Jews of Paris under the Terror according to their security cards – [17

How to finally detect the Jews
Registered? Since Emancipation, the Jews are

French citizens and must not to be labeled as Jews. Despite this, nine individuals are described as "Jewish", that is in the name column (like "Jewish Samuel"), or in that of the first name (like "Jewish Jacob"), or in that of the profession ("mar-Jewish chand"), all in the section of Lombards. Simple habit or A sign of hostility? We also find in the registers of persons also known as Moses Pimentel, sexton of the society of mutual aid of the community
Portuguese, which appears in the section of French theater, Aron Schmoll, future member of the consistory of Paris, who lives on Chapon Street in the section of the Reunion, Elijah Mordecai and Jacob
Lazard, who will sign the address of the 26th August 10... For the others, we have nothing left.
that the very imperfect method of identification by names, in cross-your full name (all the more so easily confused by the office-crates that these notions were at this A period quite foreign to the Jews themselves same, which will be one of the reasons for the Napoleonic decree of 1808 on the seizure
(by name). In-depth knowledge die of onomastics so much Ashkenazi that Bordeaux is useful, and I preferred eliminate contentious cases (such as a Daniel Simon, originally from a region of France, which was forbidden to Jews before Emancipation). I also detected ten double entrances, once under the "surname" and once under the "first name", based on the concordances related to age, the date of arrival in Paris and the place of birth. Without blinding myself Regarding the imperfection of the method, I have therefore 288 men were taken into account written in the registers for the five sections considered: Reunion, 151;

Lombards, 99; Halle au Blé, 9;
Temple, 3; French Theatre, 26.
Is the sample representative?
We know that at the beginning of the Revolution, about forty families at most lived in the neighborhood corresponding to the Theatre section French 11, for which I count 26 men, presumably heads of families: the deficit is about fifteen families. In 1790, out of 120 Jewish recruits in the National Guard, 9, or 7.5%, lived on Rue des Blancs Manteaux, corresponding to the section of The armed man, whose register missing, as I said above; in applying the same proportion of 7.5% for 1793 in this section, I get an estimate of 21 persons not appearing in my countdown. Finally, if the section of the Reunion, the city with the highest Jewish population, is not represented by only one box, the size of this box is quite impressive. and one might think that the data are complete. For the other two single-box sections (Halle au Blé and Temple), they do not contribute in everything for 12 people: the donations Missing children would therefore not go to beyond 12 people. I was also able to reject to unfairly target certain individuals and others may have escaped my attention tion: I admit about twenty false negative. By adding the numbers Of all these potential shortcomings, I arrive at a total of 70 individuals, or a little less than 25% of the total. I'm talking about it.

[18 - Mixtures]

concluded that the data collected at worst concern 1/5% of Jews Paris in 1793 and that they are quite representative to allow me to extend the results of the analysis to the entire population.

Elements of demography: population, immigration, age

How many Jewish inhabitants of Paris, these 288 cardholders Do the safety standards correspond? It is necessary to recall that the lawyer Godard declared

In 1790, Paris had 500 Jews.
However, if we consider that each of the 288 of 1793 was accompanied by a family and that the coefficient is applied classic cient of 4.5, we obtain the a considerable figure of 1,296 per-sounds. I] Here, a distinction must be made between the Jews who settled in Paris before the Revolution, of which concurring evidence teeth show that they were there in family 12, and the recent immigrants date, generally arriving alone, and who do not will bring their families – or get married – will be there on site – a little later.
This approach to the problem is confirmed and through observation deduced from our registers that 62 of the owners of a Safety cards arrived in 1793, and by noting the large number of marriages and circumcisions that took place during the Reign of Terror. In applying to the 226 owners of a security card remaining the coefficient classic family, I get the figure of 1079 Jewish inhabitants of Paris; and given the false negatives, I-both, according to my estimate, at 25% of the Jews detected in the records, we would reach a total of 1,439, a figure very important, almost three times that

The beginnings of the Revolution! 3. This
The Jewish population does not, however, represent-while only a tiny part, two thousand liemes, of the population of Paris
the era, estimated at around 600,000 people.

The breakdown by age groups of the 273 men whose age is indicated confirms this strong character
Immigration of young single people:
73% are under 40 years old and 41%
under 30 years old:

Table 1: Age distribution of Jews of Paris

Table 3: Regions of origin of the Jews

from Paris, born in France

Regions Number

Alsace 75

Metz, Lorraine 36

Bordeaux, Bayonne 14

Avignon and surrounding area 7

Miscellaneous other 5

Total 137

Foreign contributing countries are, in order: Germany, the Holland, Poland, Italy and more—

several other countries (England, Belgium)

(current, Austria, Hungary, Bohemia):

Table 4: Countries of origin of the Jews of Paris of foreign origin

Age groups Number

Under 21 years old 31

21–30 years old 82

31–40 years old 78

41–50 years old 37

51–60 years old 27

Over 60 years old 18

Total 273

Very few were born in Paris; a few less than two-thirds comes from the com-traditional communities of France, mostly from Alsace and Lorraine, including Metz, a large
third of the foreigner:

Table 2: The Jews of Paris in 1793.

Their birthplaces

Country of origin Number

German countries 35

Hollande 15
Poland 13
Italy 7
Other 9
Total 79

Locations Number % Origin of known birth
Paris 7 3%
France (other than Paris) 137 62%
Foreign 79 35%
Total, known origin 223 100%

Origin not indicated 16

Illegible indication 49

Total 288

The Jews of Paris under the Terror according to their security cards – |19

We are entitled to see in the access-brutal eration of Pimmigration on Paris in 1793 – the year in which four times more emigrants than in course of the previous five years – a effect of Emancipation, slightly delayed given that the decision Emigrating is neither an easy decision nor quick to implement 14.

Group housing and socio-realities professional

Jewish residential areas
in Paris in the 18th century: there were no nothing of the mandatory districts, and we don't I don't really know what the reasons were.
of their choice. In any case, for the sections studied, those very ones which

Corn Exchange Section

HAS
ro
as

The Seine

French Theatre Section

Note: the limits and numbers are those of the old districts (before 1860)

has boom

LELET
has

AJ 5 Section of Reunion

Ok Qa

si Ži V

pa

Da fo . |

5a 3: S Temple Section

Q

Sa g? aw

sae ae 0e

a teel, A r way . EN

aa

THERE

has

has ss

Lombards section

€

Sections of Paris in which many Jews lived in 1793.

were inhabited by Jews in the pre-revolutionary period I rap- With a shovel, a "heart" of Paris emerges. Jewish on both sides of Saint- Street Martin, extended to the Beaubourg streets, Quincampoix and du Temple, as well than to the alleyways that connect them, and pro- bordered by a sort of sleeve towards the west formed by the rue Saint-Honoré. On the left bank, the central district on Saint-André-des-Arts Street. Some wealthy Jews are beginning to venture down Temple Street, but the vast majority of Jews Parisians remain concentrated in a unsanitary neighborhood! 5 along the street Saint-Martin, in a small number of streets and alleyways, sometimes grouped together in the same house. Thus 185 pos- security card issuers and their Families are concentrated in eight streets: 45 in Saint-Martin streets and Quincampoix, 25 on Simon- Street le-Franc, 20 on rue Beaubourg, a dozen in the surrounding alleyways Nantes; five people or families are located at number 341 on rue Beaubourg, four at number 230 on Saint-Martin Street. However, group housing is not an absolute rule, and we find 24 per- sons or families who are the only Jews to live on their street. As for the frequent moves mentioned by Liliane Hagège, the data collected we learn that, out of 98 men present in their homes since 1791, 31 indicate as precedent domicile a Parisian address, and when a Parisian address is four- denies it, she is still in the same neighborhood, one changing street Quincampoix for Saint-Martin Street, another one from Saint-Martin Street for the Saint-Merri Street. No model is Therefore, get out of these relocations. within a limited area.

|20 – Mixtures

The profession of the identified Jews in the security card registers is indicated and legible only in 273 cases. On the other hand, we cannot extra- to manage their fortune in a way approximate, except in special cases of individuals known from other sources, like that of Jacob Lazard already mentioned- as above. Forty-two profes- ions are represented, but we find under eighteen different names rents small businesses in the- what one carries one's funds on oneself or in a cart. They are designated such as traveling merchants (17 cases), peddlers (7 cases), secondhand dealers (5 cases), eyeglass and tissue vendors etc., and constitute three-quarters of the whole group. We also note a rabbi, a student, a printer, two manufacturers porcelain cans, a "cou-" pedicure "fear of body [sic]", a servant; to note some artisans as a cha- a coat maker, two shoemakers, three watchmakers Gers. We therefore observe a very small contingent engaged in so-called professions "useful." If Pon tries to apply to this nomenclature, the pro- classification asked by David Cohen for the Second

In Empire 16, we obtain the following table:

Table 5: Grouping of occupations by professional category

Categories	Number of professions	Number of people	%
A: artisans and manufacturers	10	17	6.23
C: wholesale trade	35	12.82
E: employees	3	3	1.10
L: Liberal professions	6	6	2.20
M: manuals	2	3	1.10
N: non-active	1	0.37
P: small business	18,208	76.19
I: illegible or absent	4	15

Total professions: 42,273,100

Total including illegible items: 46,288

The professional profile thus drawn-born is hardly distinguishable from that of the pre-Emancipation era 17. However, a more detailed analysis reveals that these are the oldest arrives, who are also the oldest, who have best taken advantage of the opportunities offered by the capital: the proportion of peddlers and the like is more elevated among the youngest, whatever the age cut-off considered (5, 30 or 35 years old, with a variation of 5 to 10%),

The Jews of Paris under the Terror according to their safety cards - [2 |

while these young people arrived in average in Paris since 1789 alone-ment, the oldest being on average since 1784. Contrary to what One might therefore have thought 18, the the most recent immigrants, those of Emancipation, have used the least new professional opportunities new; the oldest arrivals, already accustomed to the variety of jobs offered through the capital, were better able to put it to profit.

[22 -

In total, the vote count safety cards of Parisian Jews 1793 allows us to clarify certain points important is the portrait of this group in strong population growth two years after Emancipation. The effects of this emancipation over their behavior their habitat and their development professional skills will be much slower to make themselves felt.

NOTES

1. H. Prague, "The Jews of Paris under the "Terror," Archives of French Jews 40, 1879, p. 213-214 and 221-222; Leon Kahn, The Jews of Paris during the Revolution, Paris, Dürlacher, 1898, Burt reprint Pinki has; New York, 1968; Mayer Lambert, "List of circumcisions performed by Mohel Isaac Schweich (1775-1801) », Review of Jewish Studies (hence- but REJ) 52, 1906, pp. 282-283 and 291-303 [he operated in Paris in 1788 and from 1789 to 1801] ; Liliane Hagège, "The Jews in the Parisian section Beaubourg during the French Revolution", Jewish Archives 6, 1969-1970, pp. 42-50: Gérard Nalon. "Papers of the Jewish community of Por-Tugais of Paris from 1785 to 1790", REJ 129, 1970, p. 43-65; Bernhard pinen k, "French Ephemerides", Jews in France in the 18th century, under the direction of the same, Paris, French Commission of Jewish archives, 1994, pp. 17-19; Claudie Blamont, "Jewish Marriages in Paris from 1793 to 1802", Genealogy Circle Review Jewish, no. 57, Spring 1999, pp. 2-8 and No. 58, Summer 1999, pp. 2-14.

2. Léon Kahn, op. cit., p. 117.

3. Ibid., p. 191 from Burt Franklin edition, New York, 1968, quoting The Salvation Leaf public no. 130, octidi of the second decade of Brumaire year II (November 1793).

4. National Archives (hereafter AN), F7/2494. They were closed by the Jews they themselves brought the timbers ries to the section for the saltpeter service.

5. Like their coreligionists of the on the right bank, the Sephardim closed their synagogue and donated its ornaments to the Fatherland, AN, C278 file 740.

Mixtures

6. Paul Hildenfinger, Documents on the Jews of Paris in the 17th century, Paris Honoré Champion, 1913

7. In the F7 series of the AN, section of the Meeting: 4805, Lombards section: 4797 and 4798, section of the Corn Exchange: 4796, Temple section: 4806, section of the French Theatre: 4807.

8. Review of the list published by Léon Kahn, History of the Community The Jewish committee of Paris. The benevolent committee-sanatorium, the hospital, the cemeteries, Paris, Dürlacher, 1886, appendix D. Léon Kahn, p. 143, indicates that the document "does not bear a date" but that "its The title and the names that appear therein allow-try to believe that it dates from the early years of this century [19th century]". Indeed, several names are those of Jews present in Paris at the time of the revolution revolutionary.

9. See on this subject Bernhard Blumen-Kranz, op. cit., and Françoise Weil, "Aux origins of modern Dijon Judaism (1790-1810) », Jewish Archives 33/1, 1* semester 2000, pp. 101-103.

10. First address presented in 1789 at the National Assembly to ask the emancipation of all Jews from France. Elie Mordecai lives on Saint-Martin in the Lombards section; Jacob Lazard, future member of the council-Paris Cathedral, lives on Rue des Deux Écus in the section of the Corn Exchange.

11. Gérard Nahon, op. cit.

12. Léon Kahn, History of the community nauté..., op. cit., appendix, pieces 5 and 6, who dares the inscriptions on the stones tombstones in the cemeteries of Montrouge and de la Villette; Paul Hildenfinger, op. cit., which collects death certificates; for a For a more recent approach to the question, see Didier Bensadon, "The Implementation of Jewish families in Paris in the 18th century: according to the archives of the Paris police-"ne", Jewish Archives 28/2, 2nd semester 1995, pp. 92-94.

13. However, this should be revised upwards if one H. Monin continues, "The Jews of Paris at the end of the Old Regime", REJ 23, 1898, p. 87, who disputes the figure of 500 put forward by Godard and advances that of 700 to 800.
14. Cf. Solomon Posner, "The immediate economic and social effects of the emancipation of the Jews in France", Jewish Social Studies 1, 1939, pp. 271-326.

The Consistorial Rabbi in 19th-Century France – 123

15. See on this subject Jean Favier, Paris. Two thousand years of history, Paris, Fayard, 1997, p. 200.

16. David Cohen, The Promotion of the Jews in France during the Second Empire (1852-1870), Aix-en-Provence, University of Provence, 1980.

17. Michel Roblin, The Jews of Paris. Demography, economy, culture, Paris, 1952; H. Monin, op. cit., p. 87; H. Prague, op. cit., p. 213

18. That is to say, the youngest would have had better adaptive abilities position in the face of a new situation created through Emancipation and their arrival in a major capital city.

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google Books

<https://books.google.com>

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work that has been preserved for generations on library shelves with the precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing internet users to discover the line.

Because this book is relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and is now "Belonging to the public domain" means that the book in question has never been subject to Expiration. The conditions required for a book to enter the public domain can vary from country to country. These are all links to the past. They bear witness to the richness of our history, our culture, and too often difficult for the public to access.

The footnotes and other marginal annotations present in the original volume are reproduced as part of the long journey the book has taken from the publishing house through the library to find

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize works in the public domain and make them thus accessible to all. These books are indeed the property of everyone and we are simply making them available. However, this is a costly project. Therefore, and in order to continue disseminating these works, we have taken necessary measures to prevent potential abuses by third-party merchant sites, in particular technical constraints related to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

+ Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We designed the Google Books Search program for personal use. We therefore ask that you use these files for personal purposes only. They may not be used for any commercial purpose.

+ Do not perform automated requests. Do not send any automated requests whatsoever to the servers of Google or to the research concerning translation software, optical character recognition, or any other field. For large amounts of text, please do not hesitate to contact us. We encourage the use of these works and documents belonging to the public domain and we would be happy to be of service to you.

+ Do not remove the attribution. The Google watermark contained in each file is essential to inform you of the source and allow them to access more documents through the Google Books Search Program. Do not delete the watermark. No cases.

+ Stay within the law. Whatever use you intend to make of the files, remember that it is your responsibility. Be sure to respect the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume that it is in the public domain in other countries. The legal duration of copyright for a book varies from country to country. The works whose use is authorized and those whose use is not. Don't assume that simply posting a book on Google Book search means that it can be used in any way anywhere in the world. The sentence to which you are subject. The penalties you would face in the event of copyright infringement could be severe.

About the Google Books Search service

By facilitating searches and access to a growing number of books available in many languages, Google Books Search contributes to promoting cultural diversity through Google Books Search. Indeed, the Google Books Search service allows internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and publishers reach new readers.

online searches in the full text of this work can be found at <http://books.google.com>

uwiii ul

Digitized by Google

THE

JEWS OF PARIS

UNDER LOUIS XV

deme eats eee ak ML

(Excerpt from the Israelite Archives)

HISTORY OF THE ISRAELITE COMMUNITY

FROM PARIS

THE JEWS OF PARTS

UNDER LOUIS XV

(1721-1760)

BY

LEON KAHN

Deputy Secretary of the Jewish Consistory of Paris

PARIS
BOOKSTORE: A. DURLACHER
83>8| RUE LAFAYETTE, 83°!
1892

has

'ff HARVARD N -© UNIVERSITY LIBRARY J

Fredman
TEE

HISTORY OF THE ISRARLITE COMMUNITY OF PARIS

THE

JEWS OF PARIS UNDER LOUIS XV

The Revue du Monde latin (1) has just published, based on unpublished and recently discovered handwritten documents
'ment unearthed at the Arsenal Library, a study by Mr. Paul d'Estrées on the existence of Jews in Paris from 1721 to 1760.

While this study is of great interest, the documents comments are not always presented with all impartiality, all the sincerity that History demands history, even if it was that of the Jews; that is what made us a duty to study them at the very source, at our turn (2). Fortunately, history is based

(4) Paris, 1891. September 1st, i.e. October.

(2) It is thanks to Mr. Frantz Funck-Brentano, librarian at the Arsenal Library, which we were able to consult bundles of documents relating to Jews. We sincerely thank him.
of his affability, his friendly and enlightened assistance.

based on facts and not on the comments that... accompany, and often alter, either that Without realizing it, the writer seeks to make pre-to assert his own feelings, whether he lets himself to gain from views where error and exaggeration hold-don't take up too much space. We would be tempted to to reproach M. d'Estrées for all this, if we do not above all, we were grateful to have been put capable of clearly establishing the existence of a veri-Community table in Paris under Louis XV and of re-to trace fairly faithfully the life of our coreligions-naires at that time.

The existence of this Community was not known to us not entirely unknown. We had already reported the presence of several Jews in the capital from the early years of the 18th century. Pamphlets published in the mid-17th century, and known as Mazarinades, had even allowed us to believe that in 1652 there were some Israelites in Paris.
This hypothesis has been heavily criticized (1). We we do not intend to raise this issue at this time a new debate on this subject; but we cannot-will we be prevented from noting that the files
the Bastille fortified in particular Done feelings on this issue.

In any case, we have already said elsewhere (2)
that Jews resided in Paris under Louis XV.

~ (1) L. Lazard. Anti-Semitism under Louis XIV. Archives Yearbook
Israelites, by H. Prague (1889-1890).

(2) The Jews in Paris (Paris 1889), and the Patronage Societies, Paris (1885).

L

+, Pe

Some – like Silva, the king's physician, like Fonseca, linked to the Countess of Caylus, Voltaire and other important figures, such as Azevedo, another famous doctor, like Jacob Rodrigues Péreire, Astruc, physician of the Faculty of Paris and from Montpellier, Isaac Pinto, a distinguished writer, and Israel Bernard de Valabrègue, interpreter for the king, enjoyed great favor at court, of the king and among the scholars. – The others, humble | artisans or merchants, seemed to us until now to have lived ignored in Paris, happy in oblivion in which they could be left. We will see more How far we were from reality! What– some of them still existed in 1809 and were listed in a census of the Jewish population conducted at that time. A woman, Marianne Samuel, was Born in Paris in 1734. A foreign Jew, Abraham Schwab had lived there since 1740. Another, Moses Perpignan, a man of independent means, originally from Bordeaux, was there fixed since 1749, around the same time as Isaac Hourwitz, bookbinder; Isaac-Joseph Mareli, lapidaire; and Israël Vidal Valabrègue, “state rentier”.

Between these two classes of Israelites, those – despite the disapproval of which the Jews were everywhere the object – at the first rungs of the scale social, these at the lowest levels, existed also in Paris, according to documents that we We had in our hands a man named May who, since 1743, he had practiced the profession of stockbroker, rue Montorgueil, near rue du Bout-du-Mondr;; Laurent Woulfe, rue de l'Echelle; Baur, place des Victories; Georges Woulfe, rue Sainte-Anne, and

= 8 –

Halbmeyer, on rue Grenier-Saint-Lazare, who held banking houses.

The information provided by the census almost official ones we just talked about are corroborated by two facts of unequal importance, but which allowed us to conclude that there was of a Jewish community at that time: these were First, the strange adventures of the Jew Borach Levi (1752–1758) who, wanting at all costs to be baptized tiser, even against the wishes of the clergy, accused his coreligionists in Paris to seek by all means to oppose his conversion; it was then the multi-million dollar offer which, if we are to believe the Memoirs of the Regency of the Duke of Orléans, was made by the Israelites to Louis XV to obtain a legal establishment and a synagogue in Paris.

'But what was particularly interesting was to know, it was their country of origin, the profession that they practiced, the reason that brought them to Paris, the home they chose there and their type of life. Were they tacitly admitted to Paris? alone—were they tolerated? Or were they exposed, if they stayed there, to being punished for this violation of laws and ordinances still in force? Could they finally: observe openly the prescriptions of their worship, and, without Centers that have been harassed, should they gather to pray and implore God?

The Jews being placed until the time of the developments under the special surveillance of the police. this was particularly evident in police reports that it was possible to draw information necessary to resolve these questions. Where the What to do? Our steps to obtain it.

— communication had been in vain; it is true that all The related files were centralized. automatically to the Bastille; that if the number had been considerable, the thunderbolt of July 14, 1789 had scattered them a little everywhere, and we can add that in this upheaval most had been destroyed.

However, some bundles escaped this destruction. almost total tion, and thanks to Mr. Funck-Brentano, documents have just been pulled from the boxes where They had been buried for centuries; incomplete and perhaps mutilated, but sufficient — as the fact precisely to observe Mr. d'Estrées, in order to give a accurate idea of life and actions, little or little known until now, the Israelites in Paris during the first half of the 18th century.

A wide variety of faces will pass by. before our very eyes: some strange, others true—amicably friendly; if others, finally, are less pure, it must be admitted that they are presented by Mr. d'Estrées with a slight bias that seems at first glance justify the police reports under whose control the Jews were placed.

Ah! These police officers, we're going to see them face to face: we will see what kind of tyrannical regime, of vexations, persecutions some of them They subjugated the Jews for centuries and until 1789; we will finally see what service This outrageous study should have made the entire community aware of it. to suffer. And at the moment we finish reading From these truly engaging documents, we

we feel dominated by the memory of Abbé Grégoire

1.

= 10 -

which depicted in 1790, in an admirable and gentle-a grim picture, the cruel obligations imposed to the Jews by the police inspectors whose it was necessary always buy the withering protection, which made the arbiters of their destiny and ransom them born mercilessly.

-< 11 -

11

The archives of the Lieutenant General of the Lower the gates do not open, with regard to the Jews of Paris, which in 1721, a few years after the death of Louis XIV. The early days of the Regency are therefore silent on the existence of the Jewish community.
It is possible that in this short period (1715-1720) there that there were Jews in Paris, that they resided there, and were able to escape the clutches of the police, counting on "the Regent's well-known carelessness" for to live in peace in the capital. There were some in 1721, There is no doubt about it; and it was Lieutenant General-Police Commissioner Gabriel Teschereau de Baudry, the first, who was concerned about their "maneuvers"
and reported them to the Secretaries of State.

In May 1721, in fact, returning to a note presented to the Regent five months earlier, he submitted to him a "plan to leave no Jew without a passport." He said in this regard: "He always
It has been customary not to suffer any in this capital.
tale without express and specific permissions,
which were given to them by the secretaries of State or the intendants of the provinces from which they they left, with the responsibility of representing themselves

- 42 -

in front of the lieutenant general of Paris who was aiming at their passports or permits and was routed by this means at hand to monitor their conduct; and when—that they dared to abuse the tolerance that we had of They suffered in Paris, they were expelled immediately or imprison in case of disobedience"; and, for to argue for the need to return to these "practices", he declared that "among the number of Jews who are at In Paris, there are several very suspicious ones, and capable of... capable of committing many rogue acts, and of "Collecting or buying stolen goods."

From that moment on, these various formulas on the importance of the "number" of Jews, their "rogue-neries" and the opportunity to revive the old regulations, are invariably recorded in the reports of the police inspectors, the notes of the lieutenant generals, administrative decrees and royal decrees. They will be an integral part of it. grante, and are successively adopted, after Teschereau de Baudry, by d'Arzenson, Hérault, Feydeau de Marville and Berryer. Only Ravot d'Om-Breval (1724–1725), Bertin de Bellisle (1757–1739) and Sartine (1759) happily break the ed-confident unanimity of their predecessors or successors-sisters.

_ Thus, the police lieutenants are demanding the measures—the most rigorous measures against the Jews. They do not see that a means of gaining control of this nation, "of all nations, the one to which we owe the most "To challenge one another" means "to drive out of Paris all those who would be suspicious and would not have a pass—"Port, even to have them put in prison." Nothing cannot, in this respect, stop their "representations" – to the king. Hardly the serious political events of Do they, for a moment, divert their attention from this era? tion. Count d'Argenson insists, saying that "the Jewish houses serve as a refuge for scoundrels and that all stolen goods are brought there, bought there and they disguise themselves there"; Hérault asks to be regular-informed of their arrival and the reasons for their stay in Paris "in order to oversee their conduct, the "People of this religion being very suspicious"; Marville claims that "many Jews continually do

| RES nine ea

– 13 –

"all kinds of trickery" and he is determined to suffer no harm in Paris under any pretext be that; Berryer finally requests a letter from the king of a seal which will have the force of law.

The Secretaries of State were very annoyed by these instances. To these pressing requests, some, like M. de Breteuil, did not respond for long than by silence; the others were content to append to place on the notes that were given to them a laconic postscript. "Good," wrote the Bishop of Fréjus; "Good to be executed as in the past," he said. Cardinal de Fleury, in turn.

However, after renewing these bodies almost in vain and without interruption from 1722 to 1726, then in 1730, 1742 and 1748, the lieutenants The police won their case. In 1750, in fact, On Berryer's report, one of the most ardent against the Jews, Louis XV, "being informed that of from all parts of Europe, he assembles in Paris a fairly considerable number of Jews, including several under the pretext of doing business there, they form vested interests with the crooks," issued an order with the following terms of which, restoring an interrupted obligation since 1742, but now "more necessary than it has not yet been so," he said: "My intention is that you would force all the Jews who are currently in Paris, as well as all those who will go there in the rest, under whatever pretext they may be there or that they come there, to get passports in the ordinary forms, whether you have them represented to you to feel that you are targeting them, that you make of it keep a record, and that in the event of their refusal or that complaints might come to you against some of them of them, that you have them arrested and taken away, either in prison, or at Bicestres, from where you can Then let them out whenever you like.

– 144 –

Armed with this lettre de cachet, the lieutenants Police generals used it without restraint. On the slanderous, inaccurate or insufficient reports of inspectors, they seized the Jews and, putting "their belongings safe", they were being expelled from Paris or had them locked up – by order of the King! – in the Bastille, 4 Vincennes, at For-l'Évêque, 4 Bicestres. Authentic documents, the Jewish states have

Paris, drawn up by the police from 1755 to 1759, make them faith. Let's quote at random:

Alexandre Jacob, on Maubué Street, doing the commerce de «clinqualleries» : a there is nothing positive-
"He's against him," said the police inspector. "The
"Send them back from Paris," Berryer replied curtly.

Jacob Abraham, Maubué Street, at the white cross, mar-hardware store owner, also, is a "traveling vendor who "Never had a passport": "Good for prison!"

| aeen
e Sale

- 4% -

Joseph Astruc, on rue Dauphine, engaged in "trade"
of silks," does not have a passport, "the magistrate not wanting to grant it to him": "to put him in prison " !

Lyon Cahin, rue Saint-Martin at the widow's house Morlet, "in Paris to do business for the
"The Grenadiers of France regiment" has no passport. "But," said the inspector, "he has to leave."
"in a few days." "If it remains, put it in priority."
its » |

Later, finally, the police lieutenant, tired of accaffix a specific note to each name.
refers to the special office | 'Status of Jews in Paris'
(December 1756) equipped with this general order: "There
Many of them don't have passports. To do to bring into compliance those who have not and to con-They're doing well. Chase the others away or make them put them in in prison.

The inspectors, responsible for monitoring the Jews readily lent themselves to the accomplishments the undertaking of this nasty task. How could he-Could it be otherwise? Given the high ideal that the police officer of his importance, to his fierce joy of traquer - like the hunter the wild beast - the unfortunate that his mission was not to per-from sight and to which he granted neither truce nor Thank you, added the powerful allure of profit; for,
We need to know this; these agents were receiving a gratification for the execution of each "order of the king ".

How then can one fail to understand, fail to to excuse the skill that, in this unequal struggle, the ee, (ee

Jews had to deploy to evade the cruel and humiliating passport requirements, to protect themselves from mistreatment
these mercenaries, whose rudeness and crudeness
they only softened in the face of money or high-ranking officials Protections? And how can we not accept without them?
reserve of accusations based solely on the ru-public death, and the dishonorable reports that their
What interest and hatred did their guards inspire?

The verbatim copy of a "statement" drawn up on December 31st the fact that one of these agents was involved in the 1753 investigation would justify the fiancée and would allow, better than anything else, to to gain an accurate understanding of the harmful influence that the inspectors had on the fate of the Jews.
It is – the only one of its kind from 1721 to 1760 – a "State of the Jews who left Paris by order of the masterful and of those who emerged from it without to make their declaration after having done some rogue-neries, with observations on their hidden return in this city, at their retirement in Versailles." But if the sincerity of reports of this kind leaves d'ordi-
What a lack of desire, what must she have been like at that time!
where individual freedom went unpunished every day-where Jews, more than any others, are subjected to rape and where Jews, more than any other Were they unable to defend themselves? Look rather the foolish accusations of which some of them are the subject:

Elie Worms, from Saarlouis, was imprisoned in Bi-
This is considered a "bad subject." Just punishment! For,
"Maleré's declaration to leave Paris" he had continued to keep hidden in order to "live in debauchery" with a woman named De Launay.

– ST, nn nn cae
se SE A ee VS ee eee ee RER

has

Michel Bernard Zey, from Metz, "tried to put
"To his host's embarrassment." This was so serious that, for having "remained with him", Mayer Caen was reported as "highly suspicious".

But this is nothing. Joseph Astruc, son of Lange Astruc, from Bordeaux, Samuel Dalpuget and Israel
Dalpuget, his brother, both sons of Jacob Emma-Nuel Dalpuget, from Bordeaux, have committed good
Other misdeeds: all three are petty tyrants, who walk around Paris wearing swords and heels reds, acting like libertines and maintaining girls... These crimes had already earned them being sent to For-l'Evêque and later relegated to Versailles; but nothing worked! They were "uncor-"rigibles"!

The 1753 "list" contains nineteen names. Is this Everything, at least? No. "There are still many others "Suspect Jews," said the officer, "but I'm not reporting them."
not the grades, the number being too large"; and We must take him at his word, because "notwithstanding his attentions" he despairs of "this nation prone to "evil," of these Jews who "all get along like
"Thieves at the fair!"

We judge, by these feelings of one of those who showed the least cruel, of what could to be the inspectors who made a game of throwing the terror in the ranks of the Israelites. There is one of them particularly who pushed tyranny 4 such to the point that he paid for his abuses of power with his position and his atrocities. That one was called The Great.

Charged by Berryer in 1749 with "the part of the "Jews," he began by deploying against them a

– 48 –

excessive rigor. But he soon thought that there had better things to do, and after getting information on the resources and wealth of those he had to monitor, he resolved to "draw contributions of each individual in this nation, whether in silver, either in goods." From that moment
The Jews become his humble serfs. They are for
He can be exploited at will. Under the pretext that he can...
Whether to protect them or harm them, he strikes them all from an individual tax. Some try
It is good to resist this exorbitant claim;

But despite the regularity of their conduct, The Great retains their passports, demands that they cannot-felt like taking a step outside Paris without first going there to warn, to report them to his superiors and – by order of the king! – He has them thrown in prison. He becomes conciliatory and caressing-sant with those whose "abilities" he knows; he seeks "to skillfully delve into the details of their trade"; he deals with it with the utmost brutality those from whom he expects nothing and, finally, weary of to demand specific contributions from each individual, In 1751, he found it easier to strike with a rede-collective advance the various Communities of Paris. He thus received forty- at once five gold louis.

He accepted everything, Mr. Le Grand, as well as for both for himself and for Mrs. Le Grand, his wife, as well of those he flattered as of those he had thrown out in prison. The investigation that was conducted on this occasion a commissioner of the king informed us the complaints of some of his victims. The details are truly informative.

SEE, SE CES | ee,
Re eee ee EE cee RS |

– 19 =

Lazare Salomon Choyes, on rue Beaubourg, had . handed a gold louis to Le Grand. The latter made the grim-Mace returned the louis, and had two more brought to him. _ the following day. Jacob Lévy, rue Saint-Julien, and Daniel Gouds, _ rue Beaubourg, contributed in gold louis.

Goldschmidt, on rue Beaubourg, donated two louis of gold, but he said, the following month, to add one Third, the Great was not satisfied. Goldsch-Midt was also forced to offer good thanks to twelve pounds of sugared almonds to the lady Le Grand.

Salomon Guidion, rue Geoffroy-Langevin; Lazare . of Alsace, rue du Petit Lyon; Joshua, a Dutch Jew, Maubué Street; Ory Cahin and Raphael Ory, Saint- Street Martin; Léon, a Portuguese Jew, contributed "ma-annually, at different times," as well as in money rather than gifts.

Moyse Sekel, rue Saint-Martin, near the church Saint-Julien des Ménétriers, had to postpone to several several women's watch chains.

Other merchants "of his kind" were imposed in the same way.
Bernard, from Mainz, horse trader, rue
The gaze contributed in goods. He could do it to prove it by a letter of thanks that he received by Le Grand.
David Brisac, servant of the said Bernard, was preferably in the lady's shop Le Great place to buy a pair of lederhosen
"They agreed on a price of 12 pounds." Brisac told him gave a gold louis as payment. The Great took the Louis kept the rest as a contribution.

– 90 –

Lazard Brisac, horse trader, employee by Mr. Pinot, "entrepreneur of the remounts of the French cavalry", residing on Saint- Street
Martin in a new house, facing the street
Montmorency, after being arrested by Le Grand,
He was only released after 4 months. At his Upon his release from prison, Brisac had to send a carriage from handed over to Le Grand so that the Inspector could to go for a walk in Versailles with his family.

Elie Worms and Cerf were – like Lazard Bri-
'bag – arrested by Le Grand because they had not
No authorization to renew the stay.
It was the Great One himself who had retained their passes-Expired ports! They spent 4 months in prison.

And for as long as the Great One remained During his five years in office, not a single Jew came.
in Paris, from which he derived no benefit!

This is the man to whom was entrusted for too long over a long period of time the serious mission of monitoring men, and who, appearing before his leaders to account for his misdeeds, his "extor-
"sions," he protested, "that he was being compared."
vis-à-vis a bunch of wandering Jews, vagrants, without neither fire nor homeland, which consequently cannot be nothing but scoundrels to whom no one should add |

"foy"!

It was not a bad idea to oppose these "scoundrels" |

those who owed them an example of justice, of _selflessness and integrity!

|

wo 21 +

III

By saying that the Jews were "wandering, vaga-
"Leaps, without fire or country," Inspector Le Grand was merely reproducing in turn one of these im-calculations which weighed heavily from generation to generation so heavily on the Jews. But was it really to their enemies, to their detractors that he belonged to reproach them for this inconsistency, and – for to use a word that has been so overused – their cosmopolitan customs? The Jews, for their part, do not ask-were only to settle down and when, less than forty Years later, the Revolution finally freed them from their long and painful slavery, we know with what 'enthusiasm these "stateless" adopted the
"France, which they loved despite everything."

"Wanderers and vagabonds," certainly; but did not make-We don't have everything in the world to force them to move away from 'Paris, to wander from city to city, to abandon their homes, fleeing this homeland that constantly rejected them
'and to which their activity and their intelligence? All means, all The pretexts were good enough to get rid of them.
depressing them even more, losing them in . public sentiment and reduce them to desperation.

– 2 –

Their integrity was called into question by these same people.
police officers who robbed them, and their dishonesty brazenly asserted that they were taxed regularly
a matter of "trickery".

Forced to live in contact with people without Admittedly, they were united in the same feeling.

` of contempt; forced into low professions determined-mined and abandoned to the most worthy of the people, they became "merchants of "clinics", or "second-hand dealers", or "street vendors", and these very professions designated them as
"suspects" to the agents in charge of monitoring them.
This became a commonplace in offices that most of the Jews, "bound by interests with the crooks", were engaged in "clandestine trade," which they came from
"furtively" in Paris "to buy different stolen belongings" and that they would then leave "as they had come," thus overshadowing the flights which could have been recognized. Moreover, the "assemthe "wheat" that they did in their homes were labeled as "retirements for scoundrels" and the opinion people had of them was so malicious age than those who enjoyed a "Good reputation" was merely a passing fad honest people in the eyes of the lieutenant general of Hérault police!
How can these men, whose constant thought, their sole responsibility was to ensure their safety, they could-they possess moral qualities that only a people freedom can acquire, and only freedom can procure? Ah! yes, instead of chasing them out of Paris, we had made sure to keep them there, to mora-

+ - ee ee a 0 aa 0

SK

- 93 -

read; if of these "rascals" - according to the expression - unjust and cruel sion of M. d'Estrées - we had sought to create honest and upright men; if,
instead of subjecting them to exceptional laws
harsher measures, more arbitrary measures,
more brutal forms of servitude - as is still practiced, Alas! In some countries - they had been opened widely the ranks of society, Louis XV did not-
Could not have had better and more worthy subjects.

Evidence of this can be found at every turn in the study.
comparative of these Jewish states in Paris, including we talked about: as much under the control of a function-
The Israelites, though cruel, struggled to contain themselves.
lying, as much under the supervision of a magistrate

Integrity, humanity, and fairness: a profound improvement.
rapid, occurs in their customs, their manners and their conduct. But for that, less of contempt and more kindness, less rudeness and more humanity.

What, moreover, was there any basis in these accusations?
repeated statements, which Mr. d'Estrées echoes Too lenient? Was the conduct of the Jews
So, is it really so reprehensible? Considering only these points recriminations and the state of 1753, the Community was really just a "rabble" of "crooks" and of "scoundrels." However, the nomenclature of the Jews in 1755 allows one to form an opinion in this regard something else entirely. What do we see there, in fact? Two Jews are poorly rated; two others are not equipped of no indication; twenty-two are worn similarly plement. to the observations column, as street vendors or secondhand dealers; and finally, Goud-

- Qi =p

Chaux, a refugee at the Temple, is a "bad apple" who "doesn't correct himself." He was a "petty master."
known to the magistrate" and who undoubtedly counted as much about his relationship with Michel Goudchaux, of Nancy - her brother - that on the protection which honored the Duchess of Orléans, to mocking all the lieutenants and ins-police officers of the capital.

These are the crimes and the criminals! Let's see who who are considered honest people. Sixty-two have "good conduct", a "good reputation"
tion" or "behave well". Five of them:

David Péreire and Rodrigues Péreire, his brother, |
who are domiciled at Quay de la Vallée, Hôtel d'Au-Vergne; Manuel de Léon, chocolate maker; Lazare d'Alsace, who trades in "jewelryteries" and resides on rue du Petit-Lyon, at a goldsmith; and Nathan de Morhange, rue de l'Echelle,
The jeweller, too, is "known to the magistrate"
or "of the minister"; and this honorable mention;
That's enough. | ,

© The state contains the names of one hundred and ten Jews; we;
We have listed one hundred and four; here are the last six:
niers: |

Salomon Benjamin and Cerf Benjamin, "placed at the head of the Tobacco Factory by order of "The First Generals" are, by decision of the Magistrates exempt from passport requirements.

: Michel Goudchaux, rue et Hôtel de Montmorency;
"sindic of the Community of Jews of Lor"raine": "Known as an honest man."

Lechmann Nédre, of Rosheim, street and Hotel of

.
0 aai, a EE 0 n

Montmorency, in Paris "for juice-
"tice"; "honest man".

Aron Mayer, from Mutzig, rue and Hôtel de Mont-Morency, "Trade as a munitions supplier" to the Bavarian army": "honest man".

Mayer Lévy, from Cologne, rue du Poirier, at a fruit shop, "Trade in clinics":
"An honest man, and known as such."

Rascals! Was it really their "rascal-
"Ries"—what were the Jews responsible for these excessive hardships?
of which they were the object? The truth about their disloyalty, about their "trickery", about their "scoundrelly deeds",
Do we want to know her completely? There she is, naive.
or cynical — as you prefer — in this passage from a note that Inspector Le Grand was sending, the November 16, 1748, to the Lieutenant General of Police:

"The reason why the Jews were of all
"The fixed times of the King's order can only be "because they are foreigners, that the greatest
"Some of them are most often carriers of effects"
"considerable, that they are in a relationship of com-
"trade with the best merchants"
"in Europe and that it is from all nations
"The one we should be most wary of."

What excellent reasons to hang people!
And how can we be surprised after that that we have something to fear?
both the injustice of men and the injustice of laws, they lie in wait in the shadowy neighborhoods.
barely daring to leave these "dives" that they reproach for living and in which they are re-

"alongside the most miserable portion and"
the most dangerous of the Parisian population!"

Jews, forced to "register in the twenty-four hours of their arrival in Paris" – otherwise "the officer in charge of this detail" imprisoned "by order of the King" – clashed with passions no less hostile when they had to complete the necessary formalities to obtain a passport, a residence permit. What an-These unfortunate people must have felt so much when their requests, following a formidable channel, had to go through the minister in turn of state, the lieutenant general of police, one of his secretaries and the inspector in charge of their supervision-Launch! We've seen how easily these requests can be made were rejected; when finally it had been observed that he! had not "returned from complaints against them" and that without inconvenience one could their granting "at the magistrate's discretion" the the permission they were requesting, not everything had been said Again! They had to wait, to live in a relative security, that the passport would have followed from the new hierarchical order until the Minister of State, "having regard for the very humble su-the plication" of those concerned, would have granted them "by the King » permission to reside in Paris
"without them being able to worry." And despite this, despite the order given by His Majesty to all his Officers and Justices, to let them "enjoy free-
"the effect of these presents," they could fearto fall back into it, under the most futile pretexts, _ in the hands of the police.

nx

Such was the regime under which the Jews lived in Paris. E

Is it possible to admit that they were there?
breux?

Royal ordinances, administrative decrees
The police reports clearly state that they were there.
in considerable numbers; they repeat it to satiety; but that was yet another of those false
assertions which, reproduced while always exaggerating them |
Furthermore, they were accepted without control and taken indifferently to the truth itself. In fact, none
The personal document does not establish this; Mr. d'Estrées knows it.
better than anyone. So it's strange that, pre-noting that a statement without proof is true, he repeat – by varying the expressions to infinity – that "the Jews flocked to Paris" and that Nothing could stop their "invasion".

No, the Jews did not flock to Paris;
No, the capital had nothing to fear from "a new-
"A new flood in Israel." The lists drawn up by the police inspectors of 1755.4 1760 wein this regard, information of a precise nature undeniable sion. When, on June 13, 1755, the agent Buhot first compiled a nomenclature of Jews who were there "currently", he en-gistra listed the names of one hundred and ten individuals; and up to
In 1759 their number did not exceed that figure. They are 101 on January 2, 1756; only 85 at the end of this year; 91 in 1757; 106 on June 30, 1758, and finally 92 at July 6, 1759.

It should be noted that this enumeration does not men-not only functions heads of families, but also...

– 98 –

sometimes also their wives and children. Here is by for example Manuel de Léon, rue Mazarine, at a earth potter, who is noted as having with him a girl and a boy; Salomon Benjamin, street
Saint Anne, at Henrion's, tailor, with Cerf
Benjamin, his son and his wife; Mayer assures, street
Beaubourg, at the widow Benjamin's house, has two daughters with him, Esther and Sarah; Isaac Lévy, rue des Ménétriers, at a "carpenter's" shop, is accompanied by "His wife and children"; Israel Abraham, street
Maubué lives with his daughter at Legoutteux's house.

There are a few others. In these conditions
tions, can we, as M. d'Estrées did, fix, even in an approximate way, the number of
Were there any Jews in Paris at that time?
We don't believe it. The comparison of these states, at

On the contrary, this is an indication that their stability was indeed precarious, which most of them considered prudent—the desire to expose themselves alone to the difficulties of all the species that awaited them in Paris, and that those The exception was those who had their wives with them and their children.

These figures, in any case, hardly justify either Mr. d'Estrées' assertion that the Jews were more of five hundred sous Sartines, nor the fear he lends to Teschereau de Baudry "to be overwhelmed by the avajewish swamp."

"Semitic invasion – Flooding of Israel –"
"Israelite avalanche!" That certainly belongs to more to 19th-century Pan-Semitism than to intolerance 18th century.

– | 29 The

Consult only the Archives of the Lieutenancy of the Bastille – and what documents can be more convincing! – cot invasion of the element Israelite, as we have seen, was hardly of a nature to disturb the safety of Parisians.

Count d'Argenson, then lieutenant general,
We learn this clearly from a request submitted to the Duke of Orléans, on June 22, 1721, that at that time there was in Paris Jews "who run inns and a-seemed"; he repeats it in a new note, the December 18, 1723, claiming that they "give themselves the license to provide food like innkeepers" and that they "hold assemblies in their houses".
But can we infer from this that there were many of them? Nothing in the files allows us to confirm this.

Applications for passports or authorizations
On the contrary, such stays are extremely rare.

In 1722 alone, the Danish minister—via the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs
"a memorandum... to obtain permission from a Jew" states of the king his master to stay six months at "Paris." It was a man named Isaac Wallack who, the year
The previous one , already, was in Paris with his wife. The ins-police inspector, in charge of the report on this request, was of the opinion to grant the passport, Wallack "being one of the most favorable and of those who con—" "They do the best."

Then for many years, there was no more demand. No more notes, no more investigations. At long intervals, and from 1742, Gompel Wimphen, Hayem Birié, Samuel Jonas Lévy, all three Jews from Metz, ob— They are holding Mr. de Breteuil's passports. Mordecai Bernheim, a hardware store owner, requests and obtains authorization— sation to stay for three months 4 Paris. Sekel Moyse, a Moravian Jew; Mayer Victor, from Hamburg; Abraham David, from Berlin, enjoy of the same brief favor. Solomon Alkan, Jewish banker from Nancy — according to one account —, very fat merchant of this city — according to another —, and "representative of the Jewish community established in Lorraine", He also asks for a passport. He is equipped with the most flattering letters. Mr. Dalmas, Commissioner administrator in Nancy, and Torcy, field marshal, commanding the king's troops in this city, in They both praise it highly. "It's a par— an honest man who runs his business with all possible integrity and probity and who has the esteem and approval of all honest people. He passes through Paris, only appearing and disappearing.

We are therefore justified in saying that the Jews did not they do not stop willingly, or they hesitate to come. Berryer would also be tempted to believe it; but he pre— tends that this is only an appearance which the police She's been fooled. And the police don't want to be fooled. She is wary; for she is abominably deceived.

by two men — less than that: two Jews — which are giving him terrible blows.

One was a man named Jacob Bacharach, who was arrested In 1745, the Bastille was stormed on October 28th. Its history... history casts some light on the Jewish community lit at that time.

France was then at war with Great Britain.

Brittany. A French shipowner had just... to face, at the height of Dunkirk, an ocean liner English, who left Holland, and, among the many dispatches that had been seized there were found "in "the same package" two letters, one of which is in Hebrew was signed Bacharach, and "another one in French in counterfeit handwriting," signed Johann Reckert.
In this letter, Recert asked the King of An-England, George II, an advance of 500 louis for to be in a position to deliver him dead or alive the pretending Charles-Edouard, who was contemplating his expedition-tion of Scotland, and whose head was put up for 4 prizes.

This letter moved the Minister of State. There was the an attempt that greatly interested France, the contradicted his political views and which it was necessary
They sought to prevent the execution at all costs.
the author, and it was discovered that Reckert and Bacha-Rach and Rach were one and the same. He was a Jewish jeweler, from Metz, who was residing in Paris at the home of Mr. Le Breton, goldsmith, rue de Gesvres, at La Providence.

They tried to arrest him; he had disappeared. The police immediately began searching for her. But however clever she
If it was, Bacharach was even more so. During
For two months, she hunted him down. Aided by two women trained for this profession, one of its finest bloodhounds

- 32 -

searched the Maubué district, where a large many Jews, disrupted the housing projects in the attic, he flushed out game of all kinds and of from any source; but not from Baccharah.
arrested, due to the culprit's fault, his servant, some friends,
suppliers, creditors and debtors, hoping in this way to reach more surely the one who,
elusive, supple as an eel, it slipped away with incredible agility in the hands of the agents launched in pursuit. The campaign was threatening to be unsuccessful, the police to be shamefully beaten, when they tried to bribe the mistress
de Jacob, a Vidal woman, a toilet vendor, and married to a provisions clerk. Bacharach the teenager-
It was she who betrayed him. Discovered, he was arrested.
and, by order of the king, led to the Bastille as State criminal.

What was his crime? In reality, the case was not clearing. Was there a political agenda? An attempt to Blackmail? It couldn't be established. Papers were seized at his home; it was necessary, in order to translate them, to bring two "little Jews" from Metz who, during They remained in solitary confinement in the Bastille for eight days; but these papers, which contained only details of trade and "a joke about the mattress" Bacharach", could not inform the police about the veritable prisoner's project tables. He nevertheless remained in-closed until the end of the war between James II and Charles-Edouard.

In the early days, when he waited during the day... The days of his release seemed bearable to him. Moreover, H lived only "in the hope of seeing

— nm. |

— 33 —

"Mademoiselle Vidal," and, 4, her intention, surrendered with passion for all aspects of personal hygiene research. had a complete wardrobe brought to him: a suit of Cloth with black drugget jacket, small cloth coat dark grey with its matching dark grey drugget jacket velvet breeches or loom-made breeches, silk stockings black, shirts and collars trimmed with batiste, clasps silver, high heels, red striped handkerchiefs, "White and blue", an English-style frock coat collar...; He forgets nothing, not even a wig that... cost forty pounds and he asks, oh! "no not to shine," but because "she will spoil herself" where she is." He retained, as we can see, all his serenity. unity of mind in his cell, which he called "a "Hercules' baths," and where he dies a thousand times by day!

Soon, however, his mood darkened. The pro-the lengthening of his captivity, his absolute isolation, have dealt a terrible blow to his health. He thought he was going to die; but if he returned from this "long journey" that he has just "done on the borders of the Kingdom of "Moles," he remains gripped by a gloomy discouragement.

lying. As if he had "emerged from a stone," everything The world is abandoning it. Even Vidal has completely Abandoned. He no longer believes in her. "Every woman "illegitimate is a demon," he wrote to his brother, in Londres, and his friendship is more to be feared than the in-friendship of all men together.

Now only religion supports him. With with what fervor he observed its prescriptions of-then his entry into the Bastille! He had a meager pen-pan the entire time of his captivity; he did not drink any

- 3% - `

wine; he refined it every Monday and Thursday of each week, the day before the start of all the months, and the ten days of atonement; he "read all the days the Psalms and Mamodousse (Mamodoth) in "whole." With Easter approaching, he begs that he be given... sends "unleavened bread"; it is the grace that he considers it the greatest! "Four books of "This bread is enough." If he warns so soon, it's because "we
"He had this bread brought from Metz." He asks at the same time time "a prayer book called Godée (Hagada) and the Holy Bible, which is called Choumège (Homeich)". Then, a few months later, the approach the major religious festivals of his nation the preoccupe, and, on two occasions, he prays "very humbly" that someone bring him "a Hebrew almanac... and a prayer book called Seliko in Hebrew (Selichoth).

The regime of deprivation to which Bacharach had subjected himself if rigorously constrained was not made for to restore his health. Also "overwhelmed with pains almost-
"that intolerable," he wasted away; his stomach was dreadful-
The dilapidated building can no longer support food
From prison: he hasn't eaten in three years | If could "bring in a little bit of "Meat from the Jewish butcher shop," he would be saved!
But he has no more money; he then asks the lieutenant-the general police officer "to fix it at one crown of six francs per month" and to order that it be given to him in his pocket. Could this pardon be refused to
"He who not only gave other views for the least amount to the poor per week, but very often to just one?

- 33° -

However, months and years passed, and
These endless tortures had to end.
Peace between George II and Charles Edward was finally Signed. Bacharach, ceasing to be a formidable figure to the State,

He left the Bastille on January 11, 1749. He was there locked up for three years, two months and ten days!

Once free, he sought permission to pro-extending his stay in Paris "to recover my health, he said, as well as my few dis- effects
"Persians in this city"; but he was enjoined to leave the kingdom without delay. Meanwhile, the Vidal received from the police "fifty louis of reward for his efforts and care" in this affair, and obtained under the name of Salaville an em-Singer's job at the Opera.

This physiognomy, however quite curious, is
It pales in comparison to Assure Mayer's.
This Assure Mayer is the strangest man we know.
can imagine. What an odyssey his was! Pen-for nearly fifteen years, with a flexibility that His energy was matched only by his strength; he stood up to the police, to the lieutenant general of Paris, to the Secretaries of State, to the king himself, to remain Against all odds in Paris. Always on the road from Versailles or Fontainebleau, a frequent guest of ministerial antechambers, protected by since-holy lords, he demonstrated, in this perpetual conflict, simultaneously of arrogance and humility, of independence and submission, force and flexibility lit, by turns full of cajoling and audacity, of seductions and patient perseverance. I] falls and with astonishing ingenuity he rises again and again

w = 96 +

strong, triumphs over all difficulties, breaks all Obstacles, even in the most resolute wills, can overcome them.
and, at the very moment when one might think it has never disappeared, returns, defying some, disconcerting others by His sudden, unexpected appearance. It's Punch and Judy. beating the gendarmes and the com-the commissioner, in front of the gallery, which was filled with jubilation by this victorious resistance of a man against the police entirely.

Assure Mayer had arrived in Paris around 1745, at the very time when Bacharach was thrown into the Bastille. Postman for the Elector of Cologne, he came there "For a matter of consequence," he said, and in reality to recover advances that the prince de Conti and M. de Chavigny, Minister Plenipotentiary-the tiarius of the Kingdom in Germany, had charged him to procure for the court of France at the time of the Fribourg headquarters. He had been pursuing this for four years. approximately the amount of its debts collected when Berryer, realizing in 1749 that he did not have a passport, he ordered them to comply with the regulations. It was then that com- threatened this epic struggle in which the police were continually played, deceived by Mayer that his interests or affections held him unwaveringly attached to Paris.

The Bastille files are full of his requests, petitions, petitions, and appeals letters – some of them tender and which he signs “the information- “Tuned Mayer,” the others truly worthy and where he claims the right to remain in Paris. Successive- imprisoned for debt at Saint-Ger- Abbey hand of the Prés, imprisoned under a false accusation-

– 57 –

: flight at Grand-Châtelet, it comes out here and there head held high. He harasses the lieutenant general, the ministers and their protectors, never tiring, if he tries their patience. In 1751, he is expelled; he promises to retire to his country; he leaves, and he stops in Versailles where he brings the influences into play which he has at his disposal in the Court.
_ The police now have only one goal: to rectify this failure. She sets off in pursuit. Inspector Le Grand above all, he puts a relentless effort into it compared to his opponent. He will pay dearly. But Assure Mayer is educated. of danger. It becomes invisible, it remains elusive- sand. We look for it on the roads of Paris, of Fontainebleau, Versailles, throughout this whole area Saint-Martin, where German Jews resided preference: hunting yields nothing, and for all For a year the police conducted a fruitless investigation against him stubborn campaign. He is finally arrested, but he gets out soon to be imprisoned, he denounces the excesses of Le Grand. he had him dismissed; then, his hatred satisfied, he recom- acting on behalf of the Duke of Gesvres, he obtains from the minister a leave valid for four months. "It will be "The last one |" said Rusty.

The last one! That was underestimating Mayer, hand- especially since he is no longer being held in Paris alone- driven by his interests, but by a lively and tender attachment inspired in him by Rosette, widow of Salo- my Benjamin, who lives on rue Beaubourg, "feed the Jews." And, indeed, the deadlines

Even though it's been passed, he can still be found at his friend's feet.

Once again he persuaded M. de Breteuil, he
Mr. de Saint-Contest was moved, despite the look that

3 – 38 –

does the police; but the time comes when the ministers unanimously refuse any further extension of stay. Assured Mayer cries, laments, does?
Baron de Græwenbrock intervenes, "cy devani Minister of the Elector Palatine," who protected Rosette too: but it's all useless! "Have to signify 4 this Jew, said M. de Choiseul in 1759, of leave Paris within twenty-four hours, and if
If he doesn't obey, you'll find it pleasant to do so.
"Arrest and take him to a dungeon." But Mr. de Choiseul had not counted on his host. Mayer then did to value the "essential services" he rendered in the last war, the "negotiations" of which he was charged, his "zeal", his "loyalty"; he brings in both the Duke of Belle-Ile, the Prince of Conti, the Baron de Breteuil, M. de Guesbriant; and M. de Choi-
Alone and shaken, he resigns himself to asking the inspector
The police have additional information about Mayer.
The investigation was undoubtedly favorable to him, since he definitively won his case; and he who,
Eight years earlier, he signed "The Unfortunate Assure."
Mayer," who was now making his sound very loud quality of "Cabinet and Court factor"
"SASE of Cologne," he could continue, without Anxiety therefore arose regarding enjoying Rosette's favors. widow of Solomon Benjamin.

Alone, amidst the shock caused by the exploits of Jacob Bacharach and Assure Mayer,
The Church maintained its serenity. Concerned about its in-spiritual interests aside, she only concerned herself with the Jews for to ensure the salvation of their souls. In 1729, the vicar from Saint-Jean to Paris, Mr. Vallerot worked ardently leading to the conversion of a "Miss Schouahe,"

"Jewish," and the result seemed to fully respond to his flowers, since he had Hérault write, the November 24th, that he found his neophyte "in the the most fervent dispositions." The Ladies reli-grieving Catholic women were showing themselves

They themselves were very satisfied with this pious conquest.

Another fact, also passed over in silence by Mr. d'Estrées shows how well the Church was known favorable to these triumphs over the spirit of evil; and the
The first scheming woman who came along took advantage of it.

On June 12, 1757, at seven o'clock in the evening, a young a nineteen-year-old girl arrived in Fontainebleau and was going to knock on the door of the Sisters of Charity.
Being Jewish, she wanted to be educated in religion.
Catholic and receive baptism.

She told her story to the superior. Her mother
"named Abraham," and his father, Isaac, were originally from Metz. They had left as soon as their youth in Constantinople where they practiced the
She was born there, in the profession of jewellers.
her mother had died there; and, having become an orphan, she had embarked with her father and two others Jews to go to Le Havre and, from there, to Paris. They des-they descended to the Faubourg Saint-Germain; but she did not recalled neither the name of the street, nor the name of Pen-neither the sign, nor that of the innkeeper.

Even during their journey, she had begged her father "to leave her somewhere to do it"
"to instruct in the Catholic, Apostolic religion and "Roman in order to be baptized"; but Isaac not having responded to his request only through bad treatment.

= 10

Afterwards, she resolved to "leave" him.
having persuaded "through gifts and promises" one of the ser-boasts of the inn to facilitate his escape, she took advantage of Isaac's absence, and donned the clothes of the servant, gave him her own, and, so that this escape
if it was only known as late as possible, they bri-
They tightened the locks on the apartment. Parts in the middle
They reached Corbeil during the night before daybreak.
There, the young Jewish woman gave the servant "a louis d'or" of the gold that remained to him," and sent it back. But so that Her father lost track of her more firmly, she took the
The first path she came to led her to Fontainebleau,

Such was the surprising story that Mr. Thiéry, place-General police officer of Fontainebleau, was by the menu to his colleague in Paris, asking him-providing "clarifications" about Mrs.'s daughter Abraham and Mr. Isaac. The Superior of the Sisters of mistrust, after having kept it for five days. The Lieutenant General of Police of Paris made on These facts prompted a rigorous investigation. He questioned everyone the Jews who were in Paris; but none was unaware that a Jew from Metz had been established in Constantinople. He even added: "He is not He also recently arrived from Le Havre and there is everything instead of believing that the young Jewish woman imposed 4 Mr. Thiéry on the very name of his mother that she says Our name was Abraham. All the Israelites assumed- "They say that women do not bear this name..." What became of this "young Jewish woman"? Was she sent back? In Paris? In Metz? In Constantinople? We don't know. It is likely that the Church took pity on this misguided woman.

Charity had undoubtedly been suddenly taken from him.

it

While Jacob Bacharach and Assure Mayer don- Having so much to do with the public authorities, the Jews were showing up more regularly in Paris. At that time, Indeed, passport applications are becoming more numerous, and more pressing too; the investigations of Police reports are increasing; inspectors' reports are multiplying. clutter the offices. The Jewish Community forms, groups, and completes itself. The states erected carefully every six months, from 1755 to 1760, abound in precise information that fixes us on the origin gin, profession, the customs of the Israelites and the neighborhoods where they settle.

According to the 1755 inventory, those who were in Paris at that time people came from just about every point from Europe. We know that there were one hundred of them. ten. Nearly seventy Jews belonged to the a rite called German. Alsace and Lorraine were widely represented: twenty-five were twelve from Metz and the surrounding area Nancy, Bischeim, Rezonville, Rosheim, Mutzig, Saarlouis. Germany had some of the his family. They were coming from Mannheim, Altona, Cologne, Frankfurt, Hamburg, Furth, Anspach, Bonn. The Au-cheating and Hungary, Bohemia, the Palatinate, the Holland, Poland and England were included. also. Contrary to popular opinion accredited, the so-called Spanish and Portuguese Jews were then in the minority. There were twenty-four of them. In total: twelve came from Bordeaux, six from Espagne, four from Avignon and two from Bayonne.

From 1755 to 1759, other European countries had sent some of their nationals to Paris. A Jew from Constantinople, Raphael Isaac – was it he whose daughter took refuge with the Sisters of the Charity, at Fontainebleau? – had established a com-jewelry store, rue Saint-Julien-des-Méné-triers. It was, said Inspector Buhot, "a charla-" "An empirical tan." Joseph Lallemant arrived from Le Havre, in 1757, to "collect" sums which were owed to her. Suzana Limbourg had just... Dieuze and fed the Jews. Isaac Polack, from Limburg, was brought about by several cases that he had received "for meat supplies made to the Army of the Rhine."

Israel Abraham had landed from England with his daughter in 1756; and settled on rue Maubuée, at Legouteux, he traded in hardware. He "behaved well," but Rachel, his daughter, had deplorable conduct. She was a "libertine" who lived "debauchedly" with one of her coreligionists of Amsterdam. Barely aged fifteen years old, but "very pretty," she had managed to become attached. closely Joseph Olivier who had arrived in Paris at the same time. He came there "to learn the French language," and everything suggests that he did so there rapid progress. The choice he had made of his home in the Louvre district, frequented- The fairly high level of detail suggests that he had something good. He was staying in the Place du Vieux Louvre, at Vallée's, the wigmaker's. His conduct was good and He was given "no other reproach than for living" with Rachel, daughter of Israel Abraham."

L aL

Anna Herek Shmit – thus was transcribed her name – was even more “libertine”. This girl, mentioned in the column of “reasons for the– which Jews are in Paris” as having “no of commerce,” was a disgrace to his coreli– legionnaires. Originally from Berlin, she lived Jean–Robert street, right in the middle of the district Saint–Martin. They reported her to the police, they were pleased– bitterly complaining of his “disturbance.” They assured “Let her hang up,” said Inspector Buhot. “Every evening on Rue Saint–Martin.” She smelled so good – the despicable isolation in which they kept her that, “in order to be more authorized subsequently to continue– “To disrupt this trade,” she wanted to become a Christian. She probably didn't have the time, nor to continue his profession, nor to carry out his conversion projects, because Berryer gave the order to arrest her; she disappeared– rut to date from this moment of the list of Jews. The state of affairs on July 6, 1759 differs somewhat from the First nomenclature drawn up by Buhot. The name– The number of Germans has decreased: they are now only 42 in Paris. The Portuguese, on the other hand, have increased: there are 39 of them, from Bordeaux, Spain– gne, from Avignon and Bayonne. Six other Jews come from Holland and one from Salisbury, in An–

we ÅÅ =m

England. Hayan Provençal, whose father “has a cre– said to be considerable in trade,” is a rich Egyptian. He came from Cairo to Paris “to become to treat the eyesight,” and he placed himself in the hands of The king's ophthalmologist, Mr. Daviel. Accompanied by David Cohen, a medical doctor, born in Livorno (Italy), and of a servant, Moyse Palombo, originally from the Island of Candie, he lives on Quai des Ormes, in the quarter– Saint Paul's tier. Finally, another Italian, Raphael Ba– Chi, “a very talented miniature painter,” arriving from Turin, is domiciled on rue de Taranne, in the Saint–Germain district (1).

However small the number of Portuguese may have been, they held a large place in the Community. What– some of them made a prominent figure there: such as Manuel de Léon, from Salamanca; David Péreire and Rodrigue Péreire, his brother, “Spaniards”; Israel–Bernard de Valabrégue, from Avignon; Isaac Campos, from Bayonne; David Mendes Dacosta, “Portuguese”. Those who enjoy were of excellent reputation and the police he quoted with praise.

Others, however, gave him tablature.

(1) Here is the exact list of the countries from which the Jews came in 1755 and in 1759.

In 1755: Bordeaux, 12; Metz, 25; Spain, 6; Holland, 10; Mannheim, 2; Avignon, 4; Nancy, 4; Mainz, 1; Bischheim, 2; Pressburg, 1; Altona, 2; Franconia, 1; England, 9; Poland, 2; Cologne, 4; Saarlouis, 4; Vienna (Austria), 2; Franciort, 3; Hamburg, 4; Breutville (?), 1; Palatinate, 1; Furth, 3; Fremingue (?) in Lorlaire, 1; Bayonne, 2; Ratisbonne, 1; Meilbach, 1; Anspach, 1; Rezonville, 1; Ramburg

THERE.

– ne = © ps

– io

They were the few young people forming a group of dandies, who carried swords, made-They knew about libertines and kept girls. circle, whose core had formed in 1753, expanding said year after year. Protected by the Count of Saint-Florentin, Jacob Dalpuget the Younger, Joshua Petit and Isaac Dalpuget, readily left their "Silk" counters to run through the alleyways and show off their red heels. They soon attracted attention. them Daniel Astruc and Salomon Ravel, on which For some time now the police had been "keeping an eye". Then, as the contagion spread, Mordecai Ravel and Israel Ravel, from Avignon; Moyse Astruc, Solomon Astruc, – the most "bad subjects" of this society of devils – Semach Dalpuget, Israel Dalpuget the young and Moyse Dalpuget, from Bordeaux, came to to join "their brothers and cousins", filling Paris of their noisy and crazy escapades.

The police were clearly suffering. And what about the... people of such miserable origin made their company of quality men, they claimed- even in this capacity, imitated good manners and (Bohemia), 1; Bonn (near Cologne), 1; Rosheim (Alsace), 1; Mutzig, 4.

End of 1759: Metz, 23; Bordeaux, 29; Salamanca, 2; Holland, 6; Spain, 2; Avignon, 2; Cologne, 1; Bischheim, 4; Bayonne, 4; Altona, 2; Frankfurt, 2; Mannheim, 2; and 1 from each of the countries or the following cities: Poland, Rezonville, Kreutznach, Furth, Salisbury, Boulay; Bourkenwald (?) in Germany, Hamburg, Dresden, Cairo, Livorno (Italy), Candia, Turin, Nuremberg, Saarlouis, Berlin.

3

allowed one to murmur amiable impertinencies in the ear of women around the world! That was going too far! Also, when the lieutenant The police chief bitterly reproached them for their lavish and disorderly conduct, they contested humbly their faults and –like Joseph Astruc in 1755 – they exclaimed, with tears in their eyes: "It is True, I have worn a sword and fine clothes; but From now on I will dress more simply." And they they added with feigned naiveté: "As for the Regarding the girls' question, are we really serious about this? "Are you making such accusations against me?" The police were not to be outdone. Don't touch them: it was exile or prison. But banished. They soon reappeared; thrown into the Bishop's Fortress, They were soon released, and thanks to influential protections, they started again soon their exploits.

German Jews had less of a tendency to the pomp and the glittering exterior, which contributed no doubt 4 not to have them considered by their core-Portuguese religious figures with a kind of dedication They did, it's true, very poorly deste figure next to those we have just to name. However, they too counted on what–those faces that stood out in the open light of the humble, puny, resigned whole, that formed the German Community. Thus Solomon Benjamin and his son, from Amsterdam; Moyse Oppenheim, of Pressburg, and his brother Samuel; Isaac Nathan, from Franconia; Mardjed Jacob, from Saarlouis; Joseph Hadamard, from Metz; Aron Samuel Cahin, from Altona; Moyse Blien, from Obernai, and his son, Salomon; Moyse Isaac Spir Lévy, from Metz; Michel Goudchaux, from Nancy, "syndic of the Jews of the Lorraine Community," enjoyed a great esteem, and, by the consideration they were surrounded, raising the name so unjustly denounced by German Jews.

mew vie

These people could have boasted, however, of the example—the people of Portugal, to have in their ranks of those "crew" who dreamed of mingling to the society of great lords, dragged the sword on the streets of Paris and led a life of luxury guides: it was Goudchaux, that "incorrigible" man who We've already had the opportunity to talk. His existence—His turbulent tenure had earned him, as early as 1754, the title of exiled to Nancy. Recalled by an order of the king of November 20th of the same year, he owed to the high protections that he had managed to secure for himself by being "observed" by the police with an impatient submission, a kind of respectful awe. In 1756, We find him peacefully settled in the Temple. a place of refuge before which the pursuits were halted too indiscreet of the creditors.

In general, German Jews had a life less wide; they were also less exposed. 4 of these commercial setbacks that damaged the reputation of some Portuguese and that the war operations England against our colonies and possessions The sions made them partly excusable. If, on the other hand According to Jacob Bacharach, these falls were frequent then throughout the Kingdom, and almost natural 4 of that era. He tells us, in fact, from the Bastille where he was in 1746, that his associate in

in cae

Spain having caused him to lose more than twenty thousand books, "everyone believed" he would do, "As is fashionable, an honorable bankruptcy" by agreeing with its creditors on a 50/0 split. But he he pushed this temptation far away and refused to give them to lose "a penny". Like him, his coreligionaries — if they fall — fall discreetly, without noise and without causing any disturbance, through misfortunes "prejudicial to the public", this emotion that the police had every interest in, moreover, to exaggerate, and that led him to say unfairly: "For the good of many people, there is only too much of Jews in Paris, Bordeaux and Avignon.

VI

The Portuguese Jews, and to use the name under which they referred to themselves as: "the tribe of Judah, from whom the Messiah is to be born," meant not to be "neither confused with, nor incorporated into, the crowd of others" "Jacob's children." They had established the center of their homes and their affairs 4 an opposite point of the part of Paris where the German Jews resided.

Grouped together on the other side of the water, in the neighborhoods Saint Andrew and Saint Germain, they lived there a little scattered, preferably staying in hotels. Our little ones– The masters had taken up residence on the Quai de la Vallée, and in the streets of Batoir, Hautefeuille, Hiron-delle, Poupée and Saint-André-des-Arts. It's equal-lying in the rue Saint-André-des-Arts that came generally settle their coreligionists of Bur-deaux, from Bayonne and Avignon. They were there one fortnight in 1759: thus the Astruc – merchants those who had "good conduct"–the Vidal fathers and sons, honest merchants in "silks and jewelry-teries", Jacob de Paul, Israël Dalpuget – "the only of the family," said Buhot, who enjoys a "good reputation," – Paul's Lange finally who, after a His life had been quite tormented... by the police, it had had settled down and lived an irreproachable life, now married to Anne from Perpignan.

= | =

Israel Bernard de Valabrégue, the secretary– to be at the King's Library, was domiciled on rue Mazarine. On the Quai de la Vallée lived Some notable men: Noël de Valabrègue, from Bayonne; David Mendès Dacosta, whom we know– let us already be born; David Péreire and Rodrigues Péreire, "honest people who have merit" and were in Paris "To teach mutes how to speak." They were staying at the Hotel d'Auvergne, with Salomon Daguiar, who came from Bordeaux to "have the operation done on the fistula", and Isaac Campos, from Bayonne; manufacturer of chocolate.

German Jews – and with them those who were born in England and the Netherlands – lived the Saint-Martin district and the Saint-Denis district, to the tortuous and muddy streets, "an inextricable maze of dark passages and narrow alleyways," where, in unhealthy, dark, and cramped houses, were pressing in knows a very dense, heterogeneous population. They were mainly grouped in 1755 in the Geoffroy-Langevin, Beaubourg and Saint-Martin. Beaumarchais a number of them had established their homes in Maubouée Street, "where abominable move the most miserable and dangerous part – "reuse of the Parisian population." A few others had settled in the adjacent streets: streets of the Poirier, des Ménétriers, Simon-le-Franc, Saint-Jullien-des-Ménétriers and Montmorency.

That was where the Oppenheims, from Pressburg, had established in the "clinic trade"; the

a amom omma

= pl

Hadamard, Ory Cahen and Raphaël Ory, Abraham Hamburg – all from Metz – in the trade of silk, in rivalry with the Portuguese; Jacob Trenelle, a jeweller from Metz; Olry Lambert, de Metz, a perfectly honest man, whose son had to Paris, a very troubled existence. It is in this Daniel Brisac also lived in this neighborhood, who Daniel came from Metz "to attend a trial"; Manz, from London, "to learn the French language – "çoise", and Joseph Dalsace, from Metz, "to solicit – cite the payment for the supplies he made for the Army of the Rhine.

They occupied miserable rooms taken from Stocked up at the local shops. Carpenter, granary keeper, lemonade seller, midwife, shoemaker, ne were by no means averse to giving asylum to the Jews, for a fee. A surgeon, a goldsmith, or even a bailiff, did not refuse to to provide them with accommodation.

Only one German Jew had separated from his "Brothers." It was Cosman Léman Lévy, from Dresden, that his projects probably required him to live in the left bank. He sought to establish a manu-Calmande invoice "English style". He went Accommodation on rue Mazarine.

Far removed from this neighborhood as well as from the chosen environment
by the Portuguese, Godfried Nathan, from Hamburg, and Aron Moyse, from Harlem, both antique dealers, lived in the village of Chaillot; Salomon Benjamin,
"One of the most honest men in the world," he had his lodgings on rue Sainte-Anne; Nathan de Morhange, banker, who was now making himself "very useful",

EE o =

but which had "once caused a lot of noise"
in Paris", had established its offices on rue de l'Echelle;
Finally, Hertz Wallach, from London, was also brought in.
by the desire to "learn the French language" of-died on Quai de la Ferraille, "at the Caff du Midy".

It's in the same Saint-Martin and neighborhoods
Saint-Denis is where the German Jews are found.
in 1759; but they "extend" over a smaller area number of streets. It seems they experienced the betaking care to huddle together (1).

On Montmorency Street, and at the hotel of that name,
There then existed a fairly compact group of Jews from im-weight: Michel Goudchaux, the syndic of the Jews of Lorraine; Lechmann Nédre, from Rosheim, and Isaac Dreyfus, from Sierenz, summoned to Paris by "affairs"
res of justice"; Moyse Blien, of Obernai, his son Sa-Lomon, and Aron Mayer, from Mutzig, "ammunition suppliers" to the Bavarian army"; Mayer Aron, from Metz, who

(4) Here is the exact count of the districts and streets where the Jews lived there in 1735 and 1759: |

In 1755. – Saint-André district: 1 rue du Paon; cul-de-sac du 'Peacock, 1; Quai de la Vallée, 5; rue Saint-André-des-Arts, 5; Street
Macon, 2; rue de l'Hirondelle, 3; rue des Cordeliers, 3; rue de la Vieille-Bouclerie, 4; rue Hautefeuille, 4. – Saint-Martin district:
23 rue Maubuée; 6 rue Beaubourg; 4 rue du Poirier; rue Geoffroy-Langevin, 12; rue des Ménétriers, 3; rue Simon-le-Franc, 4; rue Saint-Martin, 6; rue Saint-Jullien-des-Ménétriers, 2; rue Neuve-
Saint-Médric, 1; rue Montmorency, 3. – Saint-Germain district:
2 rue Mazarine. – Cité district: 1 rue Sainte-Anne; bridge
Notre-Dame, 1. – Saint-Denis district: 4 rue du Petit-Lyon; rue Bourg-l'Abbé, 1; rue Saint-Denis, 4. – Palais-Royal district:

4 rue de l'Echelle; 4 rue Traversière. – Rue de Touraine (Marais), 4; rue Jean-Pain-Mollet (Grève), 2; rue du Bouloi (Saint-Eustache)

– 43 –

comes to "mind his own business"; Isaac Marcus and Alexandre Israel, from Bischheim, who established their engraving workshop.

It's a small community within the larger one. They they even have a woman at their service, Susana Limtown, which, residing at the same hotel, prepares its meals; "feeds the Jews," says the state of Buhot in 1758.

She wasn't the only one. It seems that Mau- Street fog and Beaubourg street were chosen by German Jews as the two centers of their meetings. It is in these streets, in fact, that they "meet give the license to feed as innkeepers. Innkeeper is Cerf Israël, from Herling, near Metz. He had set up his stoves on rue Maubuée, at Legutaux's, where some-

4; rue Galande (Saint-Benoît), 1; Quay de la Ferraille (Sainte-Opportune), 1.

In 1759. – Saint-Martin district: Maubuée Street, 7; Simon- Street le-Franc, 2; rue des Petits-Champs-Saint-Martin, 3; rue Saint-Martin, 7; rue Geoffroy-Langevin. 9; rue Saint-Méry, 1; rue Beaubourg, 6. – Saint-André district: rue des Grands-Augustins, 1; Quai de la Vallée, 4; rue Saint-André-des-Arts, 15; rue de l'Hirondelle, 2; rue du Batoir, 4; rue des Poitevins, 2; rue Saint-Séverin, 4; 3 rue Hautefeuille; 4 rue Poupée; 1 rue de la Parcheminerie; rue 4. – Saint-Germain district: Maza- street rine, 4; rue de Seine, 4; rue de Taranne, 1. – Palais- district Royal: 2 rue Saint-Nicaise; 2 rue Saint-Honoré. – District of Luxembourg: 4 rue des Boucheries-Saint-Germain; rue Neuve-Guillemin, 4. – Rue de la Ferronnerie (Halles), 4; rue de la Platrière (Saint-Eustache), 1; rue du Plâtre-Saint-Jacques (Saint-Benoit), 4; rue Aubry-Boucher (Saint-Jacques-de-la-Bouchcrie), 1; Temple Street (Temple), 1; Ours Street (Saint-Denis), 1; Street of the Calandre (Cité), 1; quai des Ormes (Saint-Paul), 3; at Chaillot, 2.

sh –

one of his comrades. In 1758, he established, on rue Beaubourg, a kind of branch, which he had maintained by Joseph Michel, from Mannheim. It's in the street Beaubourg also that, since 1755, Rosette, widow Benjamin, – Assure Mayer's friend, – gave "to "To eat with the Jews." She had as an assistant, in 1757, a man named Seligmann Nathan, who held positions in the house the functions of kitchen boy for the widow Benjamin, and servant for Assure Mayer.

The Jews then had a specialized butcher shop in Paris. cial. We recall that Jacob Bacharach, mt by a religious sentiment, had abstained, during the duration of his captivity, of all forbidden food by Jewish law. This harsh regime had compromised its health and, to restore it, he begged, in 1747, that one brought him meat from outside. In 1756, this The butcher shop was located on Maubuée Street and run by Elie Karlebach, from Guinglanche (?). She is not listed more on the following states, and nobody took his place.

The police who, in the early years of the The Regency had so much distrust of the Assemblies Jewish people who, according to her, were merely "retreats" "For the scoundrels," she said for a moment, looking more tolerant? For a few years we did not find– we have nothing that allows us to say that the Jews are thwarted in the celebration of their worship or in observance of their religious precepts. We saw Jacob Bacharach asking, the 1st March 1747, that he should not be refused "bread without leaven" for Passover, which began on the 25th of this months. I] was asking, at the same time, that he be taught– he brought prayer books to the Bastille, and, the On September 5, 1748, he renewed this request, adding that he would like to have "a Hebrew almanac" for the religious year which, he said, will begin, "According to the times of my nation, the 22nd of this month." Joseph Petit, a Jew from Bordeaux, who had been exiled from Paris in 1753, had returned there in 1757, and the magistrat had allowed him "to stay there for eight days..." to celebrate Easter there."

We even find the trace – however fleeting, it is true – of Rabbis among the German Jews. He There were at least two people in 1758 who present this title and that the police recorded as such. One, Simon of Guelders, lived on the street of Masons, the Treasurer's house, and, on the only state where it figure (1758), he is quite simply treated as an "adventurer" rier". Buhot does not justify his assessment. The au- It didn't even appear on the lists. It was a named Isaac Jacob, "Jewish Rabbi of Poland", who said to belong to 4 Messrs. de Potosky, lodged on Ma- Zarine, at the Hôtel de Montmorency. Thanks to a with a permit signed by Mr. de Bernis, he had gone to Ver- sailles, had easily obtained his entries into the castle, and remained "commonly in the antechamber- "the Dauphine's wife," under the pretext of at- to extend a response to a petition he had submitted. had apparently received three injuries on the boat who had brought him, and he was loudly demanding "a compensation against the officer who commanded the ship bucket." His presence moved the police: he claimed not to able to speak only German, and yet we were he =

"Almost certain" that he understood French. We told him so. at least made it clear. On September 14, 1758, one ordered him never to return to Versailles, under He risked being arrested. He left that same day for Metz.

His departure did not otherwise affect the German Jews Mands: they continued to hold their assemblies of prayers in the furnished room of one of them, until- that on the day around 1778, when they opened, on Brise- Street Miche, an oratory. The Portuguese Israelites had, _ since 1770, organized an oratory at number 3 of the street of the Saint-André-des-Arts Cemetery. We also know that, even before 1720, the Jews - German, Portuguese - gays and Avignon residents alike - had a cemetery established in the garden of an inn called of the Star, located on the Grande-Rue de la Villette, on the road that led from Paris to Senlis-Com- trap (1).

(4) See: The Committee of Charity (Paris 1886). The Cemeteries.

ee

oo 57 -

Vile

We have seen how the habits of the Israelites Germans differed from the lifestyle adopted by the Portuguese Israelites, and the influence that this diversity society of customs and characters, exerted on these two parts of the Jewish nation.

Certainly, this opposition no longer exists, today—from today that they are mixed together, confused due to all equally in the general population. But then the contrast was striking. The Jews Germans, only special and degrading laws, that @intolerables humiliations and perpetual affronts had naturally made them timid and fearful, lived depressed, withdrawn, fearful doubting everything, doubting everything, men, Phumanity, justice and laws.

On the contrary, the privileges of which the Jews... Gnols and Portuguese had enjoyed for nearly two centuries in Guyenne, either as neo-Christians, or even as Jews, the freedom that was _ left in their existence as in their transformations commercial actions had opened their minds, shaped their feelings, developed their qualities natural and given to their ways these airs of de-

— 38 —

ges who were not without flexibility and grace. Rightly proud of the prerogatives that had been granted to them were granted by several kings, excluding the Other Jews, they boasted of their origin, they proclaimed it loudly and maintained this the idea that they had nothing in common with the "Tu-desque." The day will come when, repudiating all affinity with the German Jews, they will force Voltaire, who attacks the Jewish race and encompasses the whole in a similar feeling of contempt, to retract in what His hurtful accusations affect them. This distinction— tion between the two portions of the Jewish nation will intensifying further; the Revolution itself not banishing it will manage nothing; so much so that Napoleon I, also seduced by so many attractions, will in turn proclaim their superiority moral integrity by publicly setting them as examples to German Jews.

We find in this regard in the Archives of the Bastille, the trace of a very curious incident which The hero embodied all the qualities perfectly.

all the tendencies of the Portuguese Israelites in this era, and that they inherited a little from their brothers of the southern shores of Europe.

It was in 1742. France had not yet declared war on Great Britain and already, on all the seas where they met, the buildings
The English rushed after the French ships.
The alternative weapons options fascinated people's minds.
The English, residing in Paris, boasted of pride—
They celebrated the successes of their fleets. Some, at the forefront of whom was a man named Ponell, supposedly gentlemen, usually met on the street

Dauphine, at Baptiste's café, opposite the Comédie
French, and there the events were being discussed aloud—comments, without worrying about the ruffles that their exuberance—rancidity could cause. No one had yet explained with them, when a Portuguese Jew, Jacob de Souza, lodged "rué de la Comédie, au café de Procope, vis-à-vis the Comédie française," and who frequented Baptiste's café, and decided to show himself less accommodating.

On June 4th, the rumor spread that the English had just seized Cartagena. While this news caused consternation among the Frenchman Ponell could not contain his joy, and, "with infamous and insolent expressions, had Paudace to despise the French Nation and Spain," his ally. That day, Souza said nothing; but the next day—morning, as reading the Gazettes provoked the same exaltation among these Englishmen, our hero undertakes them, the party of the France and Spain," and, passing words
He soon put his plan into action, delivering a mighty blow with a stick on Ponell's head. "The blow was so well executed."
and resounded from so far away," Souza wrote to M. de Mar-town, by telling him the story, on September 25th, that "if a similar blow had been struck on the head" of an ox, he could have been stunned. But as the
The English have hard heads... this blow hurts him only the top of the forehead.

Ponell immediately flew into a rage, drew his sword, and without giving his opponent time to shoot
Her own, in order to defend herself, rushes at him.
The English company surrounds Souza, threatens him, continues; and there is our man in the hands of these English, like sheep under the knife of the "Butcher." All is lost. Souza, overwhelmed by the number, will succumb; but he did so much and so well with the stick and the hands that he managed to seize Ponellau col and the terrace.

Jacob de Souza was quite proud of this "war". that he had done to an Englishman "to support Phon- "Friend of France and Spain." "I don't know, he ingeniously wrote to the lieutenant general of Police, if Your Grace has been informed of this action"; but Mr. Amelot, minister and secretary of State, but Mr. Ambassador of Spain, "who has interested in my favor"; but Mr. the Duke of Gram- mount "by whom I have the honor of being known"; but Marshal Duke de Broglie, "from whom I owe my passport," they know all the details. Come on! "The French nation... had the satisfaction of seeing that a The Jew had the courage to beat the gold- pride of this Englishman; he will be remembered for a long time. Paris will use this correction and it will serve as an example to the English... We will also remember for a long time- time in Paris for such a brave, such a generous action use on the part of a Portuguese Jew who, without interest and without any intention of being employed in the service of Roy willingly sacrificed his life to uphold the honor of the French nation and Spanish."

Souza, whom "everyone congratulated" on sun action, initially felt only immense satisfaction of having "dishonored" an Englishman and of having in At the same time, France was saved. But to this feeling ol

|

natural to the triumphant one soon came to mingle a A grain of worry. Ponell, furious at having "been beaten by the hand of a Jew," he seeks, he wants to reach and avenge "his tarnished reputation." If this Englishman was a man to attack me face to face, he said

Jacob de Souza, I could defend myself, no.
with my stick, as I have already done (because this mon-(Sire has a very hard head), but with the tip of my sword. He fears an ambush, for "in this
In big cities there are people who, for money, wound and murder the world"; then the English are "vindictive and carnivorous." Who knows if Ponell will not hide "at night, at the corner of a rush", and,
"As a traitor," he will not pass his sword through him.
of the body?

This unpleasant prospect torments him, troubles him
His mind is bothering him and preventing him from going about his business. He
He then reminded Mr. de Maurepas that he had "supported the honor of France and Spain at the expense of his life and interests," and asks him to do report of his actions to the Council so that he may be grasatisfied with his zeal. Isn't it just, isn't it "natural-turel" that he receive from the Court of France "a small compensation" when, for her, he "sacrificed" his "life"? He hopes for this "royal reward";
But if he does not obtain it, he will console himself by re-
before, at the first opportunity, the insults do to the French nation and by spreading for it down to the last drop of his blood.

Kings are ungrateful. All he obtained was,
On October 8th, a hearing for Mr. de Maurepas, who sought to reassure him by assuring him that Ponell

4 – 62 =

would "never harm him." But Souza has
He had lost all his confidence. He's going to put his affairs in order.
business, leaving Paris, and going to live elsewhere. "It's "the safest way I must take," he wrote. 4
October 10th. However, he did nothing of the sort and, following Heeding the advice of Mr. de Maurepas, he remained "wise" for to be able to "stay in Paris".

– 63 --

village

A taste for elegance, wealth, and grandeur

deurs, appeared among the Portuguese Jews until in their choice of professions. At the time when what concerns us, they did not practice, like many others German Jews who were forced there, from these states humble and vile, which simultaneously discredited man and the corporation. They are not seen hawking their wares. peddling odds and ends and leaving in the "caf-" "Fes" are "shreds of their reputation." Most have a marked preference for trade of objects that can flatter the vanity of the world, its a predilection for luxury, adjustments and the adornment, judging – perhaps not without reason – that | the beauty and value of the goods contribute to improve the merchant's condition.

The "silk trade" was of particular interest to them. In 1755, fourteen of them were engaged in this kind of activity. of business, and in 1759 we find twenty-two of them. Some also included selling jewelry. All originally from Bordeaux, Bayonne and Avignon, they had settled indifferently in the . streets of the Saint-André district. Salomon Petit had 8a boutique rue de la Vieille-Bouclerie; Christmas of

– 04 –

Valabrègue, Quai de la Vallée, "at the Tortoise"; Moyse Perpignan, rue Saint-André-des-Arts; Israel Dal-Puget, rue Hautefeuille, at the Hôtel de Poitiers; Aron de Castro Bernard, rue de l'Hirondelle, at the Hôtel de Reims; Léon Ravel, at the Hôtel de Rouen; and Jonatas Carcassonne, at the Hôtel d'Anjou, rue Mâcon. Alone, Aron Mendes Quiros, "Spaniard from Bordeaux", had established his counter near the Palace-Royal, rue Traversière, at the Hôtel de Malte.

The maritime enterprises of the Jews of Bordeaux allowed them to indulge themselves, in a particular way also linked to the trade in colonial goods. In Paris, there were six of them, and they were mostly marchocolate makers or manufacturers. Buhot even says of One of them, Aron Lopés, from Bayonne, whom "works "Chocolate," on Rue Mazarine. It's on Rue Mazarine. also that Manuel's factory was installed of León, of Salamanca. Isaac Campos and Dacosta, Quai de la Vallée; Aron de Castro, Rue du Plâtre-Saint-Jacques; and Moyse Campos, rue de la Calandre, were more involved in trade.

If German Jews had only rare representing in the elegant and indulgent manner of commerce

They were not well-suited to large enterprises, they could... to flatter, however, to have, in their ranks, honorable merchants and skilled industrialists trials. Some of them were talented artists.

Indeed, they were not all, as one would tend to believe it, hardware merchants, haberdashers
or secondhand dealers, antique dealers or street vendors, frequenting
The cafes. There were many of them, it's true; but _ among them were brave and honest people

– 63 –

people, known and identified as such by the police!

Among the industrialists and manufacturers of importance, we have already named Cosman
Léman Lévy, the manufacturer who came from Dresden.
Cerf Nathan, a Polish Jew, had a business liqueurs, rue Saint-Martin; Philippe Samuel, of Altona, a gemstone shop, rue Geoffroy-Lan-Gevin; and Mayer Hadamard, a draper's business
Peries, rue des Cordeliers.

Four others, from Alsace and Lorraine, had established banking houses, rue Beaubourg, rue Saint-Julien des Ménétriers and rue de l'Echelle.
They were led by Jacob Goldschmidt of Nancy—the very same one who, in his capacity as trustee of German Jews in Paris, must have been so intimate linked to the Jewish cemeteries affair of 1770 to 1780 —; Jacob Lévy, from Bischheim; Moyse Isaac Spir
Lévy, from Metz, and Nathan from Morhange.

German Jews finally had some penitentiary very, engravers, jewelers, draftsmen.

Among them is Joseph Goudechaux, from Nancy, who "works in the jeweler's trade"; Ra-Phael Bachi, from Turin, the miniature painter which we talked about and which was appreciated as much for his conduct as well as for his talent. In 1758, Moyse Levi and Mayer Levi, from Amsterdam, "work in ~ pencils"; Philippe Samuel and Abraham Salomon, d'Altona, "very skilled stone engravers" are "Honest people of great talent."
the example of Isaac Marcus and Alexander Israel, of Bischheim, established — as we have said — at the Hotel de Montmorency, Israel Jacob and Wulfairchel (Wulf

4.

Herschel?), Joseph and Samuel Abraham, all the four from Hamburg; Tobia Baer from Berlin, and Samuel Noah, from London, also distinguished himself, in the art of engraving.

|
|
|

|
|
|

IX

This table lists the professions practiced by Jews German is significant. It shows once of how much more the history of the Jews, as it is written by some, is more of a legend than of History itself. How many times indeed have we It is not said that throughout history the Jews – the Jews have gone– especially mends, repugnant to trades, do not indulge– were only found at flea markets or banks! However– and here are industrialists, traders of a spotless reputation; these are men who deliver to manual laborers, who cultivate the arts, which finally impose themselves through their respectability, through their work, esteem and consideration more hostile.

And at what time did this "nation of secondhand clothes dealers" emerge? "of usurers and swindlers," she reveals herself in this light. day? In this eighteenth century where, for four– For thirty years, the criminal passions of Louis XV have such a disastrous influence on the morals of the Court, of the Bourgeoisie and the People; where consciences become corrupted, where the notion of honor is altered truth and duty, where bad faith creeps in in life as in commercial transactions ciales, and where everyone is detached from things healthy and virile appears as the obvious prodrome tooth of an impending upheaval.

Certainly, we do not claim that the Jews of Paris under Louis XV were all irreproachable. But consider, as you read through this study, the dreadful the condition in which they are placed, the contempt that their status as Jews alone is sufficient for the most upright. same, the mistreatment that some of them inflict, the insults with which others heap them, everyone's mistrust, and one might be surprised although, in such a depraved environment, at a time so troubled, nothing could have diminished these domestic virtues— ticks and industrious than their enemies themselves could never have failed to recognize.

This is the conclusion that emerges from the reading the Bastille files.

On the contrary, when Mr. d'Estrées, seeking a conclusion to his work, produced the report of a poliser who regretted the time when the Jews "ris— were about to be hanged between two dogs at the door of the Synagogue," he does not seem to approve of the rigorous measures applied to an entire class Men more unhappy than unworthy? In rapping that "one of the most powerful sovereigns of the Europe is now seeking to erect a barrier to "The Semitic invasion," doesn't he tend to say that these Were the measures fair, or even insufficient?

Let him be fully convinced that a sovereign is not greater than tolerance, however excessive it may be. He ennobles himself by educating his people; he humbles himself by degrading them, where then could the enslaved man

= r la —

HAS

— 69 —

to draw upon these scruples, these delicacies, which are the characteristic of a civilized society? When at On the contrary, as a citizen and free, he becomes equal to others men, then he moralizes, he refines himself, rises to the height of his new condition, and turns with

FIFTH AND FINAL PART

THE JEWS IN PARIS

SINCE THE 6TH CENTURY

BY

>

LEON KAHN

Deputy Secretary of the Jewish Consistory of Paris

WITH ENGRAVINGS

AND PRECEDED BY A PREFACE

OF

Mr. ZADOC KAHN

Chief Rabbi of Paris

ENS

PARIS

A. DURLACHER BOOKSTORE

8308, RUE LAFAYETTE

1889 fe

HARVARD

UNIVERSITY

LIBRARY

SEP 5 1966

RE er aa., és (

Digitized by Google

PREFACE

After publishing a series of monographs—principles on the institutions of the Community Mr. Léon Kahn, a Jewish resident of Paris, is crowned today his interesting studies by a overall history of the Community itself even. Thanks to him, the reader was able to follow along. step by step the gradual development of our schools, from our Charity Committee, from our ceu—patronage and apprenticeship programs, finally of our mutual societies, so fortunately multiplied. The new volume that we—Vons, with his valiant pen, allows us to embrace at a glance the main incidents which have marked the already centuries—old existence of our Community, the difficulties against which She had to struggle, the relentless progress that she has accomplished, the situation prospers which it rose through the efforts of com—combined with all those who have been in charge of to preside over its destinies. The painting that unfolds before our eyes in the present volume is worthy of attracting the attention of friends of Judaism. By rising again, under vivid colors, the past that is behind us, it gives us valuable lessons for the present, and inspires us for the future this contains a fruitful engagement which is the guarantee of new efforts and further improvements. The historian of the Jewish community of Paris could not forget that if it does not count Although it lasted a century, it nevertheless older traditions that go back much higher, right up to the heart of the middle age and even beyond. For a long period extending from the origins of the monarch—Frankish chie until the reign of Charles VI, the Israelites form in Paris, except for a few interruptions, a large community that holds its rightful place in the history of Judaism, which has caused quite a stir, by social activity and religious science. Mr. Léon Kahn was right to dedicate the first part of his volume at this primitive community of Paris, so sadly stopped during its development by The Edict of Expulsion of 1394. It does not displease us.

II. PREFACE

not to attach ourselves, across the centuries, to our French ancestors of the Middle Ages and of

PREFACE

to reconnect the links of a violin tradition broken ment.

Certainly, things are what they are.
are, and no human or divine power
This would not change the facts that have already been established.
to the results achieved and already distant from history-
It is permissible, however, to imagine a another direction given to events; 11
it is permissible to regret that such and such a caa catastrophe, fraught with consequences and which could have been avoided, but was not by the
The fault of men and the violence of their stepsions. Why was not something given to Judaism?
French to peacefully continue on his way on French soil instead of being rejected abruptly outside the borders of our country? We readily dream of a Community

Jewish community of Paris, developing degree by degree

degree with the city itself, the Israelites Parisians increasingly involved in the lives of the people
tional and, while retaining their individuality duality, their beliefs and their habits religious women, embracing all the interests of the common homeland, speaking its language, working to enrich its literature, sharing its glories and its miseries, its struggles and its victories, in one word, becoming one with their companions triotés of the dominant religion. Instead of e

-

enert *

er ee 2 ee aa RE en A EANA:

IV – PREFACE |

If it had been dated yesterday, French Judaism would have thus thrown itself deep roots in the soil; it could claiming a respectable antiquity, and its The action would not have been without honor for him, nor without benefit to the general prosperity of the country. It's a beautiful dream, but just a dream. The narrow and short-sighted policy of what-Some of the kings of France, the passions popular, exalted to the point of intolerance, brought to their peak by the irresistible movement The Crusades' agenda did not allow it became a reality. The Jews of Paris, like those of the kingdom of France, had to take Once again, the path of exile, enduring all the pain and all the regrets of this A lamentable exodus.

France, at least, knew how to repair it nobly. his wrongdoing and redeeming an inhumane measure which only too clearly explains the state of mind at Middle Ages and fatal prejudices, the effect of which The fact was being felt everywhere. The declaration of human rights, the solemn abolition of all the exceptional laws were revenge of justice, humanity and tolerance. Sheltering under the protection of equal rights for all stemming from the French Revolution, the Com-The Jewish community of Paris was able to reconstitute itself. and begin new destinies. Yes, as always happens, his beginnings were painful, his first steps uncertain and hesitant- For her, freedom was the best of all guides and the most powerful of stimulants. The There is indeed a great contrast between the point starting point and arrival point, and the hundred years that have passed since the resolutions from the Constituent Assembly have not not been lost by the Community of Paris.

PREFACE V

Does France have reason to regret having been Generous, liberal, fair? The forecasts and the hopes of those who were, in 1789

and later, the eloquent apostles of rights of humanity, the enthusiastic defenders and persevering in the legality of all religions
Have they been confirmed by experience?
In short, how did French Jews show themselves?
worthy of their civil and political emancipation by becoming faithful and useful servants of their homeland in any direction of Human activity? To these questions, which we let us confidently place ourselves before public opinion republic, Mr. Kahn's book responds with a Perfect clarity. He lays out the facts, without anything exaggerate and don't disguise anything; he tells the story of the Community without any bias, as it appears from the authentic documents

VI PREFACE

ticks that he was lucky enough to have under the hand and which he skillfully put to good use.
Every reader, free from preconceived opinions, will be able to draw a conclusion from this clear and truthful; this conclusion, we do not fear it—Let's not get angry.

We are well aware that the Jews have their detractors, and there is no shortage of them.
no opportunity to overwhelm them with their injures and their calumnies. Sometimes with a passionate fervor, typical of sectarians and unscrupulous in her choice of weapons, tanearly on with a scientifically pretentious air fiques, which poorly conceal the poverty of the thought and the empire of vulgar prejudices and pierced a thousand times over, they spread over our — account of inventions as fanciful as o-divine. If it depended on a few writers vain, more noisy than serious, France would come to humbly make his mea culpa for having repudiated, in front of the world,
any idea of religious intolerance and injustice social tice, recognized to all its children the .
The same rights and the same duties. And of Such excitements occur on the eve of the Centenary of the Revolution! Singular manion to prepare to celebrate the most glorious Birthdays! As if that wasn't enough, in the opinion of these great patriots, that the France had suffered in recent years a material defeat that we deplore bitterly, they would still like to inflict on him a moral defeat a thousand times more humiliating and even more disastrous! It would be easy to answer all these questions... malicious sinuations, to all these vain com- photographs gathered from various places, to all these Violent or treacherous accusations. But what about them? Okay? The facts are there to answer, and this An answer is better than the best sentences tours. We believe that Mr. Léon Kahn by simply grouping the facts that fill- senses the existence of the most considerable in France, by exposing the progress of its institutions of all kinds as well as the share taken by the Israelites of 19th century to the general movement of civilization lisation and to the major interests of our country, a not only satisfying a legitimate curiosity, highlighted an important period of our religious history, he also contrasted a victorious refutation of the slanderers of French Judaism and brought a document which is not without value to the history of the Revolution French revolution and its consequences – general and social issues. Therefore, we are grateful to him.

VIII PREFACE

of the undertaking he successfully completed with commendable perseverance, and we ex- Let us hope that the readers will not fail him- queront pas.

Paris, November 2, 1888.

Zavoc Kaun,
Chief Rabbi.

Mr. Zadoc-Kahn. –

THE JEWS IN PARIS

PART ONE

CHAPTER ONE

Under Childebert. – Attempts at conversion by Chilperic. – The Jew Priscus. – State of the Community of Paris has this era. – Charlemagne and Louis the Pious. – The Jews and Charles the Bald. – The quarters they inhabit under Philip I. – Flourishing state under Louis the Fat. – Murder of the child Richard and persecutions. – Cruelty of Philip-Augustus. – Exile. Reminder. – Their dwellings in 1198. – The Jews of Paris around 1204. – Note on the bonds deposited by several Jews as security for their residence.

If we are to believe the historians, there were Jews in Paris at the time of the invasion of the Barbarians (1). Our first kings would have found some at least a fairly large number who had been there—laughed at and which then occupied the middle of the city, according to Commissioner Delamare (2), a whole street which had retained the name of Jewish Quarter; they also extended into two other streets which

(1) V. Treatise on Police, by Commissioner Delamare, II, Vol. III. – Graetz, History of the Jews. Teunga translation by Moses Bloch, IH, 267–8.

(2) Delamare, IL t. HI.

2. THE JEWS IN PARIS

They led from there to the Palace. They had even a synagogue in 582 (1).

An edict issued by Childebert in the 6th century, and returned to Paris (2), suggested that they could—were expected to be numerous. But this is only one hypothesis. This prince forbade them to appear in public from the holy season of the Passion to Easter, — according to some, because “their presence was .

an offense against Christianity (3)"; – according to the others, because it was feared that the Jews would pro-
They were waiting for the moment when the streets were deserted.
and the churches full to carry out some evil
I have a purpose.

Regardless of these two versions, it is certain that until then the existence of the Jews had flowed milk without disturbance in Paris and that they occupied there even a certain rank. The responsibilities they were given clothed and that the councils strove to en-lever (4), the cordial relations they had with Christians and that the Church ordained to its faithful to break with the freedom with which they exercised their religion, testifies to their privileged statusrable in Paris until the 6th century. But at this

At that time, a feeling of hostility arose against them.

a kind that will manifest itself with ever-increasing force growing and which, inspired by the Church, will gain successively the kings, the lords and the people.

(1) This appears to result at least from the interpretation, by Adrien de Valois, from the text of book v1 of Gregory of Tours (Moise Schwab. 1866).

(2) Graetz, Ill, 269.

(3) Ibid.

(4) Conciliorum Coll, Labbé

e

e

THE JEWS IN PARIS 3

Already Chilperic seeks through discussion a ga-to win souls for nascent Catholicism, and he forced to baptism those whom his arguments Theological arguments cannot convince.

Gregory of Tours left us the account of one of these controversies or, despite the pressing intervention-tion of the learned bishop and Chilperic, their advers-Saire refused to "acknowledge the truth" (1). He This concerns Priscus, a Jew from Paris, who was at the court of the king, and would have been, around 555, monetary Chalon-sur-Saône (2). A victim of this passion religious and his attachment to Judaism, he he paid, first for his freedom, then for his life, his disbelief. Thrown into prison "so that what he did not did not willingly agree to believe it, we told him
"ftt at least believe in spite of himself" (3), he was assassinated in 582 by a converted Jew named Phatir.

Very few, according to Gregory himself, allowed themselves-know how to genuinely touch with faith; but between those who were receiving baptism, some – like Phatir – employed their native fervor health against their former brothers, and among the others "there were many including holy water"
"Washed only the body and not the heart" (4).

The historical page of Gregory of Tours does not provides no data on the importance of the Com-Jewish community in Paris at that time. What we
What is known at least is that Jews practiced there

(1) Gregory of Tours, Hist. Francorum, lib. VI, cap. 3 and 11.
~ (2) See, regarding Priscus, the Jew Priscus, Revue des Etudes Jewish, X, 237, by Isidore Loeb.

(3) Gregory of Tours.

(4) Ibid.

4 THE JEWS IN PARIS

important functions (1). They strengthened the tolls and fulfilled the duties of toll collectors of taxes. One of them, named Solomon, held, at the beginning of the 8th century, a post seemed-blable at the Glaucin gate in Saint-Denis, where the Jews
moreover, they held the fair very brilliantly.
Landit, instituted by Dagobert (2).

Their activity and intelligence earned them a renewed hostility on the part of the Church. For her, the freedom of the Jews, their preponderance, could only lead to the fall of Christianity, and the priests wanted to save their religion: they persecuted the Jews, and found among the last Merovingian kings of the allies confident, and fully ready to assist them in this task. But while Clothar II forbade Jews to exercise any superior function or to serve in the army, and that his son Dagobert manifested also harbors a violent hatred for them (3), Charlemagne, however zealous he was for the Church, did proof of great impartiality towards them, of a great deal of kindness and humanity: the mission, which he entrusted to the Jew Isaac at the court of

Caliph Harun al-Rashid, and the confidence that he had as his doctor, a Jew named Faragut prove the value he placed on their talents, their activity.

Louis the Pious, in turn, treated them

(1) Boissi, Diss., t. 11; Baenage, Hist. des Juifs, t. IV; Gesta Dagoberti regis, ch. XXXIII.

(2) Boissi, Diss., t. 11; Basnage, Hist. des Juifs, t. IV; Gesta

Dagoberti regis, ch. XXXIII.

(3) Grazet, IHI, 271.

THE JEWS IN PARIS 6

of the broadest tolerance, they protected against the hostility of the Barons and the clergy (1), granted them significant financial immunities, they handed them over in possession of the charges that had been entrusted to them raised, forbade them to be disturbed in the practice of their religion, and henceforth fixed at Sunday the fairs which had previously been held Saturday (2).

All these advantages were not meant to... to share the Church's sympathy with the Jews. It does not could observe without envy the credit they had at Court, and she had to do everything she could to ruin him.

Charles the Bald nevertheless continued, as his father, to treat them favorably. He had several in his service; one of them, named Judah, whom he called Judah his loyal servant, was his banker; Another, Zedekiah, was his physician (3). Favorite of the king, this one passed among the people for wizard and sorcerer. The marvelous tales (4) that we debited his account and they lost it. He was accused by the clergy of the death of Charles the Bald and found guilty of poisoning him.

At any other time, the Jews of Paris would have felt the backlash of such an event serious. So, they weren't worried. The bou- The uprisings of that era easily explain- the oblivion into which they are left. The end of the second race, in fact, is an inex- chaos applicable where everything becomes blurred: the incursions of

(4) Graetz, HI, 337.

(2) Ibid. .

(3) Ibid., 342.

(4) Taken from the Chronicle of Hersange.

6 | THE JEWS IN PARIS

Normans, the decline of royal power, the emerging preponderance of the great vassals, throws immense turmoil into the kingdom. En- Having developed during these major changes, the Jews disappear and their trace is never found again in Paris during the early days of feudalism. The 11th century itself passed without it being done no mention of them. Treated then as foreigners who are only passing through the territory From France, they live unknown and happy in silence which surrounds them, now housed (1090) in a place called Champeaux, in the middle of "the small "tall, poorly built houses that were constructed" "on purpose and composed a number of "narrow, winding, dark streets, closed off from "Doors on all sides (1)". |

Thanks to the darkness in which she was living at the time, the Jewish population of Paris was able to develop without hindrance. It had a certain under Louis the Fat importance. At that time, in fact, she reconciled the kindness of everyone and particularly that of the clergy; it is among the corporations that press before Pope Innocent II at his entrance into Paris, and raised the Books as he approached of the Law; finally, the Synagogue, which has a large number of dogmatic writers, shines with a vivid brilliance, and holds its rightful place in this century which illustrates R. Tam in Orléans, Raschi and R. Meir in Troyes, according to the report of Benjamin of Tudela, she indeed contained "disciples of Sages" who had "no equals on all the earth",

(1) V. Delamare and Sauval, History of Paris.

THE JEWS IN PARIS. E

night and day applied to the study of Law, hospitalities towards strangers, affectionate and fraternal for their coreligionists (1).

This relatively favorable condition could not have been going to be long-lasting: the reign of Louis the Young man came to cast his shadow there. Benign at first, this prince had taken only the following actions towards the Jews . measures necessary to prevent those who had converted to return to their first belief (2); Pope Alexander even complained that he granted them too much freedom in his kingdom, when the Jews of Paris were suddenly accused of the murder of a child named Richard (3). Popular fury, stirred up by the Church, gave himself free rein; some were plundered and others others, and the greatest number died on the stake, atrocious punishment for an imaginary crime.

This bloody episode reopened the era of persecution. violent actions were temporarily closed. The Community The Parisian nautical system had escaped the massacres in which the Jews of Rouen, Orléans, Rame-rupt had met their deaths; she was not supposed to be spared by Philip Augustus.

Nurtured from childhood in the faith of men-dreams and calumnies spread against the Jews, his aversion to them was further aroused by "the accounts from various lords who told him that The Jews of Paris used to slaughter all the years, on Holy Thursday, a child of Christians, that several, convinced of this cruelty, had

(1) See Benjamin de Tudèle, edit. Acher, I, 164-5.

(2) Year 1144. D. Bouquet, Recueil des hist. de Fr., t. XXVI, 8.

(3) Historians of France, XXV, 768.

-

8 THE JEWS IN PARIS

et$ burned under the previous reign and that one of these innocent victims had been burned like martyr under the name of Saint Richard" (1).

We can add to this that the most fake noises were focused on the importance of their wealth. And so To believe these assertions, "half of the Paris region" belonged to them" (2); served by servants
As Christians, they had the bourgeoisie as their debtors.
The soldiers, the peasants. Their claims were expanding.
everywhere, in cities, villages and suburbs towns; a large number of Christians had
They were expropriated by them due to debts;
held debtors captive in their homes as in prisons; finally, they had objects sacred as a pledge, and they took pleasure in them profane (3).

If such acts warranted severe repression,
Such a considerable fortune offered too much a fine prey so that no one would try to get their hands on it.
to counter, and at the same time to punish the alleged guilty. Philip II did not fail. He was not rather sacred than he seized their gold, their silver and all their furniture. Afterwards he had them put in prison and did not leave until they had him
He gave them 15,000 silver marks. Then he chased them away.
of France (1182), confiscated their lands and their houses and exempted all his subjects from paying them the debts they owed, provided that they They gave him a fifth of it. Each one

(4) V. Felibien.

(2) Rigord, from Gestis Philippi-Augusti (Hist. de Fr.).

(3) Ibid.

THE JEWS IN PARIS 9

was so joyous that that year was called the year of the Jubilee (1).

Their return should not be the signal of a Less joy. The war against the Flemish and the English were creating a great need for ar-Gentleman and Philippe were deprived of resources necessary. The Jews offered them to him. They were recalled (1198); but they did not find their synagogues that had been converted into churches or in chapels (2), nor the forty-two houses of which, it seems, they were the owners and that Phi-Lippe-Auguste had sold them to the Pelletiers in 1183 from Paris (3).

They returned to occupy the neighborhoods that exile had taken from them had been forced to abandon. The artisans lo- They were heading towards the market hall, in the streets of La Poterie. of the Second-hand shop, the Shoe shop, Jean de Beausse, the Shoemaker's, and the grain market. All these streets, as well as this market hall, are called then the Juiverie and the Jewish quarter.

In Sauval's time, they ended, on one side, in a triangle towards the leek market; on the other side, they led to the cooperage, opposite the pillars of Les Halles. All the houses that border them were small, tall, poorly made, "seeming-"blabes to the Jewish quarters of Rome, Metz, Avignon."
All these streets, in the 11th century, were closed to

(1) V. Sauval.

(2) Review of Jewish Studies, no. 6. Catalogue of related documents to the Jews during the Middle Ages, by Ulysse Robert, p. 211.

(3) The houses in question were located in the streets which later took the name of Old Drapery Street and street de la Pelleterie. V. Delamarre and Sauval.

4.

two ends with large doors that we called the gates of the Jewish quarter. They were not demolished. that under Francis I* at the same time as the doors that still remained from the old enclosure of Paris, completed by Philip Augustus.

The wealthiest among the Jews then occupied the two sides of the street that ran through the middle of the city, which, at one end, was attached to the Petit-Pont, and, from the other, at the Notre-Dame bridge. An act of Philippe-Augustus, dating from around 1204, gives their names. There were 40 of them: 25 were from Ile-de-France, and 15 from Normandy (1):

They were, from France: Moses of Sens; – Salomy Crossus of Dorb; – Deodat de Verneuil; – Deodat of Brai; – Elias, his brother, – Joce Doain; – Isaac of Gonesse; – Fautinus of Pontoise; – Benamta Catus of Mest (2); – Ursellus of Mantes; – Isaac Anglais de Gournay; – Bandit de Senlis; – Leo de Pierrefonds; – Judas de Montlhéry; – Bien-li-Vienge d'Etampes; – Morel de Yentown (3); – Peret d'Orléans and Jacob de Falaise; – Joce Daihel of Orléans; – Leo of Sacro Cesare Ditur (4); – Vivant, son-in-law of Crescent, of Montargis; – Leo Crosse of Melun; – Moreme of

(1) Catalogue of the Acts of Philip Augustus, by Leopold De-

Lisle (Paris, 1856). The play is in Latin. We are translating the names. Most of them are found in the Roll of Jews of Paris in 1296-1297, by Isidore Loeb. – Review of Jewish Studies, No. I, p. 61 et seq.

(2) Mr. Léop. Delisle supposes that the indication is incorrectly reported and that there should be Bona vita Catus de Aneto – Good life Cate de Anet (Eure-et-Loir).

(3) Yenville = Janville (Eure-et-Loir).

(4) Perhaps, according to Mr. Léop. Delisle, for Biturencis.

THE JEWS IN PARIS 11

Chinon; – Isaac de Perrière de Saumur (1); – Samuel, his brother.

From Normandy: Brunus filius Bonenita (2) Rothomagi; – Diex le Saut Aries (3); – Bonenic (4) of Caudebec; –Abraham of Mostervillari; –Judas son of Longueville – and Judas Gendre; – God– the Dortem Cross of Pontellomari (5); –Jacob of Bonneville–sur–Touques (6); – Jacob (de) Lisieux; – Morel de Falaise; – Dex–le–Croisse de. Caen; – Joce Doan de Burgonn...; – David Tor Tipel of Brionne; – Moses of Elbeuf; – Cressant from Bernay.

Once back in Paris, the Jews enjoyed a certain tolerance until the end of this reign prince. Some of them, however, had to– while committing to not straying far from the lands of king. A "note of the bonds deposited by several Jews as guarantors of their residency dence (7) » (circa 1204), mentions the names of these Jews, the required quota and the oath sworn by each one on the "roole", or Scroll of the Law. These are :

Jacob de Molinz, for VIII pounds (eight– twenty); – Segnore, XL: – Diex–la–Beneie, LX; – Bonnevie de Hodenc (8), X; – Helias de Or–

2

(1) Petraria of Salmuro. Comm. de Bagneux, caut. from Saumur, (Maine–et–Loire).

(2) Bonenita for Bone vita – Bonnevie, from Rouen.

(3) Perhaps Arcis.

(4) Good life, no doubt.

(5) For Ponte–Aldemari – Pont–Audemer.

(6) Calvados.

(7) Catalogue of Acts.,,, Léopold Delisle.

(8) Oise,

12 THE JEWS IN PARIS

beak, XXX(1); – Samuel, L; – Leo de Ben, XV; – Dex Aie and his brother, LX; – David of Guide–

sori (2), XX; – Alive, X; – Ursellus, XX; – Bonnievie jeune, XXX; – Bele Assez, XV.

(4) Calvados.

(2) Gisors.

CHAPTER II

The conversions brought about by Louis IX. – Religious controversies gious. – Judah Sir Leon. – Nathan! Official. – R. Jechiel.
– Famous controversy in 1240. – Status of Jews in Paris
In the 13th century. – The yellow badge. – A new mark of infamy.
imposed by Philip the Bold. – Rigorous measures of this prince. – The Jewish quarters of that era. – Property of the Communauté, – The Jews are confined to the outskirts of Paris.
– Philip the Fair. – Profanation of the Holy Host (1290),
– The neighborhoods inhabited by Jews, from 1292 to 1313. – The roles of the size at that time. – Exile of 1306. – Confiscations.

The Jews, whose peace began to new to be troubled under Louis VIII, not pa-
They did not initially fear any violence.
of Louis IX. Dominated by religious sentiments excessive, he focused much more on con-only to remove them from his states. He did not scatter-nothing to "reduce them to Christianity" (1);
He forced them to come and listen to a man named Paul.
Christin or Chrestien "who wanted to go near them"
dear" (2) and he acts not by force, but by the gentleness and by doing them good" (3). If necessary According to some historians, his piety and his liberation realities won several of them. In a state of His house, in 1261, is mentioned as having twenty-four converts who each had fourteen denarii per

(1) Life of Saint Louis, King of France, by Le Nain de Tillemount, published for the Société de l'Histoire de France by J. de Gaule (Paris, 1849), vol. V, p. 295 et seq.

(2) Ibid.

(3) Ibid.

day loco servitii sui (1). The orphans were his favorites. He had them baptized and fed them. He himself held those who asked at the font—they performed baptism and then assigned them to his dower of rents of one, two, or three deniers per day, depending on age, quality and needs. A good pension was better than a bad traitor. comments. ;

The pious satisfaction he derived from it must have to console him for theological defeats that were Quite sensitive. Religious controversies were quite frequent, and although Saint Louis he never took a direct part in it, he felt quite strongly about it ground lacking beneath the priests' feet to to show the adversary in these "disputes". Also he said that no one, "unless he is a very good clerk," could was to take part, and that "the layman, when He hears slander against Christian law, he should not If he defends himself with the sword, what should he give? among the belly inside, as much as she can enter (2) ».

Nothing less than arguments from this sort to prevail over science and lights that the Rabbis possessed at this era. Already. at the end of the 11th century, Judah Sir Leon from Paris, who was head of the Talmudic School from Paris, and remained there until 1224 when he died,

(1) Life of Saint-Louis, King of France, by Le Nain de Tillemount, published for the Société de l'Histoire de France by J. de Gaule (Paris, 1849), vol. V, p. 295 et seq.

(2) History of Saint Louis, by Jean Sire de Joinville, published for the French Historical Society, by Mr. Natalis de Wailly – p. 12 (Paris, 1878).

THE JEWS IN PARIS 15

occupied a considerable place in the Synagogue. But it was even more so under the reign of Saint Louis, where the "clerics" found themselves in The presence of men of sufficient stature to answer them. At First row, R. Nathan b. Joseph, nicknamed the Official (1), to whom this function is conferred by a Bishop of France granted a right of jurisdiction extended, with the responsibility of affixing the episcopal seal pal on the acts carried out by private individuals. The close familiarity in which he lived with the archbishop of Sens; his frequent lectures with the bishops of Meaux, Poitiers, and Angoulême, from Angers, with the abbot of Cluny, with the bishop of the king and the queen's confessor, with the pope himself, the astonishing freedom of speech of which he used in these discussions (2), give to his physiology a relief all the more expressive because its fellow believers continued to be exposed to all the tribulations.

Before him, R. Jechiel, head of the Jewish Academy of Paris seems to have enjoyed a no less great consideration.

His name is closely linked to the famous converse on the Talmud (3) which took place in Paris, in 1240, in the presence of the entire court. The moment was serious for the Jews. In 1239, in fact, an apostate Jew, Nicolas Donin of La Rochelle, had brought a formal accusation before Gregory IX

(1) The Book of Joseph the Zealot, by the great Rabbi Zadoc Kahn. Revue des Études juives, no. 2, October–December 1880, p. 241

(2) Ibid.

(3) The controversy of 1240 on the Talmud, by Isid. Loeb. Review des Etudes ruives, n° 2, p. 247 (Paris, 1880).

16 THE JEWS IN PARIS

against the Talmud. By order of the Pope, all the any examples that could be found had been seized, and an investigation, led by Eudes de Chateauroux, chancellor of the University, had been open to this work.

If R. Jechiel of Paris, seconded by three others rabbis (1), demonstrated against Donin the inanity of reproaches addressed to the Talmud, this triumph was in vain: bishops and monks refused to listen. The Talmud was condemned, and the copies, forming twenty-four cartloads (2), were burned publicly in Paris in 1242. A number of copies, which had escaped this confiscation and had remained hidden, were handed over to flames in 1247–1248 (3), with "the other bad-

"I'm going to read books" of the Jews (4).

This massacre did not appease Louis IX's hatred. His reign, rich in vexatious measures, offers a striking picture of the plight of the Jews. These misfortunes—reduced to a state of servitude, are the victims of incessant difficulties that arise between the king and the barons who are fighting over possession; they have to fight against abuses and the greed of their lords, against the ordinances the kings' finances that strike them without mercy. They are declared incapable of contracting or to testify in court; their claims are cancelled, their debtors released; they are stripped of their possessions

(1) The controversy of 1240.....

– (2) Th. Reinach, History of the Israelites, p. 164.

(3) Unpublished papal bulls, by Is. Loeb. Review of Jewish Studies, No. 2, p. 293 (Paris, 1880).

(4) Delamare, Treatise on the police.

THE JEWS IN PARIS 17

by both sides, threatened with exile, in subjected to the cruellest humiliations.

A supreme humiliation awaited them.

Since the beginning of the 11th century, the Jews Westerners had been subjected to the obligation to wear on their clothing an outward sign of their—intended to distinguish them from Christians (1). The Church had taken the initiative for this measure to prevent—Dear to all trade between Christians and Jews. This brand, which may have been in use in the diocese of Paris towards the beginning of the 10th century (2), Saint Louis made it a brand infamy. The first of the kings of France, he imposed on the Jews by an ordinance dated the June 12, 1269 (3).

The wheel was, at least originally, placed on the chest, very visible and yellow. It took Philip the Bold, an even more visible sign. In confirming this order, he effectively compelled the Jews were also to place a horn on their caps (1271). What crueler mortification could one impose it on them! Exposed to public ridicule, to Insults from everyone, was it possible that they could trying only to live "loyally", according to The energetic expression of the times!

Philip III spared no effort to prevent them from doing so.
dear. He renewed their defenses previously make it a point to wear colored clothes, to bathe

(4) Historical and archaeological study on the Wheel of the Jews since the 13th century, by Ulysse Robert (Revue des Etudes juives, t. VI, p. 81, and VII, p. 94).

(2) Ibid.

(3) Ibid.

18 THE JEWS IN PARIS

to bathe in the rivers where the Christians bathed well, to prepare medicines for them, to touch to the food in the markets unless they to buy; he obliged them to observe Lent and all other periods of abstinence regarding the use of the meat; he instructed the Christians not to to serve among the Jews and to the Jews not to retain Christians at their service; he finally forbade them to have more than one synagogue and one cemetery per diocese.

At that time, there was a Jewish quarter (4 1) on the street of the Harp, another in Saint-Bon Street and that of Jean-Pain-Molet. Other Jews "in quan-
"tité," said Sauval, had settled in the street of the .
Lombards, Quinquempoix Street and the street of Gardens. It also appears from documents of at the time when they had two synagogues, two ci_ trades (2), a mill and an island called Jewish Island. ©

This island "was in the Seine (3) near the back gate of the garden of our kings, between | the of the Palace and the Augustinian convent, in one place where the religious of Saint-Germain-des-Prés had "High and low justice." This island was very small, and one of the two that once formed the end of the island of Palace before the Pont-Neuf and the Place Dauphine.

(4) Guillot of Paris, who wrote towards the end of the 13th century, He cites, in his "Tale of the Streets of Paris," a street called Juerie, located in "the City".

(2) V. Léon Kabn, The Committee of Charity. Ch. des cimetières, p. 94 (Paris, 1886),

'3) Sauval,

THE JEWS IN PARIS 19

The "Jewish Mill" was a watermill. He bore that name because he belonged to them and It was used to grind their wheat. It was on the Seine and was located on Rue de la Tacherie.

One of the two synagogues was also so-killed on rue de la Tacherie; the other, on rue du Clottre-Saint-Jean-en-Grève, occupied one of the floors of a . old square tower that was part of the pre- | the first enclosure of the city of Paris, and was called commonly in older titles: the Synagogue (i). The people later gave him the nickname from: the Devil's Fart Tower, which she kept for many years. Some authors pretend that she was thus described in memory of Jews, "to mock them and their ceremonies » (2).

But the hateful work of Philip the Bold did not could be completed as long as the Jews lived in Christian community. Philip Augustus and Saint-Louis, who were their scourges, who never thought all their lives, nothing but to overwhelm them with misery, not to... were never advised to separate their houses from those of the Christians. Philip III, the first, the drawing from the heart of the city and all the others places where his ancestors had allowed them to live confining them to the outskirts of Paris.

They then retreated to Jewish Street, behind the Little Saint-Antoine, on Judas Street, which was at Montagne Sainte Geneviève, on Rue de la Tixanderie, in a dead end called the cul-de-

(1) Sauval.

(2) Ibid.

bag of Saint-Pharon and that the old titles they call the dead end of the Jews (1).

This situation, already so distressing, should not go that it worsened under the reign of Philip the Fair. We begin by complaining that the Jews of Paris sing too loudly in their synagogue and the Par- for this act, he sentenced them to three hundred fine pounds (1288) (2). A few years later Later, Philip IV would summon the justices of his kingdom to punish Jews who make new synagogues where they sing loudly and where they They use the Talmud (3). But soon these vexations Childish grievances are followed by more serious ones. Im- odious suppositions of which the ignorant people and superstitious, is the natural vehicle, are col- charges brought against them. The Parisian Community escapes well from the massacres that ensane- They are spreading to other cities, but she cannot avoid the slanderous accusations that threaten her in its existence.

The "History of the Holy Host desecrated by a Jew" (4) has remained famous among the men- dreams of which the Jews were the victims. knows the details of this miracle. A woman had pawned his best clothes at a Jewish, and she had no money to re- to shoot them as Easter approached. He agreed to give them to him

(1) Sauval. — Delamare.

(2) Collection of Historians of France, XXII, 761 (E Computo bal- Livie Parisiis).

(3) Year 1299, June 6. — Catalogue of acts relating to the Jews. the Middle Ages, Ulysses Robert.

(4) History of the city of Paris, Félibien, p. 458.

to return, but, according to legend, in exchange for the host that she was going to receive. This woman accepted. The Jew, named Jonathan, according to some (1), Good Jew, according

Others (2) pierce this host with a penknife. The blood spills out; he throws it into the fire, it flies away above the flames; he puts it in a chaudière. A pan of boiling water turns the water red, but unaltered; he wants to seize it, but it flies away from the room, appearing despite all attempted methods to make it disappear.

At this news, the people rioted. The Jew is dragged before the Bishop of Paris, Simon Matiffart (3), who urges him to renounce his error; but the Jew, "Hardened," supporting her with unwavering determination, is delivered to the secular arm and condemned to be burned alive. As he approached the pile of wood intended for him, at his execution, he cried out: "Ah! Why don't I have a book? The book is at home! The fire couldn't do anything to me" (4). But, clear proof that this chaotic moment was pleasing to heaven, he was soon content. He was consumed by the flames, and his book with him. Upon his death, his wife and children received the baptism. Theme (5). The consequence was inevitable.

It was in 1290, in the Rue des Jardins, later rue des Billettes, that this event takes place. The house "where God was bouliz", as the expression goes.

gaa Collection of Historians of Gaul and France, XX,

(2) Yearbook of the Israelite Archives for 5648 (4th year). Note on the legend of the Jew of the rue des Billettes, by E. Lazard, Archiv. paléog., p. 56.

(3) Collection of Historians, XX, 658.

(4) Ibid., from Miraculo hostiæ, XXII, 32.

(5) Ibid., XX, 658; XXI, 127b; 132k, 133a.

22 THE JEWS IN PARIS

picturesque chapel of Clemence of Hungary (1), was razed and on its site a private individual, named Rainier Flaming built a chapel in 1294 which he called it the Chapel of Miracles.

Despite the profound distress that such events cause the things they were supposed to throw into their community, the Jews of Paris remained attached to the city. We see them, from 1292 to 1297, according to the role of the imposed size, living on Franc-Mourier Street (now rue de Moussy), rue Neuve and the Court * Robert de Paris (now rue du Renard-Saint-Merry), Latacherie (now rue de la Tacherie), and the Petit-Pont district located beyond the southern arm of the Seine, opposite a bridge called Petit-Pont) from where they disappeared in 1296 (2), victims undoubtedly of persecutions which, in 1295, again focused on the Jewish population of Paris (3). The role of 1292 has 121 people, while the one with 1296 has none. that 85. They all bear exclusive surnames—distinctly French, and they Frenchify or translate their Hebrew first names. In this nomenclature—curious ture, we distinguish Copin le Mire (the meter-decin), Mosse le Mire and Sarre la Mirgesse who He also practiced medicine (4). We know that the school Jewish doctor in Paris in the 12th and 14th centuries

(1) Clemence of Hungary was the second wife of Louis the Hutin. V. General History of Paris. Collection of documents ments, by Léop. Delisle, Paris 1881.

(2) The role of the Jews of Paris in 1296 and 1297, by Isidore Loeb. Revue des Etudes juives, n° 1, p. 61 et seq.

(3) Boutaric, France under Philip the Fair. (Paris, 1861.)

(4) The role of the Jews of Paris in 1296 and 1297, by Isidore Leeb. Revue des Etudes Jives, n° 1, p. 61 et seq.

THE JEWS IN PARIS 23

was for a long time the rival of the University of this city who sought to dominate her (1). |

In a later role, that of 1313, we find again, in the parish of Saint-Germain-le-Viel and in the parish of Saint-Maciel, Jewish quarters, including moon "in the Kalendre", another in the "oven Basset", and a third "empres la Hale" (2); But there are no more Jews: Philip the Fair has, in Indeed, all means of torture have been exhausted. Here burdened with crushing taxes, massacred there, everywhere objects of speculation for the king, his counts and his lords who bought and sold them to each other, the Jews, oppressed, stripped bare, no longer giving 'nothing, were no longer good for anything. Philip IV them' had been exiled in 1306. Harvests, fields, vineyards and other possessions, the king appropriated everything: the "treasuries-

"Exits" that would be discovered, and the obligations which were subscribed to them. – It was a spec-It's heartbreaking to see so many families, who had enjoyed comfort, wandering as outcasts on the highways, pursued by the cries of insults of the multitude. There were some who died-rent of fatigue and pain in walking (3).

Philip IV spent lavishly with the wealth he had confiscated. That is how he gave (1307) to Jean de Provins, his "carter", a house located on Rue de la Tacherie where the Jews had the custom of holding their schools; and to the religious-

(1) Oriental Review. – Periodical collection of history, geography graphy and literature, published by E. Carmoly. (Brussels, 1842. |

(2) V. The role of the Jews of Paris in 1296 and 1297.
(3) Depping, p. 147.

24 THE JEWS IN PARIS

gilded women of the convent of Saint-Louis-de-Poissy (1311)
a place called the Jewish cemetery,

such as the aforementioned possessed "by antiquity"
Jews (4).

(1) Catalogue of documents from the Treasury of Charters relating to the Jews during the reign of Philip the Fair, by Simeon Luce.
Jewish Studies, No. 3, p. 47.

CHAPTER III

They are recalled by Louis X. – Their condition. – Mascoronations. – Matatia Troyes. – The Jews of Paris under Charles V.
– Prosperous state. Manecier of Vesoul and the synagogue. – Hebrew books lent by Charles V to the Community.
Massacres of 1380. – Aubriot, provost of Paris, defender of the Jews. – Massacres of 1382. – Reparations. – Of the little safety of the Jews in the streets of Paris. – The king abandoned them gives. – Denis de Machault affair. – Exile of 1394. – Der-

Last traces of Jews in Paris.

Their exile was not long-lasting. If Philippe
The Fair remained their enemy until the end of his reign.
Louis the Quarrelsome was less harsh and recalled them soon (1315). He yielded, it is true, to "the commune
"Clamor of the people," and certainly also to a the sum of 122,125 pounds that they counted for him.
took them under his "special protection" and gave the order that they be "protected from force, insults, violence and all forms of oppression" (1).

The order, which pronounced this recall, the faiknows how to regain possession of their books sacred texts (except for the Talmud, which remained condemned), of their synagogues and their cemeteries; held them leave things "that they did in the past" past" (2); giving them back some of their freedom religious and their civil capacities. But they remained serfs subject to mortmain, and they were forced to continue wearing them, but "better and

(4) Year 1315. Ordinance of the Louvre.

(3) Ibid.

26 THE JEWS IN PARIS

more clearly apparent" (1) the outward sign of the brand. Recalled for twelve years, the king pledged not to hunt them down again except in their giving a year to remove their belongings. Gepen-while it seems that less than seven years later (1322)
They were banished again (2). Ge who is more
What is certain is that in 1321, among the Jews of Paris, compromise in the leper case, a great
A number were put to death (3). It would not be
It was surprising that the others had been expelled at the continuation of this massacre (4). |

It does not appear that the Jews of Paris had to suffer the backlash of the calamities that dis-
They lived in the first half of the 14th century.
Community, then led by Matatia Troyes,
Chief Rabbi and head of the Paris synagogue (5), certainly enjoyed a tranquility that neither the atrocities committed by the Pastoureaux (6), nor the accusation brought against their coreligionists of France for having caused the plague of Guyenne and the Black Death. Philip V had them taken under his protection; and the captivity of John the Well, to which they provided money to pay his ransom stipulated in the Treaty of Brétigny, turned again, to their benefit.

The influence of Matatia's son, Iochanan Troyes, who had succeeded his father as head of the

(4) Year 1315. Ordinance of the Louvre.

(2) Is. Loeb, The Expulsions of the Jews from France in the 14th Century (Paris 1887).

(3) Collection of Historians, XXI, 678.

(4) Is. Loeb, The Expulsions.

(5) Carmoly, Archives israélites de France, year 1856, p. 264.

© Recueil des Historiens, XX, 626; XXI, 54, 671, 731.

THE JEWS IN PARIS < 27

Paris synagogue (1), and the authority of Manecier of Vesoul, played a significant role in the improvement of the condition of the Jews of Paris under Charles V. Initially concerned by the King's prosecutor (2), who claimed to be leading them out of the city (1370) in by virtue of an edict of expulsion of 1365 (3), and to which Charles ordered that they, the Jews, be left alone. obtained privileges, franchises and distinctions of all kinds. The stigmatizing measures with which they had been the subject until then were abolished. Placed under royal protection, they were not justified citable than the king or their general guardian, the Count of Etampes; their word was valid in court; exempt from all taxes, aids, servitudes and royalties, they were only subject to an individual right of entry and living room visual (4).

Manecier de Vesoul, Jewish banker at court, to which the Community owed this exceptional civil status, was put in charge of collecting these poll taxes subject to a deduction of two florins from the fourteen that each Jew had to pay. He was then at the head of the Israelite population with Vi-before, his brother, and another Jew named Jacob of Pont de Saint-Maxence. The synagogue was located in Manecier's house. Despite a lawsuit that divided Jacob and Manecier around 1365, their credit, perhaps momentarily weakened (5), was

(1) He remained there until: 1394.

(2) Is. Loeb, The Expulsions, p. 15.

(3) Ibid.,

(4) Ordinances of the Kings of France, NI, and Collection of Ancient French laws, V. |

(5) See. Is. Loeb, Expulsions.

28 THE JEWS IN PARIS

quite important to Charles V, since they obtained from him the loan of Hebrew books, without Doubt as Easter approaches. A document in The date of 1372 attests to this (1). "These are," it is said in the head and written in the king's own hand, the books of the Jews which were in the treasury of our privileges, charters and registers above the changing room of the Holy Chancel, in our palace in Paris... which books we performed in Menecier le Juyf and other places Juyfs demorans à present à Paris, le xxix^e jour of April, Pan of grace Mil CCC sixty-two.

In addition to complete Bibles, parts of the Bible (like Genesis, the Prophets, "saunders", Hymns, etc.), there were among these books "pieces of prayers and hours to be said by certain certain times and on certain days of the year," "certain certain quays together of King Ahasuerus and ancient Genezis' books", "V little roles of Esther", "the most beautiful role of the law of Moses", finally "a "A small book of medicine" and "a small book of experiments" "Rhymes." In all, about a hundred volumes and notebooks.

We did not find anything in this nomenclature, nor the French Bible with commentaries, of which the The production was entrusted by King John to Master John of Sy and whose costs were borne by Jews of Paris (2), nor "the anemallac to the Jews"

(1) General History of Paris, collection of documents by Léopold Delisle, Paris, 1881, III, 333; according to Siméon Luce, the Jews under Charles V, Revue historique, VII, 4878, p. 368 to 370.

(2) General History of Paris, I, 16. This bible was never completed. What was done with it suggests that it was intended to reach a considerable price.

Y

THE JEWS IN PARIS 29

(almanac for the use of Jews) which contained the rich library of Clemence of Hungary (1).

An influence so considerable that, on the one hand, In general, Jews were granted in advance the use of all the privileges they could to prove that they had enjoyed, not to- would not be viewed favorably by either the people or by the Church. Indeed, they both joined forces to seek- It was expensive to neutralize such a large credit. Their efforts and their violence, initially unsuccessful, encountered- They will soon have a favorable opportunity. The blood of The Jews were about to sink again.

Upon the accession of Charles VI, the people of Paris, assembled in the common house, made himself heard complaints against the aid and taxes he was charged; and, as if he had found the remedy for his Misery, he demanded that "the Jews and usurers" were put out of Paris" (2). Despite the promise from the councilor Jean des Mares to "make it his duty," and without waiting for "the publication of by "The King," the common people were moved, ran- They ran through the city, breaking the "buoys" Farmers threw the money into the streets, and after shouting: "To the Jews! To the Jews! To the Jews!" "Jews!" (3) They went to about forty houses Jews, "looted and stole silver dishes,

(1) General History of Paris, I, 12.

(2) History of Charles VI, King of France, and of the things of-moral events of his reign, from the year 1480 until in the year 1422, by the most reverend Father in God, sir Jean Juvénal de Ursins, Archbishop of Reims. In Paris, at

Abraham Pacard, rue Saint-Jacques, at the Etoile-d'Or (MDCXIV).

(3) Chronicle of the first four Valois (1327-1393), p. 291-2.
Siméon Luce, Paris 1862.

2.

30 THE JEWS IN PARIS

Jewels, robes, and bonds. And no nobles.

"They were led astray by this, and some of them killed..." (1380) (1).

For four days, in fact, the houses
Jewish women, reported as dens of criminals their houses filled with treasures acquired through plunder, were stormed; people rush in, loot, and burn,
They slaughtered; some victims, escaping in great numbers sentenced to death, they take refuge in the prison of Châtelet, which becomes an asylum, and small children, torn from their mothers' arms and transported in churches, they owe life only to baptism (2).

Hugues Aubriot, then provost of Paris, had not could not prevent this sedition nor oppose this hideous fury, despite constant protection with whom he surrounded the Jews. But, through his influence, he obtained a stern order from the king to return to the mothers the abducted children and to return them under penalty of life, the effects that had been subtracted; "but "Little were obeyed there (3)."

This action, on the contrary, earned Aubriot a a renewed intensity of hatred on the part of the Church.
She denounced him as secretly engaging in Judaism.
Daism, accused him of "several horrible and abhorrent acts"
"wretched deeds (4)," among other things, to return to the Jews
the "children of Jews who had been Christians" born (5)", adding that the one who governed almost
The entire court "loved the Jewish women so passionately..."

(1) History of Charles VI, p. 9.

(2) Halphen, Conc. Legisl. les Israélites.

a) Juvenal des Ursins, p. 9.

t ae p. 17; and Chronicle of the first four Valois, p.295.
5 7 (d

THE JEWS IN PARIS – $4

that he allowed himself to be governed by these shameless people" (1).
He was reduced to making amends and condemned to end his days in a "low dungeon".

Less than two years later, in 1382, the people, dissatisfied with the reinstatement of taxes, he was pleased
He resented having been deceived and rose up again.
The mutineers went to the Town Hall, and... see the iron clubs and mallets that are there found, "stunned" the financiers, for-they opened the prisons from which they extracted Hugues Aubriat and, "having no bounds in their fury (2)", renewed, in this famous Mail- riot
Lotins, the massacres of the Jews of Paris.

These two successive killings had reduced the
The community is in a deplorable state. The Jews "pilstripped and clothed, their fathers, mothers, wives, children and other relatives, killed and put to death," they found themselves were going to "much decrease in the number of people" and everything about their faculties and opportunities" (3).
Among those who had survived, some had Some fled, others were baptized, and their claims as their obligations had been given to the Vincennes chapel.

Unpublished documents from the reign of Charles VI (4)
allow us to find the trace of some Jews who, despite these massacres, continued to live in Paris. In February 1381, one of them sold a "Love potion" for a Parisian laundress. Ac-

(1) Sauval.

(2) Félibien.

(3) Ordinance of 1387.

(4) Selection of unpublished documents from the reign of Charles VI, published by the French Historical Society (Paris 1863).

32 THE JEWS IN PARIS

Accused of "witchcraft," she was thrown into the Châtelet prison, and

She was released later. The Jew was not bothered.
– In 1382, Jehan Marquade, formerly Jewish, and “pa-
Before he was Jewish, his name was Symonnet de Saint-Mier,” he becomes a Christian again, and returns, due to this new conversion, in the property that had been confiscated from him for the benefit of the king. – In 1383, they searched in vain for bri-Jews who had attacked and robbed four Jews,
One called Raphael, the other Abraham, “and some
The names of the other two are not records,” at at the moment they emerged “into false stock exchanges of Saint-Florentin » (4).

Charles VI endeavored to grant reparations to the Jews ratio of the damages inflicted upon them by “notorious and enormous commocions” of 1380 and 1382. As early as 1380, he had declared them non-responsible for the pledges that had been taken from them, and the deadline that had been given to them to do The loans had been extended. But the second the riot had rendered these decisions almost pointless;
The fortunes of the Jews had almost completely collapsed there.
entire; it was necessary to make it easier for them again ways to get rich so that we can eat again squeeze them at will.

Therefore, there were no favors that were not granted to them.
lavished. They were allowed to continue their debtors notwithstanding any letters of respite (2), to to take into account in their transactions the interests of

(1) Selection of unpublished pieces....

(2) Debtors of Jews easily obtained judges letters of reprieve, by means of which they dispensed themselves from pay for a certain period of time.

i THE JEWS IN PARIS 33

interested; at their own request, the conserva-holders of their privileges and their judges were suppressed; their Community was placed under the jurisdiction of the city provost; remission was granted to them made up of all the violations they could have committing against the regulations contained in their letters and privileges (1); finally an ordinance of April 25, 1393, instigated by Joseph of Vesoul, Menacier's son, who had received baptism, carried that the Jews who converted would no longer be now deprived of their property (2).

